Five Rivers deal pulled

No clear consensus on how the transfer of land fell off map

By JARRETT CARROLL

After months of debate and review by the Bethlehem Planning Board, and little in the way of compromise from either side, landowner Carol Richards has withdrawn a subdivision application that could have ultimately added 25 acres of forever-wild land to the Five Rivers Environmental Education Center.

Richards proposed deed-restricting nearly 25 acres of land against development and selling it for $50,000 to the Open Space Institute, which would in turn transfer it to the state's Department of Environmental Conservation and then bring a portion of Five Rivers into the Town of Bethlehem.

"We got a letter from her attorney withdrawing the application," said Michael Morelli, assistant director of economic development and planning, referring to Richards' decision to withdraw her proposal.

The subdivision and land deal turned into a stalemate between Richards' attorneys and town officials until it came to a head at the Tuesday, Nov. 18, planning board meeting. The town voted 5-to-1 in favor of its version of the subdivision, which included a 20-foot access along a proposed lot off Fisher Boulevard instead of Richards' proposed New Scotland Road access.

St. Nicholas stirs up magic and business at the mall

He checks his beard in the mirror every morning before leaving the house to take a seat on his magical throne. After all, even a single out-of-place hair could plant a seed of doubt in the minds of the hundreds of children who will visit him in a single day.

He may not be the one and only, but the Santa you see sitting before you in the local mall is far from phony.

In fact, according to most mall managers, without Santa, the holidays would not be complete. And many parents agree that being able to bring their children to see the jolly red elf year after year is a favorite holiday tradition.

While the beards and suits and boots may be the same, not all Santas are created equal.

According to Jimmy Valentino, owner of Capital Photo, a special event photography business, the Santa you see at the mall sometimes comes from the most unlikely of places.

Valentino's company has been responsible for bringing Santa to Crossgates Mall for the past 22 years, and Colonie Center for the past five.

His employees come from throughout the community, and most of them seek out Valentino for the seasonal job.

Planning board: Don't box the bank

Proposed renovations to longtime Four Corners institution deemed unsightly

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers

The artist renderings of proposed renovations to the Key-Bank on the Four Corners in Delmar have drawn skepticism and outright criticism from the majority on the Bethlehem Planning Board.

KeyBank is proposing to renovate the actual building, along with making several changes to the site that would include new planters, walkways and park benches. The problem arose when architects originally sought to place the bank's heating, ventilating and air conditioning equipment on the roof of building and make the three separate units of the building appear as one. They eventually decided to keep the HVAC system on the ground.

The result, in many of the board members' eyes: a big box.

"My main comment is that it's awfully boxy in a part of town where there's a lot of pitched roofs," said planning board member Katherine McCarthy. "I can

Traffic light confusion leads to DWI arrest

Police arrested a Florida man after he sat through a half dozen light changes at a Delmar intersection and charged him with DWI.

Michael J. Gillespie, 60, of Vero Beach, Fla., was arrested on Sunday, Nov. 30, on Kenwood Avenue for DWI, first offense; operating a motor vehicle with a blood-alcohol content of 0.08 percent or greater; failure to obey a traffic device; and failure to dim lights.

Bethlehem police said an officer driving east on Kenwood Avenue saw Gillespie driving west and noticed that he did not dim his lights for passing cars. The officer then saw Gillespie approach the intersection of Kenwood and Elsmere avenues and stop for a red light, according to the arrest report.

"The light cycled to green and the vehicle did not proceed through the intersection," the report states. "The light cycled back to red, then green, and red again in which [Gillespie] then continued through the red light."

Police said at the same time an EMS assistant chief was driving south in a marked vehicle and "had to abruptly brake in order to avoid contact with [Gillespie]."

The officer on the scene activated his emergency lights and pulled over Gillespie, who identified himself with a Florida's driver's license, the report states.

While interviewing Gillespie, Police said they smelled alcohol on his breath and that when he was asked if he had been drinking, Gillespie responded he drank two glasses of wine at a friend's house in Ravena.

He was then asked to exit his vehicle to perform a series of four field-sobriety tests, which officers said Gillespie failed, and he was taken into custody and transported to the Bethlehem Police Department after testing positive for alcohol.

Gillespie submitted to a chemical test and he was arraigned before Bethlehem Town Justice Ryan Donovan. He was sent to the Albany County Correctional Facility in lieu of a $500 cash bail, the report states.

He was transported to the county jail without incident after police, at his request, removed his wallet and cell phone from his vehicle that was towed.

Gillespie is expected to return to Bethlehem Town Court on Tuesday, Dec. 16.

Close call

A large pine tree landed on a Delmar home and punctured its roof during a windy winter evening on Sunday, Dec. 7. Police reported no injuries at the home of Steve and Nancy Rice at 14 Werner Road. The incident occurred on one of the coldest evenings of the year. A branch came through the ceiling of a bedroom, nearly hitting the bed.

$10M land deal finalized in Bethlehem

Company expected to bring hundreds of new jobs

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

A large distribution warehouse is slated to bring hundreds of new jobs to the area and is even looking to build and expand on the site just bought for $10 million.

The CB Richard Ellis Albany Company announced the sale of 218 West Yard Road in Selkirk, and town officials say it's a good deal for Bethlehem.

Richard Sleasman and Don Noland of CB Richard Ellis Albany were the brokers for the transaction, according to a release from the company. McNeary Inc. purchased the building from NY Realty Partners.

Bethlehem's director of economic development, George Leveille, said a minor tax abatement will equal a big economic boost to the town when it needs it most. "A strong local company has acquired the building and wants to build another. ... This is a very positive thing," Leveille said.

CB Richard Ellis sold this distribution facility at 218 West Yard Road in Selkirk to McNeary Inc. for $10 million.

The 450,000-square-foot warehouse and distribution facility is located on a 29.5-acre parcel. The property was officially transferred for $10 million on Nov. 25.

The warehouse is located in the Selkirk Railyards district, which is zoned heavy industrial. The north side of West Yard Road is east of Feura Bush Road, Route 32, 8 miles west of state Thruway exits 22 and 23.

Daniel Benvenuti, a real estate developer from Sacramento,

Calif., made a presentation at the town's Industrial Development Agency (IDA) meeting on Thursday, Nov. 20, and asked for assistance on the taxes as it lures potential tenants to the site.

Benvenuti told the IDA that he has been in business for 35 years and has built more than 37 million square feet of warehouse space. His company, Realty Partners, LP, owns the warehouse, which previously housed the Appleton Paper Co.

According to IDA minutes of that meeting, "One of his clients, Empire Merchants North (EMN), is considering a proposal to relocate its Kingston and Colonie facilities to the West Yard Road location. The site would serve as corporate headquarters."

The plans called for modifying the building to include 30,000 square foot of office space. EMN would occupy 315,000 square feet of the building and employ 275 to 300 people.

The company would invest approximately $6.5 million in a new operating system and $3.5 million in new real estate.

CB Richard Ellis Group asked the IDA for assistance, said Leveille, and the group has agreed to an "$8 million assessment freeze" for 10 years. Leveille explained there will be a 2 percent "escalator" assessment system in place for the property.

"In 10 years it will revert to its full value," he said. "This gives them a little wiggle room ... and an incentive to move forward."

Describing the tax break as "a relatively modest tax incentive," Leveille said the long-term gains would have a lasting impact on the town. He said the "spin-off effective of 150 jobs" from "a solid long-term company" would go a long way during a national economic crisis.

"The hope is that bigger things will come," Leveille said. "At this time — let's be honest — we need these types of opportunities."

Councilman blasts CDTA rate increase

Bethlehem Councilman Mark Hennessey called on the Capital District Transportation Authority to reconsider its plans to implement a two-step fare increase plan. The proposed fare increase would eventually raise base rates to $2.

Hennessey asked the CDTA board to reconsider the increase because of the "unfair impact it has on those who can afford it the least."

He presented his testimony Thursday, Dec. 4, at the Albany Public Library, where other community members and Albany Common Council President Shawn Morris joined him. Hennessey said he understood that CDTA costs were rising — with administrative and salary costs making up the bulk of the increase — but he believes a $2 fare would hurt the people who depend on the bus service the most.

He cited a 100 percent projected increase in field operations material and supplies and a 133 percent increase in travel and meetings, but said CDTA may be off on some of their cost projections.

Mark Hennessey

"I also noticed in reviewing your budget that you anticipate a 29.6 percent increase year-to-year in fuel costs," said Hennessey. "I think that, looking at the current recession and precipitous drop in fuel prices — that could be a faulty projection. My suggestion in this case is to buy in to a new, long-term fuel contract which could save you significant money."

Hennessey said he also took issue with service expansion in Saratoga County while service was not improved in Albany. He said that CDTA implemented new bus lines services in Saratoga, in their words "significantly increasing service hours while providing a number of customer amenities."

"I am all for expanding service, but it seems to me that the real important issue that is not talked about is the need for enhancements to pre-existing routes. My constituents ride the No. 18, 19 and 7 and they have not seen a correlated tripling of service, so as you raise fares to make sure that Saratogians can get around town, you are not doing the same for my constituents in Bethlehem," Hennessey said. "For my constituents and others who have been asking for improvements for years, this is simply scandalous."

Hennessey said he had heard from several constituents at the meeting and before about their concerns about a fare increase and its effect.

"For all these reasons, I ask respectfully, to please reconsider your decision," he said.

Corning Hill residents want a re-zone

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

A group of residents has requested to change the zoning for five residential lots on Corning Hill off Route 9W.

The Town of Bethlehem Planning Board recommended making the change to the Town Board at its Wednesday, Dec. 3, meeting, after hearing the requested zoning change on Wednesday, Nov. 19. The vote was unanimous.

The request calls for 6.1 acres of land on Corning Hill to be changed from residential A to commercial hamlet.

Michael Morelli, assistant director of economic development and planning, said the new zone could be used as a "transition zone" from a more residential area on top of Corning Hill to the business district at the bottom of the hill along Route 9W.

"There's five properties on top of Corning Hill Road adjacent to the Cumberland Farms that are requesting a re-zone," Morelli said. "There are a lot of zones over there ... and it would be a nice transitional zone."

Some of the zones in the area include residential, rural, rural light industrial and general commercial, he said.

There are four property owners for the five parcels being considered for a re-zone, and all four are in favor of the becoming a commercial hamlet for various reasons.

"It would allow the existing residents to continue living there but also create small businesses if they wanted to," Morelli said of the new zoning consideration. "The owner of the property next to the Cumberland Farms would like to have a traditional automobile garage ... where he could restore older and antique vehicles."

Morelli said the new zone could accommodate a small three-car bay garage for such a business.

Planning Board member Katherine McCarthy said the re-zone seems reasonable but that the public's input will be weighed before any possible action.

"It seems like a good plan but it's key to have those public hearings," McCarthy said. "I'm interested in hearing what people have to say about the possible re-zone."

According to municipal law, both the Planning Board and the Town Board will have to hold public hearings before a new zone can be officially put into place.

These small cookies are big on taste

If Thanksgiving is the holiday for pie lovers, then Christmas is for cookie lovers. People like me. I'm not going to tell you that I don't love a good piece of pie, especially with whipped cream. But I feel a special connection with the cookie. And I believe I can speak for my family and say that they do, too.

There are many good qualities of a cookie, of course. But most importantly, you rarely have to share one. In the eyes of a child, that means something. In our house, everything is shared. Elliot, he is forced to share his Legos. Lucy's precious violin is passed around to each kid, every time she takes it out to practice. And Zoe, who loves bananas, always finds herself eating only half of the last one. But a cookie? It's yours and yours alone.

We do not discriminate against any cookie in our house. I make big, chewy oatmeal cookies on any average day in the winter. These I make without much fat and very little sugar — good for you but still a treat.

I am also the type of person who keeps a bag of chocolate chips in the freezer, just in case. You never know when a craving for old-fashioned chocolate chip cookies is going to strike. And I like to be prepared.

From a Caterer's Kitchen

Occasionally I do like to make cookies that are decidedly adult. My favorite is triple ginger biscotti. Each of my children, and even my husband, will turn their noses up at those, but I make them anyway. The spice and crunch are perfect with a cup of tea and peace and quiet — the kind of cookie you want when there aren't any kids around, anyway.

My husband's favorite cookie is one his grandmother used to make. She made him peanut butter cookies with a chocolate kiss on top. I had never had one before I met Paul. Once, thinking I was being terribly clever, I brought a batch to a picnic. There were no less than five platters of peanut butter cookies with chocolate kisses on top at the dessert table. An excellent treat, yes, but nothing out of the ordinary.

Among all of these favorite cookies that we make throughout the year are the special, once-a-year cookies. These are the sugar and butter cutouts, peppermint candy cane cookies and thumbprints. Pecan shortbread are made once each year, and requested throughout the rest.

This year, I will add a new cookie to my repertoire: the Nutella sandwich cookie. These treats are in honor of my daughter, Zoe. This year, Zoe discovered something that she goes absolutely wild for: Nutella. For those unfamiliar with this particularly addictive food, it's a chocolate and hazelnut spread. It's similar in consistency, and on the grocery store shelf right next to, peanut butter. There is a cult following for Nutella, by those who find it irresistible. Zoe is one of those people. Nutella and shortbread are made for each other. The buttery crunch of the cookies, spread with creamy chocolate are then sent over the top when rolled in chopped pecans. Indeed, Nutella sandwich cookies are best saved for a special occasion.

Another cookie, this one savory, that we save for the holidays is black pepper and cheddar cookies. This addictive appetizer combines a few of my favorite flavors and textures: the humble butter cookie meets cracked pepper and salty cheddar cheese. The cornmeal contributes to the crumbliness of each bite, while the cheddar and butter work together to melt in your mouth. The black pepper leaves a nice bite. These can be dangerous, as I always eat more than I mean to.

As the month of December marches on, I start thinking about just how many cookies — sweet or otherwise — have crossed my tongue. Then thoughts of healthy food come back. And why not eat something good for you at a party? Enter cranberry salsa. This dip has been a party staple of ours for years. It is southwestern flavored and different from any salsa out there. The color is exotic and the flavor surprisingly good. Cranberries have a very fresh, bold taste, while the onion, cilantro and lime remind you of what is on the chip: salsa. Cranberry salsa marries well with corn chips, of course. But for those who want a healthier choice, there are other options: veggies, baked tortilla and multigrain pita chips. I do know that we all traditionally think of cranberries at Thanksgiving. But they will be in the store for a few more weeks (they do go quickly at this time of year, so don't wait, buy a bag now.) And aside from being an excuse to eat another chip, this dip is a great way to take advantage of the antioxidants found in cranberries. So with Cranberry Salsa I let this very worthy berry make one more appearance at my table each year.

Nutella Sandwich Cookies
1 cup all-purpose flour
1/3 cup confectioner's sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup cold butter, cut into 8 pieces
A few tablespoons cold milk
Nutella
A few handfuls toasted, finely chopped pecans
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease an 8-by-8-inch metal pan. In a food processor, pulse the flour, sugar and salt. With the motor running, drop the butter in, until combined. Pour in the milk, one tablespoon at a time, until a soft dough forms. Press the dough into the prepared pan, and bake until the edges just begin to turn golden brown, about 25 minutes. Cool. Cut the shortbread into 1-inch squares. Spread the bottom of a square with Nutella, and sandwich with another square. Spread the sides with Nutella, and press in the pecans. Keep in a covered container.

Black Pepper and Cheddar Cookies
3/4 cups all-purpose flour, plus 3 tablespoons
1/4 cup yellow cornmeal
1 teaspoon sea salt
1 teaspoon black pepper
2 cups shredded extra sharp cheddar cheese
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
6 tablespoons cold butter, cut into chunks
2 tablespoons olive oil
A few tablespoons cold water
In a food processor, pulse the flour, cornmeal, salt, pepper, cheddar and baking powder until combined. With the motor running, add the butter, one piece at a time, and the olive oil. Add a very small amount of water, with the motor running, until a soft dough forms. Gather the dough, place on a large piece of waxed paper, and form it into a log about 1-1/2-inch thick. Refrigerate for at least three hours. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a baking sheet. Cut 1/2-inch slices from the log, and place a few inches apart on the cookie sheet. Bake for 12 minutes, flip them and bake for five more minutes. Serve directly from the oven. Store leftovers in an airtight container for four to five days. Cookies can be reheated in a 350 degree oven for 5 minutes, but they won't be as wonderful as directly from the oven.

Cranberry Salsa
1 bag fresh cranberries
1/2 green apple, peeled, cored, and chopped
1 jalapeno chili, stemmed, seeded and chopped fine
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro
juice of one lime
1/2 medium red onion, chopped fine
1 teaspoon sea salt
Mix together sugar, lime and sea salt. Pulse the cranberries a few times in a food processor, until they are chopped but not minced. Combine with the apples, cilantro, jalapeno, onion and dressing. Stir to combine. Taste to adjust seasonings. Can be made one day ahead and kept in an airtight container in the refrigerator.

Officials, public weigh in on landfill expansion

DEC still reviewing possible solutions

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Albany Mayor Gerald Jennings said he is hoping for a "win-win" situation as local officials sparred over the implications of expanding the Rapp Road Landfill at a public hearing on Wednesday, Dec. 3.

The city's plan includes expanding the landfill, and in exchange for infringing on a portion of Pine Bush Preserve land, it will restore other parts of the preserve.

Elected officials, environmental advocates and the public met at the Polish Community Center at the Washington Avenue extension to discuss the possibility of expanding the landfill eastward into the Pine Bush Preserve in Guilderland. The landfill has already expanded several times, the last time in February 1999.

Those in attendance raised questions about alternative sites, health risks, the environmental implications of shipping waste to other sites, uses for the natural gas produced by the landfill and marketing the Pine Bush as a source of revenue.

Jennings said the landfill expansion will ultimately benefit the city and the Capital District, but opponents said that the odor and health implications outweigh the benefits.

"We have done everything within reason, and then some, to try to turn this into a win-win situation," Jennings said, acknowledging it is "obviously a complicated and controversial situation."

The city will spend $18 million over 10 years on the restoration of the Pine Bush Preserve, and $13 million on the expansion. Jennings said it would be the single biggest investment into the Pine Bush Preserve.

He also said the revenue generated from the landfill, which takes in close to $11 million each year will go toward other waste management solutions and generates renewable gas for electricity.

The planned lateral expansion is close to 15 acres, with two of those acres falling in the "existing landfill operations area," and 13 undeveloped, city-owned acres to the northeast of the landfill, according to the Oct. 8 Department of Environmental Conservation environmental impact notice.

The restoration plan for the wetland impacts will involve the creation of 22.14 acres of new wetlands and an additional 27.45 acres of existing wetlands to be enhanced in quality and function, the DEC notice states.

Colonie Supervisor Paula Mahan read a letter Wednesday that she wrote to Department of Environmental Conservation Commissioner Pete Grannis stating she has serious concerns about the health of residents in close proximity to the landfill and its odor.

"The effects are significant, and their [the residents'] concerns are real," she said.

She asked that all alternatives to an expansion be explored before any decision is made.

Village of Colonie Mayor Frank Leak discussed the far-reaching effects of the landfill, including the effect on the village's fire department, which is one of the first responders to emergencies at the landfill, citing dozens of calls that have been responded to over the past few years.

"We have to pay for the gas and the trucks, and there is always a chance of an accident," Leak said.

He also said odors and allergies and respiratory illnesses are issues that need to be addressed.

"We do not use the landfill. However, our residents cannot escape the odor from the site," Leak said. "The fumes migrate over our residential and business properties in the south side of the village."

Chris Hawver, executive director of the Albany Pine Bush Preserve Commission, said the environmental group is against any further expansion, however the proposal put forth by Albany is the best he has seen so far.

He also pointed out that although the area Albany plans to build on is not federally protected; 13 acres have been recommended for full protection.

Frank LaVardera, a principal at the City of Albany's engineering consulting firm Clough Harbor & Associates said the current landfill will last until 2009, and said the expansion will give it close to six-and-a-half years more life.

He also pointed out that tests have shown there are no health risks posed by the air around the landfill.

LaVardera said the city explored 10 other sites to use but none of them are suitable as alternative landfills.

Village of Colonie Deputy Mayor Tom Tobin disagreed with the assessment that the landfill passed air tests, saying it does not pass quality-of-life tests.

"It doesn't pass the smell test many nights in the village," Tobin said.

Albany City Councilman Dominick Casolaro, of the First Ward, spoke out against the expansion, saying that the Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Statement was incomplete. He also questioned the profitability of the landfill, citing the numerous costs to operate it. He even said the city would save money by shipping the trash rather than running the landfill.

He said the possibility to turn the landfill into a "resource recovery park," which focuses on separating what can be reused rather than burying it, has not been fully explored.

He asked the DEC to stop the "expansion of the expansion of the expansion," before the situation gets out of hand.

"There's only a couple of these left, and we have one here," he said. "It's a rare jewel."

Casolaro's colleague, Albany City Councilman Mike O'Brien, called trash management a regional problem.

"We're all in this together, and we have to find long-range solutions," said O'Brien.

He pushed for an expanded Bigger, Better, Bottle Bill, which would allow the recycling of containers for non-carbonated beverages currently not covered by New York state's recycling law as a general long-term solution to environmental concerns.

Carm Privitera, who spoke on behalf of several residents at the Avila retirement home in Guilderland, said more research about the health effects of the landfill need to be discussed, especially when it comes to cancer and the human reproductive system.

"The flora and fauna of the Pine Bush are important, but so are you and I," Privitera said.

He called for more medical research and questioned the "close controls," on health regulations in place now.

Tom Ellis, a resident of Albany, said more public input is needed and Jennings should be more visible during the process.

"When the mayor of Albany talks about including the public - he's full of it," Ellis said.

He said a pay-as-you-throw system would force people to be more selective in what they dump and make less waste.

Richard Ostrov, the attorney for Region 4 at the Department of Environmental Conservation, spoke at the hearing to assure the concerned parties that the DEC is still considering all options.

"There is no final decision on the permit. We have not taken a final position," Ostrov said.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

Help them help you

Research is all over the map when it comes to steering a small businesses through tough economic times, but most advisors and business owners agree that it is the small-to mid-sized companies that are among the hardest hit in a recession.

They lack the resources of the bigger businesses in their industries — the ones that allow the big boys to anticipate, adjust to and recover from financial hardship with a fluidity that small businesses cannot. Small businesses are also the first to get a call from their nervous lenders during a credit crisis, much like the one we're in now.

Unlike the banking industry or the Big Three automakers, your local business owner isn't sending anyone to Washington to lobby for billions in taxpayer money. That's why it's incumbent upon our local business to lobby where they can and, frankly, where it counts the most: their customers.

Small businesses exist because they can provide something their larger counterparts do not. Many times it may be a specific good or service, but more often than not, it's an attitude and ambience that accompanies the way they do business, rather than the business itself, that grows a small business' customer base.

Small businesses embody the concept of community. There is a sense of kinship that goes hand-in-hand with visiting a small, local business that one just can't get from standing in line at the single register that's open in the entire big-box mega-mart.

We at Spotlight Newspapers support local businesses — we're one of them — and we hope that our cohorts in local industry approach these trying times with the same appreciative demeanor toward their customers that we do.

Customers, even though the price of gas has fallen low enough to resume weekly trips to the nearest big-box plaza, the time has never been better to reacquire yourself with your local retailers. Business owners, endeavor yourself to your customers and capitalize on the things you have that bigger guys don't. Now is the time to capture some of their market share — and hopefully retain it when the economy makes a comeback.

It has been said that retail giants don't cause small businesses to close, they cause poorly run businesses to close. The same could be said about a recession.

Hopefully our small business owners have not only the financial savvy to weather this storm, but also the support from — and for — their customers.

Green ideas for gray weather

By SUE PEZZOLLA
Spotlight Newspapers
news@spotlightnews.com

The author is a community educator for horticulture at the Cornell Cooperative Extension of Albany County.

Winter has a habit of being very long in the Northeast so having a few plants indoors can bridge the gap between the seasons, especially for the gardener.

The term "houseplant" is a misnomer as most houseplants are tropical foliage plants that grow outside in warmer climates but readily adapt to life indoors as long as their caretakers know what it takes to make them happy. Check out the light exposure where you want to have a plant and if in doubt, choose something that will tolerate low light levels. An eastern (morning sun) exposure is ideal for many plants. Things get complicated when people want to use plants decoratively, which often means placing them in a corner or away from the window.

If you are new to indoor gardening, stick to the easy going plant choices such as pothos, philodendron, or snake plant. If you need a plant with some size for a dim area then look for the cast iron plant, Aspidistra elatior. A favorite of the Victorians, this humble plant can survive very low light and cool temperatures. The Chinese evergreen, Aglaonema, is another good low light choice, and it will tolerate very dry air. Assess your environment and the light exposure to fine tune the right plant for the location.

Try to purchase plants on a temperate day, but if the temperature is close to freezing then insist that your new plant be wrapped for protection. Wrapping plants is not done automatically at many stores today so the consumer needs to be wary. Careful wrapping is crucial at holiday time, especially when purchasing poinsettias as they are extremely intolerant of cold and the damage will begin to show within a few hours after exposure. It would be wise to warm up the car if it is very cold as even that dip in temperature can affect a wrapped poinsettia.

Many of the indoor flowering plants offer color and interest when the weather is dreary. African violets, streptocarpus, and kalanchoe are few plants that are easy to find and to grow. Be sure to read the plant tags to see what each plant prefers before making your decision. It is easy to fall in love with a blooming beauty but be sure that you can meet its needs before committing to the relationship.

Remember that plants respond to light and when the days are short, many are resting so do not fertilize. October through March water only (no fertilizer) and water less frequently but thoroughly. The old rule of thumb is that you can not water a plant too much when it needs water, but you can water a plant too frequently resulting in root rot from over watering. Err on the side of caution and let most plants dry out a bit — this may take a week or 10 days in the winter. If the plant is not too big, lift up the pot to see if it is heavy or light. If it is light, then it needs water, so water very well until the water comes out of the drainage holes. Cactus would be the exception to this method as they have very specific watering needs and the soil is sandy and always heavy. Cactuses are good plants for new indoor gardeners who are busy and forget to water. They are not good choices for those who like to nurture, however.

An interesting and different indoor plant is the oxalis, or wood sorrel, which resembles a giant clover. Common at St. Patrick's Day is the green oxalis which is sold as a "shamrock" plant for those wanting the "luck o the Irish." This oxalis flowers for a long period of time with many small white blooms. The purple oxalis, Oxalis regnellii, is a favorite at Valentine's Day and it is often sold as the little "Love Plant." A real charmer with purple heart shaped leaves and delicate white blooms it is native to South America. Both oxalis grow from small rhizomes and when the plant needs dividing the task is as simple as separating out several rhizomes and replanting.

If reading is a favorite winter pastime, then consider "The Earth Knows My Name" by Patricia Klindienst, Beacon Press Books 2006. The subtitle of this book is "Food, Culture, and Sustainability in the Gardens of Ethnic Americans" and although this is the content, the primary title gets to the heart of the matter. This book is the result of the author's quest to understand the culture and custom of gardening among the ethnic groups who now call America home. The 15 stories span the North American continent and they are about immigrants transplanted here for many reasons but who are all connected by the love of gardening. The author interviews families and in retelling their stories, she offers a fascinating glimpse into the present lives and the histories of these gardening families and how they have adapted their ethnic gardening heritage to this new land. It is fascinating as a cultural and historical account but on a personal level it is touching to learn how and why the simple act of growing food is so intrinsic to so many cultures and what it means to each of these varied families. This simple book of stories is really a book about hope, and I promise that it will inspire you or someone on your gift list.

With the holidays close at hand, consider an environmentally friendly gift of a plant. Besides the seasonal star, the poinsettia, take a look at the amaryllis and the Christmas cactus. It is hard to beat the drama of the giant amaryllis bulb as it bursts forth with one or more tall stalks each having three to five large trumpet shaped blooms of various colors. A special gift would be to pot up three or more of these beauties together for an unbelievable display. Expect to pay in the range of $6 to $15 per bulb depending on the size and cultivar. Flowering bulb kits are common at holiday time for those who might enjoy the whole planting/growing experience.

Thanksgiving and Christmas cactuses both flower when the days are short. These are sold as potted plants or in hanging baskets all budded up and ready to bloom for several weeks. The fun and the challenge lies in growing them on and having them flower each year. For more detailed care instructions for any of these indoor plants, contact your local Cornell University Cooperative Extension. Happy "indoor" gardening!

Mathusa family thanks community

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Mathusa family has been overwhelmed over the past month at all the events that have occurred.

On Oct. 23, we had a great surprise for my father at the monthly Town Board meeting. Parker Mathusa was presented with a beautiful park bench and plaque for his vision and dedication to the Quadricentennial Committee.

We would like to thank Town Supervisor Jack Cunningham, Kim Ryan and all involved for their thoughts and efforts to make this a spectacular event and for the ability of my father to be present at the dedication. My dad did make it to the bench at the Henry Hudson Park and it was a very memorable and proud day.

Unfortunately, three weeks later, on Nov. 16, my father lost his battle with ALS. He passed away peacefully in typical "Pop" fashion: surrounded by his wife, four daughters, four sons-in-law and his 10 grandchildren. He had his sharp mind and sense of humor until the end. He gave his family and his community so many gifts and we have a lot to be thankful for during this holiday season.

We would like to extend a thank you to the hundreds of family, friends and people of the community that came out and stood in the long, cold line to express their condolences and speak such kind words of my father. It certainly was a great tribute to an amazing man. It gave us a sense of how much he did and how many lives he touched. We miss him so much and are still adjusting to him not being around.

Thank you to The Spotlight for the continued coverage of the events and tributes to my dad. We appreciate your efforts and my dad would have loved the stories.

The support we have received has been wonderful, and words cannot describe how thankful we really are to all of you that have helped us get through these difficult times. We continue to see why my father was proud to call the Town of Bethlehem his home.

Lafarge modernization will help local business

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am writing to express my support for the Lafarge Cement company and its plans for a modernization of its plant in Ravena.

It is my understanding that the work will create over 800 jobs during the period of construction. The modernized plant will be cleaner, more efficient and help retain hundreds of good paying jobs in the area.

As owner of the Elk Sign Shop in Glenmont, and one of scores of local businesses patronized by Lafarge, I can appreciate first hand the benefits of having companies in the area that regularly show support for the community and a preference toward local vendors.

In these difficult financial times, with much of our manufacturing being shipped overseas to developing countries, we should value companies like Lafarge that bring jobs, pay taxes and buy from local businesses.

Schools should teach better financial literacy

Editor The Spotlight:

While the blame for our current economic crisis lies resolutely with greedy Wall Street bankers and predatory lenders, their schemes succeeded because they took advantage of the low financial literacy of many working Americans.

A comprehensive response to this crisis should not only curb the excesses of Wall Street, but should also ensure working Americans know how to avoid financial risks that could force them into long-term debt and even cost them their homes.

At the Glenmont Job Corps Center, financial literacy and managing your personal budget is a core component of students' education, along with traditional academics and vocational training. We should ensure similar opportunities for basic financial education are available throughout our schools and community to help protect working Americans and our economy from falling victim to predatory lenders again.

On Oct. 7 at the Normanside Country Club, Bethlehem Senior Projects Inc. honored its many volunteers and recognized those businesses and organizations whose contributions helped us reach our goal of raising $100,000 to purchase two senior transportation vans.

By means of this letter, I would like to thank everyone in the Bethlehem community who contributed either time or hard-earned dollars.

To raise $100,000 in less than two years in this economy is no small accomplishment.

I am proud to be a member of such a generous community. Thank you for all that you do.

Panel to study DWI car seizures

Practice, which would include misdemeanors, already in place in New York City

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

The Vehicular Crimes Unit advisory panel, created Thursday, Nov. 20, by the Albany County District Attorney's office is studying DWI policy and potential vehicle confiscations for misdemeanor drunk driving offenses.

Currently the law allows for confiscation of vehicles for felony arrests, but not for misdemeanors, said Heather Orth, spokeswoman for the district attorney.

"The advisory panel will be looking around the county and the state at best practices [for DWI]," Orth said.

She said David Soares' office will then decide whether they will recommend the Albany County Legislature adopt a local law allowing the confiscation of cars for misdemeanor DWI arrests.

The advisory panel includes law enforcement officials, college professors and advocacy group members.

Currently there is no bill before the County Legislature, said Betsy Weiss, the director of research for the Majority Counsel's office.

She did say, though, that Soares did bring up the issue earlier last month though.

"He did say at the review of the District Attorney's budget before the audit and finance committee that he intends to submit one," she said.

DWI attorney Peter Gerstenzang said car seizures will add another level of hearings and procedures to the legal process, and also can be complicated by fact that many drivers lease cars and do not own them outright.

"I think it's going to be burdensome for either the DA or whoever does those hearings," Gerstenzang said.

He said the downside is that police officers will need to appear at another hearing on top of the one dealing with the driver's suspended license.

He also said that for those not found guilty, it is a sizable inconvenience to not have your vehicle for the duration of the court proceedings.

"It's some very significant penalties for people who haven't been proven guilty," Gerstenzang said.

Ultimately Gerstenzang said the decision rests in the hands of the County Legislature. The District attorney's office will also have to decide, if a law is passed, on what resources to use toward implementing the policy, he said.

The New York Police Department currently uses a confiscation system, although it was challenged in court close to 10 years ago.

Executive officer of the New York Police Department Civil Enforcement Unit Robert Fodera, also an attorney, said the NYPD has a regulation permitting them to "confiscate vehicles involved in any crimes, misdemeanor or felony."

Fodera said in 1999 there was a challenge to the scope of the provision, but ultimately it included DWI arrests.

He said there are some exceptions to cars being confiscated, such as if it is owned by a third party and they were unaware of the crime, or if it is a short-term rental. "We evaluate every case on its own merit," he said. Seizures can be permanent if the owner had prior offenses and has been given a chance to seek counseling for prior offenses and has chosen not to, Fodera said.

He added there has not been any discussion to change the provision as it stands.

Bethlehem educators named 'amazing teachers'

Bethlehem Central Middle School health teachers Jennifer Mead and Fran Vincent were honored by the New York State Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance as the Capital Zone "Amazing Teachers" at the association's 71st annual conference held at the Turning Stone Resort in November.

The recognition was the result of Mead and Vincent's work during the past three years — writing curriculum, attending continuous improvement meetings and spending many after-school hours revising the health curriculum.

The district said "they have quickly become the 'go to' teachers across the state when it comes to developing a health curriculum that is child-centered and skills-based."

The two middle school teachers have presented their findings at local and state conferences on the "Navigating by the Stars" initiative, which focuses curriculum on skills rather than solely on content. At this year's state conference, Mead and Vincent presented three of the six workshops in the Health Guidance Document Series, all three presentations were to a standing room audience.

Middleschool students are now actively engaged in developing hands-on skills in the areas of self management, relationship management, communication, planning and goal setting, decision making, advocacy and stress management.

IN BRIEF

Essay contest centers on river

Students attending high schools, colleges and universities in New York are invited to enter Mount Saint Mary College's Hudson River Essay Contest.

They should submit a narrative of a maximum of 1,000 words focusing on the river. While the essay may be creative in style, it must be historically accurate and based upon solid research. Any outside sources used must be referenced in a Works Cited page at the end of the essay.

Entries should be sent before Dec. 31 by e-mail to wyant@msmc.edu or to: Jerome Wyant, Hudson River Essay Contest, Mount Saint Mary College, 330 Powell Ave., Newburgh 12550.

One high school student and one college student will receive a prize of $500 and have their essays published. The authors will be invited to present their papers during an honors seminar on the Hudson River valley in February at Mount Saint Mary College in Newburgh. Certificates of Merit will also be awarded.

For information, visit www.msmc.edu.

JCC to hold concert, dinner

The Sidney Albert Albany Jewish Community Center will hold a Hanukkah concert and dinner Monday, Dec. 15, from 4 to 6 p.m.

A concert of Jewish and Hanukkah songs performed by Leah Wolff-Pellingra will precede the Kosher beef brisket dinner. The cost is $12 per person and prepaid reservations are required by Tuesday, Dec. 2, by calling 438-6651, ext. 112.

The center is at 340 Whitehall Road.

SABIC donates $1,500 to RCS holiday programs

Employees at SABIC Innovative Plastics in Selkirk are helping the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk School District ensure happier holidays for disadvantaged youths in the community.

The company's Employee Good Neighbor Fund donated $500 to each of the holiday assistance programs at A.W. Becker, Pieter B. Coeymans and the middle school.

"This is a wonderful donation that will brighten the days of some of the most disadvantaged families," said Denise Mulligan, an A.W. Becker teacher who coordinates that school's Kids Giving To Kids Program.

The program last year purchased gifts and supplies for 116 kids and 38 families.

The middle school program, known as the Holiday Star Program, serves students in the middle and high school, as well as their families. At Pieter B. Coeymans, Operation Christmas serves approximately 100 youths and at least 30 families annually.

Each of the programs combines character education lessons with budgeting and math skills.

The lessons in generosity and charity are key to teaching responsibility to students, said Assistant Superintendent Diane Albano.

"As individuals, members of a team, a school or a community, we all want to make a difference in someone else's life," she said. "When we choose to act with love and kindness we help to further our own growth and the compassion for others."

County Execs urge state to reconsider cuts

Breslin says lack of funding could imperil some services

By ARIANA COHN
Spotlight Newspapers
cohn@spotlightnews.com

Nearly a week before Gov. David Paterson is scheduled to release the 2009 budget, executives from several counties across the state met to discuss the hardships their constituencies could face should the governor impose additional funding cuts.

Counties represented at the meeting, which took place Friday, Dec. 5, at the New York State County Executives Association office in Albany, included Yates, Suffolk, Broome, Chautauqua, Chemung, Erie, Monroe, Oneida, Onondaga, Orange, Rensselaer, Rockland and Westchester.

Albany County Executive Mike Breslin, who was scheduled to speak at the event, was absent due to an illness, but in a later interview, he expressed the need for all of the counties to come together to urge the state not to impose more cuts.

"I would say that we are all in a situation where our economy is pressing on our ability to deliver services to people who desperately need it," said Breslin.

Kerri Battle, director of communications for the Albany County executive, said those services are the ones most at risk.

"Essentially, often what happens when the state is in a fiscal crisis, is that often they cut [funding for services], but they still expect the counties to do those services," said Battle. "So the counties got together to tell the state, 'If you're going to make cuts, don't make them so that the counties suffer.'" Battle said two major services that could be most affected are mental health services and living expenses for foster families.

According to Breslin, the county has already seen a 3 percent decrease in state funding for various services throughout the county, and he said he is worried that the state is planning to cut more in response to the state's current fiscal crisis.

"We have managed with very small tax increases this year. In the face of increasing Medicare costs, state aid costs and inflationary rises in things like salt and asphalt, we've at times struggled to roughly hold our own. But we know that all signs are saying that it's going to get worse, and we want to know that the state understands that," said Breslin. He said it is important that the state does not decide to further shift what would be state costs to the county, having real property taxpayers footing the bill for county services.

Breslin's sentiments were echoed by other county executives, including Onondaga County Executive Joanne Mahoney who said, "This is a very real fiscal crisis in New York state. ... Everywhere we go, taxpayers are asking for relief."

Breslin said that this year, taxpayers have already begun to see the trickle-down effect of cuts in state funding. "This year, they cut the funding to us by 3 percent. That means that the average funding from the state is down 3 percent. The cost of Medicaid continues to go up 3 percent every year," said Breslin.

"That is the message: 'State, don't cut anymore, because the situation already is dire for state property taxpayers. Don't choose that as an alternative, state, as a response to the current economic problem.'"

Breslin also said that, while unpleasant, it is not uncommon for the state to pass on the burden to the counties when it is experiencing financial distress. In light of this year's cuts, however, Breslin said the county will continue to work on measures to assist the taxpayers.

"We've been working for a number of years on several areas to assist those who live on the margins and who really cannot help themselves and who need assistance — particularly those who need long-term care. We have a long-term care council looking at how we can orchestrate our environment," he said.

The county has also been involved with a project to move the Albany County Nursing home to a new location as part of an approach to improve the living conditions for those who use the services.

Glenmont resident Dale Nelson, owner of the Glenmont Subway, presents a check on behalf of his employees to Karen Pellettier, director of Bethlehem Senior Services, as Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce President Marty DeLaney looks on. Subway employees decided to forgo their annual holiday party and instead donate the money they had budgeted to the Bethlehem Food Pantry, which is operated by Bethlehem Senior Services at Town Hall. Pellettier said that already this year the pantry has served more than 300 people more than last year, and that number is quickly rising.

Library's language program proves to be a hit

Our community's growing international population sparked a new initiative at the Bethlehem Public Library this year.

Funded with an outreach grant from the Upper Hudson Library System, a two-pronged program was designed for elementary school children in kindergarten through fifth grade and adults whose household language is not English.

The program, which concluded on Tuesday, Dec. 2, underscored the library's commitment to cultural awareness and community service. Native speakers of Japanese and Chinese, Spanish and French, Russian, Turkish and Hebrew met weekly at the library to improve their facility with the English language.

The program got off to a modest start last spring with 11 attendees. This fall, the number jumped to 15 adults and 14 children in the course of nine weeks. The children's component was expanded to include five teens.

Library staff and two Bethlehem Central High School student volunteers helped the children with their homework assignments and engaged them in various reading activities. Subjects included social studies and government, vocabulary, science and math — especially word problems.

"Our high school volunteers were a real help with the math homework — we're very grateful to them," said youth services librarian Cathy Brenner. "Having homework checked by English-speakers was a confidence-builder for the students."

The evening's activities often included impromptu stories and games, many of which spanned cultures. When a Japanese youngster shared a hand-clapping game with Brenner, the rhyme turned out to be "Yankee Doodle" in Japanese.

While the students worked on their assignments, adult family members and friends attended an "English Conversation Club," practicing English language skills as they talked about everyday topics such as home, school and community. Volunteers from the Literacy Volunteers of America led discussions with practical themes like foods, geography and transportation.

Children and adults alike shared their experiences of being newcomers to the U.S. and engaging in a common activity. "The sessions were scheduled to end at 8 p.m., but participants stayed till 8:30 or 8:45," said Brenner. "The adults would often join the students at the end of the sessions, sharing refreshments and checking out what the children had been doing."

According to adult services librarian Jacquie Kowalczyk, several adult participants expressed delight that the program was so relaxed and enjoyable that the children were learning English without realizing it.

The program also introduced participants to the library and its resources. Staff conducted a library tour, and a special informational brochure was translated into Chinese, Japanese, French, Spanish and Russian.

"This program was very rewarding, and a great outreach opportunity," Kowalczyk said. "We were able to meet a specific need, and participants were able to connect with each other."

"Now I'm seeing these kids come to other library programs like storytimes and teen activities," Brenner said. "I feel like they're now part of the community here."

Santa

said Valentino. "I have one - he's a professor emeritus at RPI."

Valentino said that many of his Santas are either retired or looking for something to do on the side during the holidays. Some, like the former professor John Corelli of New Scotland, look at their work as a way to reach out to the community in a way that will affect many people. (See sidebar to read about a day in his life as Santa.)

According to Becky Valenti, marketing manager for Rotterdam Square Mall in Rotterdam, having Santa at the mall encourages young children to come to the shopping center, which adds to the magic of the holiday season.

"We love to see the small children come in," she said. "I think it really adds a lot during Christmas time."

The impact Santa's presence has at the mall is great, according to many who are able to witness the magic first-hand.

"It really is all about the experience," said Sara Boniface, marketing director for Crossgates Mall. "Typically, shopping centers and mall developers go with a corporate company, and we've chosen to go with Capital Photo for this long because of the experience they bring."

Boniface said having a local company handle such a special holiday event is rare, and Crossgates is glad Capital Photo is able to do it.

The whole holiday experience is the main reason Valentino got in the Santa business.

Valentino, who once worked as a photographer for state Sen. Tarky Lombardi, said he gained an interest in Santa photography after hearing about it from fellow photographers.

"The rest is sort of history," he said.

Valentino said he knew when he started his business, which he runs out of his home in Latham, that he wanted to create a Disney-like experience for customers who come for a photo with Santa.

"The truth is that there are Santas everywhere this time of year, but we're really not just selling photos," he said.

Boniface credited Valentino's employees as always having "real beards," but Valentino said appearance is not the most important thing.

"That is much less important than the quality of the individual in terms of bringing this character to life," he said.

For the managers at Colonie Center, the area where Santa sits is also important in creating a festive experience for visitors.

According to Joe Millett, general manager of Colonie Center, "This year, the Santa display is down by L.L. Bean. All of our décor is brand new; it's really lovely."

Millett said that in addition to the Santa setup, which includes a 35-foot tree, Colonie Center has an Angel Tree, where shoppers can pick a name and buy a gift for a child in need.

There is a business side to the whole endeavor, too, and the business, according to Boniface, is what actually brings Santa to the mall.

Boniface said Capital Photo, or any other business that takes photos of children with Santa, seeks out the mall; the mall does not seek out Santa.

Capital Photos offers different rates for different sized photos of children with Santa. But purchasing a photograph is not necessary for visiting with Santa. In fact, it is not even the main priority for Valentino's business.

"If we worry less about if people are buying and we put the emphasis on the experience, we become less commercial more experience oriented," he said. "The more that we play down the commercial aspect of it, the more successful it is. And for us, we really try to preserve that sort of magical time in a child's

A chat with Santa

When it comes to Christmas gift requests, Santa has heard it all. In an exclusive interview with Spotlight Newspapers, Santa discussed some of this year's wackiest wants.

Question: What is the strangest thing a child has asked you for this year?

Answer: Snakes and little newts. This one little girl said she wanted a snake. I said, "Oh, a stuffed one?" She said, "No. I want a live one."

Q: What did you say to the little girl who wanted the snake?

A: I said that I am going to try [to get it for her]. I never say no. I always say I will try to do it.

Q: Any other unusual requests?

A: There's another little girl - all she wanted was a telescope. She said she wanted to be an astronaut.

Q: What are some things that have been popular this season that kids have asked for?

A: I had a 16-year-old that told me she wanted an automobile. Some other interesting gifts ... I've had 4- and 5-year-olds that told me they wanted a cell phone! There are a lot of electronics this year. The iPods are quickly selling. I don't know if it will happen that every [child] who asked for one will get one.

Q: What about children who ask for non-material things?

A: Once in a while I get those asking for a brother that's sick. And the brother comes with the child, and he may be ill. Some of them are in wheelchairs and I ask the mother if I can pray for them and I do that.

Santa stays busy, visiting Crossgates Mall and Colonie Center all holiday season long. But while he is away, he never forgets about his family back home, at the North Pole.

"Mrs. Klaus - she's home. This year she doesn't have her horse, so she's just doing some housework this time of the year," Santa said.

As for the reindeer, Santa said they relax in his backyard while he is visiting the children. He also made sure to mention his most favorite reindeer of all.

"Rudolph is my favorite. Rudolph is universally known, and he is the one who was the guiding light for the sleigh."

life. For us, we really try to remember that first. The families really appreciate that."

Family values and traditions are what keep Santa coming to the mall every year. But Valentino said he struggles to keep the tradition alive in a bleak economy.

"So many traditions are sort of falling by the wayside. We really do make an effort to give somebody some value for what they're getting, and that's been the foundation for what we do," he said. "I need for my own personal self to know that we make a wholesome effort to make people feel the best they can be."

A visit to Santa can be a source of relief for parents as well, particularly those who do not have the slightest idea of what to buy their child for the holidays. All they have to do is visit their nearest mall or holiday event where Santa will be, wait patiently in line with their child in a wintery wonderland and pay very close attention as their son or daughter whispers to Santa the most perfect present they could ever receive.

Deal

Richards' attorneys said she would withdraw her application after the vote because of frustration over the matter.

Board Chairman Howard Engel said at the time, "Neither side is willing to compromise."

Some Bethlehem residents have said they lost out on an opportunity to gain nearly 25 acres of recreational open space — land that wouldn't have cost the town any money during a time of economic woe.

A neighbor to the proposed site, John Mariconti, said he thinks the town wasn't keeping people's best interests in mind.

"If the planning board thinks they're working for the greater good, they're sadly mistaken," said Mariconti. "I think if the majority of people in town knew was going on, they would have more to say."

Planning board member Katherine McCarthy, who was the only member to vote against the board's recommendation, said she did so out of fear that Richards would withdraw her application, which was what eventually happened.

"That parkland resolution was the reason I voted against it because she might withdraw the deal," McCarthy said of her vote. "I understand the point about the access, but I think it's a nice chunk of land for the town."

McCarthy said she still hopes some kind of deal can be reached with Richards.

The main problem, according to Richards' lawyers, was the Fisher Boulevard access that the town and Open Space Institute was asking for.

Katie Stone, a spokeswoman for OSI, said the New Scotland Road access that Richards was proposing wasn't acceptable as a public access point.

"That's used by two families as a driveway with a deeded right of way," Stone said. "It wasn't sufficient to support the long-term vision for the property. Everyone at the Open Space Institute is pretty upset things are unraveling."

Richards' attorney, Teresa Bakner, has not returned multiple phone calls from Spotlight Newspapers, but told the planning board after its Nov. 18 vote that Richards "most likely will not move forward. She feels very strongly about this."

"She believes that her request is reasonable," Bakner added at the time. "All the lots are double the size and some are triple, four or five times the size of the requirement."

Bakner also noted that Richards was asking only $50,000 for the deed-restricted 24.63 acres of land, and that a nearby, unrestricted half-acre parcel sold for $105,000. At that value, Richards' land would be worth more than $5.17 million if sold without the deed restriction, instead of the $2,000 an acre she asked for with a restriction against development.

Richards' subdivision plan consisted of building seven lots on a 35-acre plot and selling the rest of the land, which included property in the Town of New Scotland, to OSI.

The town said it wanted Fisher Boulevard access because it fits in with the town's comprehensive plan of incorporating pedestrian pathways to recreational areas such as parkland and preserves. The access was described as of "critical importance" to the proposal.

Supervisor Jack Cunningham said he wanted to see the land deal come to fruition, but neither side reached an acceptable agreement over the issue.

When informed of Richards' withdrawn application, DEC Region 4 spokesman Rick Georgeson said the agency was interested in the plan because it is always looking to add acreage to the state preserve and educational center.

"That's part of our Open Spaces Comprehensive Plan," Georgeson said. "That's something we're always looking to do, to expand Five Rivers."

Bank

tell you what I'm not looking for, a big box."

Fellow board member Kate Powers agreed.

"I believe the comprehensive plan calls for sloped roofs. ... This is a major departure from what is there," Powers said of the renderings shown at the meeting. "This is a crucial area of town; this is the Four Corners, and this is the area everyone focuses on when they come to town. I think you can do better."

McCarthy added, "I'm also worried about setting a precedent."

Board member Christine Motta also agreed with the "boxiness" of the proposal, but said she did like the proposed pillars on the outside of the building, adding, "I think the roof needs a little work."

When asked by board member John Smolinsky why the roof was flat even though the HVAC apparatus was going to remain on the ground level, engineer Scott Allen of Woodward, Connors, Gillies and Selleman said it was "functional to tie the building together."

Allen said his firm "tried to adhere to the hamlet guidelines," and create a two-story appearance even though the structure's roof varied greatly from each section of the building.

Michael Morelli, the town's assistant director of economic development and planning, said, "Dead flat roofs are inconsistent and should generally be avoided."

"We try to avoid just a plain vanilla box," Morelli said, "and I think the applicant is trying to do that. ... I don't think we would be having this discussion if this was a brand-new site, but this is an existing site."

The board's acting chairman, Howard Engel, said, "I personally like the overall outside aesthetic appearance to the plans," but later he asked if more could be done to spruce up the "bland design."

"This is a crucial area of town; this is the Four Corners; and this is the area everyone focuses on when they come to town. I think you can do better."

Kate Powers

Another architect representing the project, Pete Gillies, said there were other design possibilities but financial constraints had come into play.

"There's a scheme that does this that we simply cannot afford," Gillies said. Engel said he understood considering the current economic climate.

The board came to a consensus with the architects by the end of the presentation to come back with a design that keeps the current one-story roofline and incorporates the other proposed changes. Gillies and Allen said they would change the roofing materials used and that they would submit new buildings plans as quickly as possible.

The board unanimously voted to table the project and it is expected to come back to the planning board within two to four weeks.

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
Spotlight Newspapers
dominj@spotlightnews.com

Traditional Japanese Kabuki theater is marked by slow, deliberate movements.

The New York State Theater Institute's Kabuki-styled production of "Sleeping Beauty" keeps the emphasis on movement – other than the narrator, characters have little dialogue – but it picks up the pace.

"There's lots of action," co-director Anny DeGange said. "This is more of an homage to Kabuki."

The drawn-out Japanese style "probably wouldn't fly here," she said.

NYSTI's version, though, was a big hit when the company first debuted a Kabuki-inspired "Sleeping Beauty" in 1978. John McGuire played the prince in that production. This time around, he plays the king and serves as co-director with DeGange.

McGuire, who described "Sleeping Beauty" as a "sumptuous dance drama," said trying Kabuki was daunting at first, but he was excited that NYSTI created its own interpretation of the style.

"This had a stronger, more edgy posture to it," he said. "It really became one of our emblematic pieces."

McGuire said that the show's previous success gives the theater a bit of a safety net – "We know that it works" – but the cast is also bringing a fresh flavor to the production.

"It's new again," he said.

NYSTI's version of 'Sleeping Beauty' incorporates elements of Japanese theater role of The Storyteller that he originated, intern Laura Fleming as the queen, and Rosie Spring as Beauty.

Spring caught McGuire's eye over the summer when she worked as a choreographer for NYSTI's 2008 Summer Theatre Institute's production of "Willy Wonka."

"She has a lot of energy," McGuire said. "I knew she would fit into the role of Beauty. She's a very young person inside. She's very delicate and beautiful."

Spring jokes that she has "a kind of plum job" since Beauty gets her finger pricked about halfway through the story and spends the remainder of the play sleeping. She's enjoyed spending the time that her character is awake learning the Kabuki style.

"A lot of the movement tells the story," Spring said. "The women move kind of submissively. Everyone takes small steps."

One of the keys of Kabuki is that the audience generally already knows the story, Spring said. So while her character has only a few lines, the audience still understands what's going on.

The lack of dialogue and elaborate sets does lend some suspense to the production, though.

"You know what we're going to do, but you don't know how we're going to do it," McGuire said. "You can't wait to see. Will she really fall asleep? Is there a bed? What is the witch going to look like?"

All of the characters are colorful. One of the trademarks of Kabuki theater is its lavish, ornate costumes.

"It's beautiful to see," DeGange said. "The spectacle side of it is just beautiful."

Prior to signing on to co-director "Sleeping Beauty," DeGange hadn't seen much Kabuki herself. So she turned to the Internet, spending hours watching Kabuki productions on YouTube.

That gave her a reference point, but she admitted to learning as she goes.

"To read the script, there's nothing there to tell you how they want people to move," she said.

at the Niskayuna Invitational Tournament.

"For us, I describe it as a turning point," said Bethlehem coach A.G. Irons. "If it was the first two games (of the season), we would have definitely packed it in. But we showed some character tonight."

The Eagles (0-3) used a 17-2 run to close the gap to 52-51 before Powers made his two foul shots. Kevin Wendth drove for a layup with 10 seconds left to get Bethlehem back within a point, but Aaron Wyngowski added a free throw with 4.8 seconds left to create the final margin of victory.

"We were just fortunate to make enough plays at the end to hold on," said Niskayuna coach Mike Black.

Niskayuna (1-1) pulled out to a 10-3 lead in the first quarter before Will Baynes heated up from behind the three-point arc. The senior guard drained a pair of threes to get Bethlehem within a point.

The game stayed close until the final four minutes of the second quarter, when Niskayuna pulled away to a 33-26 lead. The Silver Warriors' momentum carried into the first six minutes of the third quarter as they went on a 17-10 run to build a double-digit advantage.

Wendth wouldn't allow Bethlehem to go away quietly, though. The senior forward scored nine of his game-high 15 points in the fourth quarter, including a three-point play with 2:12 left that cut Niskayuna's lead to 52-50.

"Kevin is a quality player. He's probably one of the best players (in the Suburban Council)," said Irons. "That's why he draws a lot of (defensive) attention."

Baynes contributed 14 points for Bethlehem, most of which came courtesy of four first-half three-pointers. Riley McGraw added seven points off the bench for the Eagles.

Powers and Guy Waltman each scored 13 points for Niskayuna.

Bethlehem opened the tournament with a 69-58 loss to Columbia last Friday. The Eagles had an 18-9 lead after the first quarter, but the Blue Devils (2-1) outscored Bethlehem 40-23 over the next two periods to take control.

Wendth scored 25 points, and Ryan Prinzo added nine points for the Eagles.

Bethlehem's Riley McGraw (11) draws a foul from Niskayuna's Dan Peters as he goes up for a shot during Saturday's Niskayuna Invitational Tournament consolation game. Rob Jonas/Spotlight certain that the game's organizers would have given anything to put the contest in Jacksonville. I know Jacksonville would have given anything to play the game in Florida, where the weather was much nicer than in Albany.

So with no realistic hope that UAlbany will get the funding from the state for a new stadium, what is the best solution to give Ford's Dances an upgraded facility?

Calling Mayor Jennings, Mayor Jerry Jennings. I realize going to the city of Albany for help probably isn't the ideal solution for UAlbany, but the city has something that the school doesn't have - a stadium that can be easily upgraded. I'm referring to much-maligned Bleecker Stadium in the equally much-maligned Westhill neighborhood.

Currently, Bleecker has two sets of metal bleachers on either side of its football field - enough to comfortably handle the crowds that show up for Bishop Maginn and Albany High School games, but not enough to make it bigger than UAlbany's stadium. But, there is plenty of room within Bleecker's profile to add more seats - two to three times the amount of seats it currently has. All that has to be done is to spend the money necessary to get the additional bleachers constructed.

Comparatively speaking, spending money for more metal bleachers at Bleecker is a fraction of what UAlbany would need to build a completely new stadium. And there is a benefit for the city: a bigger Bleecker could bring in bigger events such as Sectional football and soccer games.

The main issues that would still need to be addressed are parking and safety. The first issue is easily resolved - provide UAlbany students and skittish Capital District football fans with free shuttle buses from the campus to Bleecker.

The second issue isn't so easily resolved. Westhill is still a dangerous neighborhood, and no amount of money spent on upgrading Bleecker can change that fact. The only thing that can be done by the city is to place police officers around the stadium on game days to give the fans some sense of safety. It might not prevent crime from happening around the stadium, but it would hopefully be a deterrent.

Ultimately, this is a good short-term solution. UAlbany gains a football facility that it can be proud to show off to any visiting team, and the city gets more use out of a facility that looked outdated only three years ago.

As for getting its own on-campus football stadium, that may be a distant dream for UAlbany.

system, and I think it shows."

The best indication of that is last Friday's 62-56 victory at Cohoes. When the Tigers cut Voorheesville's lead to 52-51 late in the fourth quarter, the Blackbirds responded with some timely shots to pull out the win. Emily Madden sank a pair of free throws, and Britney Creed drained a three-pointer to send Voorheesville on its way.

"I told the kids before the game that Cohoes wouldn't quit. They'll play hard to the last whistle," said Baron.

Things didn't look good for Voorheesville when Cohoes (1-1) scored the first five points of the game. But the Blackbirds scored the final nine points of the first quarter and outscored the Tigers 15-9 in the second quarter to build a 24-14 halftime lead.

Cohoes did what it could to slow down Voorheesville's offense in the second half, including fouling Madden at every opportunity. But Madden made all 12 of her free throws to turn the Tigers' strategy on its ear.

Madden finished with 18 points, while Creed contributed 14 points for Voorheesville. Kelly Glath and Emily Norris each added 10 points.

Maggie Maloney led three Cohoes players in double figures with 24 points, but only four Tigers reached the scoring column. Besty Santoro had 13 points, and Bailey Tetreault added 10 points.

Voorheesville looked to keep its unbeaten streak going Tuesday when it visited Lansingburgh.

"Our schedule isn't doing us any favors (early on)," said Baron, whose team hosts Holy Names Friday.

Sports in the SpotlightUAlbany needs a football stadium upgrade

The University at Albany football team looked good in beating Jacksonville 28-0 in Saturday's Gridiron Classic.

The school's football stadium, not so much.

Sadly, that's nothing new for the Great Danes. As good as they've been since moving up to the Division I-AA level (excuse me ... NCAA Football Championship Subdivision), they've done so while playing in a facility that looks like it's barely suitable for a Division III school.

That's why UAlbany has been looking to build a new stadium on campus. It's embarrassing for the school to be shown on TV (as Saturday's game was) playing in a stadium that is roughly one-third the size of the average Division I-AA facility and appears to need some repair (especially the visitor's side bleachers).

UAlbany thought it could get the funding for a new 15,000-seat stadium from the state Legislature last year, but the Legislature denied it. And with the state's current fiscal crisis, it's unlikely the funding will be granted anytime soon.

This is a shame because head coach Bob Ford has built a perennial winner at UAlbany that deserves to be seen in a real stadium. The Great Danes have won three of the last four Northeastern Conference titles and annually plays a schedule that includes some of the best Division I-AA teams in the nation. This year alone, UAlbany visited such nationally-ranked teams as Montana and Delaware.

The trouble is, all that UAlbany can do to play top-notch competition is to visit those schools every year. It can't bring those same schools to Albany because the stadium is substandard. Heck, the Great Danes should be grateful this year's Gridiron Classic was at UAlbany because I'm pretty

The Blackbirds are off to their first 2-0 start in the Colonial Council in several years, thanks to a veteran lineup that is mastering head coach Bob Baron's system.

Find the best deals online

In the current economy, we are all looking harder than ever for ways to save and stretch our holiday shopping dollars. But looking for a deal doesn't mean you have to sacrifice the hottest looks or gifts this holiday season. Well-known lifestyle expert, shopping maven and In Touch Weekly Editor Bobbie Thomas has some quick tips to help save you money and time while you're plotting your holiday shopping strategy.

"We're hearing all this doom and gloom about the economy, but it's important to remember the glass is half-full," Thomas says. "Retailers are motivated to give you a deal and you are in the power seat this season." While there are plenty of deals to be had in stores and online, it's important to start with the basics when tackling your holiday list, Thomas says.

First, make a plan. "Be prepared and shop the stores so they won't shop you," she says. Set aside time to shop online from home at sites like cashback.com. Cashback.com allows you to find great deals, compare prices and get rebates on more than 10 million products from more than 700 retailers. Simply sign up for an account when you make your first purchase, and each time you shop using cashback.com, you'll accrue rebates at up to 25 percent off the retail price. When those holiday credit card bills start to arrive, in about 60 days, you can claim your cash.

Using online services like cashback.com allows you to avoid distractions and resist the tempting urge to impulse buy and also saves you time and money from driving store-to-store. During the holidays, many online retailers also offer free shipping or in-store pick up. Visit cashback.com to see all the great deals and learn more.

Next, make it personal by finding a meaningful gift with the help of a search engine like Microsoft's Live Search www.live.com. Instead of spending hours driving around, you can search for the best deals online, shop in the comfort of your own home and save money and time in your quest for the perfect gift.

Finally, present your present. It's the thought that counts but Thomas advises shoppers to take advantage of gift-wrapping and shipping options, and enjoy a hassle-free holiday knowing your time was well-spent.

Thomas also offers her top picks for popular gift items that you can find online at great prices:

Bold baubles

Although diamonds have long been considered a gal's best friend, costume jewelry has never been more en vogue. Make a lasting impression with a statement necklace, jumbo cocktail ring, or beautiful brooch.

Bath and body

After the year-end's full social calendar, who wouldn't want to soak away the stress? Limited editions and luxe gift sets are created exclusively for the holiday shopping season. Take advantage of not only the great values, but also the ready-to-gift gorgeous packaging.

Candles and home fragrance

The flickering warm glow of a wick, or subtle waft of aroma from an elegant diffuser is always a welcome gift. Replenish someone's signature scent or find your friend or family member a new favorite. It's a good idea to keep a few extra on hand for hostess gifts or unexpected guests.

Interactive gaming

From tots to tweens and even adults, help them get in the game. Little ones will love learning to read with the help of new educational training toys, while their older siblings will want to jump for joy thanks to dancing challenges. And the whole family can have fun with impromptu karaoke concerts or virtual sports matches!

Kitchen aids

In a fast paced, let's just pick-up and go world, entertaining at home may soon become a lost art. While cookware or cutlery is the perfect gift for the food lover on your list, it can also inspire a loved one to discover a new hobby. From modern basics to time-saving tools, there is something for everyone.

Go-go gadgets

This year's hot list: Bluetooth earpieces, navigation systems, e-readers, and digital camcorders. Keep your favorite people connected with the help of technology's latest lifesavers. These are truly the gifts that will keep giving.

Hot air balloon rides are one idea for an experience gift.

Make memories with an experience gift

"Experience is one thing you can't get for nothing," Irish playwright Oscar Wilde once said. But Wilde, for all his wit, probably never envisioned the modern practice of giving an experience as a holiday gift.

"For all the reasons to give an experience as a gift, perhaps the most popular is the desire to give a loved one a once-in-a-lifetime moment that will become a lifelong memory," says Rob Wilkinson of Soaring Adventures of America, Inc., a company that specializes in arranging airborne adventures in experiences.

Also, an experience gift that takes into account the recipient's interests can seem more personal and thoughtful than a generic gift like a certificate or gift card. It's important to keep three factors in mind when considering an experience gift:

1. Budget: Obviously, the gift must be something you can afford to give. But just as important, it should be an experience that will not cost the recipient anything to enjoy. For example, if you're thinking of giving ski lessons, be sure the price of the lessons includes use of all equipment the learner will need.

2. Proximity: Is the experience one that the recipient can get to reasonably? Flying lessons will be much less fun if the recipient has to drive two hours to get to the airport. Likewise, a beach party in Key West doesn't do much good if the recipient lives in Minnesota and you didn't think to include airfare to Florida in your gift.

3. Personality: Does the experience mesh with the recipient's personality and interests? If the recipient is an adventure hound, you might opt for a glider ride rather than dance lessons. Or, if the recipient is afraid of water, a hot air balloon ride might be more appealing than whitewater rafting.

Once you've answered these considerations, you'll need to choose just the right gift. Popular experiential gifts include:

Hot air balloon rides

Hot air balloons are a unique combination of exciting and peaceful. The thrill of flying high into the air is balanced by the tranquility and silence high above the treetops. Soaring Adventures offers hour-long ascents to 500 to 1,000 feet, covering 5 to 10 miles. Rides end with a celebration of champagne or fruit juice upon landing, an old French tradition. Each ride is led by a commercially certified, FAA-trained pilot and balloon gondolas can hold up to six passengers. Visit www.800soaring.com or call (800) SOARING (800-762-7464) to learn more.

Fantasy sports camps

Jewelry presents don't have to break budget

When last-minute-gift panic sets in, it's easy to blow your budget in your haste to purchase that perfect present. When the clock is ticking because the holidays are right around the corner, take a breath; consider the recipient and you can find great gifts that won't break the budget.

You can't go wrong with jewelry, particularly for women. The experts at Jewelry Television offer this season's five best affordable jewelry gifts:

Treasures from the ocean

A strand of pearls will delight any woman of any age from teenagers to grandmothers. If you're purchasing a woman's first strand of pearls, go with a traditional white or ivory necklace. If your recipient is a seasoned pearl wearer, branch out with pearls available in unusual shapes, sizes and colors. A black pearl ring or golden pearl earrings are a rich and lustrous surprise.

Think birthday

Birthstone jewelry is a thoughtful way to show loved ones you are celebrating them. Popular no matter what month the recipient has a birthday, birthstone jewelry is especially appreciated for those celebrating around the holidays. Here's Jewelry TV's helpful primer for seasonal birthday jewels:

• November: Citrine. Celebrate the colors of fall with jewelry in light yellow to deep golden tones.

• December: Topaz. These beautiful and versatile jewels come in shades from clear blue to white with sage green undertones.

• January: Garnet. Think outside the box and move away from the traditional red garnet. Try gorgeous green, raspberry or brown garnets for a modern twist on the traditional birthstone gift.

• February: Amethyst. Purple jewels offer an unusual (and often favorite) color option. Make Aquarian ears shine with a set of amethyst earrings.

Rare and exotic

Tanzanite is mined exclusively in the Merelani Hills of Northern Tanzania. Legend says that it was discovered in the 1960s by a Masai tribesman when a brush fire, created by lightning, heated the brown stones to a vivid blue. Because of its beautiful and unusual color, Tanzanite is the perfect stone for a trendy cocktail ring. A top style with celebrities, an oversized Tanzanite cocktail ring will add extra color and bling to any outfit. While this jewel may be a bit of a splurge, a small gem makes a big impact.

Bigger, bolder looks

Sterling silver is an affordable way to give bigger, bolder and trendier jewelry on a limited budget. For several looks with just one piece of jewelry, try an interchangeable Millefiori (Venetian glass) pendant on a sterling silver chain. For the gentlemen on your list, a pair of sterling silver cufflinks is a great last minute gift.

Be charming

Start a new tradition by giving a charm bracelet and adding meaningful charms. Start with a sterling silver or 14k gold bracelet and add on each year with charms that celebrate occasions like Mother's Day, engraveable charms to commemorate special dates and even tiny picture frames for that priceless photo.

East Greenbush's Candyland offers a sweet experience

We would like to introduce to you Candyland Confectionery. We are celebrating our "First Anniversary" in East Greenbush. We were located in Schodack on Route 9 for about three years and we had outgrown the little shop, so we had to move to a larger location.

And here we are...

Candyland Confectionery is now located at 574 Columbia Turnpike, Peter Harris Plaza (next to IHOP), East Greenbush, 477-9444, www.candylandconfectionery.com.

Candyland offers a wide variety of services to the community, and we are trying to get the word out there. I started the business because I love to make candy and have been doing it for over 30 years. When my favorite candy supply store went out of business, there was no place to buy my supplies, so I opened a store on this side of the river. Now customers can shop locally for their chocolate and supplies, and they love the convenience of having a store so close to them. We are a family-oriented business. I grew up in East Greenbush and love the small community feel that the town has to offer.

Candyland is not just another candy store: It is a one-stop learning shop. Introducing the first old-fashioned candy store to come to East Greenbush. We have a large selection of wonderful Belgium truffles; sugar-free truffles and chocolates; homemade fudge, like pumpkin and peanut butter, made on the premises. We also carry old-fashion penny candy in bins and international candy and European gifts.

We offer a large selection of candy and cake supplies.

From the moment you walk in, you will be amazed at the supplies we carry — candy molds, Wilton cake pans, cookie cutters and sugars, Mercken Chocolate, Guittard, and new this year, Peter's Chocolate. We give many classes in cake decoration, cookie making, candy classes, gingerbread houses, and so much more.

We offer a large variety of gift baskets. You can even build your own, and we will deliver. We make homemade favors for all occasions.

We offer many gifts from the past. Remember homemade peanut butter ribbon candy and sponge candy? We carry the peppermint pig. Your holiday would not be complete without it. How about homemade candy canes filled with chocolate? We also make homemade pies and cookies for the holiday. Just remember to order early. The holiday season is here and we are ready to help you make great gift giving ideas, so please come in early. Enjoy your holiday season and remember "Happiness is Homemade."

Best wishes from Miss Nancy and staff.

own skills at a sport they love, they often afford participants the chance to rub shoulders with sports royalty. To find a sports camp that's right for your sports fan, go online and seek out sporting associations in your area.

Dance lessons

TV shows like "Dancing with the Stars" have rekindled Americans' interest in dancing. Across the country, dance studios have sprung up and it's possible to find reasonably priced lessons for virtually every style of dance from the classic waltz to salsa. Dancing is great exercise, so dance lessons can also help improve the recipient's health. And, if you're giving the experience to your partner, it's a great way to spend quality time together.

Soaring glider rides

A soaring glider ride is a great option for someone who seems to have everything already. A professional pilot accompanies one or two passengers into the sky for a quiet, peaceful and silent glide above the clouds. Soaring Adventures' glider rides also afford passengers the opportunity to take the controls and fly the glider if they wish.

Practical presents for seniors

Plenty of options even as budgets tighten, but the greatest gift is time

This year's economic slowdown doesn't need to take a toll on your holiday gift-shopping budget for seniors, according to a local senior-care expert and national retailer. Representatives from the local Home Instead Senior Care office and the mega shopping center Mall of America say that the most popular gifts for older adults this season are practical items that are most often economical as well.

"Based on our experience, seniors most often gravitate toward the practical in gift requests, but those preferences will become even more relevant this holiday season as budgets tighten for shoppers and senior gift recipients alike," said Susan Walter, owner of the Home Instead Senior Care office serving Albany County. "We expect that many seniors will want gift cards to grocery stores, discount stores and restaurants and, if they're still driving, gas cards."

Personal items are popular as well, according to Dan Jasper, spokesman for the Mall of America.

"We see seniors frequenting book stores and shops that sell candles, homemade soaps and personal pampering items, such as lotions, slippers and robes," said Jasper, whose world-renowned mall is host to 17 million shoppers between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day.

10 popular gifts for seniors

What's on your senior's wish list this holiday season? The following list provides valuable insight. An analysis of more than 12,000 senior gift requests conducted by Home Instead Senior Care reveals that these are some of the most popular holiday wishes of older adults.

- Gift certificates to restaurants and grocery stores, or gas cards for seniors who drive.

- Personal items such as hand and body lotions and creams, shower gels and scented candles.

- Blankets, robes and slippers.

- Books and magazine subscriptions.

- Crossword and puzzle books, and pencils.

- Hats, mittens and gloves.

- Towels and wash cloths.

- Boxed chocolates, chocolate-covered cherries and hard candies.

- Stamps and stationery.

- Gift certificate for companionship services.

grandma loves to knit or sew so those tools are included in the basket along with candy and a nice scented candle," he noted.

Scrapbook stores and suppliers draw many who are looking to customize a gift for seniors, and photo and family albums are popular as well, according to Jasper. Home Instead Senior Care's Walter said that results of a gift-giving analysis by the company are consistent with the type of senior gift preferences that the Mall of America tracks. But the gifts of time and companionship also cannot be underestimated.

"Seniors shouldn't be alone at any time of year, but especially not during the holidays," she said. "That's why if you can't be with a loved one, it's important to arrange for family, friends and neighbors to help, or to hire companionship to ensure that seniors get out and about. Gift certificates for Home Instead Senior Care services, popular during the holidays, are presents that can ensure the gift of companionship."

Jasper, a former nursing home industry fundraiser and public relations manager, said he witnesses the value of togetherness during the holidays at the Mall of America.

"I think the main thing if possible is to spend time with seniors and there is a lot to do at any mall, especially during the holidays, when special musical events and programs are often scheduled. I also see families enjoying lunch with their senior loved ones," Jasper noted. It's especially important to help seniors guard against isolation during the holidays, Home Instead Senior Care's Walter said.

So gifts that accomplish more than one action — such as a gift card to a restaurant that provides not only a meal but an excuse to go out — will benefit your loved ones in a big way, she said.

For more information about Home Instead Senior Care, contact Susan Walter at 437-0014 or visit www.homeinstead.com.

Check products' packaging for safety warnings.

Keep safety in mind while you're shopping

All signs point to holiday shoppers spending less and expecting more for their money this year. But while you're deal-hunting in discount stores, remember that a gift is no bargain if it compromises the safety of a loved-one.

"Not all products found online or on store shelves meet important safety standards," says John Drengenberff, manager of Consumer Affairs for Underwriters Laboratories (UL), one of the world's leading independent product safety certification organizations. "With so many gifts to choose from,

safety is one thing that should not be overlooked."

"You don't have to blow your budget to find gifts that have been tested and certified," says Drengenberff. By following a few tips, it's easy to make safety a priority when shopping for loved ones:

- Shop at retailers you know and trust, whether online or in the mall. Many reputable retailers require their products to be UL-LISTED, meaning the items have been rigorously tested and evaluated for potential risk

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

Kim Jacobson and her husband, Gary, handcraft gifts for their family's annual holiday exchange.

Handmade gifts make a holiday comeback

Instead of battling crowded shopping malls and rising prices, Kim Jacobson is spending time in her garage, building holiday gifts in her home woodshop.

For several years, the Minnesota-based occupational therapist has been handcrafting holiday presents as part of her husband Gary's family's unusual - and refreshing - annual gift exchange.

"There's only one rule," Gary explains. "Everything has to be homemade. You draw a name at Christmas and have the next year to make that person a present."

It's a tradition Kim says cuts through the commercialism surrounding the holidays, to the core of what the season is all about.

"A lot of love goes into what you make," she says.

It's also part of an emerging trend, according to Ann Röckler Jackson, chief executive officer of Rockler Woodworking and Hardware, one of the nation's largest suppliers of woodworking tools and equipment.

Jackson has seen her company's gift-related supply sales increase steadily over the past five years and believes more consumers are seeking a back-to-the-basics approach to gifts.

"People are getting tired of the shopping-mall mentality surrounding holiday gifts," she says. "Building your own can be so much more personal. There are a lot of creative people out there making incredible, meaningful gifts they couldn't buy at a store. And that do-it-yourself population is growing."

"Plus, it's a nice way to save money," she says. "When you have the skills and ability to eliminate labor costs by doing something yourself, it pays dividends - particularly in a

Accessories will please PC lovers

Gift buying for some people couldn't be easier. If he's into motorcycles, he'll love anything for his bike. If she's a fan of ballroom dancing, some sexy dance shoes are sure to please. But what do you give that person on your list whose interests seem to begin and end with the computer screen?

Why, computer accessories, of course.

There are between 170 million and 200 million PCs in use in the United States. Chances are, you know someone who would love a unique, useful or exciting computer accessory for the holidays. Here are five ideas for gifts to help the computer fanatics on your list "trick out" their PCs:

• Know someone who's a dedicated nighttime Net surfer? An illuminated, flexible keyboard will allow him or her to cruise the information superhighway in the dark without having to turn on all the lights and possibly disturb others in the household. Plus, the keyboards are virtually indestructible, can be rolled up and easily taken on the road for travel, and cost about the same as a good standard or ergonomic keyboard. You can find these snazzy keyboards at www.gifts.com.

• Anyone who burns their own CDs knows the hassle of hand labeling them - and the horror of sorting through mounds of completely unlabeled discs. The solution: a nifty thermal printer that imprints your personal labeling right on the CD, just like a professional studio-produced disc. The printer can place up to 16 lines of type on your CD. You'll find it at www.Hammacher.com.

• How many PC users invest in awesome screens that wind up covered in fingerprints, dust and sneeze marks? A high-end screen deserves high-end care. Sanus Systems makes Elements Screen Care, a series of quality screen care accessories that gently clean high-end monitors. The ELM101 includes a special alcohol- and ammonia-free gel that cleans without harming screens or discoloring bezels; a microfiber wiping handle for quick, even window-style cleaning; a microfiber cloth that cleans without leaving lint or residue; and an antistatic dusting brush that lifts debris and static electricity from the screen. Go to www.Sanus.com to find a retail location near you.

of fire, shock and/or personal injury.

• Look for the UL Mark - the letters "UL" inside a circle - and the word "LISTED" in capital letters on the product or its packaging to determine whether the product has been properly certified.

• Examine packaging. Be wary of products in boxes or packages that do not offer the brand name, the product name and the manufacturer's name with contact information for reporting problems.

Electronic gifts are likely to be hot sellers again this year. Items like flat screen TVs, digital cameras, cell phones, GPS systems, and gaming systems and accessories will be on the must-have list for many. UL offers tips for evaluating these popular gift items:

• Look for the UL Mark on any electronics you purchase. The UL Mark means that the product has been tested for foreseeable safety hazards.

• When purchasing big-ticket items like TVs or laptops, research the product's safety and customer satisfaction records with reputable independent ratings organizations like Consumer Reports. Pay close attention to the average safety and repair rating of the item.

• Safety is especially important when shopping for toys with electrical components. Look for the UL Mark on toys' adapter/power supply units and chargers.

• Pay close attention to the recommended age designation marked on the toy or its packaging. Always make sure the child's age matches or exceeds the manufacturer's recommended age specification.

• Read the manufacturer's warning marks and, if applicable, the use and care booklet before children play with a new toy. Initially and periodically inspect toys for cracks, breaks, ripped seams, etc.

"The economy will likely have people spending less on holiday gifts, while recent headlines about product recalls may have them more concerned about safety," says Drengenberg. "Fortunately, it's simple to find a safety-tested gift if you look for the UL Mark."

Home theater can serve as gift for whole family

Americans are givers, especially during the holidays, regardless of how bad the economy gets. One way to stretch your holiday shopping budget is to look for gifts that will benefit multiple recipients, like household items, food and beverage gifts and home entertainment.

Buying several costly gifts for each family member can add up to more expense than a single item that will benefit them all. Even with the downturn in the economy and dismal holiday retail predictions, spending on consumer electronics is expected to grow this holiday season. Electronic gifts that the whole family can enjoy, like a home theater system, are poised to be popular items this year.

Actual home theater systems - complete with projection screen and surround sound - are costly. Many people are opting for a more cost-effective approach by connecting several audio-visual components, including a flat-screen TV, DVD player and speaker system, to create a home theater experience.

While transforming an extra bedroom, basement or even garage into a home theater may be the ideal, many of us simply don't have a spare room to devote to just one function. Many home theater owners choose to set up their systems in the family room. Wherever you decide to place your system, plenty of comfortable seating - positioned so that everyone can clearly see the screen and enjoy the sound - is the first essential ingredient.

Flat-screen TVs are now a favored option to an actual projector and screen. Each year, the quality of these electronic showpieces improves while prices drop. Most flat-screen TVs can easily be connected to other AV components, including external speaker systems.

Properly mounting a flat-screen TV on the wall can really create a theater-like effect. You'll need a special mount to secure your TV, and there are several kinds to choose from. You could opt for a full-motion mount which allows you to move the TV for optimum viewing from any angle. Or, a tilting mount might be right for your setup if the TV is positioned higher on the wall, such as above a fireplace. Sanus Systems is a leading manufacturer of mounts for flat-screen TVs. Visit www.sanus.com to see the range of options.

Sound components will elevate your simple flat- or big-screen TV to home theater status. A good home theater system should have at least five main speakers, according to sound innovators Dolby Laboratories. A center speaker should be mounted just below the screen. Two speakers should be positioned in the front of the room in the corners on either side of the TV, at the same height as the center speaker. Finally, two speakers should be placed slightly behind the seating area and above ear level but facing horizontally and not down toward the listener. These five components give the "surround sound" effect.

Speakers can be placed on bookshelves but may yield better sound if mounted on the walls. Sanus makes speaker stands and mounts that can attach to walls or ceilings, and side speaker mounts or center-channel speaker mounts that attach directly to the TV mount.

Finally, add on your AV components like a DVD player or a satellite TV receiver. While many people simply place these components on a piece of furniture beneath their wall-mounted TV, a wall mount can help streamline the look of your system, eliminate a lot of wire clutter and still provide easy access to the components. Sanus' Vertical Foundations line of on-wall furniture provides stylish, simple and efficient mounting options for AV components.

Visit www.sanus.com to learn more about mounting systems for flat-screen TVs and home theater systems.

You can fill gift baskets with items you know the recipients will like.

Make gift baskets fit everyone on your list

When it comes to giving a great holiday gift, it pays to put all your eggs — or gifts — in one basket. Gift baskets are not only simple to brainstorm, they are easy to put together and transport. Plus, you can fill gift baskets with items you know your friends and family will use and match it to their lifestyles.

Here are some gift-basket ideas you can purchase or create yourself to match the personalities of the recipient.

For the bathroom

Find a semi-large basket which will hold bottles of bath salts, bubble bath and lotion upright. You can wrap the bottles in a hand towel and matching wash cloth to keep the bottles from clanking. Also try to match the scents of the products, and top the gift basket off with a matching candle.

In the laundry room

Purchase a laundry basket with comfortable handles and fill it with laundry detergent, softener and a filled change container for anyone who has to use a Laundromat. If you have space leftover, add some wooden hangers, an iron or ironing board.

Spicing up the kitchen

Americans are cooking more and more in their own kitchens thanks to a troubled economy, and every working kitchen needs a good set of spices. American Spice has a starter spice kit already assembled, or you can create your own, matching the tastes of your friends and family.

Say your sister is into French cooking and is always complaining she can't find cooking lavender anywhere in the stores. Visit www.AmericanSpice.com, add a bottle to your gift basket and your sister will be in heaven.

If your friends already have an established spice collection, check out the jams, salad dressings or barbeque sets which come in many different sizes and flavors. Tuck in a few drying towels, a chef's apron or hat, cooking utensils and a recipe box and your cook is set to create some amazing treats and meals.

Setting up the garage

Anyone with a vehicle can use a garage-themed auto care kit. Instead of using a basket, try a crate or nice wooden box. Start with jumper cables, and include all the handy tools necessary to do minor maintenance jobs — paper hand towels, extra bottles of window washing fluid, transmission fluid and oil. A small tool kit also would be handy, complete with a lightweight hammer, screw drivers and a pair of pliers.

Bedroom basics

This basket can go in many directions, depending on how the recipient is related to you. For basic ideas, try an aromatherapy candle, a good novel, a set of high thread-count cotton sheets complete with pillow covers and a reading light.

Baskets for baby care

When babies are in the house, supplies are used quickly, and trips to the store are tedious. Help the new mom and dad out with a basket filled with hand lotion, diaper creme, cozy onesies and a CD of lullabies wrapped up in a soft baby blanket.

Capture the holiday 'spirit'

We all have been there before, the holiday season has arrived and you are stressed out trying to find a gift. You've been to the malls repeatedly and can't spend one more minute circling the parking lots and fighting the crowds. What to do? Visit The Wine Reserve at 388 Feura Bush Road between CVS and Key Bank in Glenmont. The Wine Reserve has something for everyone!

With so many people and so many different tastes, it is difficult to find the right gift. There is one present, however, nearly guaranteed to make everyone happy: a great bottle of wine or perhaps a fine spirit to make the holiday merrier. Let us do the work and take advantage of our pre-made specialty wine baskets, and courtesy gift wrapping.

Wine and spirits have an enormous background in culture making them a very meaningful gift. This is a gift that can create memories and experiences. It can be enjoyed on an average day or can signify a special occasion.

At the Wine Reserve, we offer a large selection of wines and spirits that are perfect for the holiday season and throughout the year. Wine is an excellent gift as it suits all age groups as well as being perfect for the centerpiece at your holiday table. It can be inexpensive yet it has a sophistication and appeal. It is a tasteful gift that can be savored alone or shared with family and friends. Most importantly, the gifting of a good wine compliments the giver.

People often overlook the fact that spirits are not just limited to your basic vodka, gin or whiskey. How about a great sipping tequila, a fine single malt scotch or a delicious cognac! Usually your average spirit drinkers do not branch out too far from their normal cocktail, a gift is a great way to broaden their horizons.

Ports, sherries, and ice wine also make an excellent gift this time of year. People rarely purchase these items on their own, and with ports and sherries being sweet and generally served in small portions after dinner, these gifts can be enjoyed well after the holiday season is over.

No celebration is complete without a bottle of champagne. Champagne is the most significant celebratory cocktail in the world. With its vast versatility champagne can be served with any meal. Maybe this year, it's time to add a little bubbly to someone's holiday.

The choices are unlimited, and it can be overwhelming so if you don't know what you are looking for or just want some insight on picking out the perfect gift, then feel free to approach our friendly, knowledgeable staff. We at The Wine Reserve pride ourselves in having extensive knowledge on all our products. Whether you're a novice or the most experienced wine lover, The Wine Reserve has something for everyone.

Don't forget while you're shopping make sure to pick out something for yourself.

Buy it. Give it. Share it! Remember, you can give your wine and drink it too. Happy holidays from all of us here at The Wine Reserve and remember, enjoy responsibly.

Cheers to a safe and happy holiday season!

Make a donation that matters ☐ Hand

(From Page 5)

As the U.S. endures one of the worst economic times in its nation's history, nonprofit organizations are feeling the effects. At a time of year when most Americans are usually scrambling to make last-minute donations to their favorite charity, this year, families are wondering how to make ends meet. There is a way you can balance both, but it will take some careful thought - and planning.

Make it personal

It's understandable, given the recent events on Wall Street, the rising unemployment numbers and record-high gas prices that are only now coming down, why people aren't giving. But there is a scenario where everyone wins: You can make a difference in your community and with the donations they receive, nonprofits can do the same!

Consolidate

How many times have you found yourself dropping a dollar or two into a container outside of a store as you pass by? Probably several times over the course of the shopping season. Instead of making a number of donations this month all across the board, become more deliberate about your financial contributions.

As an alternative to giving a few dollars here and there, make a commitment to donate a certain amount this year - $25,

$50, $100 - whatever you can afford, and then write one or two checks. Most importantly, really give some thought to the nonprofits that you want to support. Is there a certain organization that you really feel strongly about, or maybe one that helped you in your time of need? You'll probably find it will be easier to stick to your budget by being more conscious about where your donations are going.

SEFCU's corporate giving

At SEFCU, we realize that the need this year is greater than ever, especially as families are being forced to turn to nonprofit organizations to supplement their financial needs. That's why we've maintained our commitment to the community and will continue to contribute to the areas we serve.

SEFCU Foundation

One of the ways SEFCU stays connected to the community is through the charitable arm of the credit union, the SEFCU Foundation. Established in 1991, the SEFCU Foundation's mission is to improve the lives of children and families throughout our service areas. Since its inception, the SEFCU Foundation has donated more than $1 million to hundreds of organizations.

One of the largest sources of funding for the SEFCU Foundation is through its Holiday Sharing program. Each year, at this time, the SEFCU Foundation appeals to SEFCU members and employees to make donations. Last year, we contributed more than $38,000 to help make the holidays brighter for more than 800 individuals.

How will you make a difference?

This holiday season, find it in your heart - and your wallet - to help someone less fortunate. And if it's the SEFCU Foundation you choose to support, making a donation is easy. Just stop by any of our branches, or send a check made payable to the SEFCU Foundation to 700 Patroon Creek Blvd, Albany 12206. And thanks, from the bottom of our heart.

Happy holidays!

tough economy."

As the number of people building gifts increases, so does the flow of ideas. Rockler has organized an extensive handmade gift list on its Web site, www.rockler.com/handmade.

Some of the more popular projects on the list are relatively simple to build - things like small jewelry or keepsake boxes. Dominoes, cribbage boards and wooden Sudoku sets are among the many options for beginners.

For the Jacobsons, high-quality homemade gifts are nothing new. With several accomplished woodworkers in the family, they have seen some amazing creations over the years.

"Probably the most impressive was a dining room table my cousin made for his sister-in-law," Gary says. "That will be an heirloom, for sure."

Still, the beauty of the Jacobson's tradition - and one of the driving forces behind home gift-building's burgeoning popularity - has as much to do with fellowship as it does with craftsmanship.

"It's definitely brought us all closer together," Kim says.

Fusion Spa – a New World spa

Med spas are the fastest growing sector of the spa industry. The concept first originated in the European countries and soon became popular in the West Coast of the U.S. Fusion Spa first opened its doors in the spring of last year. Our concept was that of a hybrid of traditional day spa treatments and medical services all available in one location, thus allowing one to have hot stone therapy massage and facial rejuvenation during the same visit.

So, do all these treatments seen advertised in magazines, newspapers and TV really work? One could look to Hollywood for the answer, since the vast majority of the stars have these treatments several times a month. Better yet, as we did, review the medical literature on aesthetics. The science proves that the vast majority of these treatments do work. The two main keys to the best outcomes are the qualifications of the person operating the equipment and the type of lasers used. All lasers are not created equal and one laser cannot treat all conditions. More importantly, it is well proven that a physician or licensed aesthetician trained in the use of lasers is by far superior to a non-medical person or a salon employee.

Fusion Spa provides a relaxing spa environment with a beautiful Asian fireplace in our herbal tea lounge. Our focus is on de-stressing and relaxation, allowing you to achieve the best results with all the treatments. Treatment of sun damage, brown spots, and spider veins on the face, chest, and hands is one of our most popular packages. This involves use of a laser called an IPL. It targets the pigmentation of the damaged areas in the skin and removes them over a few treatment sessions. Injectables, such as Botox, Juvederm, Radiesse and mesotherapy are in great demand. These give the near instant improvement in our appearance that we all seek. Mesotherapy is the injection of fat-dissolving solution to permanently remove unwanted fatty deposits on the thighs, abdomen, love handles, bra line and other locations. It has truly amazing results with little discomfort or down time. Only the physicians administer all of these treatments.

Make a point to take time for a personal consultation. Learn how we can help improve the look of your skin and boost your self-confidence. Schedule a massage to unwind and destress or book an herbal facial to give your skin that instant glow. Any of these choices will leave you looking and feeling better about yourself.

During this busy holiday season, we are offering extended evening and Saturday hours. Need a gift idea? Fusion Spa offers a wide variety of spa items, skincare products, gift packages as well as gift certificates. Gift certificates can be customized to your specifications in any amount from large to small, no matter what your budget. Purchase a $100 gift certificate or more and receive a free $20 gift certificate....our gift to YOU!

Visit Fusion Spa online at www.fusionspaofalbany.com, purchase the gift certificate from our secure Web site, and pay no shipping costs whatsoever. For those of us with no internet access, Call Fusion Spa at 518-439-4700, place a phone order and we will send it anywhere free of charge.

See the model trains run

Each year, visitors from across the region and from neighboring states visit the Schenectady Museum & Suits-Bueche Planetarium to see the model trains run. This event has become a holiday favorite for visitors of all ages. Volunteers from the Upstate Train Associates set up their running display of model trains in front of the main entrance to the Suits-Bueche Planetarium. They construct an elaborate 19-by-27-foot display of running O Gauge model trains. These are the trains most people know and love as the Lionel trains. This year, the trains begin running Saturday, Dec. 13.

In addition to several model trains that run continuously, visitors can see a host of other items that have been added to the display over the years, including an amusement park with Santa riding a roller coaster, a pair of children ice skating on a pond, and a farm scene with horses and cows. The trains that load and unload their cargo of barrels, lumber and other objects always delight visitors. And, there's even a small working Thomas

"This display is one of the most popular events we host at the Museum each year," said Schenectady Museum Director of Marketing and Communications Erin Breslin. "It's wonderful to see grandparents bring their grandchildren, and then tour them around the museum and point out objects to them, such as some of the first televisions and radios, and be able to share memories of what it was like when these technologies were brand new."

If you love model trains, and have been looking for an opportunity to run them, the Upstate Train Associates club may be the perfect opportunity for you. "We are always looking for new members to join our club," noted club president Mark Breslin. "We have a core group of dedicated volunteers, but we need new people to join, who will be able to help run the trains each year and bring them to the next generation of children."

This holiday season, the museum is also offering special Festival of Holidays programs, which celebrates the wonderful diversity of our community. The museum is celebrating Chinese holiday traditions, Kwanzaa, Diwali and Hanukkah.
