Bethlehem plans for Moe He Con Nuck Preserve along the Hudson in Glenmont

Once upon a time, Mohegan Indians and other natives hunted the land and fished its shores. Now Bethlehem residents can forgo the moccasins and hike, bike and trek their way across parkland in present-day Glenmont with a pair of Nikes.

On Wednesday, March 11, senior landscape architect Kathy Simmons of Clough Harbor and Associates updated the Bethlehem Town Board on transforming what was formerly known as Simmons Road Park into a nature preserve.

The board unanimously named the park, given to the town by the G'land Web wars: Supervisor fears for his safety

Runion says ID was stolen, 'leaning toward' not running for re-election

By DAN SABBATINO

An online political bout has led one Guilderland official to level charges of identity theft as election season nears, saying the events have led him to fear for his family's safety.

Guilderland Town Supervisor Ken Runion said that his name has showed up on "50 or more [Web] sites," and he and his wife are fearful of the implications.

He said people who are not "sophisticated" enough to know he is not responsible for some of the messages on the Internet might act maliciously against him.

"It makes me fear for my own safety," said Runion, a Democrat. Runion also said he is "leaning toward" not running for re-election, citing the distracting nature of a campaign and the potential for more "Web wars," although no decision has been formally announced.

"I'm being bullied and badgered and attacked," he said, referring to a number of Web sites in his and the town's name that call his leadership into question.

Republican Councilman Warren Redlich, sponsors one of those Web sites, www.KenRunion.com. Redlich said he started the site to illuminate what he said was the "truth" about what goes on in the town of Guilderland.

"It's fact backed up with evidence," Redlich said. "[It shows] what he says about [issues] in one place, and what he says about them in another."

Runion, in response, has started the Web site www.TheRealKenRunion.com, which provides his take on town politics. He said he does not often use the Internet, but these are extenuating circumstances.

"I don't normally get involved with the Web. Right now it's just a total distraction, and I've got too many other things to deal with," Runion said.

Other Web sites, such as www.GuilderlandEnterprise.com and www.GuilderlandOnline.com that deal with town issues are also the sources of controversy. Online records show that Runion's name, address and e-mail account were used to create the sites, however, Runion maintains that his identity was illegally used to create them.

Redlich said he suspects Runion is actually the one behind those sites and is "covering his tracks" when it comes to content on the Internet.

Runion said those charges were simply not true.

"Mr. Redlich can say what he wants. The Internet and Web is a strange thing. I'm not going to get into it. I'm concentrating on getting things done for the town," said Runion.

Redlich said that if Runion is concerned that his personal information was used to create the Web sites, he should contact the proper authorities.

Workers to be deported

Guiderland police arrested Jaconi Avelino-Barbosa, 42, and Carlos R. Luiz Dasilva, 37, of 458 Ontario St., in Albany, on charges of violation of immigration, on Tuesday, March 10.

They were arraigned later that day.

The two were arrested after police pulled over a vehicle with no license plate. Avelino-Barbosa and Dasilva were passengers in the vehicle and were arrested on active warrants for deportation.

Both defendants were turned over to the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

Corrections

New Scotland Planning Board chair Bob Stapf's name is misspelled in the story "New Scotland zoning draft unveiled," which appeared in the Wednesday, March 11, issue of the Spotlight Newspaper. It is spelled Staph in that story. The Spotlight regrets the error.

In the article "Liquid deicing company slides over to Selkirk," published last week, The Spotlight identifies 454 River Road as being in Selkirk three different times. That section of River Road runs through the hamlet of Glenmont, not Selkirk. The Spotlight regrets the error.

Reward offered for info about dead dogs

Police have discovered two dead dogs in town, and in less than 24 hours. An award has been offered for information leading to the arrest of those involved.

Bethlehem police officers said two dead beagles were discovered inside of individual plastic bags alongside two different roads in Selkirk. Several individuals and not-for-profits have stepped forward to put up reward money.

"We've gotten a lot of calls over the weekend, and we are currently following up on a number of leads, but no arrests have been made yet," Lt. Thomas Hefferan said Monday, March 16.

There is a $7,500 award being offered for "information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the death of the two beagle dogs," according to the award notice.

Police said investigators, along with the Bethlehem Animal Control officer, are currently investigating the case as two animal cruelty incidents after an examination revealed that the animals were kicked to death before being left on the side of the road.

Because of the condition of the two bodies, Hefferan said, it is believed that they were left at two different times.

"As employees of the town's highway department were removing debris located alongside the roadway they found two plastic bags, one black and one blue, which had dead dogs in them," according to a release from Bethlehem police.

"The dogs are both described as beagles, one being a white and brown female and the second a tri-colored male."

One of the dogs was transported to the Five Rivers Environmental and Education Center in New Scotland to be examined by the state's Department of Environmental Conservation Wildlife Pathologist, Ward Stone.

Police said Stone determined the trauma that caused the death of the beagle was "consistent with the dog being kicked to death."

Stone told The Spotlight that the beagle he examined found to have abdominal trauma and heavy internal hemorrhaging, but that there were no broken bones. He also said the dog wasn't along the road for very long and that it was fed before it was killed.

"It wasn't long, it had just consumed some kibble shortly before death, and it was still wet and undigested," he said. "It was fed and died shortly thereafter."

Stone added that the dog's body was not frozen and that he did not examine the second dog that was found in the same area of Clapper and Weisheit roads in Selkirk. He said the dog appeared to be well taken care of before its death, describing it as a little "chubby."

Bethlehem police are asking anyone with information about the incidents to contact the police department at 439-9973, as the case is still ongoing.

STATE OF THE COUNTY ADDRESS

County commits to keeping services

Bethlehem braces for sales tax shortfalls and promotes economic growth

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Maintaining services while sales tax revenues continue to plunge may seem like a recipe for disaster for the taxpaying resident, but local officials say they are prepared for the worst as Albany County weathers the economic storm.

Albany County Executive Mike Breslin delivered his annual State of the County Address on Monday, March 9, to the county's legislature and said he is committed to maintaining services for the elderly and disabled and is actively perusing alternative options for nursing homes.

"We need to offer alternatives to going directly to medical care facilities ... not only because it's good for the taxpayers but because it's the right thing to do," Breslin said. "Many of these people want to stay in their homes."

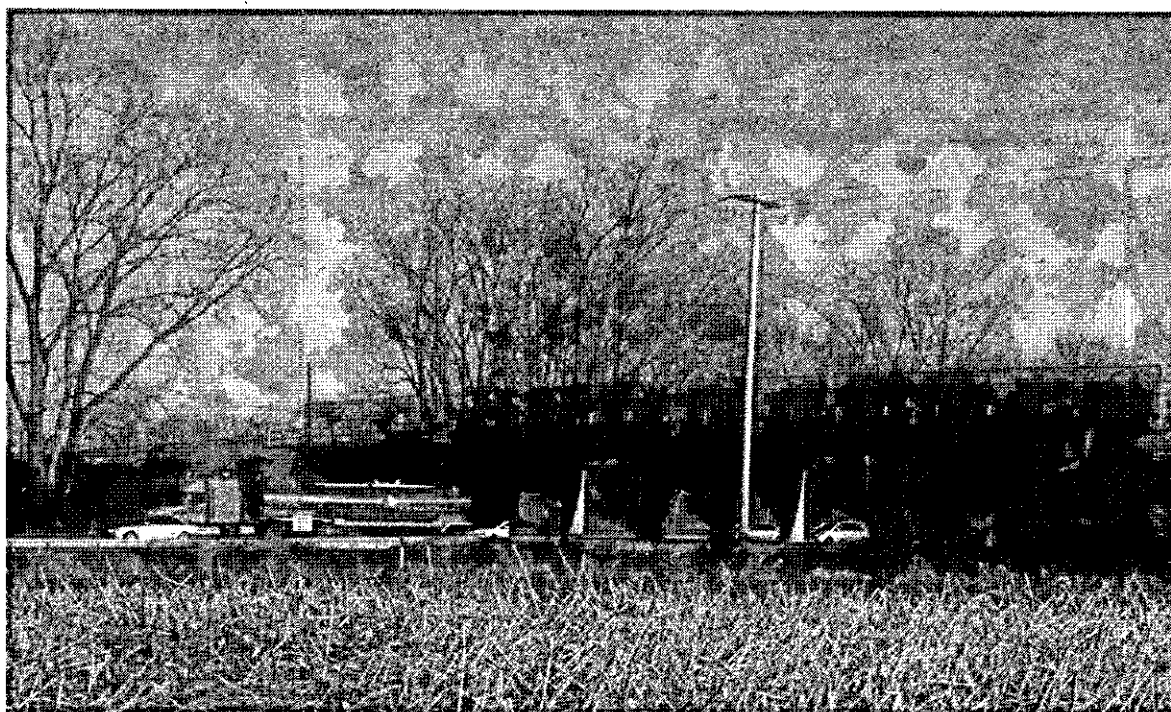

However, it won't be easy as the economy continues its current downward spiral.

"There are a lot of things closing in on us and the state budget hits us pretty hard," he said. "I anticipate when unemployment insurance runs out there will be an increased need for our services."

Sales tax revenues have declined as residents and visitors alike are saving more and spending less, but Breslin said there is absolutely no discussion on raising the current 8 percent Albany County sales tax.

He said his focus is not only keeping jobs in the area but to bring in more jobs, which will allow people to keep spending and be less reliant on government assistance.

Breslin said that the Hudson River and the CSX rail yards are underutilized and that some businesses are beginning to take advantage of the cheap and convenient transportation systems

This Creble Road bridge is one of the possibilities for Bethlehem to connect its industrial section to the state Thruway in a bid to promote economic development and improve its overall fiscal health in years to come. The town is in talks to either turn the bridge into an E-ZPass only interchange or build a full toll booth interchange up the road.

Jarrett Carroll/Spotlight

Albany has to offer.

"We're going to continue our economic development and create jobs," said Breslin.

The Town of Bethlehem has been actively pursuing options to connect the town's industrial yards in Selkirk to the state Thruway system, which in effect could interconnect CSX, the Port of Albany and the Thruway with prime warehouse and light manufacturing real estate.

The plan first began in earnest in 1989 and calls for building a new Thruway interchange and possible a new road in the Clapper Road vicinity in Selkirk. Local residents living in the area have been vocal in their criticism of the project but the town's planning department says there is huge economic development potential for the area if it is realized.

"We're also working on other alternatives to keep people out of jail," Breslin said, adding that it costs taxpayers between $45,000 and $65,000 to keep one person in the Albany County Correctional Facility for a single year.

Using programs and counseling, Breslin said individuals can remain productive members of the community and that such social programs are less costly than incarceration.

"It's dramatically less expensive," he emphasized.

Breslin also talked about the proposed rail trail from Voorheesville to Albany during his speech, which he told The Spotlight would make the area a more desirable location and could even help cut back on commuter traffic as well as provide a healthy recreational option to local families.

Bethlehem Supervisor Jack Cunningham said he has been a huge support of the proposed rail trail since his days as Delmar's Albany County Legislator.

"I'm excited about the rail trail," he said. "In general the business community is in support of it."

Cunningham said people using the trail would frequent the local businesses along the proposed site and that he has even heard talks of new businesses coming in, such as a roller blade rental company is expressing interest if the trail is built.

Breslin said the county is currently conducting an environmental review of the former railroad and inspecting eight bridges that are along the path.

On the local level, Cunningham said the shortfall of sales tax revenue has forced the town to cut back on its expenditures.

Bethlehem had originally estimated receiving $10.3 million in sales tax revenue for the fiscal year, but Cunningham said the town might only realize a little over $9 million of this money. The first quarter sales tax revenues will be available by mid-April.

"We've looked for areas where we can cut back," he said, adding the town already instituted $600,000 in reduced expenses. "We're not

G'land adjusts for decrease in revenue

Guilford Town Supervisor Ken Runion said Guilford is preparing for the worst when it comes to a decline in sales tax revenue that was mentioned in the State of the County Address and has budgeted $350,000 in cuts to compensate.

"I needed to make up about 4 percent," Runion said.

Runion said sales tax is the only financial help Guilford receives from the county, and the fact that town governments are not allowed to borrow money to get out of debt provides a difficult situation for the town.

Runion said sales tax revenue projections specifically began to decline after the town adopted its budget. Runion said from November, when the budget was adopted, to July, was the biggest decline.

"It was precipitous. It was unexpected," Runion said.

going to add an additional police officer in June and we had a [police] vacancy that we're not going to fill."

Cunningham said the town also instituted a voluntary worker reduction program and found other ways to save money.

"We based our fuel budget on $4 a gallon gas, so we were able to make a significant reduction there," said Cunningham, who added that computerized automation and an adjustment in pool hours helped realize significant savings, too.

"It's going to be a lean year," Cunningham warned. "We've been telling all of our departments, don't spend money if you don't have to."

Bethlehem Public Library to receive state funds

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

A local state legislator has helped the Bethlehem Public Library move forward with its upgrades and renovations during a time when libraries are being hit hard by a bad economy and increased use.

Assemblyman Tim Gordon, I-Bethlehem, announced Wednesday, March 11, that the Bethlehem Public Library is one of several regional libraries that will receive state grants for construction and expansion projects.

Gordon said the funding for these grants was appropriated in last year's state budget.

Bethlehem Public Library will receive $42,796 for expansion and reconstruction of the existing parking lot; a new covered shelter for passenger drop-off and pickup; and new walkways and crosswalks from the parking lot to the library building.

"We are very grateful for the help we are receiving," Bethlehem Public Library Director Nancy Pieri said in a release. "This assistance will allow for necessary improvements to be made at the library so that we may continue providing quality services for the community."

Gordon said there were 181 grants given to libraries throughout New York and that he is happy to be able to bring one home for his constituents that use his hometown library.

"I was really pleased ... and I appreciate the way the state handled this," Gordon said. "The libraries are currently experiencing a spike in usage for a number of reasons."

On the same day, March 11, the New York Library Association (NYLA) held its annual Library Lobby Day at the state capitol in Albany.

The event brought more than 1,000 librarians, trustees and library patrons who all asked the Legislature to restore the governor's proposed $18 million, or 18 percent, cut in library aid. The day included a breakfast reception for legislators and library leaders and was followed with library advocates meeting with legislators and their staffs in their offices.

"During tough economic times, you should not cut funding for public services that are in the greatest demand or can do the most good, and libraries helping people find jobs, start new careers or access public assistance programs fit into that category," NYLA Executive Director Michael J. Borges said in a release.

State Sen. Suzi Oppenheimer, D-Mamaroneck, chairwoman of the Senate Education Committee, told the attending crowd the cuts were on the way to being restored.

"I can tell you that the Senate Democratic Conference met last night, and we are going to restore the $18 million cuts back into the budget," Oppenheimer said. "There is probably not a single line item in the budget more important to me than libraries."

Assemblywoman Amy Paulin, D-Scarsdale, said there is support for libraries in the Assembly majority.

"There has been great support in the Assembly for full restoration for your services," said Paulin. "Together we will work to ensure libraries get what you need to ensure the important services you provide."

In a non-partisan effort, Sen. Hugh Farley, R-Niskayuna, said libraries are more important than politics.

"There are 30 votes in my conference to restore the $18 million," Farley said. "Libraries are non-partisan, it doesn't matter if you are a Democrat or Republican but you have to support libraries."

Bowled over by weeklong pajama party

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

It's time to eat again, I said to myself. I sauntered from the den into the kitchen and glanced up at the clock. It was about four in the afternoon, and I was still in my pajamas. This will be "early dinner" I said aloud to no one as I pulled leftover meatloaf out of the refrigerator, heated up a slice and sat down at the table.

The phone rang. It was my husband checking in from Jiminy Peak, where he and my daughter were skiing with friends.

"We're taking a hot chocolate break," Jeff told me.

"How are the conditions?" I asked.

"It's sunny and there's snow," he said.

"Well, I guess it would be important to have snow. Have fun!" I responded cheerily. I was eager to get back to the meatloaf while it was still warm.

When the plate was empty, I decided that this meal had been more like a snack. I thought ahead to what I might have for my "late dinner." Jeff and Rachel would be grabbing a bite out, so I only had me to worry about. As I shuffled back to the den, my feet warm in their fuzzy pink slippers, I thought to myself: This has been a great vacation week.

In less than a month the April school break will arrive. Many families have already booked vacations and will be traveling to warmer climates, historical landmarks, and to the homes of friends and family. Others may still be wondering how to spend the week. If your plans aren't settled, I highly recommend doing what our family did during the February school break: Stay local and unwind.

Commentary:

From

I had a very relaxing mid-winter vacation. There was no packing. There were no early morning flights. There was no running through airport terminals. There was no living out of suitcases.

Of course, there was also no 80-degree weather, swimming, sunning on the beach, or nighttime outdoor walks in shorts and T-shirts.

It was freezing outside, below freezing actually, so I spent my time indoors. And I'm not ashamed to admit that I really enjoyed the extra time I spent in my pajamas, especially those lazy mornings where I slept in, had a late breakfast and then read the newspaper at a leisurely pace. I had no appointments, no deadlines, no obligations.

It wasn't like I sat around in my pajamas and ate the whole thing. I went to the gym every single weekday. I took two Zumba dance classes, two step-aerobics classes, and one modern-movement class. And here's what I discovered: exercising when I'm not completely exhausted is really fun.

In addition to those five trips to the gym, I also watched three movies at home, enjoyed two extended stays at the library, finished a book, saw a movie at a theater (and even splurged on popcorn), and went out to dinner twice. I also saw live theater in Albany and spent an entire day dancing at the annual Dance Flurry in Saratoga.

If given a choice, my 12-year-old daughter would have opted for our usual trip to Florida, where for the past several years we have spent part of the week visiting family and a few days at a hotel on the beach. So Jeff and I made sure that our home-based vacation would include activities that Rachel likes, including sleepovers, a trip to the mall, and going to the movies.

And then I got an idea about going bowling. Jeff went off to play racquetball, so Rachel and I were having a girls' night. I figured we'd spend an hour or so at the gym in the late afternoon and then head over to the alley for pizza and a couple of games. Then I found out that open bowling didn't start until 9 o'clock, which is about the time my pajamas would be calling to me.

"Change of plans," I told my kid. "After the gym we'll go out to dinner and then spend time at the library."

In the back of my mind, though, the option to go bowling remained a possibility. It all depended on my ability to stay awake.

While we were at the library I decided that we would indeed go bowling. At one end of the building Rachel was curled up in an armchair engrossed in a novel. At the other end I browsed through the shelves and then settled into a seat with a selection of books and magazines. My daughter and I could easily read until closing time, at which time open bowling would just be starting.

And so we went night bowling. And I must say that night bowling rocks. This is coming from someone who doesn't love to bowl. But my decision to head to the alley instead of to my jammies wasn't based on my desire to bowl. It was based on my desire to do something different. We were on vacation and vacation is the time to stay up late and do things that you don't normally do.

Our lane was nearly in the middle of the alley, right above which was a screen playing music videos: Nancy Sinatra singing "These Boots were Made for Walking;" Michael Jackson singing "Bad;" and later, they played the Cha Cha Slide, by some guy whose name I don't know. I took a chance on late night bowling (late night for me) and I got a dance party in the bargain. Of course, the best I could tell the only people dancing were the cute 4-year-old girl in the next lane and me. Rachel did a few rounds of "Cotton Eye Joe," but otherwise just ignored me.

Jeff joined us for bowling. He had just gotten home from racquetball when I called him from the library to say, "We're going bowling, want to come?" If I were him I would have said: "Bowling? It's nearly 9 o'clock at night, it's snowing, and you don't even like to bowl." But he's not me. So he said, "Sure, I'll meet you there."

After late night bowling and dancing, I had to snooze even longer than usual the next morning. When Jeff and Rachel left to catch a movie, I spent a few hours working on clutter removal. Ugh, what was I thinking? A few days later while they were off skiing, I slipped back into lazy-vacation mode, marked by my all-day-in-pajamas fest, my meatloaf snack, and a bowl of cereal for dinner, consumed while watching a British comedy on PBS.

I didn't get away from the cold weather during February school break, but I did enjoy a restful escape from the daily grind.

Albany County Legislature passes drug card plan

Bids now sought from companies willing to provide prescription cost relief

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

The Albany County Legislature unanimously passed a bill on Monday, March 9, that could save taxpayers up to 50 percent on prescription drugs.

Shawn Morse, D-Cohoes, one of the bill's sponsors, said the measure will provide some financial relief to Albany residents and has received great enthusiasm from residents and legislators.

"This is going to save a lot of people money," Morse said.

The plan will provide a free drug card to all residents.

County Executive Mike Breslin now will open up the floor to potential pharmacies to bid for the contract to provide the discounted card to Albany residents.

Kerry Battle, spokeswoman for the county executive's office, said the process for the bidding will begin after the executive's office and the purchasing agent get more information.

She said in 2006 attempts to solicit bids from drug companies did not yield any results, and this time around the county is hoping for more success.

"We are going to see how we can apply [the law] to be a positive service in Albany County," Battle said.

Schenectady County recently made a similar agreement with ProAct to provide a discounted prescription drug card to residents. With the card, those living in Schenectady County can receive anywhere from 10 percent to 50 percent off of medicines.

The Albany County Legislature's agreement will feature discounts of 10 to 20 percent on brand-name drugs and 40 to 50 percent on generic drugs.

Battle said Albany County will reach out to Schenectady County to learn about how they solicited bids and started the program.

Delmar Dash registration under way

Organizers are now accepting registration applications for the 21st Annual Delmar Dash, set for Sunday, April 5, at 9 a.m. at Bethlehem Middle School.

The Hudson Mohawk Road Runners Club event will feature a 5-mile run for adults as well as children's races and the Chamber Pot race. The race is sponsored by Bryant Asset Protection, with Spotlight Newspapers sponsoring the Spotlight on Youth Kids' Races.

Applications can be found on the HMRRC Web site, www.hmrrc.com. Technical T-shirts will be given to the first 400 pre-registered applicants. Pre-registration costs $15 for HMRRC members, $18 for nonmembers. Anyone who registers on the day of the race will have to pay $25.

Day of the race registration will take place at the school between 7:30 and 8:45 a.m.

The 5-mile race will start at the middle school and go onto Kenwood Avenue and wrap around residential roads before returning to the school.

The youth races are for children 12 and under and are divided into distances of one mile, one-half mile and one-quarter mile, costing $5, $3 and $3, respectively.

The race will be held from 9 until 11 a.m. and the course is described as "fast, mostly flat."

Organizers will be collecting non-perishable food items the day of the race inside of the middle school gymnasium. Donations will be given to the Bethlehem Food Pantry.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

Oh, what a tangled web ...

This week, The Spotlight brings you the news that Guilderland Town Supervisor Ken Runion says he is being "bullied and badgered and attacked" as a result of Web sites dedicated to scrutinizing his tenure in office (Web wars, page one of this edition or online at www.spotlightnews.com).

Runion said that his name has shown up on "50 or more [Web] sites," and he and his wife are fearful of the implications. He said people who are not "sophisticated" enough to know he is not responsible for some of the messages on the Internet might act maliciously against him.

The kicker: Though at least one Web site was established by one of Runion's political adversaries, Republican Councilman Warren Redlich, a check of the domain registries of a few more shows that they were established using Democrat Runion's personal information — his name, address, personal e-mail account and the like.

Runion says his identity was stolen. Redlich's response: Call the feds.

Disgusted yet? We are.

In January, at the Golden Globes awards in California, comedic actress Tina Fey addressed her online critics with a somewhat derogatory speech, the culmination of which was a two-word command that will not be reprinted here. Ken Runion is not Tina Fey. He is paid considerably less for doing considerably more important work.

At his level — the level where decisions made on things like zoning, property taxes and local laws hit you, our readers, hardest and quickest — there are more important things to worry about than what is posted about you on the Internet.

If Runion's personal information was used without his knowledge to start these sites, then there should be an investigation into whom the guilty party is and what sort of repercussion that person should face. If Runion started these sites himself, as Redlich insinuates, then so be it. If that should be the case, then let the public be the jury on a man who feels the need to promote himself by framing his opponents.

In any case, you shouldn't need a scorecard to tell the "good" politicians from the "bad." Both parties need to move beyond what mud is being thrown in the virtual world and get down to governing the real one.

Editorial

Farewell, and happy trails

By BILL GIERING

news@spotlightnews.com

The author has written the Travel Guy column for The Spotlight for a number of years.

With so many changes in the publishing business, you never know which will be your last column. With that in mind, I wanted to leave you with the answer to a question I have been asked many times: "Of all the places you have been what is your favorite vacation spot?"

For me, each and every destination has its own strengths and weaknesses — much like your family and friends — but if forced to choose, here are a few.

Trip of a lifetime

Hawaii's Big Island is a fantasy come true. Pictures you have seen only on TV and on posters are suddenly right in front of you but scented with fresh flowers on a warm breeze with the sound of rustling palms. It takes days to stop smiling and pinching yourself to finally let it sink in that you are really in Hawaii.

It's a big trip, and after you have landed and are zipping down the Queen Kaahumanu Highway, vast fields of stark black lava on both sides stretching as far as you can see, you might start to wonder, "What am I doing?"

Then you take a turn off the highway leading to one of the posh resorts along the Kohala Coast. You come to Kona Village Resort, the closest thing you'll find to artist Gauguin's tropical retreat with thatched-roof bungalows; the luxurious Four Seasons Resort Hualalai; Mauna Lani, built around 15 acres of ancient fish ponds, a true-blue haven fringed by pearl-white beaches; and Mauna Kea Beach Hotel, which recently completed a $150 million renovation. Or perhaps you'll check into the Waikoloa Beach Resort, one big Kahuna, occupying 1,350 acres with two hotels and two golf courses.

It's then, as you settle in to your room, catch the views of the sea and the volcanoes looming in the distance and the orchids, which are everywhere, that you will know why you flew so far across country and ocean to get there.

Resort life thrives on the sunny Kohala Coast, and golf is a huge attraction, with more than 20 courses including Mauna Kea, Hualalai, Waikoloa's Beach and Hapuna, characterized by a rolling, bluff-like terrain, and Mauna Lani's Francis H. I'i Brown North and South Golf Course atop an ancient lava flow. Characterized by neverending sea views, deeply lush green fairways, slick greens and fairways defined by diabolical jagged black lava rock, the Kohala Coast is a golfer's paradise.

If I had to pick one, I would choose Waikoloa, a kind of Disneyland for grown ups. The resort even has boats that bring you to your room. Experience memorable golf and tennis, swim with the dolphins and dine in wonderful restaurants. Take the spectacular $7 million dollar historical art walk, and in the evening, let the warm breezes and sound of gently swaying palms lull you to sleep. These memories will continue to bring a smile and calming afterglow — maybe forever. Visit www.gohawaii.com for more information.

Romantic getaway of a lifetime

If you had unlimited wealth and could pick anywhere in the world for a romantic getaway, where would you go? What if you were Tiger Woods and wanted to pick a spot for your wedding and honeymoon?

Recently, I visited the site of the Woods' wedding: Sandy Lane Resort in Barbados. Think Four Seasons, and go up a few notches.

The famous couple tied the knot on the patio of the clubhouse overlooking the golf courses. The wedding party took over the entire resort, where rooms and suites in high season run $1,400 to $5,200. Guests can enjoy the luxurious spa where they could get massages for two.

For a smaller, more personal hidden treat, I tried the Treasure Beach Hotel. With just 35 rooms, it is perfect for two. Suites have balconies or patios overlooking the ocean and gardens, and guests have a choice of a lovely pool or fine beach just steps away. Treasure Beach has all the amenities you expect of a plush hotel plus personal friendly service honed under the expert management of Hamish Watson, who may run the best small hotel on the island. Go to www.treasurebeachhotel.com for information.

Barbados will stimulate your five senses, building sensual memories for a life-time.

Imagine cliff-hanging open-air restaurants like Champers, the Cliff and Zen, where ocean waves wash and crash onto the shore just below, and picnics on white sandy beaches like Smith Cove. Be sure to include Sunday brunch at Fisherpond Great House set in exuberantly blooming gardens amid fields of sugar cane (do ask for owner John Chandler — a wonderful experience all by himself).

For other fun things to do on this romantic island, including learning to surf and playing golf, contact the Barbados Tourism Authority at www.visitbarbados.org.

Action getaway of a lifetime

I've never been a big roll-the-dice guy, but I love the change of pace Atlantic City offers. It may be just three hours or so from Albany, but with its casinos, major entertainment complexes, shopping and dining options, it's like visiting another planet.

At the giant complex Harrahs, they have a lot to brag about. Atlantic City has a lot of competition when it comes to losing money, but I found you could come to Harrahs and spend your money on other things beside blackjack and roulette. Things like dining in the buffet, a massage or other treatment at the Red Door Spa and all the goodies begging to be purchased in the Waterfront Shops.

I found the huge swimming pool that rests under a high glass atrium the perfect place to spend a day, especially as outside it was snowing pretty hard. Surrounded by tropical plants, I could almost believe I had landed on some idyllic island.

With about a dozen places to eat and drink, a 160,000-square-foot casino featuring new game challenges and more than 3,800 slot machines plus headliner entertainment, this place is action-packed. If you're looking for a change of pace, this could be your ticket.

A three-day, two-night Total Rejuvenation package is the way to go if you like to be pampered. In addition to accommodations, you get a $100 food credit, a $250 spa credit to be enjoyed during your stay and a free day in The Pool and Fitness Center. Prices start at $439 per person. Harrahs also offers a golf deal with the legendary Atlantic City Country Club. See www.harrahs.com for details.

Your Opinion in the Spotlight

G'land supervisor brought it on himself

Editor, The Spotlight:

Recently, Ken Runion, Guilderland town supervisor, claimed he had been the recipient of harassing phone calls urging him not to seek re-election.

Once again, Mr. Runion made a broad general statement without providing any facts. He did not identify any specific caller or the exact number of calls he claimed to have received. Mr. Runion instead portrayed himself as some kind of victim of an orchestrated attempt by his political opponents to intimidate him without offering any proof. How do we know that, even if he had received calls, the callers were members of his own party of dissatisfied town employees?

Mr. Runion defiantly stated in a Nixonian manner that he would not be bullied and that his decision to run would be for the best interest of the town. He sounded like the shopworn politicians who over time confuse their own self interest with the public interest.

The real victim is the property owner who did not get an undervalued tax assessment as Walgreens had received using political insider representation. The real victim is the hard-working town employee who did not abuse sick leave repeatedly as Chief James Murley had been allowed to do under Mr. Runion's watch.

Mr. Runion is a victim, all right — a victim of his own petard.

Fake booze in poor taste

Editor, The Spotlight:

As a long-time parishioner of St. Thomas in Delmar, I can't think of a more inspiring way to begin the religious season of Lent than by having a 1920's prohibition event for the school's eighth graders... complete with faux "booze" (photo, 1920s roar to life, March 11).

To say that I am a little surprised and shocked at both the timing and the function is an understatement. I realize that the purpose was an educational exercise examining the Roaring '20s, but do you really educate children by having them act out a disregard for the law (Prohibition) and promote the consumption of alcohol as a fun thing to do? Then to publicize the occasion by submitting a group photo of the kids, complete with bottles and glasses in hand. And we wonder why the children of this and other communities start drinking at an early age.

Seriously, "educators," did you think this out beforehand?

P.S. — Yes, I do enjoy a drink, and yes, thank you, I do have a life.

Q: I have cataracts and I plan on having surgery. After cataract surgery, will I still need to wear eyeglasses?

A: "Cataracts are one of the leading causes of preventable blindness worldwide. Cataracts often cause blurry vision and glare at night while driving. A cataract is the stiffening and clouding of the natural lens, and the result is that the lens cannot focus light as well as it did before. Cataracts are common in most patients over fifty. There usually comes a time when a change in one's eyeglass prescription will not do much to improve vision, and surgery should be considered.

"Up until about ten years ago, all patients were very dependent on glasses after cataract surgery. Today, with the availability of premium (multifocal & accommodative) implant lenses, patients can enjoy reduced dependency on eyeglasses. These lenses act like a healthy natural lens, focusing light from all distances, from reading to far distance. You might expect to spend most of your day out of glasses with these implant lenses. You might just need reading glasses to fine-tune small print. There are several brands and styles available such as Crystalens®, ReStor®, and ReZoom®. A patient's lifestyle and health history help me make the decision regarding which lens would be the best fit for a patient."

Bar owner nabbed for tax fraud

State Department of Taxation and Finance Commissioner Robert L. Megna announced on Thursday, March 12, that the owner of a bar in Albany was arrested on several felony tax fraud charges.

Andy Kung, 44, of Slingerlands, owns Andy's Sports Bar & Grill on New Scotland Avenue in Albany. He was charged with second-degree grand larceny, a class C felony, and several counts of first-degree offering a false instrument for filing, a class E felony. A tax department investigation of Kung revealed that his sports bar had charged customers' sales tax on the food and drink that they purchased, but that he failed to turn over the money he collected to the state.

The state gives a portion of the tax to Albany County, which in turn divides a portion among local municipalities. The criminal complaints allege that Kung filed false and fraudulent sales tax returns with the state and failed to remit more than $56,000 in tax collections.

"The Tax Department is committed to exposing and prosecuting tax fraud. These crimes deprive state and local governments of legitimate tax revenue, and cheat customers of the sales tax they honestly paid," Megna said in a release. "Especially during these difficult economic times, when both state and local governments are strapped, we are committed to insuring that all business operators play by the rules. Those who line their pockets with taxpayer money will be held accountable."

Kung faces up to 15 years in prison if convicted.

G'land schools to get $27M upgrade

District will focus on technology-related hardware

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

The Guilderland Central School District will begin routine and technology-related renovations of its five elementary schools and high school starting Wednesday, April 1, according to district officials.

The project will total just under $27 million, with funds coming from the state, the district's fund balance and Guilderland taxpayers, according to the district's Web site.

Important enhancements to hardware are needed to keep the district progressive in the 21st century, said one district official.

"We saw that we had several important facilities needs that needed to be addressed," said Assistant Superintendent for Business Neil Sanders. "We will have new cabling in all of our buildings for new technology."

In November 2007, district voters approved the plan, and the primary enhancements will be new classrooms at the high school; the relocation of the district's administrative offices to the high school; heating, electrical, roofing, communication and ventilation upgrades at the elementary school; an updated technology infrastructure and security upgrades. Traffic patterns, ventilation, asbestos abatement and lighting will all be addressed.

Sanders said that during an update to the five-year capital plan, the district realized it needed to make enhancements.

"Coincidentally, EXCEL aid became available," said Sanders.

He said new computers are on top of the list of technological upgrades, as well as LCD projectors, work stations, smart boards and computer labs for the high school.

Sanders said some of the traditional production equipment will be kept, but the district plans to push toward computer and engineering-based hardware.

The district also plans to update the school's emergency response plan and will hold fire drills to familiarize students with any changes to the exits of the buildings during the construction period, according to the district's Web site. In addition, the construction area will be kept separate from the occupied areas, workers will have photo badges and noise will be kept to a minimum.

Financing will come from a 15-year, $22.5 million, loan with a 4.75 percent interest rate. New York state will reimburse 60 percent of that, according to the district.

District taxpayers will foot $9.4 million, which translates to 16.2 cents per $1,000 of assessed value, or $29 per year for a homeowner with property valued at $180,000.

Additionally, $1.78 million will come from a one-time EXCEL aid grant. Also, $750,000 will come from the capital reserve fund, established earlier this year and $2 million will come from the district's fund balance for next year.

The high school and middle school had large-scale improvements in 1995 and 2001, according to the district.

Contractors bid on the project in February. This month was dedicated to choosing contractors and establishing health and safety committees.

The project will be done in two phases, with phase two starting in April of next year. The entire project is slated to be completed by November of 2010, according to a timeline provided by the district.

Members of the community group ACORN petitioned Albany County Sheriff James Campbell to suspend eviction enforcement until stimulus money and counseling can be provided to the nearly 500 Capital District residents facing foreclosure. Activists ask county to suspend evictions

Sheriff says doing so is illegal

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Community activists urged Albany County Sheriff James Campbell to suspend evictions on foreclosures until stimulus money and counseling can be provided to at-risk residents.

Members of ACORN, or Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now, gathered outside of the Albany County Courthouse on Thursday, March 12, as part of the organization's "foreclosure campaign."

Campbell spoke to the organizers outside the courthouse. He said that although evictions are difficult for those who must leave, choosing not to enforce them is not an option. "That I would like to do, but I can't," said Campbell of ignoring the foreclosure notices. "We're bound by law. I'll be held in contempt of court."

Organizers said they are hopeful that stimulus money, and counseling services offered by ACORN, will mitigate evictions. The group is calling for a one-year moratorium on owner-occupied foreclosures.

ACORN pamphlets handed out on Thursday indicate that loans given at higher interest rates for borrowers with poor credit contribute to the problem.

"We aren't resting until all servicers agree, no more foreclosures on any property bought with a subprime loan," the literature stated.

One protestor, Bill Mahan, said he is concerned about a disabled acquaintance, who is three months behind on payments and facing the "start of procedures" for eviction.

Harold Miller, an ACORN member and one of the protestors at the courthouse, said the group hopes that all foreclosures will be on hold until all of the federal stimulus money proposed by President Barack Obama is allocated, so everyone has a fair chance.

"That would be the best solution at this point, we believe," Miller said.

Chris Franklin, another ACORN organizer, said the Capital District is expected to handle 500 eviction notices, and that many of those people do not realize that counseling is available.

The organizers voiced an understanding of Campbell's responsibility to the law, but still want to see a freeze on enforcement. They said other county's have enacted similar policies in states such as Illinois.

"We understand that he has a job to do, the law to follow, [but] they can always do more," Franklin said.

"It's sometimes hard to do the right thing," Miller added.

Bethlehem seeks alumni Hall of Fame nominees

Wanted: a few great Bethlehem Central High School alumni.

The Bethlehem Central Hall of Fame Committee has posted an online nomination form on the district's Web site to allow alumni and community members to submit candidates for possible induction in the Hall's Class of 2009.

The online nomination form is available on the district's Web site and can be accessed by visiting <http://bcsd.k12.ny.us/alumni/HOF.htm>.

Bethlehem Central announced the creation of the Alumni Hall of Fame in the fall of 2004, after months of discussion between the district and community organizations about the importance of recognizing graduates for their achievements.

Hall of Fame classes of three inductees each were recognized at the 2005 and 2006 graduation ceremonies; Due to a lack of nominations, there was no Hall of Fame Class in 2007. Inductions resumed last year, with the admission of Bethlehem Police Detective Bruce Oliver.

"We have had some outstanding Hall of Fame members, and we're excited about adding to that list," said Scott Landry, Hall of Fame Committee chairman and assistant high school principal. "We are hoping for a large and diverse group of candidates to choose from, so I encourage everyone who knows of a BC alumnus deserving of this honor to submit their information for consideration."

Those who do not have access to a computer or who wish to mail in their nomination should send their contact information and as much biographical information about the candidate as possible to Landry at BCHS, 700 Delaware Ave., Delmar 12054.

He can also be reached by calling the high school's main office at 439-4921 ext. 900.

As in years past, the Hall of Fame Committee will field the nominations and make the selections. The committee is made up of Bethlehem Central administrators, community members and staff members.

Nominations are due by Friday, May 1, for the 2009 induction, which will be held at this year's BCHS commencement ceremonies on June 26.

Neighbors, University at Albany discuss upgrades

McKownville residents talk about possible capital improvements at school

By DAN SABBATINO
Spotlight Newspapers
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Local residents recently shared their concerns about the effect potential capital projects at the University at Albany would have on the surrounding neighborhoods.

At a Tuesday, March 10, public information meeting, university officials presented an environmental impact statement and discussed the possible impact the construction and resulting structures might have on neighboring communities.

At the meeting, held at the SEFCU Arena Hall of Fame room, residents from McKownville, a small neighborhood located at the border of Albany and Guiderland, and community advocates offered praise in addition to concern.

"I thought they [university officials] did a forthright presentation," said Don Reeb, president of the McKownville Improvement Association.

Reeb gave credit to the university for extending an invitation to the community to participate in a discussion about potential expansions, but he did voice some worries about the growing stormwater problem McKownville has experienced over the past few years. With more paved areas and concrete structures, and less green space and grass to absorb water, Reeb said he was worried that the construction will only exacerbate the problem.

Reeb said he was also concerned with the traffic the structures might generate.

"They don't all travel through McKownville, but probably a large hunk of them do," Reeb said of the numerous cars coming and going from the campus.

Karl Luntta, a representative from the University at Albany, said the suggestions made by Reeb and others who spoke at the meeting will be considered as plans to improve the campus move forward.

"We were pleased that so many neighbors showed up to speak," Luntta said.

The university's plans included 20 separate projects, spanning completion periods between 2011 to 2017, and included new buildings, such as a 500-bed apartment, parking structures and a walkway around campus known as the Purple Pathway. Some projects already have funding set aside, while others remain unfunded.

A final version of the environmental impact statement is expected to be completed by July.

John Giarrusso, assistant vice president of finance and business, presented the plans for capital improvements.

Stuart J. Spiegel, of O'Brien and Gere, an engineering firm working on the project, assured those in attendance that the university does not have any plans to "expand its footprint."

"None of the projects go off the campus," Spiegel said. "[But] that doesn't mean they don't impact other communities."

Also at the meeting Reeb said he was concerned about the possibility of an expansion to the university's College of Nanoscale Science and Engineering, and its effects as it stands now. That project is separate from the capital improvements covered by the environmental impact statement presented Tuesday.

"We don't know very much about the other side of Fuller Road, and that is troublesome to me," Reeb said of the location of the Albany Nanotech Complex.

He said he is worried that no study has ever been done to fully assess the drainage issues associated with the university's water table, including the impact of expanding the buildings that house the nanoscale college.

He said he is worried about the health effects of the nanoparticles. However, Steve Janack, a representative of the nanoscale college, said the site does not handle "nano-particles," but only nano-chips.

Janack addressed some of Reeb's other concerns, as well.

"At this point we have spoken publicly about what we see as the next phases of expansion," Janack said. "We're part of the neighborhood. We agree flooding is an issue because we share the same problem."

He said there are plans to construct a parking structure, although the site plan involves constructing it on an already paved surface to prevent more storm-water runoff.

Janack said there are plans to construct a zero-energy nanotechnology building that would serve as both a structure dedicated to studying alternative energy, and one that runs completely on those alternative energies.

"It would be a living laboratory," Janack said.

He said that building is planned to go on a landlocked parcel between Interstate 90 and Washington Avenue, away from McKownville.

"We're working with the county to try to secure funding to make that happen," Janack said.

He added that the traffic generated from the expansion will be a "drop in the bucket" compared to the 31 million cars per year Crossgates Mall generates.

Lawmaker wants to downsize

Zeilman proposes reducing Legislature from 39 to 19

By ARIANA COHN
Spotlight Newspapers
cohn@spotlightnews.com

Albany County Legislator Carl Zeilman, R-Colonie, has come up with a plan to decrease the Albany County Legislature: Use the 2010 census results to create more accurate representation of the county's municipalities in the legislature.

"This year, 2010, is going to be a census year," Zeilman said. "We can easily take those numbers to redraft each district."

According to information provided by the Albany County Legislature's Web site, the legislature comprises 39 county legislators who are elected to four-year terms.

The county legislature meets once a month, on the second Monday of every month, at the Albany County Court House. Legislators are also involved in 10 standing committees and several subcommittees that meet mostly on a monthly basis. According to Zeilman, the 39 members that make up the legislature serve over 290,000 county residents. Zeilman said the legislators make a salary of about $21,000 per year, as well as benefits, and that adds up to millions of dollars of taxpayer money.

Zeilman said while some consider being a legislator a chance to really make a difference in their district, others use their positions to pad their retirement. Zeilman also said the Albany County Legislature is one of the largest in the region, many of which contain fewer than 20 members.

"With the economy effecting Albany County the way it is and with 2010 census upon us, reducing the state's largest legislative body, the Albany County Legislature, from 39 members to 19 members just makes sense," said Zeilman.

A call to Albany County Executive Mike Breslin's office about the proposal was not returned by the time of printing.

Zeilman said there are many ways the number of legislators could be reduced. One way would be to analyze which legislators have the most interaction with their constituents. Another is to have special elections to determine who should be representing the district.

"If it means pinning one of us against each other in a primary race, so be it," he said. Zeilman said he plans to submit a more detailed plan of how to trim the legislature to his colleagues in the upcoming months. "I understand that the move to downsize the Albany County Legislature will be hard for some," he said. "But this is the right move and Albany County and its residents will be the beneficiaries in the end and that should always be our goal."

45 and Counting: Today's women turn tradition and age on its head

By KAREN ZALEWSKI-WILDZUNAS, Senior Vice President, KeyBank

For women, something funny happened on the way to the workplace—history forgot our place in it.

That's right. Women working and making meaningful and significant contributions to the greater community isn't a new development. Women have been doing this since our country was founded, even as business owners. In fact, according to Angel Kwolek-Folland, author of the book Incorporating Women: A History of Women and Business in the United States, more than half of all urban retail businesses in Colonial America were women-owned. Women even owned equity in corporations, voted their stock and were able to receive financial benefits.

So why, you might wonder, do we make such a big deal and put such an emphasis on what has happened for women in the workplace over the past 30 years? Especially when more women (19.6 percent vs. 16.3 percent) were in the professions in 1900 than in 2000?

In a word: recognition.

Today's woman, whether she is an employee or employer, is finally getting the recognition she deserves. More important, women as a whole are getting the recognition they deserve. They are rewriting the rules, and they are challenging men on their turf in industries that women have traditionally not been a part of. At the same time, they are turning passion projects that some would consider whimsical dreams into profitable realities. As a result, they are changing their lives. Many are even finding that the best years of their lives begin at the point where their colonial contemporaries' lives would end—in their midforties.

Middle age isn't what it used to be
According to an AARP and

Women's Leadership Circle study, 65 percent of women over age 45 are happier than ever. Study participants said that "not only is growing older better than expected, or (sometimes) portrayed, it can be a positive time of life with new rewards."

Karen Zalewski-Wildzunus

The study, "Looking at Act II of Women's Lives: Thriving and Striving from 45 On," suggests the reason for this is that more than 90 percent of women 45 and older "feel they have a network of friends and family that they can rely on in a time of crisis." And most feel they are in good to excellent physical health.

In addition, women 45 and older are feeling financially healthy. At least in 2006 they were. As we know, none of us feel too financially healthy these days. However, considering that women earn nearly 30 percent less money than men over the course of their lives, the fact that just two years ago more than 60 percent of women older than age 45 had and regularly contributed to a retirement plan that they felt confident about is important. What is also important is that a disparity in wages is not the reason for the discrepancy in lifetime earning. Rather, women take 11 years more time off of work during their careers than men. So it is very positive that women older than age 45 are taking control of their financial lives and focused on accumulating wealth. It shows that women are overcoming some of their traditional fears about money and can play on a level playing field if they so choose. More important, it shows that middle age is not the financial crisis for women that it used to be.

Experience leads to opportunity...and success
The AARP and Women's Leadership Circle study states that the reason women older than age 45 are so satisfied is because they feel more confident and empowered than when they were younger. As a result, they often look for change, to do something more than be a mom or worker bee. They want more control and/or to pursue a passion, and with their children older and their finances more secure, they have the room to do it. And entrepreneurship is often provides this outlet.

The good news for these 45-plus women entrepreneurs is that other women are blazing the trails for them. There are successful women-owned businesses started everyday, and what we are seeing is that there are a lot of advantages for women who wait to start a business, including:

- access to an already established and well-developed business network,
- fewer competing responsibilities (e.g., the kids are grown up), and
- the experience to make more informed decisions.

So it should come as no surprise that women-owned businesses are growing faster than any other business demographic. They are taking charge, creating ways to find a niche for themselves in today's global economy. And while Kwolek-Folland suggests that the strides women have made in the workplace over the past 30 years is less a revolution than a revival, one key point remains inarguable: today's women are redefining what it means to be a woman in the workplace and what it means to age...and they are having fun and turning profits while doing it.

Tips for aspiring women entrepreneurs

Women typically start a business because they are looking for a career change or want to pursue a passion. If you fall into this category and have dreams of building a future for yourself on your terms, here are three things that are critical to your success:

1. Research – Understand your competition and your market. Who are your customers? What will be your differentiating factor?

2. Plan – Forget what you've heard about not needing a business plan, because taking the time to develop a business plan will help you focus, set goals, identify resources, secure funding, measure performance and reset priorities as you manage your business through good times and bad.

3. Budget – This is just another way to say: manage your finances wisely. It may be surprising, but many businesses fail because they are not able to or do not seek the help they need to set a manageable and realistic budget, including how to finance the start-up and/or growth of the business. It's always a good idea to keep the equity in your business as high as possible.

To an extent, each of these is a form of research and planning. As an entrepreneur, you'll discover that you're always in research and planning mode. However, you're not on an island. There are many organizations and associations, such as SCORE, the Small Business Administration and your bank that will discuss your business idea with you and help steer you in the right direction.

in the Entertainment Spotlight

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
Spotlight Newspapers
dominj@spotlightnews.com

As Michael Philip Davis wrapped up a stint as vocal coach with the New York State Theater Institute a couple of years ago, NYSTI founder Patricia Snyder asked him if he'd be interested in directing a show with the group.

Davis liked the idea. He asked Snyder what kind of programs NYSTI did relating to the Holocaust.

When Snyder mentioned that NYSTI had put on "Yours, Anne," a musical version of the Anne Frank story, Davis' eyes widened.

"I almost jumped out of my seat at Boston Market eating chicken," he said.

"Oh, you know it?" Snyder asked.

In fact, Davis originated one of the roles in the show, playing Peter Van Daan in 1979. He loved the idea of being part of the production again, so he agreed to direct NYSTI's latest version, which is being staged at Schacht Fine Arts Center on the campus of Russell Sage College in Troy through March 26.

Davis readily admits that it might seem odd to set the story of Anne Frank to music, but noted this isn't a typical musical.

"It's a musical drama," he said. "It's a real story with laughter and tragedy. The music captures the spirit just superbly."

Frank's story was famously told in her diary, which recounted the two years she and her family spent hiding from the Nazis in the Netherlands during World War II. Anne's father, Otto, was the only one in the family to survive the war, and he published Anne's diary in 1947, two years after she died at 15.

Three decades later, "Yours, Anne" was born. Librettist Enid Futterman and composer Michael Cohen were working together at an ad agency when actress and singer Andrea Marcovicci asked them to write a musical for her. When her hairstyle reminded Futterman of Frank, she and Cohen started working on a musical version of Frank's life.

In 1975, Futterman presented the show to Otto Frank himself, who gave it high marks. It debuted in 1979 as "Dear Kitty" at Hotel Concord in the Catskills, with Davis as Peter VanDaan, who hid with the Frank family.

Davis was a singing actor at the time and was thrilled to land the part.

"Since I'm Jewish, I was particularly intrigued," he said. "I loved the piece from the beginning."

Although Davis has since shifted gears so that he's now more of a director, he's remained fond of the piece, believing that its lessons of hope, courage and tolerance are timeless.

"It's not only the Holocaust, it's all holocausts," he said. "Rwanda, Darfur — these things are still going on."

Like Davis, Shannon Rafferty, who plays Frank, thinks it's important to keep Frank's story alive.

"You learn history so you don't repeat it," she said.

Rafferty said she was impressed by Frank's intelligence and courage. "She was brought up well," she said.

Rafferty, meanwhile, was brought up in an artistic family. Her grandfather is local author William Kennedy, who won the Pulitzer Prize for "Ironweed," which was turned into a movie starring Jack Nicholson and Meryl Streep.

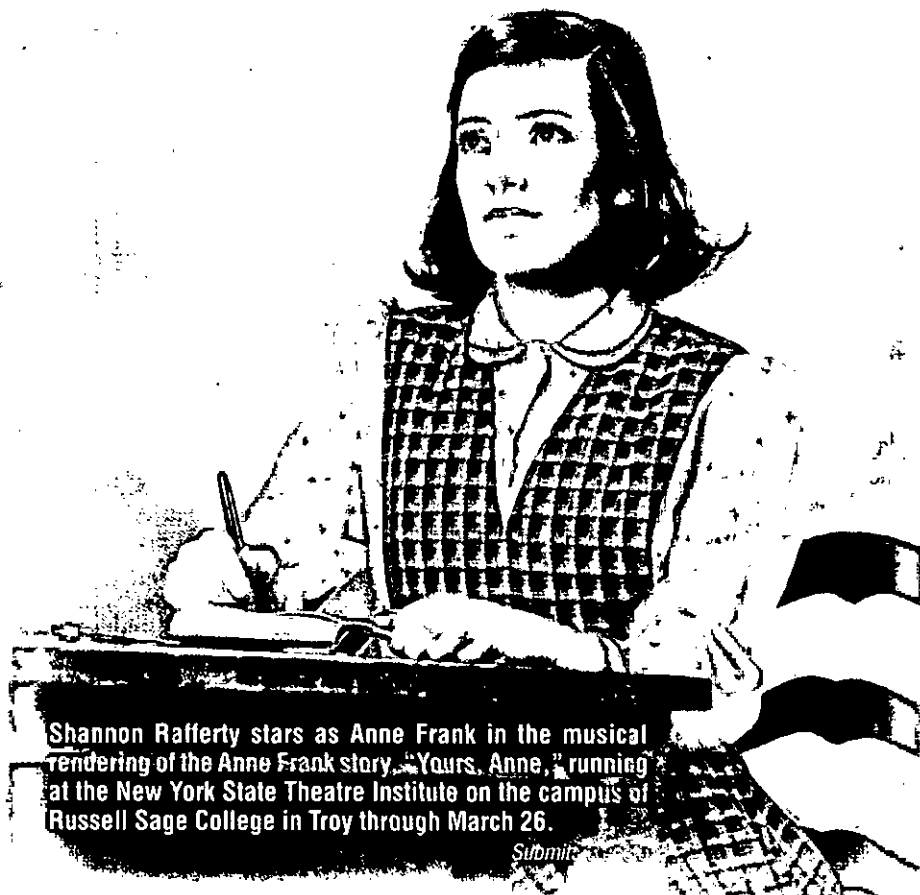

Rafferty's dad is an actor, and Rafferty got the urge to take the stage herself while helping her dad practice lines.

"It's kind of in my blood," she said.

Rafferty earned a degree from the American Musical and Dramatic Academy in New York City, taking occasional acting jobs while she studied. She recently moved back to the Capital District to work on a master's degree from Russell Sage. Once she graduates, she has a simple aim: to be a working actor.

She's been working a little extra hard on "Yours, Anne." Rafferty wasn't too familiar with Frank's story before she was cast. But she's spent a lot of time researching her role, "trying to understand the angle she's coming from."

Co-star Mary Brazeau feels the same kind of duty to her character, Mrs. VanDaan.

Shannon Rafferty stars as Anne Frank in the musical rendering of the Anne Frank story, "Yours, Anne," running at the New York State Theatre Institute on the campus of Russell Sage College in Troy through March 26.

"You feel like you have a responsibility to breathe life into that character," Brazeau said. "That desperation, that terror — you want the audience to feel that. You want to make sure you get that just right."

Brazeau, who is making her debut with NYSTI, has performed in a number of other productions locally and across the country. A graduate of Boston Conservatory, she said, "Singing is the big thing for me."

Still, she admitted she "kind of chuckled" at the thought of Frank's story being set to music.

"And yet, the music has a wonderful way of resonating," she said.

Her lasting impression of her character is that although she appears weak in the show, she actually had a quiet inner strength that enabled her to be one of the last to die.

"She was a tough bird," Brazeau said.

The show is recommended for ages 10 and older. Davis believes it will prove a powerful piece for the younger generation.

"I think with what young people have grown up with today, this is eye-opening, but not necessarily terrifying," he said.

"Yours, Anne" will be performed at Schacht Fine Arts Center on the campus of Russell Sage College in Troy Friday and Saturday, March 20 and 21, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, March 22, at 2 p.m. There will also be weekday performances at 10 a.m. on Thursday and Friday, March 19 and 20, and Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, March 24 to 26. Tickets are $20 for adults, $16 for senior citizens and students and $10 for children up to age 12. They can be purchased by calling the NYSTI box office at 274-3256 or visiting www.nysti.org.

Heart Ball honors young survivors

March 21 gala raises money and awareness about cardiac disease

When Brendan Wichelns was 10 days old, he had surgery to mend his heart, because he had been diagnosed with HypoPlastic Left Heart Syndrome. When Brendan turned 10 years old in November 2008, he went bowling with friends.

At 9 months and 22 months old, Brendan had two more surgeries. During that time, his nourishment frequently came through a feeding tube.

At his 10th birthday party, Brendan ate cake and ice cream.

"Outside, I like to play basketball," said Brendan, who joins the American Heart Association's Cardiac Kids for their picnic each year and is a regular participant in the Start! Heart Walk. "Inside, I like to play Wii."

For Lisa and Chuck Wichelns of Saratoga Springs, Brendan's early days were tough and go. Now, Brendan looks to the future.

"I like science," he said. "Maybe I'll be a scientist."

When Erin Lanni, 21, a Menands native, was a senior in high school, she took two-hour naps and went to bed at 9 p.m. every night.

When she was a freshman at Providence College, a March 6, 2006, regular checkup raised red flags when her heart rate was diagnosed at 40 beats per minute.

That same day, she had an EKG and an echocardiogram, which brought the diagnosis of third-degree heart block.

On July 10, 2006, Erin had surgery to have a pacemaker implanted.

Today, Erin is a senior at Providence College, student teaching as she prepares for a career as a teacher.

The two-hour daily naps and early bedtimes are a thing of the past.

"If I can even influence one person to get checked, to take care of themselves, to eat healthy and stay physically active, and to know their numbers, that would be great," Erin said.

At the Capital Region Heart Ball on Saturday, March 21, at the Hall of Springs in Saratoga Springs, Heart Champions Erin Lanni and Brendan Wichelns will encourage everyone to take charge of their own heart health.

"We are grateful to Erin and Brendan for sharing their stories and encouraging others to pay attention to their hearts," said Steven Szebenyi, M.D., chairman of the Heart Ball and executive director of the Foundation for Healthy Living. "We always think it can't happen to us, but when you look at Erin and Brendan, you see that heart disease can happen to anyone."

The Capital Region Heart Ball will take place on Saturday, March 21, at 6 p.m. at the Hall of Springs, 108 Avenue of the Pines in Saratoga Springs. There will be a silent auction, a live auction, dinner and dancing to Good for the Soul.

More than 300 business and medical professionals will raise money to raise awareness and funds to combat cardiovascular diseases and stroke.

Republicans hold candidate interviews

The elephant in the room is ready to speak up about the '09 elections

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The town's Grand Old Party is looking for a few good men and women to make the ultimate community commitment as Republicans prepare to interview candidates for the 2009 townwide races.

The Bethlehem Republican Committee will be meeting on Monday, March 23, at 7 p.m. at the Glenmont Fire House, 301 Glenmont Road, Glenmont.

Party Chair Melody Burns said, the meeting is open to all residents of Bethlehem, from all sections of town and from all political affiliations, not just Republicans.

"This is our regular monthly meeting. We will be hosting an informational session for anyone who is interested in the political process and may be considering running for one of the offices open for November," she said. "Our goal is to give people enough information so they can make an informed decision about running for one of the offices. We will also open the floor to discuss issues of importance to town residents."

The offices open for election in Bethlehem this year include town supervisor, two town board seats, town clerk and highway superintendent.

Burns said they are hoping to put together a slate by the meeting's end. However, she stressed that the party isn't looking to just fill a slate full of names for the sake of it, and that they are looking for candidates who want to run, and who want to win.

"It would be great to come out of the meeting with viable candidates for each of the offices, but we are not rushing the process," said Burns. "Our goal is to speak with anyone who may be interested, determine their level of commitment and then make a final decision in mid-to-late April. The election cycle is long enough; we don't want to rush anyone to a decision."

The Republican chair said her party was looking for "individuals who understand the issues facing each of us in Bethlehem," such as spending, taxes, budget, infrastructure, economic development, open space, land use regulations and quality of life.

"We'll be talking about our responsibilities to the candidate, our expectations of the candidate, the candidates responsibilities and each committee member's responsibilities," Burns said. "Over the past year, we have been building our committee and our enthusiasm is growing."

On March 6, the Republican Committee held its spring reception and honored Dot Brown for her years of service to the committee, according to Burns. Brown served as a committee person, secretary and poll clerk coordinator for over 30 years. Burns said that former committee chairs "roasted Dot and congratulated her on her years of dedication."

Aside from the Bethlehem Republican Committee, Brown has also been active with the Bethlehem Business Women's Club, Progress Club and town seniors.

"As a committee, we are fortunate to have many fellow members who are as dedicated and committed as Dot," Burns said. "In addition, new members have joined that are as just as active as Dot and the 'old guard' have been. We are looking forward to a good campaign this summer and will be working hard to get all of our candidates elected in November." Burns said the coming months would be an "exciting summer," and that there are plenty of issues to talk about in town. She said that Bethlehem has to look at all of the issues on a townwide scale.

"Not just Delmar, we have to look at the concerns of Selkirk, South Bethlehem, North Bethlehem, Slingerlands, Elmsmere and Glenmont residents," she said.

The Monday, March 23, meeting will be an informational session and a political forum, Burns said, but it will also be a starting place to gauge the concerns of the citizens.

"We are confident that this forum will give people an opportunity to talk about their concerns as residents of Bethlehem," she concluded.

Event puts lupus in the forefront

Walk to raise money and awareness about autoimmune disease

The Lupus Alliance of America Upstate New York chapter will sponsor a walk Sunday, March 29, at Crossgates Mall to help raise money for lupus patients and their families and raise awareness about the disease.

The Lupus Alliance, which sponsors quarterly meetings for patients and their families, is asking for a minimum donation of $20 for adults and $5 for children 5 to 12.

"The mall has been very generous and helpful to us," said Honi Kurzeja, executive director of the local chapter and a lupus patient.

She said the Lupus Alliance has been doing similar walks for 13 years in Buffalo. The walk will include three trips around the inside of the mall, and refreshments will be served.

Kurzeja has had lupus for 35 years, and has faced a number of life-threatening situations, but she said she has been lucky enough to pull out of them.

According to the Lupus Foundation of America, Lupus is an autoimmune disease that affects the skin, joints, heart, lungs, blood, kidneys and brain.

"The body builds up antibodies against itself," Kurzeja explained.

For some, lupus symptoms are mild, for others, the symptoms can be life-threatening.

"Although epidemiological data on lupus is limited, studies suggest that more than 16,000 Americans develop lupus each year," according to the Lupus Foundation of America. The foundation states that between 1.5 million and 2 million people have a form of lupus, and 90 percent are women.

"Symptoms and diagnosis occur most often when women are in their child-bearing years, between the ages of 15 and 45," according to the Lupus Foundation.

It also states that African-Americans, Latinos, Asians and Native Americans are the most likely to be affected.

Registration for the walk begins at 8:30 a.m. and the walk starts at 9:30 a.m. Walkers are asked to use the entrance closest to Best Buy to register.

Sara Boniface said the mall is proud to sponsor this event, as well as the close to 600 other non-profit events it sponsors each year.

"We know that it works. It gets greater and greater," Boniface said.

For information call the Lupus Alliance of Upstate New York at 800-300-4198 or visit its Web site at www.lupuswalk.org, where you can register as well.

federal government, the Moe He Con Nuck Preserve.

"The parcel itself is located at 45 River Road along its western edge, residential properties are along the northern side, the Hudson River along the eastern side and the Job Corps property is to the south," Simmons said.

The town has received a matching grant from Scenic Hudson, a not-for-profit organization that helps preserve open space in river communities, to upgrade the 53-acre plot of parkland for public access.

Simmons said a site analysis identified "several pockets of wetland" and that a "power line and utility pole ... bisect the site and go right down the middle." She said the existing site has a lake, large knoll in the middle, a stand of evergreens 60-70 feet tall and some other "considerable topography."

"There's a steep slope that goes down to the river before you can get down to river access," she told board members. "There's about 130 feet of grade change between the high point of the site and the river's edge."

There are still some details to be worked out before trailblazing can begin, she said.

"While the parcel itself is 53 acres in size, it's bisected by a strip of land believed still to be held by the Job Corps property," Simmons said. "This section of land apparently is not owned by the town at this time. We have 50 acres and one parcel of approximately 3 acres, and we're in the process right now of figuring out if the town has access rights over this piece of land to actually get to the river."

Supervisor Jack Cunningham

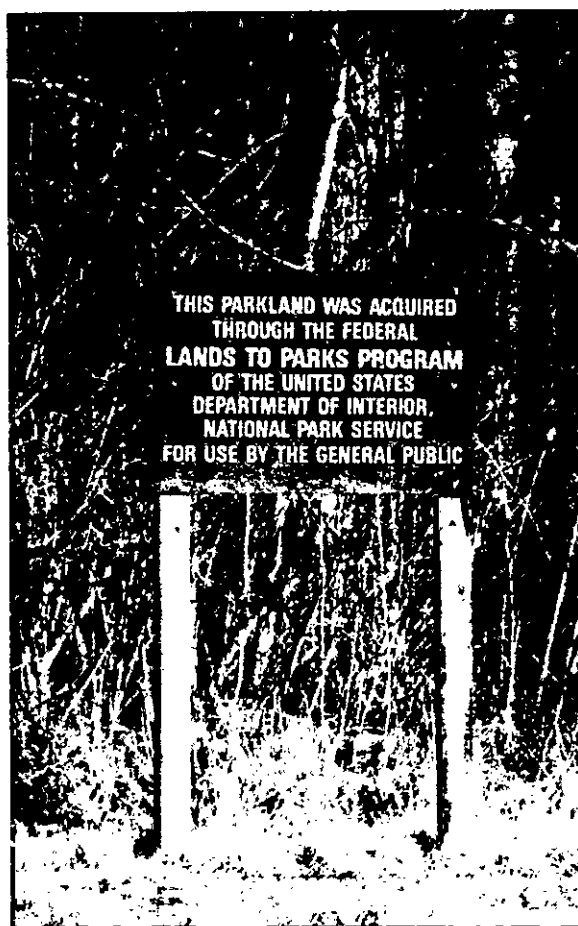

said during the meeting that the U.S. Department of Interior informed the town that a plan needed to be put in place in order to make the property accessible to the public.

Based on our site analysis plan, we brought up five or six concepts for review by the town staff and after meeting with them, we narrowed it down to two concepts to present at the public meeting on Dec. 9 [2008]," Simmons said.

The public reviewed the two concepts before a final plan was drawn up.

"The first concept proposed a parking lot out on River Road and the development of a loop trail system kind of circling on itself, and then phase two would be clearing out the perimeter of Frothingham Lake," said Simmons. "It's very filled with weeds right now, and at that point in time the intent was to have non-motorized boats, canoes and kayaks and things of that nature."

After the first phase, the second step would be to build a small access area to the lake from Simmons Road in order to be able to drive non-motorized boats to the lake by motor vehicle, according to the plans.

Phase three would be to continue expanding the trail network. Phase four would include building trails down to the river, and the final phase would create final connections to all of the trails and access points.

"Concept number two incorporated using Simmons Road for access to the park to reduce the overall project costs at the kickoff phase," said Simmons. "We had thought if we used Simmons Road and had a small parking area here, and then provided a loop system as phase one, it would cut down on the cost with the idea that in phase two we put the parking on River Road and then build a trail to connect the two trails together."

The plan calls for progressing to the east from River Road to the Hudson River as time and money would allow.

All the adjoining neighbors within 200 feet of the property were invited to a public hearing in December, said Simmons. At the time, Simmons said, the majority expressed a preference for the first option because they didn't believe the lake was good for access because it is shallow and contains a large number of turtles. They also wanted the main parking lot off of River Road to keep traffic down on a very narrow and residential Simmons Road.

"The general sentiment of the people was that it should be a nature preserve and have minimal intrusion on the existing environment and that also it should be educational, where people could come and we would have identifying signage that would identify the plants and the wildlife in the area," said Simmons.

Late night access was a concern, she said, and many were against access to the river because the steep slopes would make it "almost impossible" to get an ambulance or emergency vehicles or apparatus to the riverbank.

Simmons said the original plans were revised and then presented during a Feb. 10 public hearing before becoming adopted as the final master plan. The new revised master plan calls for a similar phased-in approach and gravel parking lot off of River Road as in the first option. There will also be a clearing with picnic tables used as a viewing station.

There was one striking difference from the original plans, however.

"We are no longer going to have physical access to the river," Simmons said. There will be a "water trail," she said, connecting the Henry Hudson Park and Moe He Con Nuck Preserve by allowing boats to dock along the shores of each. The plans also call for creating views of the river with selective clearing and having the trail stop just short of the steep decline to the riverbank.

Town officials said they are hoping to keep most of the work "in house" with possible help from the Glenmont Job Corps and with local Eagle Scout projects.

Cunningham said he tried to come up with a name with the town's former Planning Board chairman.

"Back in October, before Parker Mathusa passed away, he and I had a long conversation about naming this area," said Cunningham, who originally wanted to name it Cedar Ridge because of the number of namesake trees on the land.

Parker was against the name because the location was not exactly accurate, according to Cunningham. The supervisor said he had the opportunity two weeks ago to meet with the historical officer for the Mohegan Indian tribe.

"The Mohegan Indians occupied a lot of area along the Hudson River. It's where they first met Henry Hudson when he sailed up the river, which we memorialize on our town seal, and so we believe that it was likely that Mohegan Indians occupied this area and hunted there."

"We came up with the name Moe He Con Nuck Preserve," said Cunningham. "The phrase means 'people of waters that are never still.'"

Web

"It think Ken Runion should call the feds," said Redlich, who agreed that if someone used Runion's information and e-mail account to start the site, it should be addressed.

Runion said Redlich's site, www.KenRunion.com, also seems like a case of identity theft, although Redlich disagreed. He said domain names are public, and the nature of politics allows for the free flow of information.

Redlich said the growing phenomenon of Web-based campaigning is a result of the speedy and widespread delivery of messages the medium provides.

He said, though, it is not the only avenue for communication, and it is still important to communicate with constituents in other ways.

On his site, Redlich addresses several issues, including increasing property taxes, secretive government and the connection between Runion and former police chief James Murley.

Murley recently accepted a plea bargain on charges of gambling at an Upstate casino while on town time, and has been involved in claims of sexual harassment.

"The reality is Ken Runion bears some responsibility for Murley," Redlich said on Friday, March 13. "We want the town governed well."

Runion countered that he did everything in his power to address the situation.

"As soon as an issue was brought to my attention about Mr. Murley, I took action," Runion said. "I believe that I did whatever was in my power."

Redlich has also accused Runion of contradicting himself, claiming Runion stated in February that he anticipated a decline in sales tax, while in November, he stated it was on the rise.

Runion said, though, changes in the economy account for the discrepancy.

Runion said the recent Web fracas has left him seriously considering whether he wants to seek re-election come fall.

"I've been thinking about it long and hard. I owe the residents more. I really need to focus on my job," Runion said. "[The Republicans] will do anything and everything to get control."

Redlich said he is not planning to run for supervisor, although he has considered it, but his support would probably lie with a fellow Republican.

"If [Councilman] Mark [Grimm] is running, I am supporting Mark," Redlich said.

Francis Ciani

Father Francis P. Ciani, 95, of Gunderland, died at the Our Lady of Eternal Peace Center on Saturday, March 7.

Father Ciani was born in Albany to the late Manlio and Rafaela Inglese Ciani. Father Ciani was a graduate of Cathedral Academy, class of 1932 and the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, Mass.

He attended St. Joseph's Seminary in Dunwoodie, and was ordained at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, Albany on June 3, 1939. He began his ministry at Sacred Heart Parish in Arkville, and then served as associate pastor at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church in Schenectady from 1939 to 1943.

Father Ciani served from 1943 to 1945 in the Army as a Chaplain during World War II. He served in the Pacific Theater as a captain with the 78th Infantry Division, where he provided spiritual comfort and guidance on the battlefield.

Returning to the States, he began his ministry as chaplain at the VA hospital in Northport, Long Island, until his retirement in 1976. When he recently returned to the Capital District, he truly enjoyed the time he spent in residence at St. John the Evangelist rectory where he shared his faith and love of the Yankees with fellow priests, especially his childhood friend, Father Anthony DeFranco.

In the past few years since he moved back to the area, Father Ciani especially enjoyed the time he spent with his family.

The time that they got to share with him during these times is something to be cherished. He administered the sacraments of marriage and baptism to many in his family and was the celebrant at Masses of Christian Burial for those family members that predeceased him.

He had an enduring wit and never lost his spirited personality as he journeyed through life. Father carried his final cross with faith and dignity. He was beloved by his many friends at Saratoga and Belmont where he provided spiritual guidance and in return received their warmth and friendship.

Survivors include his brother, Ralph (Lucy) Ciani of Albany; and several nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grand nephews.

Saints

admitted senior guard Kenny Hasbrouck.

The general purpose of the party had been achieved by that point, though – allow hundreds of Siena's most ardent supporters to learn of the Saints' fate with the players and coaches they have cheered through a 26-7 season that included their second consecutive Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference championship.

And while making the field was assured (all 31 national conference tournament champions earn automatic berths), receiving a No. 9 seed was not.

"We were really thinking anything from a No. 10 to a No. 12 seed," said senior forward and Scotia native Josh Duell.

"I'm just happy that our guys got the respect that they deserve," said Siena coach Fran McCaffery. "That committee knows what it's doing. What you get is what you deserve to get."

And what McCaffery believed his team deserved was a single-digit seed.

"I wasn't surprised by it – not when our RPI (ratings percentage index) went up to No. 18 this week," he said.

Part of Siena's seeding was based on the tough non-conference schedule it had this year. The Saints played several teams that wound up also making the NCAA Tournament including Tennessee, Oklahoma State, Pittsburgh and Kansas.

"We knew we were going to play some of the top teams in the nation (entering the season), and we weren't going to shy away from them," said Hasbrouck.

Another part of the equation was what the Saints achieved in last year's NCAA Tournament. As a No. 13 seed, they knocked off No. 4 Vanderbilt by 21 points before losing to Villanova in the second round.

"I definitely think (the win) did help our seeding," said junior forward Edwin Ubiles. "I don't think anyone expected us to beat Vanderbilt like we did."

Siena won't have the luxury of sneaking up on anyone as a No. 9 seed like it did as a No. 13 seed. Though Ohio State comes from a major conference (the Big 10), several national pundits are predicting that the Saints will knock off the Buckeyes in Friday's opening round game.

"I definitely think it's a different expectation," said Ubiles. "Last year, no one expected us to do what we did. This time ... we're not Cinderella anymore."

"As a team, we have an expectation that we can beat anyone that we play," said Hasbrouck.

The experience the Saints gained playing in last year's tournament will come into play as they prepare for Ohio State.

"I think last year, we got a little taste of what (the tournament is) like, so I think we'll be ready this time," said Duell.

"They've got a great player in (Evan) Turner, and they have some great role players," said Hasbrouck. "We just have to be ready for them."

NCAA

Still, this No. 9 seed comes with many strings attached to it. By facing Ohio State in practically the Buckeyes' backyard, Siena will have to deal with a hostile crowd. And by all accounts, this is an Ohio State team that poses some match-up problems for Siena. The Buckeyes love to play a slow-down, half-court game, and they have a genuine big man – 7-foot center B.J. Mullens – to give the Saints fits down low.

The good news for Siena in this match-up is that if the Saints can push the tempo (which they love to do) and force Ohio State's guards into some turnovers, they have a good chance of winning. It's an awful lot to ask, but Siena proved with last year's 21-point victory over Vanderbilt that it can pull it off.

Of course, if Siena does pull off the mild upset over Ohio State

(and that's all it would be, given the seeds involved), the reward is to try to stop Rick Pitino's Louisville Cardinals in the second round. And as much as we'd all like to daydream about a Siena win, the reality is that Louisville didn't win the Big East regular season and tournament titles because it lucked into it. The Cardinals are a high-scoring, high-energy team with several NBA-caliber players. Siena is also a high-scoring, high-energy team, but it doesn't have the same caliber of players that Louisville has.

By the way, did I mention that Louisville is a short drive from Dayton? I didn't? Well, I have now.

Naturally, the Saints aren't saying that playing against Ohio State and possibly Louisville in Dayton is a problem. The way they see it, they have another opportunity to stun the world.

"As a team, we have an expectation that we can beat anyone that we play," said Kenny Hasbrouck.

Bethlehem Central High School freshman Luke Carpinello had a strong performance at last weekend's Nike Indoor Nationals track meet in Boston.

Carpinello placed eighth in the boys freshman mile with a time of 4:37.77, more than one second ahead of his nearest competitor from the Capital District, Niskayuna's Niall Williams.

Dustin Wilson of Philadelphia won the freshman mile in a time of 4:32.61. Colby Burke of Henrietta (Monroe County) was second in a time of 4:35.24.

Bethlehem senior Jake Platel also competed at the Nike Indoor Nationals. Platel finished 11th in the boys pole vault after clearing the bar at 14 feet, 8.25 inches.

Best leads UAlbany past Temple

Guilderland High School graduate Kayla Best equaled a season-high with four goals to lead the University at Albany women's lacrosse team to a 15-8 victory over Temple Sunday in Philadelphia.

Best capped an 8-0 Great Dane spurt with an unassisted goal 17 minutes into the first half. She then tallied three times in the second half as she extended her goal-scoring streak to 37 consecutive games.

Guilderland graduate Nikki Branchini contributed a goal for the University at Albany, which improved its record to 2-5.

Best, Branchini and the Great Danes return to action Saturday when they host New Hampshire.

Siena receives single-digit seed for first time

Siena College's big NCAA Tournament Selection Show party lasted less than 10 minutes Sunday.

That's how long it took for CBS to announce that the Saints had received the No. 9 seed in the Midwest Region and a first-round game against No. 8 Ohio State Friday in Dayton.

While the players and fans cheered wildly as the match-up was revealed, it did cut the event at the Alumni Recreation Center short. Within 10 minutes, most of the people cleared out of the building.

"I was hoping to stay here for 10 to 15 minutes, instead of five,"

Eagles advance to state semis

The Bethlehem Central Lady Eagles are playing like a team of destiny.

After a 42-40 loss to Mohonasen on Jan. 23, the Eagles have won 10 straight games including a 50-40 win over Cicero-North Syracuse in Saturday's Class AA regional final at Liverpool High School.

Bethlehem advances to Friday's state semifinals at Hudson Valley Community College against Kingston.

Before the game began, CNS had two advantages over Bethlehem. The Northstars had 6-foot, 3-inch freshman Breanna Stewart and a large, vocal crowd.

The first 16 minutes the game came down to two players: Stewart against Alex McCullough for the Eagles.

"We just strategized, and coach (Mark Nealon) taught us a few little tricks to get around her," said the 6-foot, 1-inch McCullough.

Although Stewart won the point battle between the two centers (she finished with 18 points), McCullough's quick three-point release and lane aggressiveness sparked the Eagles to a 20-15 halftime lead. McCullough finished the game with 13 points.

As the third quarter began, the Northstars defense stepped up, forcing more turnovers and uncharacteristically sloppy passing. But it seemed like all that the Eagles needed was something to kick the adrenaline in.

They got it in the second half from a somewhat unexpected place: Caitlin Dole. She hit two clutch three-pointers to help Bethlehem maintain its lead. She ended up with seven points overall.

"It felt really good, especially the second one. A lot of the defenders were really in our face, and it felt good to hit it and get us a good lead going into the fourth quarter," said Dole.

NCAA grants honor with strings attached

The NCAA Tournament committee didn't do the Siena men's basketball team any favors, even as it gave the Saints an honor.

By seeding Siena ninth in the Midwest regional, the committee granted the Saints an honor few Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference champions had received — a single-digit seed.

But by giving Siena a first-round match-up with No. 8 Ohio State in Dayton — a 70-mile drive from Ohio State's campus in Columbus — the committee, in effect, granted the Saints a road game.

And by placing Siena in the same side of the regional bracket with top-seed Louisville — the No. 1 overall seed — the committee gave the Saints the hardest draw for any No. 9 seed looking to get into the "Sweet 16."

Thanks for nothing.

Not that Siena's players or coaches are complaining. The Saints are overjoyed to be a single-digit seed.

"We were really thinking (we'd be) anything from a No. 10 to a No. 12 seed, but it shows that the basketball committee has a lot of respect for us," said Siena forward and Scotia native Josh Duell.

In truth, the committee did show Siena a lot of respect — possibly more respect than the Saints deserved. After all, this is a team that doesn't have a signature win this season, despite all the opportunities it had against the likes of Tennessee, Oklahoma State, Pittsburgh and Kansas. Had the Saints won any of those games, I would have expected a single-digit seed. But to get a No. 9 seed without a single marquee win is quite a feat.
