Flipping Out

Some investors still making money in a topsy-turvy real estate market

It's a high-stakes game, but the weak housing market is not keeping "flippers" away, according to local real estate agents and mortgage lenders. House "flipping" involves the purchase of a typically outdated home at a low price to rehab and resell at a higher price.

lucasa@spotlightnews.com

"We don't have a big declining market," said Tom Connors, a senior residential lending specialist for Mortgage Network in Clifton Park.

Connors said despite a large slump in the housing market nationwide, communities in the Capital District are not being hit so hard because there is stable employment in the area. House flipping was popularized by the hit television show "Flip This House," which debuted four years ago on the A&E network. For some, house flipping is an effective way to make money. One house flipper from Voorheesville actually quit her full-time job to flip houses. Penny Tisko, 39, purchases properties in Albany and Rensselaer counties and flips them for a profit. Tisko's desire to break away from the 9-to-5 work schedule and spend time working on her distance running motivated her to consider her part-time housing investment as a full-time venture. While Tisko has been flipping houses for 14 years, for the past nine years,

In a unanimous decision, the Bethlehem town board appointed Patricia Parsons its new court clerk during its Wednesday, June 25, town board meeting. The current long-time court clerk, Barbara J. Hodom, is set to retire on Friday, July 18, from the post she had held for three decades. Parsons has already begun training for the position and working at Bethlehem Town Hall. She is leaving a job as an administrative assistant at Albany County's general services department and said she was honored to be selected by town justices Ryan Donovan and Paul Dwyer. "I'm extremely excited. I've always had an interest in the criminal justice system. ... At one point I was planning on becoming a police officer," Parsons said of being appointed to the $58,000 a year job. "I'm honored to work for such respected judges as Judge Dwyer and Judge Donovan. I will be learning from the best. Barbara maybe one of the best court clerks in the area." Parsons lives in Delmar and has worked for the county for 35 years and said she approached the town justices about the position once she learned Hodom was retiring. She ran for receiver

Bethlehem grads take the final stage at commencement

The 2008 Eagles have officially flown from their nest in Bethlehem, using the stage of the University at Albany's SEFCU arena as a springboard to enter onto a much larger stage — the world. Bethlehem Central School District held its 74th commencement on Friday, June 27, at the University at Albany to the cheers of thousands of family and friends who filled the bleachers in order to catch a glimpse of their loved ones clad in black robes making their way across the stage. Aside from a few jokes from students and administrators, and the occasional beach ball that made its way into the disapproving hands of a nearby teacher, the graduation ceremony was heartfelt and filled with sage advice. "Congratulations Bethlehem Central Class of 2008, you've all done a good job. We may not be perfect, but you are far closer to being so than Tom Brady and New England Patriots will ever be," said graduating senior Brendan Herrmann. Herrmann listed the individual schools that make up the district, whose students ultimately end up together in the high school, to loud applause from different sections of the graduating class as each of the schools was named. Fellow graduate Kelly McCall delivered the opening remarks for the commencement and offered some words of advice to her class. "This is our time to go out into the world and become anything and everything we desire to be," McCall said. "We will leave here tonight and move on in different

Prescription pills found during DWI arrest

Karen E. McClintock, 45, of Selkirk, was arrested on Monday, June 16, on River Road on charges of seventh-degree criminal possession of a controlled substance, DWI, and failure to keep right.

Bethlehem police said an officer on patrol saw McClintock driving south on River Road, at which point "the vehicle left the southbound lane, crossed over the double solid yellow line and was traveling in the northbound lane. At that time, the vehicle made an abrupt jerking movement to the right, crossing over the lane on the shoulder."

When police stopped

McClintock, according to the report, they noticed the smell of alcohol when interviewing her.

According to the investigation, she stated, "I haven't had anything to drink, I just took (three) hydrocodone for my teeth."

McClintock failed a field-sobriety test and tested positive for alcohol on a pre-screening device, according to the arrest report.

She handed officers an open bottle of prescription hydrocodone, a narcotic, and was also in possession of two other empty bottles of the same from a pharmacy in Ravena, the report stated. The prescriptions were not in McClintock's name.

Upon further investigation, police said they also found a plastic baggie with another half of a pill, later determined to also be hydrocodone, which McClintock told officers had been given to her by an aunt.

She was taken into custody for DWI and criminal possession and consented to a blood test at Albany Medical Center, the report states.

McClintock is scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on Tuesday, July 8.

Other arrests

• Sonja L. Morris, 37, of Albany, was arrested by Bethlehem police on Saturday, June 21, for fourth-degree grand larceny, a felony.

Police said Morris was arrested on charges stemming from a May 7 incident at the Kmart in Glenmont where she worked.

Police arrived on the scene after receiving a call from the loss-prevention officer saying Morris was in custody at the store.

Morris had allegedly stolen Western Union money orders in the amount of $1,325 from the store in order to pay her rent, according to the arrest report.

Police said she was arraigned in front of Town Justice Ryan Donovan and was given a bail of $2,500 and scheduled to return to Bethlehem Town Court on Tuesday, July 15.

Sewer fix to close Elsmere

Line break forces detour of thoroughfare for at least three days

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The town has announced that Elsmere Avenue will be closed "for at least three days" between Maple Avenue and Kenwood Avenue starting on Tuesday, July 8.

Supervisor Jack Cunningham made the announcement during the town's Wednesday, June 25, town board meeting.

Commissioner of Public Works Josh Cansler told town board members that they discovered a sewer main running underneath Elsmere Avenue was broken in at least two places and would have to be dug up, resulting in the closure of both lanes of traffic until the sewer line is fixed.

The two breaks in the pipe are about 30 or 40 yards apart, according to Cansler, and will have to be replaced. Traffic will be diverted in opposite directions in order to detour both lanes of traffic on the heavily commuted road, which will most likely lead to delays during peak driving hours.

"Obviously Elsmere's a main thoroughfare here in Bethlehem and Delmar, so that's going to affect a lot of people," Cansler said. "We've been working with DOT and the police department to come up with the best route to detour traffic for a couple of days."

Cansler said the current plan of action was to divert southbound traffic down Elsmere Avenue to Herber Avenue and then left on Glendale Avenue before turning onto Kenwood Avenue and back onto Elsmere Avenue.

Cansler told the board that the work will begin at 6 a.m. on July 8 and that only one home will have its access blocked by the construction. He added that they held off on the project until after school was out.

"We're going to try to fix one break one day [July 8], hopefully backfill it in and be able to reopen the road that night. There's no guarantee of that, but that is our plan," Cansler said. "Then open it up the next day, fix the second break and backfill it again on the night of [Wednesday] July 9."

However, Cansler warned, "Obviously if we get down there and find that it is a bigger problem than we thought, then we may not be able to do that." Cansler told residents and board members that marked flaggers would be directing traffic on the corners of Elsmere Avenue Kenwood Avenue, Poplar Drive, Herber Avenue and Glendale Avenue. He also said that notices would be put in the local newspapers and signs would be placed along the roadways.

Cansler said large trucks will not be diverted into the residential neighborhoods but will instead be sent down Elm Avenue over to the Delmar Bypass. Traffic will be able to flow in both directions throughout the construction, he said.

Public Works Commissioner Josh Cansler points to a map of Elsmere Avenue construction slated to begin on Tuesday, July 8, during a Wednesday, June 25, town board meeting. Elsmere Avenue will be closed for at least three days because of a sewer main break. Traffic will be rerouted around the stretch of road.

Church parking lot houses more than a market

Every Tuesday, local growers turn space into social scene

By SEAN AHERN
Spotlight Newspapers
aherns@spotlightnews.com

Every Tuesday during the summer months, the farmers market at the First United Methodist Church on 428 Kenwood Ave. brings out growers, florists and barbecue stands to attract locals into buying locally grown produce and handmade goods.

"This is our social life," said Chaz Martel, a farmer who has gone to the market for the past four years and who belonged to the church before relocating to Greenfield Center with his wife.

Martel brings his Blue Moon salad dressings and marinades to the market as well as homemade soap, honey and vegetables. He started growing produce to make use of the waste left behind by the horses he and his wife own, and it quickly became a way to make money on the side.

"They [the church] are very generous to let us use the parking lot," Martel said.

The Delmar Farmers Market started at St. Thomas the Apostle

Church at 35 Adams Place in the 1970s. After gaining popularity on Fridays, the market expanded to include Tuesdays. Later, the market moved to its location on Kenwood Avenue and is now held only on Tuesdays.

The mid-week afternoon was picked because it is the more productive day, according to Gretchen Geurtze, who runs Geurtze Bar-B-Q, which has been at the market since the beginning, when the company was still being run by her father.

"I have weekly customers that have come to me since we started. I know 90 percent of my customers' names," said Geurtze, a Delmar native. She said she has some customers who have been buying from her since the days her father was still selling eggs at the market. She sells about 175 barbecued chickens per week and until recently used her own chickens until the demand became so great she had to buy them separately.

The farmers market at the First United Methodist Church is a part of the Capital District Farmers Market Association, one of the oldest groups in the region that helps to bring together farmers and buyers of local goods. Merchants who go to the market in town have to be a part of the association and are voted into local area markets on the basis of keeping everyone balanced.

"You don't want to have three bakers or overwhelm someone with produce," Geurtze said.

Martel said the Delmar farmers market is not the only one he goes to during the week, going to two others - one in Ballston Spa on Saturdays and one at Empire Plaza in Albany.

For the farmers, this is a great way to get their goods out to local buyers and remind those in the area that there are different options than the local supermarket chain.

"It's a great place to come for fresh produce, and you know that its all locally grown and not shipped in like some of the grocery stores," said Geurtze.

"I make anywhere around $150 to $300. It costs me $50 in gas just to go 100 to 125 miles per week," said Martel laughing. "We make a living somehow."

The farmers market at the First United Methodist Church takes place every Tuesday in the summer from 2:30 to 6 p.m.

Struck by a new found soft spot for softball

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

It was the top of the last inning. The orange tie-dye team had rallied and was closing the gap in the score. They needed one more run to stay in the softball game. Alas, it was not meant to be. The lavender team won the semi-finals.

How could this be? I had even donned an orange shirt. OK, it was more yellowish than orange, but my heart was in the right place. And I did have an orange sun visor, although it was solid orange, not tie-dye.

Despite my team spirit, softball season for the orange tie-dye team ended.

I'm supposed to feel relieved. Now my weekends are freed up. No more carting my middle-school age daughter to the field or worrying about dirty cleats or misplaced mouth guards.

But I don't feel relieved.

I looked forward to the games, not just for the opportunity to socialize with the other parents but because I actually liked watching the kids play.

And so, I'm bummed. I've got the post-season blues.

How did this happen? I've never cared about sports. Did I get hit in the head with a ball?

I like the game, but I don't think I'll ever get all the rules down.

Commentary:
From Robin's Nest

Last year I learned about the in-field fly rule. Also, I knew that after four balls the batter received a last-chance pitch from her coach.

This year they added the dropped third strike rule, plus the players could steal home, and ball four meant the runner walked to first base, no coaches on the pitching mound. Actually, there's not even a pitching mound, it's called the pitcher's circle.

The team on the field must always remember that the play is to first base, except when it isn't.

Three strikes you're out, unless the third strike is a foul ball in which case you get another pitch.

And sometimes you need to tag the player out and other times you just need to have your foot on the base when you catch the ball.

And if you miss your shift staffing the concession stand, it's your husband's fault because he is supposed to be handling all the softball-related assignments. Well, that's how it works in my house.

And most important: Do not be the parent who forgets to bring Popsicles. I made several notations on our calendar regarding the Popsicles and provided verbal reminders to the person handling softball-related assignments (read previous paragraph). It was over 90 degrees and we remembered the treats. We did not, however, remember that we had concession stand duty on the same day.

But back to my recollection of the rules of the game:

There's some magic involved with not letting a grounder get by you, and it helps to be at the ready and make sure your gloved hand extends all the way to the ground.

Also, innings end after three outs or five runs, whichever comes first.

However, if there are two outs and the batter has just received ball four and is walking to first base as the fifth run is being scored, the play is not complete until the runner touches first. So, if the runner, along with the rest of the team, heads directly into the dug out, as instructed by the coach, then an alert opposing team will throw the ball to first (the play is always to first). This results in the walked player being called out at first and the fifth run not being counted.

Rachel and Rani at the softball field.

Who's on first? Nobody.

And sometimes the runner on first will risk stealing a base even though from where I'm sitting there's a good chance the catcher is going to throw the runner out at second. But that's OK if the runner on third base gets to score.

Wow, that's a lot to keep track of.

Luckily, we've got great coaches. They are parent volunteers who spend considerable time teaching our kids the nuances of the game and building their confidence level.

"You are a hitter!" shouts the coach to the batter.

Why can't I be this patient and encouraging with my child?

In many ways my town's recreational league is like one giant family. Over the years the coaches get to know a lot of the kids. They know them from a previous year in the recreational league or they know them from the travel league or fall ball or another sport or the neighborhood or a school activity or their daughter's circle of friends.

During one rainy game, one of our coaches was toweling off the softballs and tossing dry ones to the pitcher, as needed. He knew her by name, even though she was on the opposing team:

And at a playoff game, when the ball hit our catcher near her neck, coaches from both teams came to assist, with a second coach from the opposing team arriving with an ice pack.

Together, the coaches work to create a supportive environment. The girls, in turn, cheer one another, applauding both the successful moments and the attempts. In my experience with the league, the coaches have offered only praise and constructive criticism. They serve as role models for the players and for the players' parents.

For me, it's the combination of the game and the atmosphere that draws my interest. So much so that even though my daughter's team didn't make the final playoffs I still went early to the end-of-season picnic in order to watch the championship games.

That's right, my kid wasn't even playing and I enjoyed watching the game. What's happening to me?

The lavender team went on to win the final playoff game, and then all the players in the entire league received a trophy, a medal, or a pin of participation. It was a wonderful afternoon, and I'm already looking forward to next spring when we'll do it all again.

The Delmar Rotary Club is sponsoring the exchange of culture, education and ideas by supporting local foreign exchange students.

Erika Kristiana, a student from Indonesia, spoke to the Delmar Rotary Club at the group's breakfast meeting at the Normanside Country Club on Wednesday, June 18. She discussed her year in the Capital District and presented a slideshow.

She has been in the area 11 months and will now be returning home.

She said she learned a lot about being more independent. In Indonesia she had a servant and, while in America, has adapted to doing things herself, such as cooking.

Kristiana said she lived with three host families while in Bethlehem and attended Bethlehem Central High School.

The weather was a big change for her. She experienced her first snow here and even tried her hand at skiing.

She said she loves urban areas and that New York City was her favorite place, but she also commented that she never spent time in nature or thought much about it and has since grown to appreciate it.

Kristiana said that being involved in the exchange program has given her a better view of the world and that she felt she was sheltered in her own country.

When she returns to Indonesia, she plans to attend college and study public relations and expects to continue in some English-speaking programs so that she will continue using the language.

Local exchange students sponsored by the Delmar Rotary include Madison Lang, who will spend a year in Hadsel, Norway, and Daniel Gally, who will spend a year in Marbella, Spain.

They are both leaving in late summer and have both finished high school in three years in order to participate in the program. Lang and Gally will attend high school in their respective countries.

Town of Bethlehem matches local youngsters with work

Applications still being accepted

By JARRETT CARROLL

carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem is still taking applications for its Youth Employment Service (YES), a free community service that matches 14-to-21-year-olds with residents or businesses that need help.

Residents needing assistance with housework, yard work, shoveling, babysitting, animal care, or handyman work should contact YES at Town Hall. Businesses can also benefit from the service to obtain restaurant workers, delivery people, salespeople, cashiers, stockers, and office workers.

Employers needing dependable workers should call 439-4955, ext. 1608.

Teens looking for part-time work can register with YES, located at the Parks and Recreation office at Elm Avenue Park, during office hours.

The program is a year-round referral service.

Youth Employment Services has appointed a new director, Julie Sasso, who said she is excited to get the word out about the community service. With school letting out for the summer, Sasso said, June has been a busy month for the program.

"We have 17 new registrants this month and approximately 75 youths actively seeking placement," said Sasso. "It's a great time for community members to call and find reliable youths for their jobs."

Youth Employment Service has been actively matching youths and employers since June 1970, according to Sasso, and is dedicated to helping young people find work, and community residents and business people find reliable workers.

In 2007, Sasso said YES received 124 job orders and registered 98 new students.

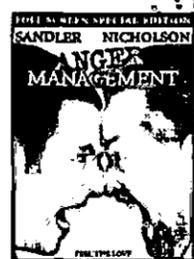

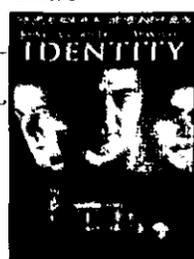

Local businesses using the service have included Star Processing, Hollywood Video, World Logistics Group Warehouse, Samaritan Shelter, Good Samaritan Nursing Home, Community Cares medical office, Albany Country Club and Circle of Friends Child Care Center.

Matters of Opinion Spotlight

Say it ain't so, Joe

That big sucking noise you heard last week after Senate Majority Leader Joseph L. Bruno announced he is resigning his seat at the end of the year was the sound of state tax dollars leaving Upstate New York.

Calling public service "a tough ball game" that he loves, Bruno confirmed Monday, June 23, that he won't seek re-election in the fall to the Legislature he's been part of since 1976. Bruno's decision was announced in a closed-door session on the last scheduled day of the 2008 legislative session. The 79-year-old Bruno has been the state's top Republican since 2006.

"After 32 years in office, I have decided that it is time to move on with my life and to give my constituents an opportunity for new representation and my colleagues in the Senate who have supported me, an opportunity for new leadership," The senator said in a written statement.

But that leadership won't come from Upstate New York. Sen. Dean Skelos of Long Island was voted Senate Majority Leader a few days later, cementing what pundits have been saying more regularly as Uncle Joe has gotten up in years: Eventually the pork that Bruno has been so pivotal in bringing to the Capital District and its outlying areas will dry up and flow to other parts of the state.

Maybe it would be easier to swallow if it looked like those dollars were going to places that are worse off than we are — places like Buffalo and Syracuse that have been taking an economic beating for some time but have lacked a certain something needed to get some economic stimulation. Something like say, a certain white-haired, well-dressed state official willing to run a backhoe or jump in an 18-wheeler to court local media.

No, sir. With a Senate minority leader, speaker of the Assembly and governor that hail from the five boroughs; and a new Senate majority leader from Long Island, places like Chittenango and Cheektowaga look a lot like... well, Appalachia, as a former governor once said.

But at least Gov. David Paterson has a home in Guilderland, some may say. He sure does. But, first of all, Guilderland is a far cry from Buffalo or Syracuse. Secondly, it doesn't necessarily mean the governor or his sensibilities actually live there.

The best that Upstate can expect after Bruno leaves is to be thrown a bone every once in a while — a bone that will no doubt remind Upstate constituents of where their leadership lives.

Boomers can help mom, dad avoid 'parent trap'

By KRIS CARPENTER and NELSON CARPENTER
news@spotlightnews.com

The authors are Home Instead Senior Care representatives in Albany and Saratoga, respectively.

Baby boomers may dream of owning a second home as they head into their retirement years. But instead of caring for a vacation house, adult children often find themselves helping an aging mom and dad avoid the safety pitfalls of the family home. There's no doubt where seniors want to be as they age. The majority of seniors polled in recent industry surveys — typically 90 percent — say they want to stay at home. But in a 2007 AARP independent living study, two-thirds of boomer women surveyed said they are concerned about their parents' ability to live independently as they get older, with 46 percent being very concerned and 23 percent somewhat concerned. It's a legitimate fear.

"Many seniors and their families don't think about the fact that homes must adapt to the changing needs of seniors as they age until an accident happens," said Nelson Carpenter, owner of the Home Instead Senior Care office serving Saratoga, Washington and Warren Counties.

"There are many potential pitfalls that we've seen during the home safety reviews that our company conducts before starting service in a client's home. Our reviews cover 50 different items throughout a home including the entrance, living areas, kitchen, bedroom, bathroom and stairways. Important safety areas to highlight in a senior's home run the gamut from accessibility to lighting to trip and fall hazards. A lack of attention to those details can jeopardize an older adult's ability to remain at home," Carpenter said. Many home safety improvements are simple and inexpensive, experts say. Convincing seniors, on the other hand, is another story.

Danise Levine, assistant director of the IDEA Center at the State University of New York Buffalo School of Architecture, said that denial often comes into play with seniors.

"We see a lot of seniors who don't want to admit they're getting older so they don't want to make changes in their homes," Levine said. "Secondly, consumer education is an issue. If older adults do need help they often don't know where to go or how much things cost." Those issues can result in seniors' adapting behavior to their environment, creating a potentially dangerous situation, said Levine, whose IDEA Center is dedicated to improving the design of environments and products by making them more usable.

"If a senior has problems getting off the toilet, he could develop a several-step process of using a window sill, shower curtain and towel bar to get up." However, a window sill and towel bar will eventually pull away and break, and a shower curtain will tear under the strain, creating the potential for an accident. Unfortunately, many home make-over changes are responsive rather than proactive, noted Peter Bell, president of the National Aging in Place Council, a Washington-based advocacy group dedicated to helping seniors remain at home.

"Too often changes aren't made until someone has had a stroke or other type of condition that begins to impair their mobility," Bell said. "It's a shame, too, because that's a difficult time to be making a renovation." Bell said that it's important for a senior-care professional to conduct a home review to identify various safety pitfalls from poor lighting to the need for adaptive devices in a home. While many fixes are simple and inexpensive, others might involve a remodeling project to help a senior remain at home.

For more information or to obtain a free home safety checklist, contact the local Home Instead Senior Care Office at 580-1042.

Look and see signs: A home safety review and checklist

- Examine dark pathways, corners and other areas where seniors regularly walk or read. Make sure all areas of the home have adequate lighting. Timed and motion-sensor lights outdoors can illuminate potentially dangerous pathways. Inside, consider Ott-Lites — which provide a high-intensity beam for doing detail work. Make sure that hallways and stairs are properly lit.

- Avoid monochromatic color schemes. Contrast can help seniors with failing eyesight better navigate their homes. Large red and blue buttons over hot and cold water faucet controls will help prevent dangerous mistakes. A dark green or brown toilet seat and vinyl tape around the shower will make those fixtures more easily distinguished. Kitchen countertops should contrast with floors as well.

- Look for ways to reorganize. Mom always put the black stew pot under the stove to keep the kids from breaking it. Perhaps now it belongs on a shelf beside the stove. And who says the eggs must go in the egg tray of the refrigerator? Perhaps it's easier for dad to handle them if they're stored in the meat tray.

- Look behind closed doors. Many seniors will close off parts of a house they no longer use. Be sure to check those areas regularly for mold or water damage. Don't close vents to crawl spaces.

- Look for ways to simplify your senior's life. Talk to your parents about why and how they do things then look for ways to simplify their lives. If your Mom's immaculate floors are now regularly dirty, think about how she's been doing that job all these years and offer options. Rather than a heavy mop and bucket, investigate light-weight, all-in-one mops. If your senior is replacing appliances, look for smooth-top stoves and refrigerators with water and ice on the outside. Change door knobs to levers, or purchase grips that can go on conventional knobs. Convert single-bulb light fixtures to multiple bulbs so seniors still have light when one bulb burns out.

- Consider security. Think about the potential dangers that lurk within your loved one's home. Lock-in switches on thermostats and stoves will keep seniors with dementia and Alzheimer's disease from harming themselves. Help them manage in their environment by installing a cordless intercom.

- Keep an eye out for damage. Watch for signs that a senior is adapting his or her behavior to the environment. Look for towel bars or window sills that are pulling away or shower curtains that have torn from seniors using them to grab onto.

- Look for ways to make entries safe. Make sure that railings into a home are in good repair and that steps and sidewalks are not damaged. Make sure that doors can be set to stay open for carrying groceries and other items in and out. Install remote control locks.

- Is clutter taking over? Messy conditions and broken items are important warning signs. Remove area rugs and stacks of newspapers and magazines, or other potential obstacles.

Fixes for $500 or less

Following are adaptive devices you can easily install and add to a senior's home for a combined total of about $500.

- Raised toilet seats with arms that lock onto an existing toilet provide height and support to stand. $90.

- Hand-held shower nozzle slips directly over a tub faucet. $24.

- Floor to ceiling grab bar provides a full range of heights to hold onto while sitting or standing up. It can be installed by the bed, in the bathroom or by a favorite chair. $150.

- Lever doorknob turner adapters attach securely to a variety of round door knobs to provide leverage for easy opening. $22.

- Lever handles attach to recliner chair handles to serve as an extension. $22.

- Various kitchen items are available including automatic openers that remove lids and open cans, jars and bottles. $50.

- Rubber ramps that are ADA compliant are often easy to install on most surfaces. Ramp stays in place by its sheer weight and can be moved from one opening to another. $36.

- Mobile stools are particularly useful to help seniors navigate a kitchen. $100.

Thanks for supporting Ellers' hoop event

Editor, The Spotlight:

Once again, we have the opportunity to thank this wonderful community for the generous donations made to the Russell Ellers Scholarship Fund, Community Foundations for the Capital Region, in memory of our son and brother, Russell Ellers.

On Saturday, June 14, the friends of Russell Ellers and students from Bethlehem Central's varsity, JV and freshmen teams played a basketball game at the Elm Avenue Park, raising more than $2,200 for Russell's fund.

We wish to thank all who attended the game, the players, the coaches, the parents and neighbors who made donations: Gretchen Geurtze of Geurtze BBQ; our DJs for the event, Rich and Nancy Mendick; Ms. Marge Prinzo, co-president, for the donation on behalf of the Bethlehem Boys Basketball Booster Club; Carrie Stone and Chris Jordan for their hard work and commitment to this wonderful cause; Nan Lanahan and Pete Berhaupt of the Bethlehem Town Park and Referee Tom Venter.

Also, our thanks to the following businesses/organizations for their donations of food, beverage, raffle items or cash: Johnny B's Glenmont Diner; Chili's Restaurant; Java Jazz Café; Glenmont Car Wash; Mercato's Pizzeria Restaurant; BJ's

Taxpayers should be aware of resolution

Editor, The Spotlight:

Spotlight Newspapers published an article, "Mendick: Towns paying for city elections" in the Colonie Spotlight on Wednesday, May 21, that covered the resolution I have sponsored in the Albany County Legislature to change how election-day costs are charged back to each town/city from using assessed property values to actual costs.

Presently, the costs of poll inspectors, poll sitters, machine storage costs, etc. are charged based upon the equalized assessed value for all parcels in the county rather than the actual costs incurred by the specific towns/cities. Using assessed value has the impact of shifting costs of the cities into the suburban towns. Specifically, for the 2006 election, the election-day cost for the City of Albany was $243,553, but $123,904 of that total ended up on the bills of suburban towns. Bethlehem was billed $24,166 above what it actually cost Bethlehem to run the election. Colonie was the big loser with $104,198 of Albany cost shifted to the Colonie taxpayers.

It is unfortunate the Spotlight chose only to run its story in the Colonie Spotlight since it is as applicable to the taxpayers in Bethlehem, as it is to Colonie.

I write this letter to make Bethlehem taxpayers aware of my resolution, Resolution 197, calling for election costs to be billed on an actual cost basis, town by town. Towns, like Bethlehem, who have worked to keep election costs down, should reap the benefits of their efforts. Why should Bethlehem or Colonie or any other town pay for the inefficiencies of our Albany neighbor?

To illustrate the issue, here are a couple of statistics from the 2006 election. Albany had 66 polling places as compared to Bethlehem's 22 and Colonie's 35 polling sites. Geographically, Bethlehem is more than twice Albany's size and Colonie is almost three times its size. The polling places for Colonie and Bethlehem were configured to handle more than 1,000 registered voters each, while Albany was geared for less than 700 per polling place.

Resolution 197 provides the motivation for cities and towns to take a long look at the election process and make the necessary corrections to minimize the cost of running the election, thereby saving taxpayer dollars.

If this resolution is not passed, Bethlehem, along with the other suburban towns, will continue to financially support the inefficiencies of its neighbors. Each town or city should stand on its own. I encourage taxpayers to contact their Albany County representative and make their feelings known regarding Resolution 197. I also suggest taxpayers contact their town officials and request they support Resolution 197 by writing letters, calling representatives or personally appearing at the public hearing prior to the County Legislative session on Monday, July 14, at 6:30 p.m. You can also contact me at remendick@aol.com or call 767-0511.

Thank you Salary talk shouldn't be limited to teachers for a job well done

Editor, The Spotlight:

Thank you to the citizens of the Bethlehem Central School District community for allowing me to serve as a member of the Board of Education for nine years.

What a fantastic experience it has been. Working with 12 dedicated board members during my years of service has been gratifying and productive.

I feel much has been accomplished and with your support, the students of our district will continue their journey to be well-educated and productive members of the 21st century.

I leave the district in good hands and thank all of our staff for a job well done.

Editor, The Spotlight:

In a recent Spotlight article, "BC maintains salary negotiation procedures," June 18, John Giordano is concerned about the high cost of teachers' salaries in Bethlehem. He might do better to look at another organization.

A recent Times Union article on Monday, June 23, "For police, overtime is the great equalizer," puts the "average total police officer salary, 2007, for a Bethlehem police officer at $80,514."

In order to make comparable pay, a Bethlehem teacher would have to be in the 24th year of service, with a master's degree. At the end of the 2008 school year, there was a total of only 15 staff members, including teachers, aides, bus drivers and custodians, with 25 or more years of service. On the other hand, the median teacher salary, according to the 2007-2008 schedule, is at the 15th year of service, and is $62,303, or 77 percent of the average police pay.

Furthermore, according to the Times Union, a new Bethlehem police officer earns $46,000 per year. In order to equal this pay level, a BC teacher would have to be in the sixth year of service, also with a master's degree.

Mr. Giordano is concerned that BC salaries are "on pace with those who pay their salaries." Did he poll the doctors, lawyers and other professionals who live in the BC district about their pay? If so, he might have found that indeed teachers' pay is not "on pace."

He also states that "regular citizens" can't be engaged in the salary process. This is just not true. Many meetings about the budget are held before its adoption, and public comment is welcomed. Being part of a public entity, both the teachers' contract and pay scale are open to inspection by any district resident of voting age.

Mr. Giordano worries that the "unions are going to ... hate me" for his opinion. I'm sure he realizes that the police officers have a union as well, and that their union has played an instrumental role in securing their generous pay.

Finally, Mr. Giordano forgets an important fact. Unlike the town budget and police salaries, district residents, including himself, have the final say, and are able to vote "no" on the school budget if they are not happy with the cost.

Our school system is always looking to reduce expenses while delivering the superb education that taxpayers want for their children. Mr. Giordano's efforts to hold down costs are admirable. He just needs to look around for other possibilities as well.

Amid music and memories, RCS grads say goodbye

Using humor, melody and memories, more than 150 members of the RCS Class of 2008 walked down the aisle and into their futures Saturday.

During a ceremony in the Empire State Plaza, the students recalled fond memories of their lives within the halls of RCS and the greater community and offered inspiration to one another about what they may accomplish in the future.

They also highlighted the many musical talents they shared, with a trio of graduates performing America the Beautiful, a harmonic duo that billed its self Mormon Soul and Rock and Roll performing an original sound that incorporated their memories of RCS and the senior Jazz Band and Chorus performing their own pieces.

The graduates came from widely varied backgrounds - from a recent Cuban immigrant to locally "grown" students - and plan widely varied futures, from welders, to beauticians and physicians.

Their paths in the immediate future will take some of them to Syracuse University, others to Brigham Young, RIT and Hudson Valley Community College and still others directly into the work force. Overall, 85 percent of the graduating class will continue their educational pursuits, with the remaining 15 percent planning to enter the work force.

Approximately 100 scholarships and awards - ranging from a full-scholarship to dictionaries - were presented during the ceremony. Traditional commencement speeches were also given by Valedictorian

Jacob Hyer, Salutatorian Jason Gallagher, the class president and school officials, as well as WNYT Channel 13 weatherman Jason Gough.

During his speech, Hyer added a light moment, offering up litany of traditional speech clichés with a humorous twist, as well as recalling his classmates time in the district.

"We have overcome a lot together, like that yeast infection the school got last year," Hyer said, referring to the yeast-driven odor at the school that forced its closure several times during the 2006-07 school year. The comment elicited a roar of laughter from the crowd and school officials.

Salutatorian Jason Gallagher highlighted the success of his grandfather, a RCS graduate who founded in his late 30s a popular car dealership in Columbia County after a series of career changes, when offering tips for success to fellow graduates.

"Don't fear you've made the wrong choice - no choice is wrong. Each choice builds toward a goal," he said.

Meanwhile, Gough offered immediate advice to the graduates.

"If you are going to college, don't forget that colleges work for you. You have the power. You are the customer. ... If you are going to work, work well. There is no nobler job than working well."

Board of ed approves new contract for union

Handling of negotiations under fire by group that calls for more open process

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Following an executive session held by the Bethlehem Board of Education at 8:15 in the morning on Thursday, June 26, the board unanimously approved the Bethlehem Central United Employee Association (BCUEA) contract, effective July 1 until June 30, 2012.

The settlement includes significant employee health insurance concessions that will reduce district expenditures, according to a release from the district, and the new contract contains an average annual overall increase of 2.6 percent plus step increases over the life of the contract.

The BCUEA encompasses the district's support staff, including bus drivers, custodians and secretaries. Their last four-year contract contained an average salary increase of 3.1 percent per year plus step increases. The starting salary for first-year bus drivers is $29,247 and for first-year custodians, $30,756, according to district records.

The new contract's insurance cost reductions will save the district an estimated $210,000 in 2008-09, according to the district's spokesman, Matt Leon.

The way the school conducts its salary contract negotiations has come under some criticism recently by Citizen Budget Group member John Giordano, who in a June 18 article in Spotlight

"It has been recommended to us by the negotiating team to approve this contract."
James Lytle

Newspapers titled "Citizen Budget Group member wants more participation" said he wanted to open up the negotiation process. A letter to the editor have been submitted to Spotlight Newspapers about the matter (see page 8).

The school said it wishes to maintain its current process of engaging in contract talks between the teachers' unions and the school board elected to represent the district's interests.

Another resident, Philip Carter, who owns a consulting business in Slingerlands, has also raised concerns over the matter and has sent several e-mails to the school district asking about its budget process.

In one of the e-mails, Carter questioned the school board about its last budget vote on May 20, which passed with about 60 percent approval.

"It turns out that only about 20 percent of the eligible voters took part in the election and only 11 percent approved your budget," Carter wrote. "That's a far cry from 60-percent approving."

Contract negotiations have been ongoing, according to board president James Lytle, and the union had agreed to the conditions of the contract the night before the vote and recommended its approval to the board.

"We've been engaging in negotiations for the last several months, fairly intensely, a lot of issues on the table including some significant health insurance concessions," Lytle said at the meeting. "Important changes allow us to be more flexible with the employees as you gain additional proficiencies in number of different areas. It has been recommended to us by the negotiating team to approve this contract."

District officials said the contract calls for fair salary increases for valued employees and substantial savings in three areas: health insurance costs; improved transportation staffing and routing efficiency; and limitations on worker's compensation costs.

"In particular, the contract calls for a significant increase in employee contributions to health insurance premiums for family coverage," according to a district release. "Additional savings will come with greater staffing efficiency within the transportation department, including a reduction in mid-day bus runs when the district implements full-day kindergarten in 2009-10."

Superintendent Les Loomis, in what was likely his last board meeting, described the health-care concessions in the contract as "incredibly significant."

"Having been involved in negotiations along the way that I think the concessions in the health insurance are incredibly significant because the trend always of the increases in health insurance far outstrips any kind of salary increases," Loomis said. "I think you're going to see continuing significant saving."

District officials are also touting the new provisions in the BCUEA as allowing for greater flexibility in assigning bus drivers, which will lead to more drivers continually maintaining their regular routes. Loomis said the stability will lead to improved safety in the district's transportation program, which he said is already known across the state for its safety and reliability.

Red Haired Strangers to perform at V'ville library

Bring a chair or blanket, your family, your neighbors and your friends, for an evening of music on the lawn on Wednesday, July 9, when The Red Haired Strangers will make their first Voorheesville Public Library appearance.

This group of young men has been playing together for 15 years, making their own music with hints of country and delta blues influences. Their repertoire includes Depression-era ballads, finger-picking, slide and 12-bar blues, fiddle and harmonica breakdowns and country stompers as well as covers by Johnny Cash, Blind Willie Johnson and Merle Haggard. The band has been getting great reviews at political fundraisers, benefits and festivals throughout the Northeast, and onstage at local venues.

Our Together at Twilight concerts are presented compliments of the Friends of the Voorheesville Library, who will be selling snacks and drinks. Lawn chairs are available for those who are unable to bring their own. Call if you need to reserve a chair. All library programs are free and handicapped accessible. NYRA touts summer plans

Franchise announces ideas to bring in crowds despite sluggish economy

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

With legislation still pending regarding the New York Racing Association's franchise, it announced plans Monday, June 23, at the Desmond Hotel in Colonie to bring in big crowds and supply good times for the 2008 Saratoga racing meet.

Charles Hayward, chief executive for NYRA, acknowledged NYRA's legal red tape is still an ongoing issue, but emphasized that NYRA is planning an exciting season for its 140th summer session at Saratoga.

"I hope next year by this time there won't be any talk about the franchise," Hayward said.

Hayward said that Senate Majority Leader Joe Bruno, R-Brunswick, Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver, D-Manhattan, and Gov. David Paterson have all been supportive of NYRA in its attempts to come out of bankruptcy.

Gavin Landry, NYRA's senior vice-president of sales and marketing, highlighted several new ideas to help improve customer service and bring people to the track.

Five new restaurants; Grey Gelding, Hattie's, Brindisi's, Panza's and 1 Caroline Street Bistro/Mouzon House, will be featured on-site this summer, a feature that Landry believes will provide a boost to the overall atmosphere at the track.

"NYRA is happy to be working with the local area to promote some of its more popular restaurants on track. As a gesture to the Saratoga community, NYRA waived some of its profits and paid for certain infrastructure in order to accomplish this. NYRA's food and beverage concessionaire, Centerplate, was also a significant partner with these quality restaurants that are part of the attraction of Saratoga," said Landry in a written statement.

Landry said this season there will be more corporate sponsorship, an additional picnic area and a "Spa" program that will offer an "elevated level of service" to customers.

NYRA is also hopeful they will be able to have Big Brown as a fan attraction. Big Brown won two out of the three legs of the Triple Crown and NYRA officials believe it is a possibility the horse will run at the $1 million, one-and-a-quarter-mile Travers on Aug. 23.

New wagering options will also be made available to help boost track appeal, including "rolling daily doubles," with a wager offer pending approval from the New York State Racing and Wagering Board.

Additionally, all possible races will offer exactas and trifectas, according to information provided at the announcement.

Landry also announced the promotional giveaways for the upcoming meet. NYRA is eliminating its normal opening Thursday bobblehead giveaway, but still has five items lined up to bring in the crowds on Sundays.

The first giveaway is on July 27, and attendees will be given a baseball cap. The other four are scheduled for Aug. 3, when fans will be given a short-sleeve T-shirt; on Aug. 10, a "stadium seat" sponsored by the Daily Racing Form; on Aug. 17, a long-sleeve T-shirt sponsored by the Adirondack Trust Company; and on Aug. 31, a cooler bag.

Speculation about a potential decrease in track attendance due to the sluggish economy was also addressed.

"There are some uncertain economic times facing Saratoga," said Hal Handel, NYRA's chief operating officer.

He cited high gas prices and fickle weather as other possible reasons for a potential decrease in attendees.

He said the "allure of the track" and quality of the product are reasons the Saratoga track might not take such a large hit. He also said the attendance at Belmont and Aqueduct has been good despite the difficult economic times.

John Lee, NYRA's communication director, said the high gas prices might not negatively affect attendance as much as some have speculated. He used the term "staycation" to illustrate that many patrons might opt to take a day trip to the track rather than go on longer, more expensive summer vacations.

Joe Dalton, president of the Saratoga Chamber of Commerce, also expressed his lack of concern for the rising gas prices.

"I think there are two important factors to consider. First, people are not flying as much simply because they don't want to spend a day in an airport. Second, even though the price of gasoline is double what it was a few years ago, people are more willing to drive to a vacation spot close to where they live," said Dalton in a written statement.

Saratoga is close to a three-hour drive from Boston, New York City and Montreal.

Handel pointed out that the races will be broadcast in 32 states and in countries such as Canada, Mexico, England and Austria.

"There will be over 1,000 sites that involved in Saratoga racing," he said.

NYRA still has some issues to deal with, including its bankruptcy and lack of an operator for the video lottery terminals at the Aqueduct track.

Hayward said there are several bidders for the VLT contract including Capital Play who made a bid on the entire franchise last year. New York state considered giving the racing contract to another entity due to NYRA's bankruptcy, but ultimately chose not to give the contract away. There is a tentative 2009 date for an operator to be named and the Video Lottery Terminal's to be made available to the public.

"[We have been] pretty much running on fumes from a financial perspective," he added.

The Saratoga season will go from July 23 through Labor Day, Sept. 1.

she's been doing it full time.

She works with a small crew that helps her renovate the homes.

She said location is a major factor in "deciding" where she purchases properties. Tisko said primarily the property must be in a nice area, but she also said a good school district is an important factor in selling a home.

When considering a property, Tisko also looks at the size of the building, saying that families are often looking for three-bedroom residences.

"In the city [Albany] there is a tremendous amount of affordable houses," said Michael Walsh, licensed sales associate for RealtyUSA in Delmar.

Albany County is generally a strong market, Walsh said.

In Tisko's opinion, the market was very strong between 2006 and 2007, but it has subsided a bit in 2008, with foreclosures on the rise.

"Financing has become very difficult," Tisko said.

She said the banks are making it more difficult for non-occupant owners to obtain financing.

"It is deterring investors for sure," she said.

According to Connors, mortgage guidelines have become stricter, but he said the restrictions have a lot to do with the weak housing market nationally and not regionally.

"Everything has gotten stricter in last six to eight months across the board for both types of properties," Connors said.

When Tisko first began, she said prices and costs were not as high, but over the past five years, she has seen things become more valuable.

She said banks are requiring more money down, making it difficult on investors.

Connors said mortgage lenders require a higher down payment on investment properties, and they often have higher interest rates or fees for non-occupant mortgages.

He also said buying investment properties requires reserve funds, which is money left in the bank after closing, or that a landlord have experience renting properties.

"There are still some good housing values out there," said James Ader, chief executive officer for the Greater Capital Region Association of Realtors. "Flippers are still going to have a good chance to recoup their cost."

Ader qualified the market in the Capital District as more of a the Greater Capital Region Association of Realtors.

Nationally, home sales were down 17.5 percent for the month of April and prices were down 8 percent, according to the National Association of Realtors.

The mortgage crisis began with the rise in housing prices, which encouraged borrowers to take advantage of loan incentives, assuming they could refinance their home and alter the terms of their mortgage, however, housing prices began to drop in 2006, which made it more difficult to refinance a home...

Tisko's strategy for flipping houses is to buy and keep the property until a suitable sale price is available.

"I'm the type of investor who buys and holds," she said.

Tisko said she renovates some properties for rentals, so she has a steady income, but that selling flipped homes is her main goal.

Walsh said it is generally more difficult to buy a flip in this market because if a house were priced right, it would be off the market quickly.

For example, he said, if there are eight similar houses on the market, four are priced right, and four are priced higher, people will purchase the cheaper houses first before flippers have a chance to look at the properties.

"If it is a really good deal, the investor doesn't have time to get financing," Walsh said. "The cash buyer is a much stronger buyer."

He also said banks often appraise properties at a much lower value than the investor is willing to sell the property.

He said investors typically select houses that are under $100,000 and pay cash, because banks often take too long to issue financing.

"There are still some good housing values out there. Flippers are still going to have a good chance to recoup their cost."

James Ader

buyers market, saying between 2004 and 2006, the market was "robust," especially for sellers.

Although house sales and sale prices are down in the Capital District, statistics show they have not yet dropped as low as the national averages.

In Albany and Schenectady counties, house sales were down in April over last year; however, in Saratoga County, house sales were up 2 percent.

House sales were down 14 percent in Albany County and 33 percent in Schenectady for the month of April, according to the Greater Capital Region Association of Realtors.

The average home price is down 21 percent from April of last year in Saratoga County and 5 percent for Albany County. Average sale price in Schenectady County was up 5 percent for the month of April as reported by

Karate kids prepare for upcoming tournament

Skylar Pagliuca is preparing for Pil-Sung's second annual North East Open, a martial arts tournament and showcase, at the Albany Marriott on Friday and Saturday, July 11 and 12.

Ariana Cohn/Spotlight

Spotlight Newspapers
cohnna@spotlightnews.com

She's lean, mean and under 18. But most notably, 11-year-old Skylar Pagliuca is a fighting machine.

While most children her age greet June with the promise of swimming pools, all-day play time and camp fun, Skylar will spend the month barefoot, facing herself in a full-length mirror, and practicing a sport that has already earned her a number of awards in the past two years — martial arts.

Skylar said she was first introduced to martial arts when Adam Grogin, owner of martial arts studio Pil-Sung, on Central Avenue, taught a seminar at St. Catherine of Siena School in Albany.

Skylar said she had learned a little bit about martial arts during the session in school, which she took with her older sister, and the duo enjoyed the sport so much, they decided to continue with Grogin as their teacher.

At the time, Skylar was 9 years old, about to turn 10.

Grogin pointed the many trophies, about 30, that lined the wall of his studio.

"Most of those up there are hers," he said.

While Skylar has become familiar with many forms, she has most recently been training in traditional and Olympic Tae Kwon Do and Extreme Martial Arts, as she prepares for Pil-Sung's second annual North East Open, a martial arts tournament and showcase that invites martial artists from all styles within more than 180 divisions to compete at the Albany Marriott on Friday, July 11, and Saturday, July 12.

The tournament will feature events involving form and weapons, team synchronized traditional, creative and extreme forms and a self-defense team demonstration breaking wood and concrete.

When Skylar competes in July, her eye will be on the first-place trophy, but on her back will be a word other than her last name.

Since November, while every competition Skylar has entered has been hers to win, her glory has been shared with her sponsor Richard Emerich, of Enfield, Conn., and his company Photosportz.com.

The idea, said Emerich, is for the child-athletes to promote his professional photography while involved in their sports.

"If you are a parent and you're not really good at photography, you can hire us to follow your kid around all day around doing sports," he said.

Impressed with Skylar's skill in martial arts after watching videos of Skylar submitted by Grogin, Emerich chose her to be part of an elite sponsored martial arts team of his called Team Photosportz.

The terms of Skylar's involvement with the team are simple: Emerich sponsors her in multiple competitions throughout the year, and in turn, Skylar wears a uniform that has on it the logo of Photosportz.com.

"The reason we picked these kids was that we wanted to do something to sort of give back to their communities," said Emerich, who said the current team consists of Skylar, Eirinn Norrie, 15, of Bethlehem and Jay Carpenter, 14, of Syracuse.

Rhona Norrie, Eirinn's mother, said that being part of the team has been a wonderful experience for not only her daughter, but also her son, who was once a part of the team but had to quit since he is about to go off to college.

"It's a very basic contract in the fact that they just have to train consistently," said Norrie. "They have to go to the tournaments, which tend to be like once a month."

Norrie also said that part of the requirements to be on Team Photosportz is that the three have to hold several training seminars, demonstrations and private training to "teach other kids to do what they can do," said Emerich.

But most importantly, Norrie said that being on Team Photosportz has taught her children to "be good, upstanding citizens."

"I think it's a great thing," said Norrie, "It's good for [Eirinn] and her confidence, and it also means that she has to try and balance schoolwork and things like this. She has to be a bit more organized and a little bit more self disciplined."

The town board honors Barbara Hodom for 30 of service as court clerk during its June 25 meeting. Hodom is being replaced by Patricia Parsons, a long-time Albany County employee and former receiver of taxes candidate.

of taxes on the Democratic line in 2007 against current receiver of taxes Nancy Mendick. Judge Dwyer also ran that year, winning against Daniel J. Persing.

Although the board voted yes though the line, one resident harshly spoke out against the appointment. In addition, Councilman Sam Messina, an Independence Party member who has been openly critical of the town appointment process, said he wanted to make appointments "more competitive."

The five-member town board is made up of a Democratic majority, with Messina and Councilwoman Joanne Dawson as its two Independence members.

Even though Messina voted for Parsons, welcomed her and wished her well in the post, he reiterated his stance on town appointments to his fellow board members.

"These things are not easy for me because sometimes I feel like I am paddling upstream and maybe that is my role these days," Messina said. "Even though the justices control this appointment ... this is a $58,000 a year job, it has control of over a million dollars in receipts, it's a responsible position, and that's why we have just given Barbara the accommodations and kudos for a job well done."

Continuing, Messina said, "But as far as I know there was only one candidate."

The councilman pointed out that neither judge nor Parsons were at the meeting to publicly answer questions about the appointment. Supervisor Jack Cunningham pointed out Parsons had a scheduling conflict and could not attend the meeting.

"My strong recommendation is again, whether it's appointed or volunteer positions, whether it's on courts or on town government, is to seek a bit more competition, and post for jobs to let people know they're out there," Messina said. "I would say the words trust, courage, and political leadership come to mind."

There was loud applause from Norman Morand, a Republican committeeman who has frequented town board meetings and spoke against Parson's appointment earlier in the meeting.

"I'm confused ... I look at the agenda and see that judges D and D went ahead and make [sic] an appointment and now the board is going to rubber stamp it. What is going on? ... I would think that all hiring would be done by the board."

"It's starting to stink up here, I'll tell you that," Morand concluded.

Town Attorney James Potter answered Morand's legal inquiries of Parson's appointment.

"I'll give you a legal opinion, Mr. Morand. There's a section of the New York State Town Law, section 20, that provides that the justices appoint their own clerk, not the town board, so the board is acknowledging the appointment by the two justices of their own clerk."

Morand asked about others working in the town who could have been promoted.

"I'm sure there's people that are on the payroll in the town that were qualified to get a promotion," Morand said. "Were they considered?"

Potter answered, "I can't speak to what the justices did, they have appointed their clerk."

Donovan and Dwyer did not return a call for comment.

Messina put forth a proposal in early March to create guidelines for the way the town advertises and appoints people who are non-civil service to various boards and committees not deemed competitive by the state.

The proposal was voted down 4-to-1 at a March 26 board meeting, with Messina casting the only vote in its favor.

At the time, Cunningham and the other board members said Messina's proposal was unnecessary and a solution to a problem that doesn't exist. The town contends political appointments are far from the norm and point to Parker Mathusa on the planning board, Mike Hodom on the zoning board, and former supervisor Kenneth Ringler on the 20/20 advisory committee, as prime examples of other political parties holding town appointments.

Democratic Councilman Kyle Kotary told Spotlight Newspapers in March that Messina's proposal would tie down the business of the board.

"New York State law is very clear ... the town board has authority in its discretion to make appointments," Kotary said at the time. "This is his view, his [Messina] perception, and it would handcuff future board members. ... It's like saying, 'We're going to legislate how I'm to go vote,' and that's insane."

Parson officially began the job on Monday, June 30.

directions ... some of us will go to war, some of us will deal with tragedy, while others are destined to be great, but wherever we go, whatever path we choose, we have nothing to fear for we will never be alone on this day, we will always have that parent or that teacher or that friend ... and no matter where you are or what we are doing, you will recall all of the times you shared."

During the Bethlehem Central High School Symphony Orchestra's rendition of "Fiddler's Fury" and the Choraliers' performance of "Like An Eagle," several colorful beach balls appeared in the block of nearly 400 students in the center of the arena as graduates kept them afloat by hitting them back in forth. Spectators laughed and cheered as they bounced around, and would boo loudly when the balls landed on the sidelines and were snatched and taken away by teachers and administrators.

A 1930 graduate of Bethlehem High also took the stage that day. Bethlehem police detective Bruce Oliver was inducted into the Bethlehem Central High School Alumni Hall of Fame.

Oliver, who was been the high school's resource officer since 1999, was inducted by Scott Landry, the Hall of Fame's committee chairman and assistant high school principal.

"Bruce Oliver's pride in, and loyalty to, the town he grew up in resonated with the Hall of Fame committee," Landry said in a release. "It was noted by many that wherever Bruce is, and whatever role he is in at the time, when both students and adults approach him, he makes them feel important."

Oliver joined the Bethlehem Police Department in 1986 and was promoted to detective in 2003. He is the seventh Bethlehem graduate to be inducted to the Hall of Fame since the district created it in 2004.

Retiring Superintendent Les Loomis congratulated the class during his last commencement speech in the district, saying he, too, was graduating with the Class of 2008.

"I want to thank the community for the opportunity to serve as your superintendent for the past 21 years," Loomis told the roaring crowd.

Michael Tebbano is the district's new superintendent.

Bethlehem Board of Education President James Lytle, who acknowledged Loomis' departure, delivered the keynote address.

"Let me first of all acknowledge Dr. Loomis' retirement after 21 years. Being superintendent can be about the hardest, most thankless, and challenging job at least this side of managing the New York Mets," Lytle said. "It's been said that the superintendent accomplishes anything, if you make decisions at all, you're probably alienating or aggravating at least 5 percent of the community every week. You do that for 21-plus years - you do the math."

Turning his attention to the Class of 2008, Lytle said many parents might be wondering how their children have grown so fast, but that the time had come for a new chapter in the lives of the students as they move forward and move on to new challenges and new endeavors.

"Many of you are wondering, as Kelly (McCall) noted, how they grew up so fast. From shin guards, ballet shoes, piano recitals, schools plays, book reports, prom dresses, and driving licenses have ... all become things of the past, reserved for scrapbooks stored in the cellar maintaining the memory," Lytle said. "These wonderful young people whose first ride on the school bus seems only like yesterday, will be heading off."

Lytle congratulated the graduating class to a roaring applause and wished them well on all of the endeavors they are heading off to complete.

The sentiment was clear in Albany on Friday night: Although the Eagles have left the nest, they are sure to make just as big an impression as they have in Bethlehem wherever they may land.

Voorheesville graduates sing to future challenges

Humor, emotion, apprehension and song mark ceremony

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

There is no better way to deal with the uncertainty of college, the work force and the real world than a tribute to one of the original "boy bands" — at least that's what some graduating seniors at Voorheesville high school thought.

The Clayton A. Bouton High School graduation ceremony was held on the track and football field behind the high school Friday, June 27, and a class of 111 graduates received their diplomas.

The event featured a surprise performance by 2008 graduates James Carroll, Evan Christner, William "Macky" Lloyd, Chris Massaroni and Jason Conde. The young men entertained parents, teachers and fellow graduates with a performance of the Backstreet Boys' "I want it that way." Dressed in all-white outfits, the boys paraded around the track, determined to make the ceremony one to remember.

The group performed at graduation following complications in the ceremony's planning and budget.

"We were surprised to find one of our biggest challenges was planning graduation," said Megan Carnahan, who helped organize the ceremony. "The same person who broke your Lion King lunchbox 10 years ago is arguing with you about planning graduation."

A decision on the entertainment for the evening was finally made, but budgetary restraints were one of the reasons she cited for hiring her classmates to perform for a mere $15.

The graduation ceremony also featured several addresses by students and faculty, something more common to most graduations.

Kevin Klembczyk gave the salutatory address.

He joked that the nature of the address was peculiar compared to the valedictory address. He said he asked his family, friends and teachers what to do, but got little guidance.

"First off, I asked them what the heck it meant to salute the class. The only advice they gave me is don't screw up," he said.

Dan Sabbatino/Spotlight

Many told him to be entertaining and humorous.

"Under strict orders from the administration, I won't be inspiring you," he joked.

On a more serious note, Klembczyk spoke highly of his fellow graduates and recalled the strong bonds he made with his former classmates.

"The one thing that has persisted [in the years we all had school together] is the character and cohesiveness of our class," he said.

Allison Funk was designated student speaker and also addressed the class. She spoke on a theme common to almost all of the evening's speakers: moving beyond the familiar environment of Voorheesville.

"Change is sometimes the most frightening thing we face," she said.

She had some parting words of advice for the Voorheesville graduating class to help deal with the impending shift in their lives.

"Whatever you do, commit to it with your entire heart," she said.

She also passed on a phrase an English teacher once said to her, "Sin boldly."

The valedictory address by Clara Fried continued on the theme of the uncertainty of the future.

She said the emotions that she and her fellow graduates experience might seem to blend together, but ultimately it is up to individuals to determine their experiences.

"Fear and excitement feel the same," she said. "We decide which one we are experiencing. Are we afraid of what's coming, or are we thrilled at the opportunity to experience [new] things?"

She also said her class was lucky to have such good mentors through high school.

"We couldn't have done it without the dedication and creativity of our teachers," said Fried.

Superintendent Linda Langevin, who is retiring this summer after serving three years at Voorheesville as superintendent, addressed the graduates as well.

She spoke of a former Voorheesville student who was apprehensive about leaving the high school because it was so comforting and nurturing. He got through it with courage and determination, and she urged the rest of the class to try to do the same.

She also spoke of her own personal strategies for success. She pointed to the teachings of the ancient Chinese philosopher Sun Tzu.

"The basic point in your success is to know your opponent," Langevin said of Sun's teachings. "It will help you combat and control your fear."

The four agreements call for truth, not taking anything personally, not making assumptions and doing your best, even as your best changes from moment to moment.

The guest address was given by Edward Diegel, who came out of a four-year retirement to serve as the high school's interim associate principal.

He said that life after high school is often more of a challenge.

"You've come to a fork in the road on easy street," he said.

Diegel offered his take on the best way to succeed after Voorheesville.

"To think for yourself you must be alone with yourself," he said. He supports time for reflection and mediation, and said just 20 minutes a day could be enough.

He told his former students to develop a yes attitude and not to be intimidated by obstacles.

Diegel quoted Sir Edmund Hillary, the first man ever to summit the 29,000-foot Mount Everest, who is not to be confused with Voorheesville graduate Hilary Edmunds, saying, "It is not the mountain that we conquer, but ourselves."

Also of note was graduate Matthew Alan Hopper, who lost his grandfather Daniel Plesser on Wednesday, June 25.

Hopper's mother, Dawn, said she was proud of her son for coming to the ceremony after such a difficult loss.

Plesser was buried the morning of the graduation ceremony.

Dawn Hopper commended the school for its camaraderie and great environment.

"It's a great school. People come here for the experience of going to Voorheesville," said Hopper.

Web of worries

As younger children spend more time online, parents need to learn how to set limits

As a parent, I can't bury my head in the sand when it comes to social networking. Although, as a "digital immigrant" – anyone over 28 who grew up before the digital age – I want to.

Social networking – think MySpace, Facebook, LinkedIn – has become a way of life for many people. In the United Kingdom, 49 percent of all those under 18 online said they used social networking sites regularly; part of the findings in an Office of Communications' report.

Despite age restrictions for registering (MySpace is 14 and Facebook is 13), the same report says, among children with Internet access, more than a quarter of 8-to-11-year-olds claimed to have a profile page on one of these sites.

In the U.S., according to an Alloy Media + Marketing report, some 71 percent of online 9-to-17-year-olds use social networking sites weekly.

It doesn't surprise me that young people are expert social network surfers; after all, that demographic is known the so-called Generation M or Media Multitasking generation.

I on the other hand come from the betwixt and between generation that didn't grow up holding a mouse, but started with slide rules and books of log tables and ended in high school or college learning how to use computers for the first time.

I've worked to get competent with technology, but at times I feel one step ahead of my children.

What will they call my children's generation (both under five) and how adept will they be at media multitasking? Already, it's part of their norm to see me or Daddy on the computer working or surfing.

Of course, they want to have a go and I admit it's great to see their reactions as I help them move a turtle through the water to gobble the jelly fish or make the Tellytubbies appear and disappear from the screen.

By the time children reach preteens or tweens – generally defined as 8 to 12 years – many are old hands at playing online educational games connected to their favorite TV shows.

Social networking isn't news anymore, but tweens social networking (roaming about and chatting with friends online) is a growing and lucrative market; hot on the heels of the success of Club Penguin and Webkinz. Three years on, both sites have become extremely popular with tweens by word of mouth. They attract 5 to 14 year olds.

In 2007, the Walt Disney Company bought Club Penguin for $350M as they look to expand markets abroad and through promotions on Disney-branded sites.

I asked one of my friends in the Capital District who has twin girls of 10 and a boy of 7 about her kids' favorite social network, Webkinz. They like it because it's fun and never boring, with a variety of games and things to do. They're allowed 20 minutes each to play on the site and don't think it's addictive, contrary to what their parents think.

Trends & Technology

Susan S. Cheung

As I get more familiar with tweens social networking, I can equate it to hanging out on the street corner with my friends when I was that age, but now tweens are socializing in the virtual world.

Whether tweens are using Club Penguin, Webkinz or Moshi Monster, a hit Web site for 2008, many of them use a similar formula: play simple games, earn some kind of currency and spend it on decorations for their online pad, whether that's an igloo or house.

Club Penguin – a site where your tween can waddle through a fantasy world and interact with other penguins of their choice – charges a $5.95 monthly subscription and you get an ad-free site, advanced features and you can set limits on the time your tween spends playing.

In a brilliant stroke of marketing, Webkinz, another ad-free site, requires you to buy a small plush toy (produced by the Ganz company), which has a special code on its label that allows your tween access to their identical online animal character in the "Webkinz World."

I can see how these sites can hook preadolescence in with great graphics, fun activities and the challenge of earning points or "cash" to create their "pet's" room. It's absorbing with the added bonus of socializing with your peer group.

Advocates for social networks say these sites allow children to communicate in a 'controlled' environment. On many sites, users can chat online only by exchanging pre-constructed phrases, such as "What is your favorite color?" from the drop-down menu. Parents can allow some free-flowing chat, but this is heavily monitored by employees of the sites who look out for confidential information and language.

The truth is some parents probably have to do media literacy boot camp to engage with their children's 21st century computer habits. You may not understand the social networking needs of your tween, but you have to be aware of it, interested and hands on. Even as these sites are set up as safer sites, there are many dangers ahead for your preteen as he or she navigates the virtual world.

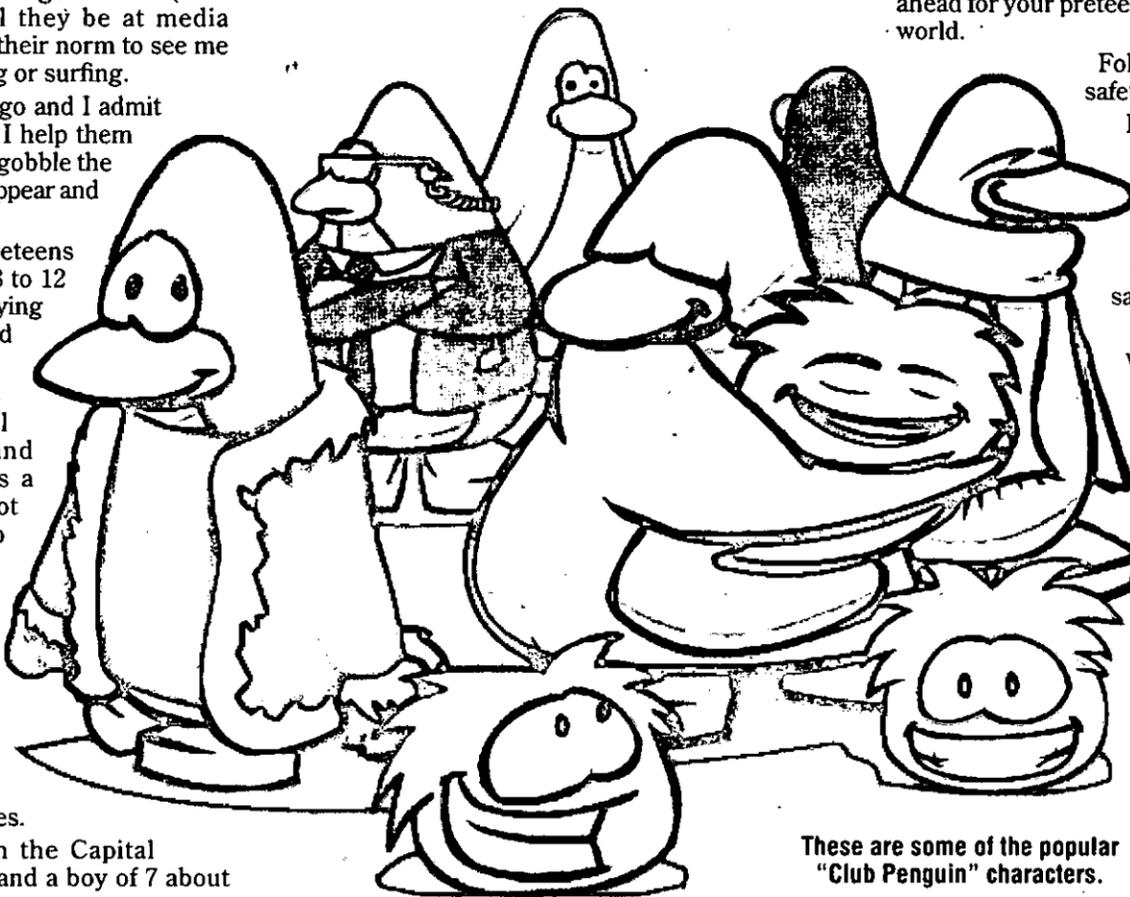

Follow common sense tips on Internet safety and happy networking:

- Be informed – learn the terminology and how to navigate the site. Many provide parent pages that explain usage and safety features.
- Talk to your tween about Internet safety.
- Get involved – pay attention to where your child is going online. Keep the computer in a public area within sight.

Don't post personal information online for the whole world to see.

You may be monitoring, but what about when your child goes and plays at her friend's house. Talk to other parents.

Taylor Wright-Sanson, 16, of Saratoga Springs, will enjoy a homecoming of sorts on Tuesday and Wednesday, July 8 and 9, when the Circus Smirkus stops in Saratoga. Wright-Sanson has performed with Circus Smirkus since 2006.

Three-ring unicycle

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
Spotlight Newspapers
dominj@spotlightnews.com

Taylor Wright-Sanson always had a lot of energy, so when he was about 9, his parents bought him a unicycle.

"It was mostly just to slow him down and challenge him," Wright-Sanson's father, Robert Sanson, remembered.

Soon enough, though, Wright-Sanson mastered the unicycle - so much so that two years ago, he joined the circus.

It sounds like a joke, but the Saratoga Springs teen is spending the summer touring with Circus Smirkus, a show whose acrobats, jugglers and trapeze artists range from 10 to 18 years old. Based in Vermont, Circus Smirkus is a nonprofit organization dedicated to exposing kids to circus life. Over the course of seven weeks this summer, it will put on 71 shows.

Wright-Sanson, 16, will enjoy a homecoming of sorts on Local teen takes his show on the road with Circus Smirkus

Tuesday and Wednesday, July 8 and 9, when the circus stops in Saratoga. It will put on shows at 2 and 7 p.m. both days at the Saratoga Race Course.

"It's very, very professionally done," Sanson said. "The level of competency is right there with adults."

That's because, like Wright-Sanson, the performers have been honing their crafts for years. Many attended Circus Smirkus' summer camp, where coaches helped them learn the arts of clowning, tight-wire walking and stilts. The coaches have their own impressive resumes; some have performed with Ringling Brothers, and others with Cirque du Soleil.

Wright-Sanson, who attends the Waldorf School, signed up for the summer camp after his mom saw Circus Smirkus perform in New Hampshire a few years ago. By then, he'd graduated from just riding his unicycle to doing tricks and jumps on it like he'd seen "extreme unicyclists" do on YouTube videos.

"He's all self-taught," Sanson said.

Camp staffers were so impressed with Wright-Sanson's skills that they told him on the first day of camp that he should audition to be part of the traveling show. He did, and in 2006, he spent his first summer on the road with Circus Smirkus.

Like old-time traveling circuses, Circus Smirkus brings tents and an entourage of about 80 people to each town, using professional costume designers, composers and choreographers to stage shows. The season kicks off each year with a performance in Circus Smirkus' home base of Greensboro, Vt., and "then we hack up the big top tent and take it on the road," said Maria Lisa Calta, Circus Smirkus' spokeswoman.

The touring season lasts roughly two months, and most stops are in New England. Saratoga is the only place in New York where the circus will perform.

For Sanson and his wife, Cynthia Wright, that means a dozen or so road trips to see their son.

"We miss him," Sanson said.

Beyond that, the couple truly enjoys watching the circus. Sanson said that when people first hear about Circus Smirkus, they figure, "It'll be nice. The kids will be in there juggling and doing tricks."

By the time people leave, "they're saying, 'That's the best live show we've ever seen,'" Sanson said with a laugh.

"It's really remarkable, because it's young people performing, but they're performing at a level you can't even believe," Calta added.

The "trouper," as they're called, come from all over the country, Calta said. Each year, Circus Smirkus also features a few international performers, including two from Colombia this year. Many of the performers, like Wright-Sanson, have spent previous summers with Circus Smirkus, which might explain how the show is ready to hit the road after just three weeks of practice.

"It comes together very quickly," Calta said.

Performances, too, are fast-paced.

"It starts and it just takes off and goes from there," Wright said. "It's really amazing."

Admission to the Saratoga show is $18.50 for adults and $15.50 for kids 2 to 12. Children younger than 2 get in free. Discounts are available for groups of 15 or more.

Arrests

• Jason M. Laflam, 29, of Glenmont, was arrested by Bethlehem police on Saturday, June 14, on Route 9W for DWI, operating a motor vehicle with a blood alcohol content of .08 percent or greater; and driving without adequate headlights. Police said Laflam was seen driving north on Route 9W with a headlight out and was stopped near Mt. Hope, and, when interviewed, smelled like alcohol and showed signs of intoxication.

"In an attempt to produce his license, [Laflam] displayed a credit card," but produced his driver's license when asked a second time, according to the arrest report. Laflam told police that "he had a glass of vodka and coke," before driving, the report states.

Laflam failed a field-sobriety test and was taken into custody for DWI after testing positive for alcohol, according to police, and was transported to the police station, where he was processed and submitted to a chemical test.

His vehicle was towed; and he was transported back to his home by police without further incident, the report states.

• Sherry L. Hildebrant, 38, of Selkirk, was arrested on Monday, June 16, on Elm Avenue for DWI, aggravated DWI, and operating a motor vehicle with a blood-alcohol content of .08 percent or greater.

While conducting a "prisoner transport," according to police, officers noticed Hildebrant failing to stop for a stop sign at Lasher Road and Route 9W.

Hildebrant then drove north on 9W and eventually turned left onto Creeble Road, according to the arrest report.

Officers then saw her fail to keep right "several times," before activating their emergency lights once Hildebrant turned onto Elm Avenue and into a driveway.

Police said Hildebrant smelled like alcohol and displayed signs of intoxication and told police she had "four beers at a friend's house."

Hildebrant was placed into custody and submitted to a chemical test at the police station and is scheduled to appear in town court on Tuesday, July 8, according to the arrest report.

• Kassi Neal, 27, of Voorheesville, was arrested on Monday, June 16, on Elsmere Avenue, for aggravated DWI, DWI, and operating a motor vehicle with a blood-alcohol content of 0.08 percent or greater.

Police said they stopped and interviewed Neal due to the erratic behavior of her vehicle and to confirm "she didn't have a medical condition."

When interviewing her, police said they smelled alcohol and saw her displaying signs of intoxication.

Neal told officers she was coming from a Delmar bowling alley and was on her way home, according to the arrest report.

She was asked to exit her vehicle "at which time she did but needed to use the vehicle for support to steady her walk."

Police said Neal admitted to drinking two beers at the bowling alley and was transported to the Bethlehem police station after she failed a field-sobriety test and her vehicle was towed.

She was arraigned by Bethlehem Town Justice Paul Dwyer.

Neal is scheduled to return to Town Court on Tuesday, July 8, according to police, who added that a pocketknife was taken from Neal's possession for "safe keeping."

• Speaking of the Armory, does anyone realize that the New York Buzz's World Team Tennis season begins next week?

Personally, I can't wait to see what will be done to transform the old arena into a tennis court. Are they going with a traditional hard court surface, or are they going to use clay? How about a grass court that can be trucked in and out? Or maybe, they'll just play on the Patroons' basketball court. (Hey, the folks at the Armory might as well get some use out of that court.)

• At least, no one will have to worry about being rained on while watching WIT matches in Albany. They'll have to worry about where to park, but they won't have to worry about the weather. Well, they won't have to worry about the weather once they're inside the Armory, anyway.

• Three weeks to go until the start of the Saratoga Race Course season, New York Giants training camp at the University at Albany and $5 for a gallon of regular unleaded gas. Which one are you least looking forward to?

• I don't care that the American League bested the National League in interleague play again. All I care is that the New York Mets were 4-2 against the New York Yankees this year, including a 3-0 record at Yankee Stadium. And that will be the last memory Yankee fans will have of the Mets at "The House that Ruth Built." That, and that moon shot grand slam Carlos Delgado unleashed last Friday.

• I was in New Hampshire Sunday watching the New England Cable News network, and the meteorologist had a Boston Celtics NBA championship pennant behind him at the weather desk. Way to show your Celtic pride, NECN weather department. Of course, your actual job is to tell us when the next round of thunderstorms are coming through. For that, you need to take the pennant off the Doppler radar screen.

• Speaking of New England, I wonder what life must be like for the Patriots these days. They were the toast of the region for five months last year. Now, they probably can't even get a cab in Boston when a Celtic or a Red Sox stands next to them. In that way, I guess they can identify with the Boston Bruins (Stanley Cup-less since 1972).

• How much are the Albany River Rats going to miss goaltender Michael Leighton and head coach Tom Rowe, both of whom were promoted to the Carolina Hurricanes? About as much as I miss $2 gas. But when you're as good as Leighton and Rowe, you deserve a promotion. Good luck in Raleigh.

• Siena may be picking the right season to play Kansas. After all, the defending NCAA champion Jayhawks just lost five players to the NBA, while the Saints have all of their starters back. If experience is the great equalizer, then Siena has a 50-50 chance of beating Kansas on its home floor. Realistically, though, I think the Saints are still in for a beating.

• I'm glad America East has decided to keep next year's men's basketball tournament at UAlbany, despite the fact that the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference tournament will be at the Times Union Center. It would have been silly for America East to move its tournament somewhere else, especially since none of the dates conflict with the MAAC Tournament dates. There will be no problem for these two events to coexist in the same city.

• Finally, a quick word to all of you trying to figure out how to afford attending sporting events this summer: take the bus to work. I'll tell you more about my adventures in a special column next week, but suffice it to say, taking the bus to work helps a lot, especially if half of your weekly miles are devoted to commuting to the office.

Perkins

Without Borders and Habitat for Humanity. Last year, Perkins and Crossman traveled to China with an Albany volleyball team for the Special Olympics.

"All of these things that I've done ... they've helped me reach this point," said Perkins.

It's that sense of giving back to the community and being an upstanding citizen that Perkins wants to impart to the Pacers' players - something the organization has been lacking in recent years. Three Indiana players - Jamaal Tinsley, Shawne Williams and Marquis Daniels - have been involved in off-the-court incidents in the last two years, and another player, David Harrison, was suspended by the NBA for a drug policy violation. Then, there was the infamous brawl between the Pacers and Detroit Pistons several years ago in Detroit that involved players and fans.

"Trouble is going to look for you all the time, and you have to learn how to deal with it," said Perkins.

"When you've got a franchise that is perceived as having lost its way, I think he's the right man for the job of helping the franchise find its way," said Crossman.

Perkins knows how trouble can find a person. During his 17-year NBA career with the Pacers, the Seattle SuperSonics, the Los Angeles Lakers and the Dallas Mavericks, he said there were times that he made poor choices.

Fortunately for Perkins, those choices didn't lead to run-ins with the law.

"Did I stay out late? Yes. Did I drink? Yes," said Perkins. "But I never took advantage of anybody or let anybody take advantage of me, and that's how you gain respect."

Now, it's up to Perkins to help the current players on Indiana's roster avoid those same traps and become role models for future NBA players.

"The whole concept is not only to provide guidance to the players, but also to be a role model to those players," said Crossman. "Since he's been around a couple of successful organizations, he knows what it takes to succeed in the NBA."

Saints meet Kansas in regular season

The Siena College men's basketball team will play defending national champion Kansas Tuesday, Jan. 6, at Allen Fieldhouse in Lawrence, Kan.

It marks the first time that the Saints will have played the reigning national champions since they faced Syracuse in the 2003-04 season. Syracuse beat Siena 74-61 in that game.

Kansas is the latest addition to a Siena schedule filled with teams from major Division I leagues. The Saints are playing in the Old Spice Classic Nov. 27-30 in Orlando against the likes of Oklahoma State, Georgetown, Tennessee, Maryland and Gonzaga, and they're visiting St. Joseph's from the Atlantic 10.

Rarick scores hole-in-one

Patrick Rarick recorded his first career hole-in-one April 19 at the Colonial Acres Golf Course in Glenmont, one day before his 13th birthday.

Rarick used a 9-iron on the second hole to record his hole-in-one, which was witnessed by his parents and his little sister.

Three other golfers saw the ball go into the cup as they waited to tee off on the third hole - Scott Rose, Alex Burke and Dave McCurdy. Rarick treated them to a round of sports drinks from the clubhouse.

Perkins comes full circle

Former NBA player hired to guide current players

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Sam Perkins has come full circle.

The Indiana Pacers hired the Shaker High School graduate to be the NBA team's vice president of player relations last month - a job that gives the former pro basketball player a chance to mentor a new generation of players.

"I always wanted to get into the NBA (management) in some capacity ... and this was one (possibility)," said Perkins. "Player relations and player development has always been important to me."

The fact that the job offer came from Pacers team president Larry Bird - who once coached him in Indiana - was an honor in itself for Perkins.

"It's a humbling experience to be called upon by a legend," said

Perkins. "He's one of two people who I admired (before entering the NBA in 1984) and then got to know."

Among Perkins' responsibilities will be to teach players how to manage their money, how to relate and give back to the Indianapolis community, how to deal with media scrutiny and how to make the right choices in their personal lives.

"The biggest issue is to have some structure in their lives," said Perkins. "They don't realize that once they sign that contract, their lives change drastically. They really have to concentrate on being themselves and getting used to saying no to people."

The guidance Perkins offers is similar to the guidance he received growing up, especially from his legal guardian, Herb Crossman.

"If anything, the reason I'm talking to you from where I am today is because of him," Perkins said of Crossman. "He taught me all of these things that I now pass along to my daughters and the things that I will be passing along to the Pacers."

"It's tremendously gratifying to know he's going to be passing along a lot of the things I taught him, and it's tremendously gratifying to know he's going to help a lot of other people," said Crossman, who lives in Slingerlands.

Perkins has been helping as many people as he can since retiring from the NBA after the 2000-01 season. He's been involved in several charitable organizations including Nothing But Nets (a United Nations program devoted to providing mosquito nets to malaria-prone regions of Africa), the Boys and Girls Club, Big Brothers, NBA Cares, Basketball

Time to say goodbye, Patroons

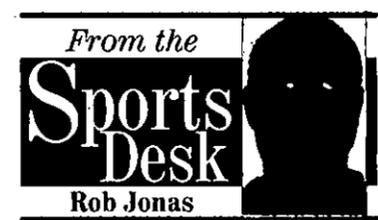

I wrote out several ideas for this week's column, but none of them stood out as a topic I could devote the whole column to. So instead, I'm going to throw them all into this column. Enjoy the randomness.

• The odds of the Albany Patroons selling 600 season ticket packages by the end of this month to save themselves from extinction are as long as the odds of me buying the New York Mets to save them from the Wilpon family - it's just not going to happen.

Frankly, I'm not surprised that the Patroons are in this mess. They have never drawn well since rising from the dead three years ago, primarily because no one around here takes the Continental Basketball Association seriously. Of course, how can anyone be expected to do that when the league keeps losing teams as fast as it tries to create them and modifies its playoff system just before the postseason begins? If the CBA offered a better level of talent and more stability, people around here might respect the league more and, in turn, respect the Patroons more.

The only thing that saddens me about the prospect of losing the Patroons is what will happen to the Washington Avenue Armory when (not if) they leave. The inside of the Armory is much nicer since the building was refurbished in 2005, and it would be a shame to see the building sit idle again. Perhaps the National Basketball Developmental League would be interested in plopping a franchise in there, or maybe we could get an American Basketball Association team. Anything would be better than letting the Armory go to waste again.

As for the Patroons, I think we can let them go. It's really for the best.
