A look at our towns

Town leaders chart future

Editor's Note: The following is a recap of news in the town of Bethlehem from the first six months of 2008. A recap of the second half of 2008 will appear in next week's issue, Dec. 31.

January

- Six elected officials took the oath of office at Bethlehem Town Hall: Highway Superintendent Gregg Sagen-dorph; Receiver of Taxes Nancy Mendick; Town Clerk Kathleen Newkirk; and Town Justice Paul Dwyer.

Mark Hennessey, the current board's freshman councilman, was sworn in, as was Supervisor Jack Cunningham, who was first appointed to the office when former supervisor Theresa Egan left to become a deputy commissioner at the Department of Motor Vehicles earlier this year.

Newly elected Councilwoman Joann Dawson was away on vacation at the time and could not participate in the ceremony. It was her first elected term after she was appointed to fill the vacancy left by Tim Gordon, D-Bethlehem, after he was elected to the state's Assembly in the 108th District.

Bethlehem Town Justice Ryan Donovan officiated the oaths of office.

- Bethlehem Central School District had a Citizens Budget Group for the second year in a row, but the group met this year in January, five months before the May school budget vote.

- Erwin Ungerer, known to the community as "Tac," died Thursday, Jan. 3, at the age of 52, from melanoma.

Ungerer owned and operated T.A.C.S. ("The Auto Collision Specialists Inc.") Autobody service on Route 9W in Glenmont for 30 years.

- Bethlehem created the 20/20 Advisory Committee and appointed two former town supervisors, Theresa Egan and Ken Ringer, to co-chair the 25-member panel. The group's members were appointed by the Town Board at the Wednesday, Jan. 23, meeting.

The committee's goal is to follow up on the townwide comprehensive plan, adopted in 2005, to guide land use,

New year brings new faces, ideas

Editor's Note: The following is a recap of news in the towns of New Scotland and Guilderland from the first six months of 2008. A recap of the second half of 2008 will appear in next week's issue, Dec. 31.

January

- In the first week of 2008, the Women in Business Group of the Guilderland Chamber of Commerce chose Altamont's Community Caregivers, Inc. to be the beneficiary of several fundraising events throughout the year, including the Summer Social.

The group is a nonprofit organization founded in 1994 that provides services to people of all ages in Guilderland, Bethlehem, New Scotland, Knox and Berne.

- The positioning of stop signs in town sparked some lengthy and fiery discussions at a Tuesday, Jan. 15, Guilderland Town Board meeting.

New board member Warren Redlich, a Republican, voiced concerns about the intersection of Curry Road Extension and Kings Road, where the town's traffic safety committee had recommended the installation of a stop sign.

"This might be a safety problem," Redlich said, likening the intersection to that at Veeder and Johnston roads. "There is no clear right of way at Curry and Kings roads. This could be highly dangerous. Let's have an extensive review of this, not just slap a stop sign there."

- On Saturday, Jan. 19, a group of five Farnsworth Middle School students took home the first-place prize at the Future City regional competition at Hudson Valley Community College and earned a trip to Washington, D.C., to compete in the national finals, which were held Feb. 16-20.

Students Kathryn Liotta, Hannah Liu, Brien Micali, Anya Joynt, and Adison Vanina, earned top honors for their design of the fictional city of "Mohala."

- The Guilderland Republican Party put a new chairman in place to help guide the party in the 2009

As 2008 draws to close and another town organization meeting is set for January, there will be some significant changes to the town's planning division.

After the passing of former Planning Board Chairman Parker Mathusa, board member Howard Engel took over as chair. Now with Engel's seven-year term set to expire, he is stepping down, leaving two Planning Board seats open, as well as a new chairmanship appointment.

Appointments are made by the supervisor and voted on by the Town Board, according to

The Guilderland Police Department welcomed the promotion of Roger Ginder to the rank of sergeant at a Wednesday, Dec. 17, ceremony held at the Guilderland Town Hall.

Ginder is leaving his position as a youth services officer in the Guilderland Police Department.

"We're sad to see him go. He's very talented with the puppets," joked Police Chief Carol Lawlor, who continued in a more serious vein. "He's well qualified for this position, and I look forward to working with him."

Wendy's employees arrested for credit-card theft

Guilderland Police say two Western Avenue Wendy's employees were arrested on charges of criminal possession of a stolen credit card.

Diamond Larae Wade, 17, of Albany, was arrested on Thursday, Dec. 11, at the Wendy's at 1645 Western Ave. on felony charges of grand larceny and criminal possession of stolen property.

According to police, Wade stole a Visions FCU Visa and then was in possession of the card at CVS in Crossgates Mall. Wade turned herself in to the police and cooperated with the investigator, police said.

Jasmine Mercado, 18, of Albany was arrested on Wednesday, Nov. 26, at the Wendy's at the above location.

Police said Mercado was in possession of another Visions FCU Visa credit card. Mercado was processed and released without incident, police said.

Other arrests

• Nicholas Shippey, 21, of Slingerlands, was arrested by Colonie Police on Monday, Dec. 15, at Keeler Motors at 111 Troy Schenectady Road on felony charges of grand larceny and auto stripping.

According to police, Shippey had stolen auto parts from Keeler Motors, as well as doing damage to vehicles at the 111 Troy Schenectady Road location.

Shippey was arrested and transported to the Colonie police station and he was issued a ticket to appear in court at a later date.

• Prince Dobere Jr., 32, of Albany, was arrested by Bethlehem police on Monday, Dec. 8, for DWI, first offense; aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle; a registration violation; driving without an inspection certificate; and driving without a license.

Bethlehem police said Dobere was driving north on 9W and after an officer on patrol conducted a "vehicle inquiry" it was revealed that the vehicle's registration had expired on Nov. 20.

Dobere was stopped by police and identified himself verbally. The arresting officer said he could smell alcohol on his breath while interviewing Dobere and said he observed signs of intoxication, according to the arrest report.

He was asked to exit his vehicle and conduct three field-sobriety tests, which he failed, and after testing positive for alcohol Dobere was placed in custody and transported to the Bethlehem Police Department, the report states.

Police said Dobere was read his DWI Miranda rights three times after he refused to take a Breathalyzer.

While processing Dobere, police discovered that he was wanted on an active arrest warrant out of the Village of Green Island for failing to appear in court, the report states, and he was advised by police to turn himself in and he was released to the custody of his girlfriend.

Dobere is scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on Jan. 6.

Truck roll over on River Road

A crash occurred on route 144 (River Road) in Glenmont on Wednesday, Dec. 17, around 8:15 a.m. The pickup truck was traveling north when it went off the right shoulder of the roadway into the ditch and then rolled over before coming to rest on the driver's side. The driver was trapped inside the vehicle for approximately half an hour before being freed. The Selkirk Fire Department, with the assistance of the Albany County Paramedics, were able to free the man using the Jaws of Life. He was transported to Albany Medical Center in serious condition and police said that slippery roads, improper tires and speed may have all played a factor in the crash.

Weather hampers storm recovery

Despite delays, week's end brought a return to normal in Guilderland

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

As crews continued to restore power and clean up debris in the wake of a destructive Dec. 11 ice storm, subsequent wind and snow forced additional response from schools, local emergency responders and utility provider National Grid.

Monday, Dec. 15, saw heavy winds that hindered power restoration efforts and added several thousand new outages, according to information from National Grid.

"Increasingly strong winds and rain have made field working conditions even more difficult, and continue to pose a threat to already weakened trees and limbs," said Christopher Root, senior vice president of electricity distribution operations.

Guilderland schools were forced into a two-hour delay and morning kindergarten was canceled on Wednesday, Dec. 17, as close to 4 inches of snow coated the already battered Albany County.

Power was restored to most customers by Thursday, Dec. 18, with workers putting in close to 18 hours a day since the storm first hit, according to information provided by National Grid. Although there were more than 800 Guilderland homes and businesses without power on the morning of Dec. 17, that number was down to four by Thursday.

"We continue to be amazed at the extent of the destruction that was wrought by this storm," said Root.

Sean Maguire, the information officer for the Town of Guilderland Fire Chiefs Association said Guilderland's fire departments have been hard at work responding to various emergencies related to the storm effort.

"We continue to be amazed at the extent of the destruction that was wrought by this storm."

Christopher Root

"It was probably one of our busiest couple of days in a long while," Maguire said.

Maguire said the primary function of Guilderland's fire departments has been mitigating hazardous situations such as downed power lines, pumping basements with water damage from shorted sump pumps and responding to a few fires related to improper use of fireplaces.

National Grid issued several recommendations for dealing with emergency situations, including not touching fallen lines because they may still be "live," and using generators outdoors and disconnecting them from National Grid's system so those working on the wires aren't harmed. The utility company also recommended turning off appliances when power goes out, and leaving one light on to gauge when power is restored.

Town Supervisor Ken Runion said the emergency response in the town has been superb, and he thanked the various emergency responders at the Tuesday, Dec. 16, Town Board meeting.

Storm by the numbers

As of Tuesday, Dec. 16, restoration efforts had the following impact, according to information provided by National Grid:

- Overall, more than 550,000 National Grid customers in New York, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island lost power.
- A total of 1,800 crews and 2,300 support personnel assisted, one of the largest concentrations of utility workers in the Northeast in more than a decade.
- In New York state there were 1900 service workers in 900 crews and 1000 support personnel.
- More than 980 crews from states as far as Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Connecticut responded.
- 3,600 square miles of Eastern New York were affected.
- 350 broken poles and 150 damaged transformers needed repair.
- 1,100 hotel rooms in 31 hotel and motels housed restoration crews.
- 5,000 meals were served per day to responders.
- 1,450 trucks, cars and tractor-trailers involved in the effort.
- 24,300 gallons of fuel were used.
- 3,000 individual incidences of damage were reported.
- 772,000 feet of distribution wire was replaced, enough to span 140 miles, or approximately the distance from the Capitol to downtown Syracuse.
- $100,000 donated to Capital District Red Cross.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

The year in review

Over the next two weeks, Spotlight Newspapers will take a look at the stories of the past year that have affected the lives of our readers.

The edition you hold in your hands now will encapsulate the first six months of the year, with last six months to appear in the final Spotlight Newspaper of 2008, appearing on the newsstand on New Year's Eve.

Of course, 2008 was rife with national and global news that affected us as individuals and will chart our progression into history.

We were witness to a meltdown on Wall Street and the bailout of the financial, housing and automotive industries of a massive scale. We saw terrorists attack in Mumbai and Hurricane Gustav tear through the United States.

In state politics, our readers were party to a roller-coaster ride of highs and lows as our own Gov. Eliot Spitzer was linked to prostitution ring and relinquished his office. His successor became the first African-American governor in the state's history and the first legally blind governor of any state. Nationally, Americans made history by electing the first African-American president.

As significant as these events were, you'll see scant mention of them in our Year in Review, and only in the sense of how they affected us locally. What you will see is a recap of our coverage of the New Scotland moratorium, developments on the Vista Technology Park in Bethlehem, the resignations of several area school superintendents, and the appointment of Carol Lawlor as the Town of Guilderland's police chief.

On pages three and 36 of this edition, you'll find the photos that we at Spotlight Newspapers believe embodied the spirit and emotion of the subjects of our news and sports coverage. Again, all of these pictures are of the events that shaped the communities we live in and report on, because that's what we do — and that's what we will continue to do as this year ends and a new one begins: We bring you the news that hits closest to your home.

What happened to the phone call?

By JACKIE SHER
sherj@spotlightnews.com

The writer covers Schenectady County for Spotlight Newspapers.

I'll admit it. When friends and family asked why I needed a Blackberry, I said that I had to have access to my e-mail at all times because of my hectic freelance writing schedule. It was impossible to sit at my desk all day waiting for e-mail when there was so much else to do.

While my answer was legitimate, it was only a partial truth. I wanted to be able to communicate with and stay connected to friends and family more easily. This "smart phone" was the ultimate device. I would be able to text and e-mail and message and communicate with friends, family and the dead no matter where I was, so long as I had cell-phone service.

It sounds wholesome enough, but several months later, I wonder if the Blackberry and all of these other forms of communication that have developed over recent years — e-mails, Facebook, text messaging, Instant Messaging — really help us stay connected and in touch, or create an intense, new kind of disconnect, loneliness and even an excuse to be rude to one another. While I think that these tools are invaluable professionally, when it comes to my personal life, I question them.

For the first four days after I purchased my Blackberry and set up my plan with unlimited everything (minutes, text messages, Internet, laundry service, etc.), I barely had time to eat because I felt an intense urge to respond to every jingle, jangle, beep and buzz that came from the device. I became a slave to my phone.

Before the Blackberry, I was generally a phone-call-only kind of bird, even though I hated talking on the phone because I always felt a little awkward and couldn't stand that I couldn't see the caller's facial expressions and read his or her body language.

Texting seemed like a form of communication I could get behind, but sending novel-like messages on a tiny screen by tapping out letters on a nine-key pad frustrated me and took too long. Then, the Blackberry's full QWERTY keyboard (like a keyboard on a computer, almost) made text messaging and e-mailing a breeze.

Before the Blackberry, e-mails were reserved for the hours when I was in front of my desk, and the various social networking sites that I had accounts with were checked when I was bored or had a free minute in front of my computer.

All of a sudden I was able to see an e-mail the second it arrived in my inbox and respond in a snap no matter where I was and no matter what time it was. I could respond to a Facebook message instantly. Thumb-typing, as they call it (you type on a Blackberry's keyboard mainly with your thumbs), was such a novelty in the beginning that instead of taking phone calls, I would wait for voicemail to pick up and respond with a text message.

I most certainly felt connected. However, as the months rolled on, talking on the phone began to seem like a huge, daunting time commitment and chore. After all, why have a conversation with people to see how they're doing when you can text, "How are you?" and receive a, "Good, you?" I know that I, at least, am a very, very busy individual.

Text messaging rapidly became a completely appropriate form of wishing someone a happy birthday, congratulations, or even a condolence. From my memory, this sort of thing was relatively unacceptable and even unheard of three years ago. It might have been a way of expressing one of these things to an acquaintance, but not someone you're close to. Now it's the norm to text your close friend who may live in a different time zone, "Happy Birthday!" instead of making a phone call. I admit, I'm guilty of it.

I have spent a lot of time lately discussing how a text message or an e-mail allows you to confront or deal with a situation that you might not feel comfortable with. These forms of communication provide one with what I like to call self-preservation. There's still the risk of upset for you or the person on the receiving end. You're still confronting the situation, but these sterile forms of connecting allow you to choose your words more carefully than you would in a real-time conversation and even grammar check them before tapping "send." You can more easily control the period of time you want to spend with the "situation." With text messages and e-mails, if you get one that you're not sure how to deal with or are too tired to respond to, you can ignore it. Again, I'm guilty of it, you're guilty of it — we're all guilty of it.

Text messages, especially, have provided cell phone users with a new and convenient form of canceling plans or simply blowing someone off. Instead of enduring a phone conversation where you might have to face someone's anger and frustration with your flakiness, you can just send a text that says, "Sorry, I fell asleep for five hours," or, "Can't hang out tonight." Period. I do this all the time — but I'm not saying it's OK. Wayne Koestenbaum recently wrote in a New York Times piece that, "the cell phone reinvents rudeness and renames it 'communication.'" I think that I agree.

I used to feel huge anxiety when it came to talking on the phone because I couldn't "read" the physical reaction of the other party. However, at least I could hear the intonations in his or her voice and understand if the person on the other line was being sarcastic, upset or excited. I could tell how they were feeling. With text messages, e-mails and Facebook messages, you can have a "conversation," but you lose so much. You can't see each other, you can't read facial expressions, and you can't hear each other's voices. There's something to be said for response time. You lose a little when you have to wait 20 minutes for a response to something you said.

I'm not sure what's going to happen to my generation and the ways we communicate with one another. Are we going to end up being a very accessible but lonely generation, incapable of truly expressing emotions? Or are we going to figure out a way to really clearly express sarcasm through a text message, or anger or happiness or affection? Maybe this will finally improve our grammar and writing; older generations are constantly complaining that my generation can't write a sentence. Regardless, as soon as the two-year contract is up on my Blackberry (I still have about a year and a half to go), I will most likely be switching back to a normal cell phone, and if I'm feeling really extreme, I might cancel the part of my plan that allows me to text.

BEATeam keeps children safe

Editor, The Spotlight:

We're called the BEATeam: 10 school bus drivers and attendants in the Bethlehem Central School District Transportation Department. We love protecting children and we're good at it.

Since 1996, we exist because the state Education Department mandates school bus safety is taught in schools. Every day we witness situations showing why this is so crucial.

Surviving on the dedication and generosity of the team, we have built stage sets with donated time and materials, created flyers, props and awards, and a Web site, www.BEATeam.org, to better share our activities and curriculum.

Every child who has gone through Bethlehem Central elementary schools in the last decade recognizes our "Buster the Bus" — a staple of the safety demonstrations we put on at each district elementary school in the fall and at area pre-schools in the spring. The Web site is a great way to see Buster and the team in action and see who our supporters are.

We were recently sponsored by the Glenmont Lowe's Home Improvement Center, which supplied materials for a school bus set in our skit this year, "Bully on the Bus." Now BEAT is seeking community partners to help us with equipment and educational materials needed to keep the important message of bus safety alive in our community and to continue bringing a vibrant show to our students.

We would appreciate any donations to help us continue our programming. Donations are tax deductible; anyone interested can contact me by e-mail at ellen@BEATeam.org, by phone at 767-3496 or through www.BEATeam.org.

Finally, we hope our continued work furthers traffic safety in our community and reminds us to remain cautious when we see that big yellow bus. There is precious cargo on board.

Rice family thanks town, community

Editor, The Spotlight:

Early Sunday evening, Dec. 7, we witnessed first-hand why the Town of Bethlehem continues to be a special place to live.

As we were putting up a Christmas tree, our neighbors' enormous pine tree suddenly fell onto — and through — our roof, piercing the ceilings of three different rooms.

It was truly stunning to find ourselves confronted by huge limbs protruding into our home. Fortunately, and miraculously, no one was injured.

We want to thank the members of the Elsmere Volunteer Fire Department and Town Building Inspector Gil Boucher for their swift, efficient and caring response, and for all they did to help us deal with a most difficult and challenging situation.

We sincerely appreciate their help, as well as the many generous offers of assistance that followed from friends and family throughout the community.

Gov's cigarette tax will save lives

Editor, The Spotlight:

On Monday, Dec. 15, Gov. David Paterson put politics aside to improve the health of all New Yorkers when he signed into law a bill that will end cigarette tax evasion in the state.

Smoking is the No. 1 preventable cause of death. Collecting the higher taxes imposed in June will reduce the number of people who smoke, and lower health care costs from cigarette-related illnesses.

As a pediatrician and member of the Capital Region Advisory Board of the American Heart Association, I find it especially important to note that this law will deter children from ever starting to smoke.

Collecting the tax will also increase revenues in the state at a time when every penny is needed.

Thank you, Gov. Paterson, for your attention to our health.

Town of New Scotland wrestles with growth

Developer: Data provided by CZAC member tainted by self-interest

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Plans to regulate growth in New Scotland's commercial zone were the subject of continued criticism from a potential developer, and a public hearing was set for another moratorium extension.

At the Wednesday, Dec. 17, Town Board meeting, New Scotland officials set a date for a public hearing to extend the commercial zone moratorium for another six months, while former Commercial Zone Advisory Committee chairwoman Roz Robinson issued a report suggesting a 125,000-square-foot size cap on retail development was appropriate. Active CZAC members Liz Kormos and Mike Naughton have recommended a 50,000-square-foot cap.

The Town Board set the public hearing for 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 11, at New Scotland Town Hall on Route 85. The current moratorium, which was an extension to the original six-month building ban, will expire March 1.

Town Supervisor Tom Dolin said he expects the board to pass the extension when it comes up for vote.

Managing partner at Sphere Development LLC, Greg Widrick, said he is hopeful that the commercial zone issue is resolved quickly, but he said he wants to see it resolved "properly." He said would rather the town consider a 125,000-square-foot building size cap size cap on retail developments as opposed to the 50,000 square feet recommended by Kormos and Naughton.

Sphere is the potential developer of the Bender farm, a key piece of property in the commercial zone.

Three CZAC members, Cindy Elliott, John Biscone and Robinson, resigned abruptly in late November amid concerns about a potential conflict of interest between Kormos and a potential buyer of the Bender melon farm. No action was taken against Kormos by the town.

A report filed separately with the town by Robinson at the Dec. 17 meeting states that a "community-size," development fits with the town's comprehensive plan, and a 125,000-square-foot cap on retail development falls within those parameters.

Widrick said he is skeptical of information from Naughton and Kormos, both members of the advocacy group New Scotland for Sound Economic Development, which has been vocal about the smaller retail size cap, and cited "self interest" as Kormos motivation.

He said Kormos' consulting relationship with Mark Schafer, who had at one time expressed interest in buying the property, taints her information. Kormos discussed becoming a "minority partner," in that deal, although she did not sign a contract to do so.

Schafer was eventually out bid by Sphere.

Widrick said a large commercial development would be beneficial to the tax base for New Scotland, and Kormos and Naughton's recommended small-scale development will not be able to afford the needed infrastructure such as water, sewer and roads.

Widrick accused Kormos of trying to devalue the property by capping retail development.

"That has nothing to do with the interests of this town," Widrick said.

Kormos has stated she has nothing to gain from capping the development at 50,000 square feet, and that her relationship with Schafer Construction ended when they lost the bid for the property.

Widrick said he cannot say for sure what Sphere will do if they are unable to construct an "anchor store" in the development such as a previously discussed 137,000-square-foot Target, and would need to consult with the other potential tenants and see if they would still be willing to locate at the former melon farm.

"My gut is telling me no, especially in to day's economic climate," Widrick added.

G'land seeks input on state aid cuts

School board schedules January public hearing

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

The Guilderland School District is gearing up for proposed state aid cuts by letting the public weigh in later next month, according to Board of Education President Richard Weisz.

Gov. David Paterson released his executive budget, which calls for reductions in state education aid in the coming year by "$698 million or 3.3 percent from 2008-09," according to information provided by the state. "Even after these reductions, funding for school aid would still total $20.7 billion in 2009-10, a 42 percent, or $6.2 billion, increase compared to 2003-04."

"We all want to preserve education," Weisz said. "It's just really a chance to have some dialogue."

"The decision to recommend a reduction in school aid is a personally difficult one for me," Paterson said in a written statement. "During my time in the Legislature, I was one of the strongest advocates for increased education funding. The grim reality of our current fiscal situation is that all areas of state spending will have to experience reductions. But I am assured in the knowledge that, even after these actions, New York will still have one of the best-funded education systems in the nation."

Weisz said a Tuesday, Jan. 13, public forum has been set at Guilderland High School to take input regarding budget items. The forum will be sponsored by BOCES.

Weisz said one of the major issues the board will discuss at that time is whether or not to use reserve funds now in one lump sum or spread them out over the four years Paterson cited as the amount of time the deficit could take to be resolved.

He also said he is unsure of how much state aid is being cut for Guilderland specifically, and is hopeful that information becomes available soon.

Weisz said typically state aid accounts for 25 percent of the district's budget, but that number could change this year.

He said the district will need to know what changes to make on the "expenses" side of the budget so they can prepare for the difficult times ahead.

Weisz added that the situation is further complicated by the effects of Paterson's proposed cuts might have to the county budget regarding funding for transportation and pre-kindergarten.

Reading program expands at RCS

A reading program that targeted struggling readers at Pieter B. Coeymans Elementary School is expanding to A.W. Becker Elementary School and the middle school this year.

Funded through a $100,000 grant from SUNY Albany, which is conducting a three-year research study on struggling older readers, the program provides one-on-one literacy teaching daily to a small group of struggling, older readers.

Last year, the group consisted of 10 fourth grade students at Pieter B. Coeymans Elementary School. This year, the program will include as many as 10 seventh-grade students and as many as 10 fourth-grade students at A.W. Becker, in addition to students at Pieter B. Coeymans.

The program proved successful at P.B.C. last year, with nearly all students advancing in their reading ability.

"I believe the students made many gains in decoding and comprehension. If you checked with the classroom teachers, I think that they would agree with me," teacher Kelly McGillicuddy, who piloted the program last year, said.

McGillicuddy, as well as consultant teachers Allison Klein and Pat Caccamo, received training on a trial reading program that is being utilized with the students and is being researched through the University of Albany. The program, Interactive Strategies Approach, is designed to improve the reading abilities of older struggling readers, said Assistant Superintendent for Instruction Diane Albano.

Students are taught such reading and comprehension tricks as:

- Think about the sounds in the words.
- Think of the words that might make sense.
- Read past a puzzling word.
- Try different pronunciations for some of the letters in a word, especially the vowels.
- Break the word into smaller parts.
- Go back to the beginning of the sentence and start again.

Superintendent: Proposed state budget might impact programs district offers

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Central School District is facing a possible 9 percent reduction in state aid if the governor's recommended budget goes through.

Gov. David Paterson's budget plan for the 2009-2010 fiscal year, which he announced Wednesday, Dec. 17, includes some layoffs of the state work force and about $698 million in cuts to school aid statewide.

Bethlehem Superintendent Michael Tebbano said that under the proposed budget, the district would have to come to grips with a significant loss of state funding, which could reach close to $2.2 million. That figure is more than 9 percent of the district's total state aid package in the current year.

"We are still combing through the details of the governor's proposal, but it's safe to say these figures are concerning," Tebbano said. "Essentially, there are only two options to make up for every dollar that is not received in state aid - property taxes and cuts to programs and services. As always, we'll work to control costs wherever possible, but a cut on this scale could result in significant programmatic reductions or eliminations."

Tebbano noted the proposal is now in the hands of state legislators, with a state budget deadline of April 1. However, Paterson has publicly stated that he hopes the Legislature will act on the proposal by March 1.

Even though aid is being cut, Paterson's budget proposal does include "full-day conversion aid," which is designed to help districts with the costs of starting a full-day kindergarten program.

In June 2006, the Bethlehem Board of Education approved implementing the full-day program in September 2009, and board members said at the Dec. 17 meeting the school would continue with the program as planned.

"In a year when state funding for education is decreasing, we are pleased to see that the governor's proposal includes the full-day kindergarten aid," said Board President James Lytle. "We are, therefore, reaffirming that the district will make good on its promise to the community and begin the full-day program as scheduled, without imposing any undue burden on taxpayers in the coming budget."

The roughly $800,000 included in the state budget to help the district launch the full-day program will be used exclusively for that purpose, according to district officials, and not for other financial shortfalls the school may experience due to aid cuts.

In his budget proposal, Paterson indicated that school foundation aid — aid on most operating expenses — would remain flat for the next two years. However, because of the economic crisis, all districts would receive a "deficit reduction assessment," which would be a one-time cut for districts designed to help the state close the budget gap.

For Bethlehem Central, this figure is $2.28 million.

"I understand that state leaders have a responsibility to address the fiscal crisis

"It is important that everyone understands the magnitude of what has been proposed."

and state deficit," Tebbano said. "Our mission, however, is to maintain a high-quality program that meets the needs of all students while holding the line on taxes for our community. Clearly a significant reduction in state aid and the shifting of additional costs to districts renders this task difficult."

Tebbano added that the district's existing budget was "carefully and conservatively crafted," and that areas to cut costs without affecting students would not be easy.

"It is important that everyone understands the magnitude of what has been proposed," he said. "We will continue to be as creative and cost-effective as possible, but it's hard to imagine reducing spending on the order of what may be required without taking a hard look, as a community, at some areas that would be incredibly painful to eliminate or cut."

"For this reason, the community's participation in the upcoming budget forums is essential in a year when budget priorities will help guide some difficult decisions," he added.

A series of four community budget forums will begin on Jan. 12.

Mystery writer Jeffery Deaver poses with librarian Ginny LaJuene. Deaver's visit opened the second season of Bethlehem Public Library's "Writers and Friends" author series.

Library looks back, ahead

It's hard to believe we've come to the end of another year. As the library looks ahead to 2009, we also remember some "fabulous firsts" in 2008.

• Author, author, author...

Our first "Writers and Friends" author series welcomed fiction writer Carol Goodman in January, memoirist Susan Cheever in March and mystery writer Donald Westlake in April. Acclaimed mystery writer Jeffery Deaver opened the series' second season, and in the coming months we will host readings and book-signings by Russell Banks and Steve Hamilton. This wonderful series, which has been enjoyed by authors and audiences alike, is generously underwritten by Friends of Bethlehem Public Library.

Our youth services department also welcomed a notable author last spring. James Preller of "Jigsaw Jones" fame talked about and signed his new book, which we learned that he drafted on a yellow pad right here in our library.

• Good reads, great stories

Our summer reading program was again extended to preschoolers, offering reading-readiness activities and a weekly storytime presented by teen volunteers. Our pint-sized patrons and a cadre of parent alumni celebrated the 25th annual Teddy Bears Picnic in June.

The Upper Hudson Library System won a second NEA grant for The Big Read; this spring the community focused attention on Edith Wharton's "The Age of Innocence." And we were again proud to host world-class storytellers for the finale of the area's week-long Riverway Storytelling Festival.

Our popular museum pass program, begun in the fall of 2007 with family passes to five institutions, now offers free admission with a Bethlehem Public Library card to about a dozen regional museums. Several passes are sponsored by Friends of the Library.

• Musical smorgasbord

Because of July's rainy weather, most of our Evenings on the Green became Evenings in the Community Room. Nevertheless, our patrons enjoyed toe-tappin' music by Aged in the Hills, Michael Eck, The Rumble Kings and Skip Parsons. Another season of A Little Sunday Music opened this fall with performances by pianist Duncan Cumming and flute and piano duo Pauline and Peter Mancuso.

• Wired to serve

In early spring, we launched a regular "e-blast" called What's

NOW @ Your Library. This e-mail bulletin offers library news highlights and links to related sites and services. More than 1,030 patrons now subscribe to the service.

Our summer reading program attracted record numbers, not least because of "SRP Online," which enabled our summer readers to log on and report their reading from home or on vacation. This original computer application was designed last year by John Love of our IT department; the effort won us the New York Library Association's 2007 Best Practices Award.

Looking ahead

We look forward in the coming months to more authors, more concerts and more ways to serve you creatively and well. Staff and trustees wish you bright, safe holidays, and hope and happiness in the year to come.

Louise Grieco

Supervisor Jack Cunningham.

In addition to the planning seats, Bethlehem's director of economic development, George Leveille, is retiring from his position. The terms of Zoning Board member Leonard Micelli and Zoning Board Chairman Michael C. Hodom had expired.

Cunningham said Micelli and Hodom are expected to be re-appointed to their positions and that the town's assistant director of economic development and planning, Michael Morelli, was being considered for Leveille's job.

In all, the town's Planning Board will have a new director of economic development, a new chairman and two newly appointed members.

"The chairman of the Planning Board will be selected from one of the members currently on the board by the Town Board," Cunningham said.

Engel said he has valued his time on the planning board.

"I finished my seven years," Engel said. "It's been very interesting and I've learned a lot. I was retired at the time when I was appointed, so it worked for me."

Engel said he enjoyed working with Leveille and wished him well.

"George is very knowledgeable and was very good to work with," he said.

The Tuesday, Dec. 16, Planning Board meeting was Engel's last.

"I want to thank everyone for the past four or five weeks in getting through a difficult time," Engel said, referring to Mathusa's death. "This is my final meeting and my last official business."

He said he learned more than just about town planning during his tenure.

"I've enjoyed my time and learned a lot," Engel said before jesting, "I learned when to open my mouth and when to keep it shut, too."

Nanci Moquin, the board's administrative assistant, presented Engel with a proclamation from the town for his service, which she described as a tradition offered to retiring board members.

However, the proclamation carried some special significance for Engel, as he was preparing to make his last official act of the town.

"This was Parker's last official act as chairman of the board and he said as a long-time friend he wanted to be a part of this," Moquin told Engel.

Mathusa died on Sunday, Nov. 16, at his Delmar home after losing a battle with ALS, also known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, at the age of 70.

Cunningham thanked both Engel and Leveille for their service to Bethlehem.

"He [Engel] did a great job on the Planning Board and I'm particularly grateful that he could step in after Parker's death and help take the reigns," Cunningham said, adding that he would most likely "call on" Engel over town planning matters in the future.

He shared similar comments about Leveille.

"George has been a great asset, coming in after [former supervisor] Theresa [Eagan]. He has been invaluable to me and I'm going to miss him at Town Hall," Cunningham said of Leveille. "I will be tapping on his shoulder from time to time as well."

The town's appointments will be made at its organizational meeting at Town Hall on Tuesday, Jan. 6, at 6 p.m.

Guilfordland Town Supervisor Ken Runion, left, swears in Guilfordland police officer Roger Ginder, right, to the rank of sergeant at a Wednesday, Dec. 17, ceremony at Town Hall. Behind Ginder are his two daughters, Alexis, 11, and Amanda, 16.

for fire dispatchers, was a past president of the CSEA dispatchers union and became a police officer in 1994.

Ginder joked that some people thought his promotion was a long time coming, while others could not understand how the department would let him achieve sergeant.

"I promise I'm going to do the best to please both sides," Ginder said. "I am excited to be here. I am glad to be a part of the new administrative team."

Ginder recited his oath with his two daughters at his side and family and friends turning out to support him. All those on hand watched as he playfully hesitated during the recitation of the promise to obey superior officers.

Town Supervisor Ken Runion praised Ginder for his work as an officer and said he expects more of the same from Ginder.

"I know you're going to do a great job," he added.

Councilman Patricia Slavick said four candidates interviewed for the job and each was qualified.

"They have a lot of dedication for our town," she said.

Lawlor thanked the members of the review board for their effort in making the decision. The board is made up of Capt. Curtis Cox, Lt. Dan McNally, who was out of town for the ceremony, Sgt. Eric Batchelder, union representative Russel Tailman, and Democratic board members Slavick and Paul Pastore.

"They had a hard job, and they did a wonderful job," Lawlor said.

Ginder's promotion sparked some debate at the Tuesday, Dec. 16, Town Board meeting, when Republican Councilman Mark Grimm requested to sit on the review board overseeing promotions in the town.

He said the two Town Board liaisons for the review board should include a majority and minority member.

"There's no minority representative on that board," Grimm said. "How am I supposed to judge how fair the process is if I can't sit in on it?"

Grimm called it an example of "closed government," but noted he has nothing against Ginder, whose promotion he voted in favor of at the Town Board meeting.

"[Runion] has no right to shut off the minority," Grimm said.

Grimm said he would be willing to sit in on the review board meetings in addition to Pastore and Slavick if he does not take their place.

Runion said the board liaisons are dictated by seniority, and Grimm will not qualify for the position until he is the senior or second-most senior board member.

"It's always been the process," Runion said. "I have no intention of changing the process."

Runion also said that more than two members cannot sit on the board, otherwise it would constitute a public meeting, requiring notice to be made to the public and the media every time they met. He said a full board meeting is done when a department head is appointed, but civil service employees generally do not require the entire board.

"If you did it for every hire, it would be a cumbersome process. You would never get anything done," Runion said.

Businessman Ted Danz, 60, was elected chairman of the party at its Jan. 30 meeting.

February

• Acting Chief Carol Lawlor and Lt. Curtis Cox said comments made by Councilman Warren Redlich, a Republican, indicated he would deny them promotion to the chief's position for political reasons.

The two candidates were vying for the open chief of police position in Guiderland when they served notice they may sue the town over comments posted by Redlich on Web site. Lawlor eventually got the promotion.

• The fictional city of "Mohala" earned second place in the 2008 National Engineers Week Future City Competition.

Farnsworth Middle School students Kathryn Liotta, Hannah Liu, Brien Miceli, Anya Joynt, and Adison Vanina teamed up with FMS enrichment teacher Deborah Escobar and volunteer engineer mentor James Liotta, from Verizon, to prepare for national competition after winning the regional event in January.

• Middle and high school students in the Guiderland Central School District performed "A Tribute to Nature's Animals" for third-grade students in the district at the annual Young People's Concert on Feb. 28.

High school principal Mike

Paolino narrated Sergei Prokofiev's classic tale "Peter and the Wolf," accompanied by the wind ensemble under the direction of Kathleen Ehlinger. Keeping with the animal theme, the wind ensemble also performed Henry Mancini's "The Pink Panther" and Leroy Anderson's "The Waltzing Cat." Joining the wind ensemble were several small vocal ensembles and a brass quintet.

• Guiderland's Farnsworth Middle School was the recipient of a $25,370 service-learning grant from State Farm Thursday, Feb. 28, to expand and improve the study of local biodiversity with a focus on the rare Albany Pine Bush ecosystem.

Science teachers Jennifer Ford and Alan Fiero submitted the grant application on behalf of the school, and their proposal was one of 44 chosen from among 360 grant requests received by the State Farm Youth Advisory Board from organizations throughout the United States and Canada.

March

• A March 4 Guiderland Town Board meeting broke down into quarreling along partisan lines and was adjourned by Supervisor Kenneth Runion with the support of Democratic board members Patricia Slavick and Paul Pastore, and Town Clerk Rosemary Centi.

The fighting began during the approval of minutes for the Feb. 12 meeting.

Republican board member Mark Grimm contested the validity of the minutes and claimed they were not a fair and accurate representation of the meeting. He said that some of his comments were not included in the minutes and others were summarized too briefly compared to those of other members of the board.

• In celebration of Music In Our Schools Month, several student ensembles from the Guiderland Central School District performed at the Empire State Plaza in Albany.

On Wednesday, March 19, high school choir members performed in the South Concourse beginning at noon. Representing Guiderland High School was the Mixed Choir and the Women's Choir.

Farnsworth Middle School ensembles performed on Tuesday, March 25, and included the FMS Select Choir, followed by the FMS Select Band and the FMS Jazz Ensemble at noon.

April

• Altamont Elementary School students performed Shakespeare's "The Tempest," on April 9 and 10. The performance is a tradition for fifth-grade students at the school.

Fifth-grade teacher Allan Lockwood said the students worked hard all year preparing for the performance, and New York State Theatre Institute education director Christine Saplin worked with Lockwood to give the students a lesson in theater.

• Restaurant owners announced that the Italian eatery Mangia at Stuyvesant Plaza will be replaced by a new "environmentally friendly" restaurant named Creo. White Management said Creo would use a number of recycled materials to go along with its "green" identity.

• In a matter of minutes, three vandals caused thousands of dollars in damage to a Guiderland business on Monday, April 14.

Owner David Schmidt arrived at Renaissance Floral Design on Western Avenue that morning to find many of the outside fixtures on the property knocked over and broken into pieces.

• State Comptroller Thomas DiNapoli penalized Girvin and Ferlazzo, the Albany law firm that represents the Guiderland School District, when four lawyers from the firm were found to be inappropriately drawing pensions from the Hamilton-Fulton-Montgomery BOCES retirement system.

The law firm is the same one that has represented the Guiderland School District on issues such as labor relations, special education, construction contracts, and sexual harassment and discrimination claims, among other legal matters.

• After three years of service as the Voorheesville superintendent, Linda Langevin submitted her resignation on Wednesday, April 23, as a result of family illness.

• Lily Rowen of Altamont organized the Run for Darfur 5K in Schenectady Sunday, April 27, with the proceeds benefiting the people of the war-torn country.

• As part of a plan to enhance the character and quality of life in Altamont, the village applied for and received a grant to develop a master walking and bicycling path.

Mayor James Gaughan said the $27,000 grant was a testament to the village's comprehensive plan, created in 2006.

• At its Tuesday, April 29, meeting, the Guiderland Board of Education unanimously approved the appointment of two new elementary principals: Allan Lockwood, to the position of Guiderland Elementary School principal and Christopher Sanita, to the position of Pine Bush Elementary School principal.

May

• The New Scotland Town Board passed a six-month moratorium after listening to residents' concerns at a Wednesday, May 7, public hearing in the Voorheesville high school.

More than 750 residents from New Scotland, New Salem and Voorheesville filled the auditorium, and for more than three hours, the residents staked their claim against the Syracuse-based Sphere Development Group's plan to construct a 750,000-square-foot retail development off routes 85 and 85A, on land that was once home to the Bender melon farm.

That moratorium was later extended for an additional three months and is still in place today.

• On Tuesday, May 20, Guiderland Central School District residents approved an $83,823,160 budget for the 2008-2009 school year, with a tally of 2,067 votes for and 1,087 against. The budget represented a 2.08 percent increase in spending over the current year's budget and resulted in an estimated

1.43 percent tax rate increase for residents in the Town of Guiderland.

Voters also elected Catherine Barber, Judy Slack and John Dornbush — with 1,905; 1,774; and 1,767 votes, respectively — to three-year terms on the Board of Education. Voters also approved a proposition to purchase 10 new school buses.

• Representatives of the Guiderland Chamber of Commerce helped officially open the nation's largest Wal-Mart on Wednesday, May 21, at Crossgates Commons.

• At its meeting on Tuesday, May 27, the Guiderland Board of Education unanimously approved the appointment of Demian Singleton to the position of assistant superintendent for instruction. Singleton succeeded Nancy Andress, who retired from the district in August.

Singleton has been with the Guiderland Central School District since 1996, serving most recently as the instructional supervisor for mathematics and science at Farnsworth Middle School.

June

• The Guiderland Town Board voted along party lines to name Carol Lawlor the town's new police chief to a standing-room crowd that filled Town Hall Tuesday, June 2. Three days later, she took the oath to officially become chief.

A 29-year veteran who was the town's deputy chief, Lawlor had the support of the roaring crowd as the final vote of 3 to 2 secured her place as New York's 10th female police chief.

• Radon testing was conducted at Guiderland High School as part of a routine air-quality check in accordance with the Guiderland Central School District's health and safety program. Results of that assessment showed some limited areas of Guiderland High School tested above the Environmental Protection Agency's recommended action guidelines for radon. These areas included the media office, auditorium, east-gym, wrestling room, coaches' room and a few science classrooms.

• Visitors to the National Museum of Health and Medicine in Washington, D.C., saw history come alive when Joan Harrison of Colonie and Rachel Lee of Voorheesville presented an exhibit Wednesday, June 18.

Those two history scholars from Christ the King School in Guiderland presented their work reflecting this year's National History Day theme "Conflict and Compromise."

• Legislators, residents and county officials discussed a two-year construction project that would bring a roundabout to the intersection of Fuller Road and the Washington Avenue Extension.

The public information meeting held June 26 focused on two separate plans to improve traffic conditions. The first plan is the potential construction of the roundabout at the intersection. The second plan is a "corridor project" that would extend from Western Avenue to Central Avenue.

IN BRIEF

New Netherland exhibit opens

A traveling exhibition about New Netherland, the 17th century Dutch province that stretched from modern-day Albany to parts of Delaware; New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Connecticut, opened at the New York State Museum on Friday, Dec. 12.

"Light on New Netherland," open through Feb. 8 in the museum's Terrace Gallery, provides insight into the role the Dutch played in the settlement and development of colonial America. Based on original Dutch documents in the collections of the New York State Library and State Archives, the exhibition traces the history of the Dutch in New Netherland, beginning with Henry Hudson's exploration in 1609.

Located on Madison Avenue in Albany, the Museum is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free. For information, call 474-5877 or visit www.nysm.nysed.gov.

Get fit for life at the Guilderland library

If you're making a New Year's resolution to exercise more and eat better, then the Guilderland Public Library has some programs just for you.

Fit for Life is a national, library-based program for people of all ages – babies to seniors – that promotes healthy lifestyles. Because total health requires a fit brain and a fit body, the program emphasizes the value of activities that help develop both.

At the Guilderland Public Library, we're committed to providing you with materials, programs (some new, some tried and true), and events designed to stimulate both your body and your brain. Events range from story hours for kids that emphasize movement or imagination, to brain-building gaming for teens, to meditative activities like gardening and yoga for adults.

We're even offering a Crossword Puzzle Challenge series that we hope all members of the family might want to join. We think that you'll find something that will "fit" everyone's interest.

For information and free takeaways on brain and body health, look for the special display near the Library's Adult Reference desk beginning in January.

Got stuff you need to shred?

The Guilderland Library Foundation is taking a new approach to paper: It's going to help you shred it.

The library is hosting "Shred-Days" so you can bring in those old checking account statements, tax documents, credit card solicitations (which can be used to fraudulently open a new account in your name), and other documents that you want to get rid of but can't just put in the recycling pile.

We're having two days in January when you can bring your private papers to the Library and shred them with our industrial-strength shredder. "Shreddy," as we call it, will be at your service on Saturday, Jan. 17, from 10 a.m. to noon, and on Tuesday, Jan. 27, from 6 to 8 p.m. Stand there and shred it yourself, or give it to one of our volunteers. Whatever you bring is going to get cross-cut and recycled.

All the foundation asks is a donation. Just $3 a vertical inch is the suggested donation. Sound like a lot? It's not when you consider the safety and timesaving this service gives you. And your donation supports many special Library programs unfunded by taxpayer dollars.

Call the foundation at 456-2400 ext. 50 for information.

development and growth until the year 2020.

• Bethlehem Central District officials named longtime teacher Dianna Reagan as the principal of Eagle Elementary, the district's newest elementary school still under construction off Van Dyke Road.

• After 20 years of serving Delmar with kitchen, craft and candle accouterments, the Little Country Store closed its doors for good on Saturday, Jan. 26.

February

• Keystone Builders unveiled plans to transform the long-standing Verstandig's Florist at 445 Delaware Ave. into nine two-story buildings with 40 condominiums.

Keystone founder Steve Bolduc presented architectural drawings and artistic renderings of the proposed five-acre lot on Feb. 5. Owner Robert Verstandig said he would sell the property to Keystone Builders pending planning approval from the town.

• Marking the one-year anniversary of Jonathan Carey's death, his parents, Michael and Lisa Carey, held a press conference on Friday, Feb. 15, and called on the governor and the state Legislature to toughen Jonathan's Law and make children's medical records more accessible.

Carey was an autistic 13-year-old who died while in the care of two O.D. Heck employees.

• A house fire at 775 River Road claimed the lives of Robert Newberry, 61, and Susan Newberry, 60. The deaths were ruled accidental, according to police, and apparently caused by smoking materials.

Bethlehem police discovered the bodies after area firefighters battled the intense blaze for about two hours. A series of explosions caused by oxygen tanks occurred as fire crews arrived on the scene.

"There were about five explosions when I pulled up," said Selkirk Fire Chief William Borger. "It took an hour to extinguish the flames and then another hour before it was completely out."

• New York Department of Environmental Conservation spokeswoman Maureen Wren announced three separate investigations into incidents at Bethlehem's New Salem Road water plant involving the release of mercury and petroleum, as well as other violations.

Bethlehem's water supply was tested by the state and the town and found to be clear of contaminants from spills at the town water plant in New Scotland.

• Daniel Pickett, a Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk social studies teacher, sued three of his colleagues for $11 million, claiming that school officials and a teacher conspired to get him fired and had ruined his reputation.

He was accused at one time of having "an inappropriate relationship with a female student" but was later cleared of any such relationship. The district apologized and reached an undisclosed settlement with Pickett in October.

March

• Local residents and politicians across New York react to the news of Gov. Eliot Spitzer's downfall in a prostitution scandal.

"I think there is a feeling of relief. ... It was obvious Gov. Spitzer lost the moral high ground, and I think he did the right thing stepping down," said Assemblyman Jack McEneny, D-Albany.

• The Bethlehem School District approved its 2008-09 budget for voters in May. School officials said the proposed budget contained a tax rate increase of 4.14 percent in Bethlehem and 5.24 percent in New Scotland.

The board also OK'd a nearly $1.36 million bus proposition to purchase 18 new buses. The previous bus proposition in 2006 was voted down.

• The Bethlehem Town Board heard an update on the Vista Technology Park from developers who had revised the original design to include condominiums, as well as plans to reroute road access and decrease the amount of retail space in the park.

Two major tenants were also announced.

A BBL Development Group representative brought the updated proposal before the board at its Wednesday, March 25, meeting. The $200 million, 400-acre technology park proposal calls for 1.4 million square feet of office space, and developers said it could bring up to 5,000 employees to the area.

• Bethlehem Central School District announces the appointment of Michael Tebbano, who was the district's assistant superintendent, to replace outgoing Superintendent Les Loomis, who retired after more than 20 years at the head of the school.

• Independence Party Councilman Sam Messina made a proposal in early March to create guidelines for the way the town advertises and appoints non-civil service people to various boards and committees not deemed competitive by the state.

His proposal was voted down 4-to-1 at the Wednesday, March 26, town board meeting, with him casting the only vote in its favor.

The town board makes appointments once a position opens up or a term ends and those interested in a particular committee or board send a letter of interest to the supervisor.

"The people working in the town are very good people ... but political parties should not control these appointments," Messina cited as his reason for drawing up the proposal. "There shouldn't be six Democratic committee members out of eight applications for a zoning board seat."

April

• The 20th annual Delmar Dash, which is 5-mile run, was held Sunday, April 6.

Chuck Terry of Albany handily won the men's race, coming in at 25:48 and besting second-place finisher Tom Grady by more than a minute. Voorheesville's Dana Peterson won the overall women's race by crossing the finishing line at 31:17.

The Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce's coveted Chamber Pot award changed hands for the third year in a row, with SABIC Innovative Plastics' team beating Matchless Stove and Chimney's team for the best race time.

• Alteri's restaurant owner Harvey Quinn said his business was singled out along busy Route 9W in Glenmont for having a lunch buffet banner outside. Scheduled for a jury trial on Wednesday, May 14, he said he could face up to a year and a half in jail for his violation of the town's zoning code.

The town responded that Quinn was given multiple opportunities to clear up the matter and that he was the one who requested the jury trial. Officials said banners are illegal in town without a variance, and Quinn was cited for being in violation.

• Richard G. Bleezarde, 56, a third-generation newspaperman, died Tuesday, April 15, at the Hospice Inn in St. Peter's Hospital.

Raised in Ravena, he was the son of the late George and Beatrice Bleezarde and was the publisher and owner of the Ravena News-Herald, Greenville Local, Coxsackie-Athens Courier and the Mid-Hudson Valley Health.

• The planning board heard a plan to build a small subdivision next to a state preservation landmark at the Tuesday, April 15, meeting.

Carol Richards proposed to divide her property off Fisher Boulevard into seven lots next to the Five Rivers Environmental and Education Center. As part of the plan, she proposed selling a portion of deed-restricted property to the Open Space Institute, which would be transferred to the state's DEC and become a part of Five Rivers.

• Bethlehem Central School District announced that the projected tax rate increase in its proposed budget went from 4.14 percent to 3.79 percent for Bethlehem residents and would be lowered from 5.24 percent to 4.24 percent for New Scotland residents.

Assemblyman Tim Gordon, I-Bethlehem, secured an unrestricted $500,000 for the district from the state budget, which was supported by Sen. Neil Breslin, D-Delmar, and subsequently passed in the finalized state budget in April. The funding in turn lowered the original projected tax rate increase.

• The second Capt. Timothy J. Moshier Memorial 5K Run/Walk was held Saturday, April 25, at the Bethlehem Middle School. Moshier died while serving in Iraq two years prior to the event when his Apache helicopter was shot down. He was a Bethlehem graduate and his widow, Katie, helped organize the event and attended with their daughter, Natalie.

May

• The Bethlehem Board of Education addressed the district's guidelines pertaining to its athletics program following a controversy involving student athletes being cut from teams for missing practices.

The resolution wasn't officially adopted until a later meeting, but a framework resolution was accepted by the school board during its Wednesday, May 7, meeting. The situation came to light after students said they were forced to choose between season-beginning practices and a missionary trip to help Hurricane Katrina victims during spring break. The students who chose to go to New Orleans instead of practicing said they were cut from the team.

• Nearly 100 residents filled Town Hall on Thursday, May 15, to get their first say on the town's ongoing endeavor to create an open space plan.

Landowners, businesspeople, residents, park enthusiasts, planners and developers, along with members of the town board and the Citizens Advisory Committee on Conservation, all sat down and discussed the town's future.

• The town board unanimously decided Wednesday, May 14, to enter an agreement with the state Department of Environmental Conservation to grant fishing on town parcels along the Onesquethaw Creek.

• Both the Bethlehem School District and the Bethlehem Public Library budgets safely pass, as well as a $1.35 million bus proposition for the school district to buy 18 new buses. Three board of education members and two library trustees were also elected, although the races were not contested.

Residents passed the nearly $84.8 million school district budget with 58.26 percent of the vote, netting a total of 2,237 votes in favor. There were 1,603 votes (41.71 percent) in total cast against the 2008-09 budget, which constitutes a $6.03 million spending increase over last year's budget of $78.7 million.

Incumbent James Dering, the current board of education's vice president, received 2,818 votes, and board newcomers Matt Downey and Laura

Ladd Bier-

man received

final tallies of

2,775 and 2,747

votes, respectively. Downey

and Bierman

replaced outgoing board members

Robin Storey

and Warren Stoker,

each a member

since 1999, and each decided not to seek re-election.

• The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk School District passed a $41.9 million 2008-2009 budget by a vote of 726 to 551. There are four board of education members elected: Mike Robbins, 732 votes; Rosemary Puckett, 728 votes; Christopher Pennock, 719 votes; and Kathleen Emory, 605 votes.

• A Town Hall meeting on Thursday, May 29, was led by a task force of residents, town officials, police and code-enforcement officers, as dozens of residents listened and gave feedback on the details of a possible town noise ordinance. Only two residents who attended the meeting said they were opposed to the town adopting a new noise law.

The town created the Noise Ordinance Task Force on Sept. 9, 2007, to complete an overview of the community's needs, to research the different aspects of a possible noise ordinance, and then, after public review, provide the Town Board with a proposed draft noise ordinance.

June

• The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Board of Education appointed longtime Capital District school administrator Michael Johnson as its interim superintendent on Monday, June 2.

Johnson succeeded Vicki Wright.

• The state's inspector general released a scathing 244-page report, criticizing the way the state's Commission on Quality of Care and Advocacy for Persons with Disabilities and the Office of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities handled claims of abuse involving Jonathan Carey.

Carey, who was 13 and autistic, died while in the care of O.D. Heck center employees in 2007. His death ultimately led to legislation called "Jonathan's Law," which opens up records regarding the disabled, such as abuse complaints, that were previously withheld from family members.

• Saying he was "fighting to just survive," Glenmont Alteri's owner Harvey Quinn goes to trial over what he called unjust regulations stopping him from having a banner at his business. If he lost the case, he said, he could be facing six months to a year and a half in jail.

Quinn's Albany attorney William Ryan has a conference with the town justice and a town attorney and gets a "concession on record of the court," that Quinn will receive no jail time.

Because of the case, the town board voted unanimously during its meeting Wednesday, June 11, to amend the fees portion of Section 128 of the Bethlehem zoning code and reduce its maximum penalty from six months in jail to 15 days in jail and/or a $350 fine per violation.

The reason the town decided to change the code, according to Town Attorney James Potter, is because Quinn's trial brought the stiff penalty to light.

• The Department of Environmental Conservation fines Bethlehem $15,000 for "mercury and petroleum reporting and handling violations" that occurred over the past two years. Supervisor Jack Cunningham said the town only consented to the fine because it couldn't prove that less than a pound of mercury had been discharged in a single spill at its water plant.

By paying the $15,000 and remaining compliant, the town does not have to pay an additional $60,000 civil penalty to the DEC, according to the state's signed consent order, which stated the fine could have totaled $75,000.

The town agreed to replace all of its outdated mercury flow meters as part of the signed consent order.

• Bethlehem Town Court clerk Barbara J. Hodom, who has lived in Slingerlands since 1965, retired.

• Residents in the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk School District approved a $403,427 referendum on Tuesday, June 17, to borrow funds and purchase four new buses for the district. Voter turnout was low, but the proposition passed by a vote of 140 to 69.

• In a unanimous decision, the Bethlehem Town Board appointed Patricia Parsons its new court clerk during its Wednesday, June 25, meeting.

• Following an executive session held by the Bethlehem Board of Education at 8:15 in the morning on Thursday, June 26, the board unanimously approved the Bethlehem Central United Employee Association (BCUEA) contract, effective July 1 until June 30, 2012. It was retiring Superintendent Les Loomis' last official board meeting with the district.

The settlement includes significant employee health insurance concessions that will reduce district expenditures, according to a release from the district, and the new contract contains an average annual overall increase of 2.6 percent plus step increases over the life of the contract.

• The planning board listened to details of the long-anticipated Van Dyke Spinney Development project.

Developers describe the project as "a nice senior citizen community" for "active seniors" and have put an age restriction of 55 on the proposed 220 homes to be built on a 90-acre plot off Van Dyke Road just south of Bethlehem High School.

Van Dyke Spinney developers said it would feature cottage-style housing; a community center with a pool and recreational facilities; a full-time, on-site coordinator; and access to a variety of "social, educational and cultural opportunities," according to the site plan.

R. Mark Dempf, a senior principal with Stantec Consulting, presented the plans to the board on Tuesday, June 17, and said builders hope to have homes ready for occupancy by 2009. The planning board described the occupancy date as "optimistic."

Don't let the financial crisis dampen your holiday mood

By RONALD G. NATHAN
news@spotlightnews.com

The author is a Guilderland psychologist and creator of the self-help CD/download, "Relieving Your Holiday Stress and Achieving Your New Year's Resolutions."

The fallout from the financial crisis is compounding holiday stress and threatens to become the Grinch that stole the holidays. People are depressed and anxious about their finances. The fun of shopping is now eclipsed by frustration, fear and uncertainty.

The holidays have long been seen as stressful. For most of us, the stress of the holidays has come from snarled traffic, crushing crowds, long cashier lines, sold-out toys, tangled strings of broken lights, children screaming, houses not ready for guests, feuding families and other delights of modern life. But today we also face tremendous economic uncertainty, both personally and nationally.

In recent years, it took the average American family five months to pay off the holiday credit card bills. With unemployment on the rise, we now wonder if we will have a job and a paycheck to cover our regular bills. Nationally, we face a bailout burden on top of five years of war debt.

What can we do?

To decrease financial and social stress, it may be a great year to rethink our gift-giving habits and rein in our expectations. Let's focus on families with children first, then on singles.

One Christian couple decided during the early and lean years of their growing family to adopt a three-gift rule. The rule reflected the three gifts the wise men brought to the Christ child. As the children grew older, each child would make a short list of gifts they really wanted. This tradition kept the focus on the holiday they were celebrating.

Another couple with a blended family wanted to emphasize sharing rather than fostering selfishness, so each year they buy a gift everyone can use together, such as a large sleigh, and a few small gifts for each child.

How much is enough when it comes to gifts for children? Research suggests that most children request only three or four of the 11 or 12 gifts they receive during the holidays. This excess raises their expectations and commercializes the holidays.

What if the gift your child wants is beyond your budget? This can be an opportunity to help your child understand the difference between a need and a want. If your child has prayed for the gift, it may be your chance to talk about how an unanswered prayer is usually not a denial, but just a delay. It is also a good time to emphasize the virtues of patience and hope in the face of disappointment.

Make a shopping list and a list of alternatives

Everyone can avoid last-minute panic and impulse purchases that they really can't afford by making a budget and a shopping list at home, away from the seductive displays and carefree carols of the stores. Putting aside some money for the after-holiday sales can also stretch our dollars.

A spirited way of avoiding big bills is to plan inexpensive activities like caroling, reading holiday stories, or volunteering at shelters and hospitals. These can be a cost-containing way to find the joy in giving and to experience what has been called the helper's high. Researchers have found this to be much like the runner's high—a wonderfully relaxing sense of well being.

What about those who cannot afford to travel home this year? The loneliness of being away from family during the holidays can be depressing and can lead to overeating and overdrinking. As Dear Abby wrote, "Loneliness is the ultimate poverty." So, it is best that singles and lonely couples take a risk, find one another and plan get-togethers. For example, they can try organizing an "orphan" party for all the other people who do not have family or friends in the area.

The underlying roots of overspending

For those who felt deprived as children, the inner conflict between budgeting and spending can be emotionally wrenching. We all know logically that expensive gifts won't make others love us or guarantee a happy holiday, but many seek vicarious pleasure from giving children gifts that they never got and social status from giving friends and co-workers big-ticket gifts. On the other hand, for those with holiday memories of dreams come true, recapturing the magic of holidays past can be overwhelmingly expensive.

We may need to ask if our focus on buying and getting is a vain attempt to fill an abiding emptiness that only God can fill. If so, it is important to leave time and energy for spiritual needs. Traditionally, holidays are a time for friends, family and faith.

Getting to the root of dangerous financial temptations can free us from empty glitter and expensive gifts, so we can focus on giving love, teaching love and receiving love. Sounds a lot like the moral of Dr. Seuss' story about the Grinch. So, find ways of fulfilling your deepest needs, watch your heart grow three sizes larger and don't let the financial crisis steal your holiday.

Danielle Cuzdey's World of Dance students could hardly contain their excitement.

They had read that Proctors in Schenectady was hosting the national tour of "The Wizard of Oz," and it was looking for local kids to play Munchkins. The girls told Cuzdey's mom, who was at the front desk at the World of Dance in Colonie, that they would love to try out.

Cuzdey thought it was a great idea. She figured that it would be fun for the girls to have their first audition experience with their friends.

"I said, 'Oh my goodness, let's do it,'" she said.

The tour, which kicked off in October in Florida, was looking for 12 kids from an existing dance, choir or theater group. They had to be between 8 and 13 years old and not taller than 5 feet.

Cuzdey rounded up a dozen dancers who fit the bill, and they headed for Proctors on Nov. 22. There were more than 70 other kids there, so Cuzdey and her students didn't get their hopes up.

"We went into it not expecting anything," Cuzdey said.

But when the auditions were over, the national tour Munchkin coordinator announced the students from the World of Dance were selected to play the Munchkins. They'll share the stage with professional actors at Proctors Friday to Sunday, Dec. 26 to 28.

Cuzdey wasn't the only one surprised that the girls landed this opportunity. Caroline Kindlon of Guilderland, whose daughter, Amy, will be in the show, said she never imagined Amy would have the chance to be part of a national production right here in the Capital District.

"I thought things like this only happened in New York City or California," Kindlon said.

Kindlon's daughter has been dancing since she was 4. Kindlon describes it as a "passion of hers." Amy has been in some dance competitions, which Kindlon reasoned probably helped her battle butterflies during the tryout.

"She has had some experience getting over nerves," Kindlon said.

And besides, "The Wizard of Oz" is one of Amy's favorites.

"This is a movie that she loves," Kindlon said.

As Munchkins, the girls will dance and do some singing, including the show's signature "Ding Dong, the Witch is Dead." Cuzdey has gotten used to hearing her students sing the song even when they're not rehearsing for the show.

"The kids are having a blast," she said. "They're giving me everything they've got."

They even managed to get together for rehearsal when the recent ice storm knocked out power to the dance studio. One of the girl's father's had built a small dance room in the basement of his house, so Cuzdey and the girls worked on their moves there.

Jolie Bell, a fifth-grader at Clarksville Elementary, knows that performing for friends and family is going to be different than dancing in front of thousands at Proctors. A dancer since she was 3, 10-year-old Jolie admitted she's a little nervous — she's never taken the stage at someplace as big as Proctors.

She's excited, though, for the chance to meet Toto after the show, and she's enjoyed working with the professional actors.

"They all have been very nice to us," she said.

In addition to Jolie and Amy, the girls playing Munchkins are Chezmin Sheehan, Hannah Valiquette and Allison Goetz of Clifton Park, Mackenzie Quinn of Guilderland, Brooke Colletti of Ravena, Whitney Wilson of Avon Park, Elizabeth Deyo of Schenectady and Kayleigh McClean, Madison VanCott and Lauren Muia of Colonie.

"The Wizard of Oz" will be held on the Mainstage at Proctors on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 26 and 27, at 2 and 7:30 p.m.; and Sunday, Dec. 28, at 2 p.m. Tickets are $20, $30, $40 and $50. To buy tickets, call Proctors' box office at 346-6204 or visit proctors.org.
