Town says it won't extend water to N.S. site

Bethlehem says Route 85 can't handle proposed big-box's infrastructure

By JARRETT CARROLL and DAN SABBATINO
news@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem officials said they are skeptical of a big-box proposal in neighboring New Scotland and are pledging to say "no" to extending water or sewer to the project.

The town currently sells water and sewer services to New Scotland and owns the Vly Creek Reservoir in Voorheesville, which is its main water supply.

The majority of the Bethlehem Town Board does not support the current proposal from Sphere Development LLC in Cazenovia, and members said they won't support any municipal water or sewer lines to the large retail proposal at the site at the former Bender Melon Farm, situated on routes 85 and 85A.

Supervisor Jack Cunningham said the location simply couldn't sustain it.

"The reality is that their infrastructure is not prepared for that type of development," he said. "We're not advocating for this project and the residents are communicating to me they are not supporting it... so that's what I've been communicating back to New Scotland."

Opposition to the plans began when a 137,000-square-foot anchor store, such as Target,

Is money in the pipeline for McKownville?

Residents press for stimulus funds to improve sewer system

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

McKownville residents are stepping up efforts to secure stimulus money for a much-needed sewer system.

Don Reeb, president of the McKownville Improvement Association has already asked Guiderland Supervisor Ken Runion to forward letters and e-mails to state and national representatives on the neighborhood's behalf, and residents are now sending letters and e-mails directly.

"We're getting kind of desperate to figure out how to get this done," Reeb said. "This is consuming an awful lot of effort."

Reeb said the situation has worsened in recent years.

"It's getting worse partly because the sewer system isn't as good as used to be, and partly because the water levels are going up and up," Reeb said.

Reeb said he could not say for sure the exact age of the sewer system, but he noted that a portion of the pipes recently dug up were made out of wood.

"The pipes are very, very old," Reeb said.

Runion said the town has applied for a $5.75 million grant from stimulus money to complete the McKownville project. The town has also applied for a $2.18 million grant for stormwater improvements at the Curry Road extension and an $800,000 grant to upgrade the swimming pool and house at Tawasentha Park.

"Those projects are all shovel ready and could be completed within a year," Runion said.

Beau Duffy, spokesman for Rep. Paul Tonko, D-Amsterdam, who represents McKownville, said Tonko has been doing his best to secure funds for local infrastructure initiatives.

"[Tonko's] role right now is to advocate for local projects," Duffy said. "A lot of the grants are competitive."

Dashing the cold away

The 21st annual race takes its place in the history books after record turnout

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Despite chilly winds, it was a record year for the Delmar Dash as hundreds of runners hit the streets for the 21st time to commemorate the premier springtime 5-mile road race.

At exactly 9 a.m. on Sunday, April 5, people from all over the Capital District lined up along Kenwood Avenue and had filled the street in front of the Bethlehem Middle School. By 9:01 a.m. the largest pack of runners to date charged down the roadway either seeking victory or just making an appearance in an annual rite of passage with their friends and neighbors.

Police Blotter

Officers find drugs during traffic stop

A Ravena woman was charged with driving under the influence of drugs after officers saw her stopped at a green light on Route 9W.

Marie A. Vanderheyden, 42, of 18 Pulver Ave., Ravena, was arrested Wednesday, April 1, and charged with operating a motor vehicle while impaired by drugs, a misdemeanor, and failure to keep right, an infraction.

Bethlehem police said they received a call from a person following a vehicle that was reported to be "driving erratically," and "was crossing back and forth between [the] center lines and fog lines" of the roadway.

Police discovered Vanderheyden's vehicle traveling northbound on Route 9W near Wemple Road and saw her waiting second in line behind another vehicle at a red light, according to the arrest report.

After the light turned green, the lead vehicle drove through, but the "suspect vehicle remained stopped blocking traffic," according to the report.

Police said they attempted to make a motor vehicle stop, but Vanderheyden failed to comply for a period of three-tenths of a mile ... pulling completely off road."

Officers identified Vanderheyden who was "fumbling with the papers" when talking to police, and, upon further interview, she was "mumbling and difficult to understand."

Vanderheyden denied consuming alcohol or using "street drugs," and she initially denied using prescription drugs, according to the arrest report.

She gave officers permission to search her vehicle and police discovered "in plain view in her purse on ... the passenger seat prescription pill bottles."

There were 65 pills left in one bottle with a 120-count and 28 pills left in a second bottle with a 30-count, according to the report.

Vanderheyden failed a field-sobriety test and was transported to the Bethlehem Police Department after consenting to a chemical test at Albany Medical Center, where blood was taken, according to police.

Coeymans police provided Vanderheyden with a courtesy transport home.

Other arrests

• Guiderland police arrested Joseph A. Cooper, 43, of 33 Harrison Ave. in Delmar, on charges of DWI and operating a vehicle with a blood-alcohol content of 0.08 percent, on Sunday, March 15, according to police.

Cooper was arrested near the corner of Coons Road and Carman Road, and was arraigned later that day.

• Anthony J. Caputo, 22, of 34 Congress St., Cohoes, was arrested on River Road on Sunday, March 15, on charges of DWI, operating a motor vehicle with a BAC of 0.08 percent or greater, and failing to dim headlights.

Bethlehem police said an officer on patrol saw a vehicle fail to dim its lights and made a motor vehicle stop near the Albany City line on River Road.

Officers said they could smell alcohol on Caputo's breath and that he was displaying signs of intoxication, according to the arrest report. He also failed a field-sobriety test, according to the report.

Caputo was taken into custody and transported to the Bethlehem Police Department.

An inventory was taken of Caputo's vehicle and it was towed, according to police, and it was discovered that his passenger was wanted on an active arrest warrant out of the City of Cohoes.

Caputo submitted to a chemical test that revealed a BAC higher than the legal limit of 0.08 percent and he was released to his mother and is scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on Tuesday, April 7, the report states.

• Guiderland police arrested Thomas D. Jones, 35, of 2 Kristole Court in Albany, on charges of DWI on Friday, March 13, according to police reports.

Jones was arrested near the corner of East Old State Road, and Kings Road. He was arraigned later that day.

• Benjamin S. Gaspar, 21, of 64 Delaware Ave., Apt. 5, Delmar, was arrested Friday, March 27, at his home for first-degree unlawfully dealing with a child, a misdemeanor.

Bethlehem police said they received a call about a possible underage party occurring at Gaspar's home, and when officers arrived at the scene, they "observed numerous empty Coors Light beer cans sitting on the table, which could be seen as soon as Gaspar opened the door to the apartment."

Officers counted 17 empty beer cans and two full ones, which were secured as evidence, and Gaspar admitted to police to providing alcohol to several underage individuals at the home, according to the arrest report.

Police said officers could smell alcohol on Gaspar's breath and that he was taken into custody without incident and transported to the Bethlehem Police Department where he was issued appearance tickets to town court.

Gaspar was scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on Tuesday, April 7, the report states.

• Guiderland police arrested Michael J. Natale, 46, of West Old State Road on charges of aggravated DWI, on Saturday, March 28, according to police reports.

Natale was arrested near the corner of Posson Road and Western Avenue, and was arraigned later that evening.

BC prepares for budget adoption

No tax rate projection yet, but district officials tout two percent levy increase during economic crisis

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Although the state budget is still somewhat in limbo, the Bethlehem School District is standing by its current budget reductions and plans to adopt a tentative spending plan on Wednesday, April 22.

The Bethlehem Board of Education didn't officially adopt a tentative budget for voters to look at during its Wednesday, March 25, meeting, but said they wouldn't make any further reductions to its 2009-2010 budget.

With all of the reductions awaiting final vote by the district's board, Bethlehem Central would present voters with a 2 percent tax levy increase if promised state and federal funds are delivered.

Some of the reductions were more controversial than others, which led to some changes throughout a lengthy budget process that began back in January.

Superintendent Michael Tebbano took over the reins of the district last July, and said he wanted to make the school budget process more transparent and involve more community involvement.

His first budget as superintendent saw a state budget in turmoil as the national economy soured and plunged into recession.

"I just want to make this process as transparent as possible," Tebbano has told The Spotlight on numerous occasions.

Some of the more controversial decisions to date have included: not replacing an Elsmere librarian; eliminating an elementary dean making $81,375; eliminating a full-time Math AIS position at $62,500; the elimination of a full-time high school music teacher making $94,817 and another full-time staff position at the high school for a $62,500 savings; eliminating 5 full-time position for special education aides for a total of $150,000; eliminating all evening games in athletics; and discontinuing paying for ice, greens and lane fees for the hockey, golf and bowling teams.

Board of education members voted to keep modified and freshman level sports after hearing vocal opposition to making such a cut. Spokesman Matt Leon said that night games would continue at Bethlehem through the rest of this year and that the elimination would take effect until after July 1, when the new school year begins.

According to the district's athletic department, Bethlehem would play night games when it travels to other schools, but would play during the day, most likely Saturdays, when playing opponents at home.

The interests of residents came through during discussions at board of education meetings in March, as the concerns of various parents, students, and teachers were publicly aired.

One resident the board asked why around 5 percent of the overall budget reductions were taken from the musical department while slightly less than 1.5 percent was taken out of the athletics department.

The board did not specifically address the comment.

Bethlehem has eliminated $2,263,890 from its "rollover" or "carry over" budget from last year. Obligations from its union contracts make up a large portion of the increases that the district must endure annually in order to honor pay raises and other such increases.

This particular area of the budget, salaries, which consists of the majority of the school's budget and has also come under criticism from union members and residents alike.

The Bethlehem Central Teachers Association had reopened its contract and discussed with the district the possibility of re-negotiating its raises, but talks quickly broke down and no changes occurred.

Some teachers in the district have been critical of district's administrators and staff unions for not doing the same and attempting to renegotiate its contracts.

Tebbano said he will take no raise over the next two years, but said little could be done about contractual raises, which total more than 5 percent for district workers.

The Bethlehem Board of Education is holding a special meeting on Wednesday, April 8, at 7 p.m. to adjourn into executive session "on consideration of contractual issues." Check www.spotlightnews.com and the April 15 edition of The Spotlight for updates regarding that executive session.

Other district reductions included: a $50,000 reduction in the middle school teaching staff and a $8,600 reduction of the STRIVE program; a $62,500 reduction of the Alternative Education Program (CORE) in the high school; a reduction in the number of athletic contests, saving $8,600 and a $7,000 elimination of uniform purchasing; a $62,500 full-time position in the special education department; and a $12,000 savings for not sending an additional Tech Valley High student.

A complete list of reductions can be found on the district's Web site.

"Our test this year was to make the cuts necessary to put a budget before voters that is responsive to both their calls for tax restraint and the uncertain economic climate while preserving the program," board president James Lytle said in a release. "...I believe we have met that test."

Chamber member talks biz strategies in tough times

Talk focuses on benefits of online networking

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Amid economic uncertainty, Guilderland Chamber of Commerce members were given some practical, Web-based advice Friday, April 3, when fellow chamber member Lisbeth Calandrino, of Peachtree Communications, presented a one-hour seminar: "Tough Strategies for Tough Times — What You Can Do To Survive and Thrive."

Calandrino spoke at length about "Internet 2.0," a term used to describe interactive Web sites such as Facebook and LinkedIn.

"Networking is not just making friends online," she said.

Calandrino said the Internet, RSS feeds and "blogging" are tools to keep businesses current and traditional advertising is a thing of the past.

"Your marketing really has to be online and active," she said. "You need a Facebook. This is fast-paced stuff; you've got to keep moving."

Roger Lipera, a chamber member, Web designer and consultant, said Web-based strategies are useful for monitoring popularity, consumer wishes and information about how often, and for how long, users frequent a company Web site.

"Everything on the Web is countable — everything," Lipera said.

Calandrino said she understands the fast-paced nature of the Internet can intimidate some, but it is still growing. She said the myth that seniors are not online is just that — a myth. They are actually the fastest-growing segment of Internet users to date, she said.

Calandrino advocated for using the Internet as a tool to open a dialogue with customers, and to learn what they want, especially now when they are "scared, mad and confused" about the economy.

She said customers no longer "listen" to messages from advertisements.

"They speak," she said. "They're blogging. They want to be part of your business. ... It's our connections with humans that make us human."

Calandrino emphasized societal changes in attitude.

"We live in what's called an experience economy," she said.

She likened the changes in consumerism to baking a cake. At one time, people bought the raw materials to make the cake, then they moved on to cake mixes for $3 a box, then to buying whole cakes for $30. Now, she said, people want to spend $300 at Chuck E. Cheese's for the experience of cake and party.

She also spoke of "Generation G," who she said ranges in age from 18 to 45, and, as a group, is moving away from the "greed" of corporate America and choosing "generous and green" business practices.

She said community relations and trust are vital.

"Who you are in the community is more important than the brands you sell," she said.

Kathy Burbank, Executive Director of the Chamber of Commerce, said she was pleased to have Calandrino speak to members.

"Member-initiated workshops tend to be the best [because] they know what's going on out there," Burbank said.

BC Transportation Department holds open house

The Bethlehem Central School District Transportation Department will hold a Tuesday, May 5, open house as an opportunity for community members to tour the renovated facility and ask questions about department operations and the bus replacement plan two weeks ahead of the budget vote.

The event will run from 8 to 10 a.m. It will feature a tour of the facility, which was renovated two years ago as part of the district's major capital construction project, a brief presentation and an opportunity to ask Transportation Director Alfred Karam questions. Light refreshments will be provided.

To attend the event, register with Cindy Bradley in the superintendent's office at 439-7098 or bradcco@bcsd.neric.org by Friday, April 24.

A referendum to purchase replacement buses will be on the May 19 ballot alongside the school budget. This year, the bus replacement plan calls for 18 buses at a cost of $1.2 million.

The cost related to the bus purchases is not in addition to the school budget because debt service payments are included in the total spending plan that voters consider on that day. In the community budget survey and community budget forums completed over the winter, a number of transportation questions emerged.

District officials have said they hope community members see the open house as an opportunity to learn more about the department's operations, the bus fleet, and have those questions answered.

Mother-in-law performs feat worth a feast

There it sat on my countertop, again. The platter of grilled cheese sandwiches. My kids don't mind eating them, but I do. More specifically, I mind the reasons why we were eating grilled cheese for dinner.

And that particular batch wasn't so bad. The bread was a farmhouse style, chewy and dense. The cheese, our favorite for melting in sandwiches, was Muenster. The sandwiches were fried up in a little olive oil. Everyone reached for a sandwich, preferring the pieces with bits of cheese, which melted over and became brown and crispy on the pan. The best part was, they were perfectly golden.

Among my children, I am notorious for serving up beautiful, golden brown grilled cheese sandwiches. They hold so much promise, the bread crisp and slightly oily, the cheese salty and gooey. And then all hopes are dashed when one bite into this glorious sandwich reveals a completely black bottom. Cleverly, I put that side down on the plate. Lucy in particular is aghast when this happens.

"Did you really think we wouldn't notice, Mama?" she demands.

Really, I knew they would notice. I just hoped they wouldn't complain too much. The burning usually happens after the first side is browned. I flip them over, pour milks, toss the salad, help Elliot find a Lego piece, check Lucy's homework, call Zoe in for dinner ... and remember my grilled cheese. I don't want to waste the bread and cheese. So I scrape the burned side and we eat them anyway.

From a Caterer's Kitchen

On this particular evening, I did not burn the grilled cheese sandwiches. Still, they made me feel a little sad. We were eating a "Daddy's not here" dinner because Paul was on a business trip. Again. When he does travel for work, dinner isn't the same. The meal is not an event. It's just dinner. We tend to not spend as much time at the table without him.

When we do have a week of eating together, our dinner menus might look something like this: fish tacos, Asian chicken skewers with peanut noodles and lentil sausage soup. There is always a leftover night, too. Everyone can pick a little of everything, or avoid whatever wasn't their favorite.

But travel for work has changed a lot of things for us. How we eat dinner is one of them. The last time Paul worked out of town, we ate veggie burgers and salad. That was the first night.

Good Enough For Your Mother-In-Law Asian Pork

2 pork tenderloins, trimmed of fat and cut into 1" cubes

Zest of 2 limes

1-inch piece of ginger, peeled and grated

2 tablespoons brown sugar

1 cup soy sauce

Wooden skewers, soaked in water

In a large glass bowl, combine the pork with the lime zest, ginger, sugar and soy. Toss to coat and refrigerate for an hour. Light a grill to medium-low heat. Thread 4-5 pieces of pork onto each skewer, careful not push the pieces together too tightly. Cook on the grill, rotating every minute or two. Check the meat after 10 minutes. Pork is done when it's no longer pink inside.

Vietnamese Noodle Salad

1 package vermicelli rice noodles (available in the Asian section of any grocery store)

1 medium cucumber

1 handful cilantro

2 green onions

1 tablespoon vegetable oil

1/4 cup rice vinegar

1 tablespoon sugar

1 teaspoon Asian fish sauce (available in the Asian section of any grocery store)

Unsalted peanuts, chopped

Cook rice noodles for 3 minutes in a large pot of boiling water. Drain and rinse under cold water. In a large bowl, mix oil, vinegar, sugar and fish sauce. Wash and chop cucumber and green onions. Wash and finely chop cilantro. Combine noodles with dressing, and stir in cucumber, onion and cilantro. Sprinkle peanuts on top.

Napa Cabbage Slaw

1 head Napa cabbage, thinly sliced

3 tablespoons vegetable oil

1 teaspoon sesame oil

1/4 cup rice vinegar

1 tablespoon white sugar

1/2 teaspoon sea salt

toasted sesame seeds

Combine the oils, sugar and sea salt with the vinegar and stir to dissolve the sugar. Coat the cabbage with the dressing. Best after a few hours. Toss sesame seeds on for garnish. This salad is also lovely with carrots, peppers, snow peas or any crisp vegetable added. Make more dressing as needed.

And then we had scrambled eggs. Next we were back to grilled cheese sandwiches and salad. I dream about the time Paul will walk through the door, in one or two days. He'll give huge hugs, lifting people in the air. And I'll start planning my next Indian dish.

It was during a long stretch when Paul was at home that I started thinking about his upcoming trip. We had one more precious day together, and then he would be gone. No one talks about it much. Instead, we spend the time together happy, grateful to be together when we can. I try not to mope.

And then, my mother-in-law called. She is a true wonder: young, beautiful, full of energy and a lust for all things in life. She introduces me to her friends as her daughter-in-law. Really. This phone call was made to ask if I would like her company. She offered to come for a few days, drive Elliot to school, help with homework, anything that was needed. I hung up, giddy with excitement. My week was definitely looking up.

Joan showed up at exactly the right moment. She swooped in, emptied the dishwasher, played Scrabble Jr. with Elliot and took Lucy and Zoe to Girl Scouts. After dinner, she shooed me out the door, bathed children, read books and put them to bed. All this, and she still sat for a glass of wine when I returned home.

The next day was even better. Poor Zoe laid in bed that day, feverish and sick. Joan and I were a tag team, one home and the other driving to school, the orthodontist and swimming. She also washed, folded and put away nine loads of laundry (I counted them!).

It came time to think about dinner, and I decided that her visit was reason enough to have a mini feast. Something more than sandwiches. There were all the ingredients in my refrigerator for an Asian pork dish we all love. This recipe combines a few ingredients with lime zest to marinate small pieces of pork. It's important to use the zest rather than the juice, as the juice burns off quickly on the grill. If you don't have a zester, use the backside of a cheese grater, and then tap the grated zest into a bowl. The side is a Vietnamese style rice noodle dish. It is a nice change from wheat noodles. The cucumbers and herbs make the noodles seem light, like something you should be eating in spring. The final piece is a simple salad made with mild Napa cabbage. It adds crunch and texture to the whole plate.

The author is the food writer for The Spotlight and the mother of three children, Lucy, age 9, Zoe, age 7, and Elliot, age 4. She can be reached at news@spotlightnews.com.

NS4SED sponsors size cap forum

Opposing group comes out against 50,000-square-foot limit

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Residents packed the room at a Wednesday, April 1, forum sponsored by a New Scotland advocacy group in favor of a retail development size cap, but the formation in recent weeks of a group that says those goals are too restrictive shows that not everyone in town is on the same page.

New Scotlanders for Sound Economic Development, or NS4SED, sponsored the forum, along with town Supervisor Tom Dolin and board member Doug LaGrange. The group has long promoted the 50,000-square-foot retail development size cap, which they have said would discourage "big-box" developments from locating within town borders.

"I thought it went very well," said Liz Kormos, an NS4SED member who sits on the town's commercial zone advisory committee. "Standing-room-only is a good sign."

Another advocacy group, Pride of New Scotland, which formed in early March, has voiced opposition to a number of the principle initiatives discussed at the forum.

Anne Brill, an officer of Pride of New Scotland, said the group is in favor of economic growth in New Scotland, and she said the zoning law drafted by Kormos and fellow CZAC member Mike Naughton is "too restrictive." That law, known as Local Law I, would cap commercial retail development at 50,000 square feet.

Kormos was earlier the source of controversy when several CZAC members stepped down, saying she had a conflict of interest because of previous work she did as a consultant to a bidder on the Bender Melon Farm, a key piece of property in New Scotland's economic zone.

Kormos said Pride of New Scotland, "misinterpreted" the spirit of the 50,000-square-foot size cap, which would not explicitly "prohibit" retail buildings and developments.

"Part of our mission is education," she said of the forum.

She defended the size cap and said planned unit developments would still allow developers to bring large projects to the town, even if there was a size cap.

At the forum, which included panelists John Egan, a New Scotland resident and commissioner of the State Office of General Services, and former town Supervisor Ed Clark, NS4SED members addressed the New Scotland Planning Board's recommendation to remove the size cap.

"We note that with this wording, the Planning Board recommendations do nothing to limit either store or retail project size. In our opinion, their recommendations do not just permit, but clearly invite big-box retail development to our commercial zone," read an e-mail from NS4SED representatives.

"If one [big-box retailer] comes or one doesn't, my life is still worth living; the town is still going to be a great place."

Anne Brill

"As our presentations at the forum this week revealed, there are a wide range of impacts to our community from over-development on this scale."

Brill said the CZAC proposal is too broad.

"It is such an overreaching proposal that stretches to all the commercial hamlets, all the commercial zones and the industrial zone," Brill said. "It's just so bad for business."

She said the big-box issue is not the only matter to be affected by the law, and not the only important matter in the town.

"If one [big-box retailer] comes or one doesn't, my life is still worth living; the town is still going to be a great place," Brill said. "[NS4SED] are so focused on the big-box issue that they're completely blind."

Roz Robinson, former chair of CZAC and Brill's sister, said she has not decided if she will join Pride of New Scotland, but said she is glad to hear a vocal opposition to NS4SED.

"Their [NS4SED's] whole crux seems to be stopping the big-box," she said. "I just think it's great to hear the counterpoint."

She said the law as it is proposed is too broad.

Kormos retorted and said advertisements placed by Pride of New Scotland have misinformation about NS4SED's position.

"A lot of things put out by the Pride of New Scotland are absolutely false," Kormos said. "We would love to see them hold a forum. They are trying to distract us from the main issue — big-box."

Kormos said New Scotland only needs about 15,000 square feet of retail in order to satisfy the town's need.

"In the next few weeks you are going to see a lot of support for the law," Kormos said.

Town Supervisor Tom Dolin said he supports a size cap, but added the law as it stands now needs some revisions regarding the difference between a "permitted use" and a "special use."

The town held a workshop on Monday, April 6, after The Spotlight had gone to press. Check back at www.spotlightnews.com for an update on that workshop.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

From one race to another

While we're waiting for the dust to settle in the Congressional race to replace Kirsten Gillibrand in the 20th District, let's take a moment to recognize something a little more light-hearted: community activities.

Just about every community in The Spotlight's coverage area — the greater Capital District, for those of you who were wondering — will or has hosted some sort of benefit race or running event around this time of year. The Delmar Dash, in which The Spotlight was a proud sponsor of the Spotlight on Youth Kids' Races, was just run through the streets of Bethlehem, and we'd like to congratulate Pat Cullen of Albany and Emily Bryans of Schenectady, the male and female winners of this year's event.

This summer, Albany County will host a slew of events, including the perennial Freihofer's Run for Women, and the 5 Kelly's 5K Race and Family Fun Walk, to benefit the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society, at The Crossings in Colonie. In just a couple of weeks, Niskayuna's Congregation Gates of Heaven will host the Cherry Blossom Challenge. Just a couple of weeks after that, the Saratoga Spa State Park will host the kLaVoy5K Run/Walk to benefit The Center for Donation and Transplant.

After being overwhelmed by the ubiquitous campaign ads, press releases, news and non-news stories that gurgled out of the campaigns of both parties in the 20th race, these are the types of races that we at The Spotlight can get behind. No backbiting, no name-calling, no talk of who went negative first, and no waiting around for two weeks for results.

Just good, old-fashioned, spirited competition — the kinds of races that may scuff your knees and get your hands dirty, but leave your conscience cleaner than when you started.

We command your attention to these events as an opportunity to be involved with members of your communities, to raise money and awareness for the myriad charities they benefit, and to challenge yourselves and have fun while doing it.

Enjoy these races over the next few months, until the political ones begin anew in November.

For a list of races and events in your community, visit www.spotlightnews.com.

Editorial

The madness drags into April

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

The writer is a reporter for the Saratoga County editions of The Spotlight.

March tends to be the month you hear about underdogs, close contests and Cinderella stories, but they usually come from the basketball court, not the political arena.

As The Spotlight's resident 20th Congressional District reporter, the past three months have left me feeling as if a circus strongman stuffed me in a burlap sack filled with feral cats and about four million meaningless press releases. He then soaked the whole bag in gasoline and left it to bake in the August sun.

That might not make a lot of sense to you, but it's an oddly appropriate way to describe the manner in which I was left but a shell of my former self in the early morning hours of April 1, sitting at my kitchen table and penning our comprehensive special election night coverage.

I was looking forward to using a catchy and playful headline ("Disco Fever" or "Great Scott!") were topping my mental list, depending on who ended up victorious, but like dozens of other local and not-so-local journalists I found myself saddled with the four words preceding every single story on the results: too close to call.

I'm not bemoaning the task I was given or the job that lies ahead. And I'm certainly not speaking ill of our coverage of the election itself. I was, however, hoping for a thrilling resolution to what was an all-out, no-holds-barred battle between these two candidates that brought political junkies their own version of March madness.

Now it appears the match will end with a whimper rather than a bang, at some indeterminate time in some indeterminate courtroom. Even a jaded old codger like me would prefer balloons, flashbulbs and champagne to the inevitable recounts and legal challenges that have already begun. Let's just hope this doesn't turn into an Al Franken-Norm Coleman debacle, leaving citizens in the 20th without a representative for even more months to come.

As of press time, the state Board of Elections is pegging the unofficial vote count at dead even: 77,225 for both James Tedisco and Scott Murphy. You don't have to be a political hound to know that such a circumstance is unbelievably rare, but that somehow fits very nicely into the big picture of this race.

This contest was unusual from the get-go. It was a rarely seen special election, to start. It featured a hardened politico against an unknown businessman. The top issue was not district-specific, but instead a national crisis. Money flowed fast and furious, the president weighed in, the outcome and voter turnout went against all predictions, and the campaigning was almost entirely negative.

So maybe a tie isn't that extraordinary after all, considering that this has been a wild and unpredictable ride from day one. By the time you read this the tally will almost certainly have changed, though, as some areas have still not completed their recounts.

But Murphy's performance is the most interesting element here. Two months ago, I wrote a column suggesting that Scott Murphy would have his work cut out for him, and a lot of other folks came to similar conclusions. After all, he was a mystery candidate going up against a political brand in what was to be one of the shortest contests even run. Game over, many figured.

But I have to hand it to Murphy, and I think everyone else should, too. He might not have bagged a landslide or even the win, but his campaign made an impressive push that startled pundits. His people were smart enough to recognize that Tedisco was effectively painted into a corner on the subject of the stimulus package (support it, and he's not a good Republican; denounce it, and he's supporting bread lines) and gave him no quarter on the issue. That and a truckload of money helped Murphy gain 13 points in one month (according to Siena polling).

Though many may have been put off by Murphy's constant attacks, as the little-known candidate he had much more to gain than lose by going negative (and as the saying goes, there's no such thing as bad publicity). Still, nearly every voter this reporter spoke to on the day of election expressed displeasure at the tone and amount of campaign materials that were stuffed in their mailboxes, blasted on their radios and flashed across their televisions. By the end of the race, polls said that ads from both candidates were actually more likely to turn off voters than win them over.

Tedisco tried to become the positive candidate by pledging a new tenor once his opponent went from outside shot to contender, but the effect was just a few gentler ads that made him seem unwilling or unable to address his opponent's attacks.

And despite what the polls say, I think that people actually enjoy negative ads. We say we don't because that's the expected response. In the end, however, the attacks are a lot more fun than the fluff, and the campaigns know that they'll stick with voters for longer than a few seconds. That dark, dramatic voice saying "millionaire Scott Murphy" or "Albany politician Jim Tedisco" still creeps into my mind from time to time, but stock footage of an empty factory is a real snooze.

That might be an uncomfortable thought for some, seeing as we have elections in order to select the best person for a really important job. Unfortunately, serious candidates for office spend tremendous amounts of money to play on people's basest fears and preconditioned assumptions in an effort make the truth a nonfactor. They go to great lengths to assure you that they are as normal as can be; and operate on the assumption that people vote for the candidate they can best relate to. Personally, I would rather be represented by someone who can get potholes fixed than a guy it would be fun to have a beer with.

That's why it's so vital that the media is here to cut through all that nonsense and give people pertinent information on candidates. It's one of the most important services news outlets provide, because without it we would have to rely on campaign ads.

But with cutbacks in newsrooms and news holes across the nation — combined with a growing trend leading away from "old" media formats — it's getting harder and harder for newspapers to get the necessary amount of information for readers. And there's a whole generation of future voters out there who view newspapers (even online editions) as quaint.

That doesn't worry this reporter, though, because there will always be a legitimate need for people to ask questions of candidates, fact-check ad claims and let people know what happened on election night. Because without that, we'd have to trust politicians at their word.

Keep checking the Saratoga County editions of The Spotlight as this election process moves ahead, as well as www.spotlightnews.com for updates between printings.

Celebrate National Library Week with your local librarian

Editor, The Spotlight:

Next week people across the country will celebrate National Library Week, a time to remind the public about the services their local libraries, librarians, and library support staff provide to their communities every day.

It's not news that many are suffering from a tough economy. Nor is it any longer news — given all the media coverage lately — about how increasing numbers of people are flocking to their local library to make use of free resources that will help them find jobs and learn new skills. Connecting people with the resources they need is what libraries are all about, which makes this year's National Library Week theme — "Worlds connect @ your library" — particularly appropriate.

Libraries bring together people of all ages and backgrounds who seek everything from self-help tools and multi-media resources to entertainment or maybe just a quiet, community-focused gathering place. With a wealth of free resources such as books, magazines, DVDs, public-access computers, and WiFi access, the library is a great place to tackle school projects, do research, learn new ways to improve health, discuss a book, or any of the countless other activities. And the virtual library — accessing your library online — offers a way to take advantage of many online subscription services for free. What makes the library unique is access to trained professionals — librarians — who help people find and interpret the information they need to make a difference in their lives. From adult services librarians who specialize in health issues or English for Speakers of Other Languages, to youth services librarians who foster literacy in the next generation of readers and leaders, librarians connect patrons with information and services.

The library is staffed with professionals committed to service; the library is where it all happens.

Here are just a few of the things you can do at your local library during National Library Week:

Attend a free CPR instructional session talk at the Guilderland Public Library. On Wednesday, April 15, at 6:30 p.m., you can learn how to perform Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) for adults, children, or infants, and how to help someone who is choking. This is not a certification course, but it's invaluable training for families. It's offered by the library through a partnership with the Western Turnpike Rescue Squad.

Enjoy a free concert at the Bethlehem Public Library. "A Musical Journey Through Attitudes," on April 17, at 2 p.m., is Diane Geddes' and Quency Rene, aka "Two Broads with Alotta Sound," performing some of New York's greatest songs. Demonstrate your "nimble fingers" at the Voorheesville Public Library

"Nimblefingers" is a gathering place for those interested in sharing their excitement for the needle arts. On Tuesday, April 14 — and every Tuesday, in fact — you can learn a new skill or share your own special talents with others. What can you connect with at your library? National Library Week is the perfect time to find out. Come in and see what all the excitement's about.

Local Law A infringes on citizens' rights

Editor, The Spotlight:

When laws are drafted to infringe on the rights of law-abiding citizens, we, as a nation, should take a serious look at our government and those who represent us.

Whether these proposed laws are national, state or local in nature, they chip away at the very foundation of our constitution and freedom.

The latest of these proposals has been introduced in the Albany County Legislature under the guise of Local Law A. This proposal would force an individual to show a firearms license when purchasing ammunition, and would force a dealer to keep a lengthy record of each sale of ammunition including information about the purchaser and the gun that the ammunition is purchased for.

The underlying purpose of this legislation is to reduce gang violence in the City of Albany.

New York State Penal Law 270.00 (5) already addresses the sale of ammunition. Posing further regulations on law-abiding citizens and businesses does not save lives nor does it address the real issues of gang violence. As citizens we should not ignore the loss of constitutional rights through legislative action by those who are suppose to represent our interests. This is the underlying reason why I cannot support Local Law A currently under consideration in the Albany County Legislature.

'Hierarchy of the weak' should include unborn

Editor, The Spotlight:

I was intrigued by your March 26 editorial (Four legs good, two legs bad) wherein you wrote "It's been stated that a society is judged on the basis of how it treats its weakest members. Somewhere along the line, while we were busy tolerating the misplaced priorities of others, a large group of us chose to place animals higher than human beings in the hierarchy of the weak."

Well said, and I applaud your passion, especially when it comes to the misplaced priority of killing the weakest human beings of all, our living but yet unborn children.

Tolerating murder will no doubt cause our society to be judged.

Healthy Schools Act will combat obesity

Editor, The Spotlight:

With childhood obesity rates reaching epidemic proportions throughout the nation and in New York State, many public health, education and consumer organizations are strongly supporting the passage of legislation to establish nutritional standards for school foods.

Poor food choices in our schools continue to be a serious contributing factor to unhealthy lifelong eating habits. Schools are ideal places to teach and model healthy habits to children. Research shows a direct link between nutritional intake and academic performance. Unfortunately, soft drinks and unhealthy food are available on many school campuses, making it difficult for our children to eat right.

On Monday, April 6, volunteers from the American Heart Association met with their state legislators to encourage them to pass the Healthy Schools Act that will improve the food choices at schools. Volunteers asked legislators to use school snack and beverage guidelines put forth by the Alliance for a Healthier Generation, a partnership between the American Heart Association and the William J. Clinton Foundation.

By establishing nutritional standards for school foods, New York can take steps to improve our children's health and combat the rising childhood obesity rates as well as other rates of nutritional related diseases such as heart disease, hypertension and diabetes.

We encourage legislators and the Governor to work together to enact legislation to require that school snacks and beverages meet the Alliance Guidelines in order to help New York's children to develop healthier eating habits and lead healthier lives.

Full-day kindergarten back in play for Guilderland

Federal stimulus funds could be available for program

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Guilderland residents went back and forth debating the merits of school services and programs on the chopping block for five meetings, only to find out Tuesday, March 31, that federal stimulus money would restore millions of dollars of aid cuts.

On Tuesday, the citizens budget advisory committee weighed in with suggestions on how to best use the restored funding, and some members expressed concern that the budget they were discussing in the first four meetings is not the one that will be voted on in May.

"The assumption is a full restoration of the state aid cut in Gov. [David] Paterson's budget," said Superintendent John McGuire, reminding those in attendance of the "very large cautionary words" the districts were given. "Don't put this money in long-term programs; it's going away."

He added that there were still many "unknowns" and that some questions about the funding, such as spending limitations, are still unanswered.

At the meeting, a preliminary $85 million spending plan, which includes a 1.49 percent tax increase, was recommended by the committee. Before federal stimulus aid was allocated, the proposed tax hike was 3.89 percent.

The committee's recommendation includes a 2.1 percent increase over last year's budget.

A final budget proposal was made at the Tuesday, April 7, school board meeting after The Spotlight went to press. Check back at www.spotlightnews.com for an update on the budget scheduled to be voted on in May.

Paterson proposed a $2.7 million cut in state aid to schools, in addition to other cuts, to help mitigate the state's multi-billion dollar budget deficit.

Some programs that were once ruled out for the 2009-2010 school year, such as full-day kindergarten, are now back on the table.

The Guilderland Central School District was originally prepared to go forward with the program but the economy forced them to reconsider. However, now that funding will be restored, the program is expected to be included in the budget proposal to be voted on in May.

Some members of the budget committee said they were worried the full-day kindergarten program will be too expensive down the road.

Full-day kindergarten will cost an estimated $568,435 per year, according to Assistant Superintendent for Business Neil Sanders.

There was initially the possibility of state start-up funding for the program, but because the district pulled its proposal for the program due to the slumping economy, it will not receive that funding this year. Sanders said, though, it could still be a possibility next year.

The full-day program would add nine additional teachers and another 1.7 special area teachers.

McGuire said the "assumption" is that the restorative aid will be able to go toward full-day kindergarten, although that has not been confirmed yet.

Committee members discussed how to ensure students receive the most with the resources the district has.

One member, Allan Simpson, spoke in favor of finding creative solutions to the financial woes school districts are facing.

"Turn over every stone and see what's there," he said. "We're in very, very tough economic times."

He said even a 1.5 percent tax increase is too much to ask of residents.

He said the teacher's assistants are taking the brunt of the cuts, and many of them work extremely hard for the $9 an hour they get paid.

He suggested that construction costs at the schools be cut in order to save jobs.

Dave Langenbach, a citizens budget advisory member, said his situation is indicative of the tough times faced by district residents, and he is supporting a budget that favors the taxpayer.

Langenbach was a bus driver in the district for 17 years and said he is afraid he may lose his home because of the magnitude of the economic climate.

"I'm that guy. I'm one of those people who fall into that category," he said. "These are real issues that affect real people."

He said full-day kindergarten should not be a priority and is a "financial albatross" to the taxpayer.

Christine Kenefick added that full-day kindergarten might not be as important as other benefits to youngsters.

She said she had conversations with kindergarten teachers who acknowledged that small class size and ample teacher's assistants are more important than full-day kindergarten.

Federal reimbursement will likely affect other plans, including those to cut five additional teacher's assistants. Some members of the advisory committee questioned why all 47 of the personnel cuts were not going to be restored.

"We felt we could do the job well with the original reductions ... but we've been listening," McGuire said about restoring the five positions.

The five teacher's assistant positions are for special needs math and reading students. Concerns were raised about the quality of education those students would get if all of the teacher's assistant positions were eliminated.

Bernadette Hallam, a committee member, said athletics are important, but not as important as strong academics.

She said that although athletics have proven benefits, so do core classes, and the district should look for ways to cut sports but not eliminate the programs entirely.

She also said renegotiating contracts and cutting the health-care options from four plans to two might help save some money.

Elementary school holds book fair

A.W. Becker Elementary held its book fair Wednesday to Monday, April 1 to 6.

Funds from the book sales will go toward providing a book for every student. When classes came by to shop, each student received a free book valued up to $5.

The fair was open each day from 9:15 until 11:30 a.m. and 1:05 until 3:15 p.m.

The theme of this year's fair was "Reading Makes You A Star." Kindergarten students started gearing up for the event three weeks ago with a pledge to read five books each week. Each student turned in a reading star for the Readers Wall of Fame.

Students in grades three to five were asked to read for a minimum of 20 minutes at least five nights a week to get their star on the wall. Students who turned in star sheets all three weeks were given a certificate of participation.

At an assembly on March 31, Jennifer Locke's second-grade class was recognized for reading the most books in the K-2 category, while Marisa Tutay's third-graders won in the three to five category. Each class walked the red carpet to receive its trophy.

As a reward for reading all those books, the students were promised a star-studded show, put on by their teachers, consisting of four acts: Natasha Bedingfield, Hannah Montana, the Jonas Brothers and the cast of "High School Musical." Officials said the students loved seeing their teachers perform.

Q: I have cataracts and I plan on having surgery. After cataract surgery, will I still need to wear eyeglasses?

A: "Cataracts are one of the leading causes of preventable blindness worldwide. Cataracts often cause blurry vision and glare at night while driving. A cataract is the stiffening and clouding of the natural lens, and the result is that the lens cannot focus light as well as it did before. Cataracts are common in most patients over fifty. There usually comes a time when a change in one's eyeglass prescription will not do much to improve vision, and surgery should be considered."

"Up until about ten years ago, all patients were very dependent on glasses after cataract surgery. Today, with the availability of premium (multifocal & accommodative) implant lenses, patients can enjoy reduced dependency on eyeglasses. These lenses act like a healthy natural lens, focusing light from all distances, from reading to far distance. You might expect to spend most of your day out of glasses with these implant lenses. You might just need reading glasses to fine-tune small print. There are several brands and styles available such as Crystalens®, ReStor®, and ReZoom®. A patient's lifestyle and health history help me make the decision regarding which lens would be the best fit for a patient."

Anti-Rent Wars gives historical perspective

Speaker details patroon life in the Capital District

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Editor's note: On the second week of each month until the end of the year, The Spotlight will feature a historical piece to commemorate the 400-year anniversary of discoveries made by Henry Hudson and Samuel de Champlain. This year also marks the 200-year anniversary of Robert Fulton's historical steamboat voyage from New York City to Albany. Following this article, which focuses on a hamlet in New Scotland, the series will focus on individual hamlets in the Town of Bethlehem, including Delmar, South Bethlehem, Selkirk, Cedar Hill, North Bethlehem, Glenmont, Elmsmere and Slingerlands.

CLARKSVILLE — If you're worried about paying your rent this month, just be glad you don't rent from a patroon. Because, as historian Michael Barrett says, "It's good to be a patroon."

Barrett was a guest speaker at the Bethlehem Historical Association's Thursday, March 19, meeting at the Cedar Hill Schoolhouse on River Road in Selkirk, to give a riveting and animated account of the Anti-Rent Wars of the 1840s in true storyteller fashion.

Captivating a room full of historical association members, Barrett described the feudal-like tenant relationship between upstate New York farmers and the heirs of famous patroon Kiliaen Van Rensselaer.

Although the epicenter of the Anti-Rent struggles in the 19th century began in the hill towns of Albany County and spread throughout Upstate New York and ultimately into state politics, areas like New Scotland and Bethlehem were very much a part of the fray.

It all began, like most things in America, in Europe.

The concept of land leasing was a carryover from feudal Europe and was brought to New York by the Dutch, according to Barrett. Needing to support their fur trades in the 1600s the Dutch West Indies Company began a settlement in what is now the Albany area, eventually calling it Fort Orange.

A wealthy merchant from Amsterdam named Kiliaen

Van Rensselaer was granted a large tract of land covering much of present day Albany and Rensselaer counties called Rensselaervyck around 1630.

The land was given to immigrants to work and populate the colony through what were essentially perpetual leases.

"You don't own the land, you lease it," Barrett said.

Tenants were expected each year to pay 10 to 14 bushels of winter wheat, four fat hens and one day of service from an able-bodied man with a team of horses and a wagon.

This system was in place for many generations over the course of centuries and well past the American War of Independence.

"The oddity of all this is here we are, the 1820s, 50 years after gaining our independence and here 260,000 [people] are working land they are not legally allowed to own," Barrett said. "And so, people are very upset by this system."

It soon came to a head.

"The real crux of the Anti-Rent War begins with Stephen Van Rensselaer, known in history as 'the good patroon,'" said Barrett. "He is the richest man in America at the time of his death in 1839."

When he dies, his will instructs his sons to collect past rents from farmers on the land, some of which were years behind, or assume the debt themselves.

The heirs decided to collect.

"If you've seen the Hill Towns of Rensselaer County, it's a lot like the Hill Towns of Albany County," Barrett told his listeners. "You don't see a lot of flatlanders in a year."

Van Rensselaer was $400,000 in arrears and as the collections begin, the first mass meeting of tenants is held in the Town of Berne, next to Clarksville, on July 4, 1839. Some of the tenants from that meeting form a committee and decide to meet with the Van Rensselaers to discuss what they saw as high rents and the possibility of purchasing their properties on May 22, 1839, but they are ignored by Stephen Van Rensselaer IV.

"They go back in the Hill Towns ... and a rent boycott is called," Barrett said.

The boycott spreads rapidly. Tenants were reportedly going to offer $2.50 in cash per acre of land and $30 per farm, according to Barrett, who added that at an average salary of about $250 a year, it was a reasonable offer.

It would have equated to $1.2 million had the offer been taken, which is far more than what the Van Rensselaers recoup in the end, said Barrett.

The movement quickly became political and an Anti-Rent Party is formed, which by 1845 elects seven state senators, one U.S. senator and one congressman.

The resistance brakes out into violence as county sheriffs attempt to enter farms in arrears and evict tenants. Farmers dressed as "Calico Indians" use tin dinner horns to alert each other and to form a sort of minuteman militia to repeal debt collectors and deed enforcers.

The violence continues for another 40 years.

Although the movement began to fade with the arrival of the Civil War, the struggles from this very area continued to make national headlines throughout much of the 1800s.

A New York Times article from Friday, July 18, 1866, had a headline that read: "ANTI-RENT TROUBLES IN ALBANY COUNTY; The Sheriff Violently Assaulted and Prevented from Executing his Writ — The Anti-Renters Defy the Authorities — The Militia Called Out — They Leave Today for the Seat of War."

The "last blood" is spilled in 1882, according to Barrett, when a farmer in East Berne answered the knock of a debt collector on his door with a shotgun.

However, to this day, the legalities surrounding Van Rensselaer property remain on the books in many areas:

Barrett told the story about how the church he and his daughter attends was previously owned by William Patterson Van Rensselaer.

"That would be 75 years worth of fat hens, winter wheat and one day of labor with horse and wagon," Barrett joked. The point, he continued, is that "none of them would have made out better than if they settled with the tenant community in 1843 ... as it happens in just about every war, there is no winner."

Dash

Organizers said this race was the biggest one yet.

"It was great. It was a record turnout this year with 633 finishers," said Delmar Dash co-director Marcia Adams after the event. "It was a really good race this year. There were no injuries, and the weather cooperated — it wasn't too bad, it didn't rain, which is pretty good for April."

Although the rain held off, temperatures barely got into the 40s when the race first started. However, it was the runners' sense of community that was heating up Bethlehem that Sunday.

"You could just feel it in the air — the atmosphere is just wonderful," said Adams, who co-directs the Dash with her husband, Tom Adams.

The winner of the 2009 Delmar Dash was Pat Cullen of Albany, who finished the 5 miles at 25 minutes and 27 seconds, a five-minute-and-six-second-per mile total. He edged out last year's winner, Chuck Terry, who finished with 25:34.

However, Terry did beat his time from last year, which was 25:48.

The first female finisher was

Emily Bryans of Schenectady, who came at 30 minutes and 24 seconds, or a six-minute-and-five-second-per mile total. (For Dash results see Page 40.)

Adams said Bryans is preparing to run as a lead in this year's Boston Marathon.

"We're trying to make it a community event as much as possible," said Adams of the Delmar Dash. "That's why we introduced the Bethlehem Food Pantry donations this year."

The Spotlight on Kids Races had a slightly lower enrollment this year, Adams said, coming in at about 225.

Tom Adams said the kids' races are important for a number of reasons.

"We really try to help these kids get off the couch, or as we've said, 'off their seats and on their feet,'" he said. "I would like to see our nation become more active, and this race helps us do that."

Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce President Marty DeLaney said this year's Dash was another great success.

"Seeing almost 700 runners quietly dashing through our neighborhoods reminds me that these are the kind of events that make Bethlehem so special," DeLaney said. "We really are fortunate to have everyone's cooperation:

police, emergency personnel, school and government officials, businesses, residents and volunteers — so it can happen."

The Chamber Pot, a side race of participating teams from local businesses, didn't pass hands for the first time in its fourth year. Sabic Innovative Plastics retained the Chamber Pot plaque after taking the title away from Matchless Stove and Chimney during last year's race.

The Sabic team is made up of Brian Whitman and Christian Lietzau.

The race's major sponsor was Bryant Asset Protection, which Adams said was essential to making the Delmar Dash a reality. She said Mark Bryant helps with coordinating efforts and many other facets of the race.

"Mark doesn't just show up with some money and say, 'Well I'm done here,'" said Adams. "He's really a driving force for this race."

Adams said Bethlehem community members also help make the race run.

"I cannot say enough about the police department, transportation department and the public works department," Adams said about helping with the event. "They always go out of their way to make this event happen and everyone was just awesome."

school district.

"[Cohn] digs the story from wary witnesses and documents [and] holds public officials accountable," the judges wrote in their review of the story, which can be found at www.spotlightnews.com. "Her work leads to greater transparency in local schools."

"It's amazing," Cohn said of her win. "It's very rewarding to have the hard work we do as reporters recognized by our peers."

Cohn, who has been with The Spotlight since February 2008 as a reporter for the Colonie and Loudonville editions, said she enjoys interacting with the members of her community as part of her job.

"It's stimulating to be part of such community-oriented organization," she said. "I feel our coverage really makes a difference in people's lives."

The Spotlight also won first place for editorial writing, out of a statewide field of weekly newspapers.

"We take pride in our editorials," said Vice President of The Spotlight John McIntyre. "When something is important enough to have the paper weigh in on it, we make sure that we do it in a way that is concise, intelligent and accessible to our readership."

Managing Editor Bill DeVoe, who also won a second place award for his column, "Pop Culture," said he is honored the paper was recognized for its editorial stance. "We try not to preach or proselytize," he said. "We write these editorials with the same thing in mind as when we tackle news stories or community features: 'How does this benefit our readers?'"

This program will teach you how to perform cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) with adults, children or infants and how to help someone who is choking. For the love of anime! On Wednesday, April 15, at 7 p.m., watch some of your favorite anime episodes here at the library. Play some video games. Read some anime/manga mags. Draw some of your own. Most of all, enjoy hanging out and chatting with your friends here at the library! Ages 13 to 19 are welcome.

Discovering the real world of Harry Potter

On Monday, April 13, come to the library at 1 p.m. to watch the DVD that examines the myths and legends of Harry Potter's real world. (And, if you come only for the free popcorn, that's OK, too).

Award-winning filmmakers provide their own insights into the ancient spells, magical creatures, ghosts, Greek gods and much more that are associated with the Harry Potter books.

Birds of a Feather Stick Together: Bird's Nest Craft

Kids, on Wednesday, April 15, at 11 a.m., you'll be able to make a decorative bird's nest for your room or someone you love by using spaghetti and glue.

While we're at it, we'll also create a ribbon/yarn hanging so our feathered friends can create their own summer homes. For participants in grades one to five. Please register by calling 456-2400, ext. 9.

Puzzling Pins: Make a Wearable Piece of Art

Love puzzles? Love making things? Then come to the library on Thursday, April 17, at 2 p.m., to make a pin from an actual puzzle piece.

You'll make a unique piece of jewelry to decorate your favorite outfit. For grades two to six. Please register by calling 456-2400 x 9.

Group to talk about 'Unfinished Season'

On Monday, April 13, the Bethlehem Public Library's DayBooks discussion group will look at "Unfinished Season" by Ward Just. Set against the Korean War, McCarthyism, the ascendancy of corporate power and the rise of suburbia, the novel is a story of love, lost innocence, social awareness and personal growth. The group meets at 1:30 p.m.

AfterDinner Books meets next Wednesday, April 15, at 7 p.m. to discuss "Out of Orbit" by Chris Jones. In Tom Wolfe-like fashion, the author tells the true story of the three astronauts — two Americans and a Russian — who were temporarily marooned aboard the International Space Station when the shuttle Columbia was destroyed in February 2003.

New members are always welcome in our book groups. Pick up the books at the information desk; large-print and audio versions are often available as well.

AAA's Great Battery Roundup® Earth Day, April 22

Battery failure is always inconvenient. Failed batteries account for more than five million road service calls each year. A key component of AAA Hudson Valley's Emergency Road Service is our specially equipped Battery Trucks, driven by technicians who are trained to test, diagnose and solve battery problems.

An automotive battery contains about 21 pounds of lead, three pounds of plastic and one gallon of sulfuric acid, all of which can be recycled, reclaimed and reused in new batteries.

Each year more than 100 million automotive batteries are sold in the US. Around five million of those are not recycled. On April 22, AAA Hudson Valley is hosting its First Annual Great Battery Roundup® to help raise awareness about battery recycling. It's a great opportunity to get rid of your old batteries — and it won't cost you a penny!

Toppled trees

Thacher Park needs people to help get the park ready for the upcoming season. The ice storm in December left the park buried in fallen trees and broken branches. The damage is widespread throughout the picnic areas, the trail system, and at nearby Thompson's Lake State Campground. The Friends of Thacher Park will host a park cleanup Saturday, April 25, beginning at 8 a.m. They will provide lunch for all registered volunteers. Poetry group plans night of food, fun

VPL will celebrate National Poetry Month in April with a day of food and fun hosted by the Every Other Thursday Night Poets.

EOTNP has been meeting at VPL since 1990, staking a claim as the longest continuously running poetry workshop in the Capital District. Twelve to 15 poets out of an active list of more than 20 meet twice a month at the library, with new poems they have written and want to have critiqued by others. The next regular meeting is April 23.

The group has marked poetry month with a public event nineteen times. This year, April 25 is the third annual Pot Luck Poetry Brunch, when everyone is welcome to bring food to contribute to the feast and enjoy or participate in the performance of poems and the good company. Musicians are free to bring instruments for background entertainment. Brunch begins at 11 a.m., followed by an open mic. No signup, just showup.

For information, visit the group's blog at www.thursdaypoets.blogspot.com or the VPL Web site.

Poets' art show

EOTNP is also putting on its third poets' art show at the library during June. Plan to stop in see what wacky (and serious) art endeavors they display.

Library plans vacation activities

Plan a trip to the RCS Library during April vacation for budget-friendly kid activities.

A special vacation week storytime has been planned for Friday, April 17, at 10:30 a.m. Kathy Meyer will be hosting this yoga inspired storytime, so bring your little ones in comfortable clothes and join the fun.

Previously announced activities include a Teen Writer's Workshop (Monday, April 13, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.), with teacher-consultant Linda Miller, who has a friendly following of local teenagers from her 2008 workshops here. Call the library at 756-2053 to register.

In addition, librarian Barbara Goetschius has planned an origami tulip activity (Thursday, April 16, 1 to 3 p.m. to celebrate spring and the region's Dutch heritage. No need to register and all ages are welcome.

Plan your own activities for the week with the help of our juvenile non-fiction collection. Check out kids cooking book, "Passport on a Plate" by Diane Simone Vezza, and travel from China to Mexico to the Middle East in a week of culinary adventure. Start a craft project with titles like "20 Minute Crafts: Beading, Super Simple Paper Airplanes and Knotting" and a slew of additional titles. "The Dangerous Book for Boys" and "The Daring Book for Girls" offer guides for a variety of activities from the "olden days" before computers and Wii games.

Your library card can be your ticket to a family movie night. The library has recently added to its collection "Madagascar: Escape 2 Africa," "Penguins of Madagascar, Bolt," "Wallace and Gromit's Close Shave," "Shaun the Sheep Back in the Baath," "Nick and Nora's Infinite Playlist" and "Twilight," to name a few. Choose from our collection, pop some popcorn and enjoy a night in with your kids.

Deadline for trustee petitions approaching

Wednesday, April 15, is the deadline for submission of completed, notarized trustee-nominating petitions. Two one-year terms are open on the library's board this fiscal year. The following year, two full five-year terms will be on the ballot. Candidates must be residents and registered voters of the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Globetrotting takes audiences on a whirlwind tour of Indian ragas, Latin percussion, African rhythms, and a healthy dose of American jazz. Globetrotting will appear at the First Reformed Church of Bethlehem in Selkirk on Friday, April 24, at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for seniors and children under 12. Refreshments are free, and we encourage everyone to bring a non-perishable item for our local food pantry. Tickets are available at the library prior to the concert or at the door.

USS Slater opens for season

On Saturday, April 4, the USS Slater opened for tours for the 12th year.

But the experience visitors enjoy aboard the destroyer escort has changed significantly over the years. That's because during the ship's off-season, volunteers spend countless hours restoring and renovating it.

"There's always something new," said Rosehn Gipe, the USS Slater's business administrator.

The ship is moored in the Port of Albany and open for tours until November. It spends the rest of the year in Rensselaer, where volunteers try to tackle one or two big projects each winter, said Eric Rivet, the USS Slater's education coordinator. They've spent the past few months restoring one of the ship's engine rooms, as well as a bathroom.

Rivet said the USS Slater has five full-time employees, and there are about 120 volunteers who donate their time to the ship. Many of them served in the military, and specifically the Navy.

"This is their chance to give back," he said.

It's a chance they can't find anywhere else in the country. The USS Slater is the only World War II-era destroyer escort that remains afloat in the United States.

The ship took a long route to Albany. Launched in 1944, the USS Slater escorted convoys to England, Wales, Manila, Japan and elsewhere during the war. It was placed in reserve in 1947, and four years later, it was given as a gift to Greece to be used by the Hellenic Navy.

In 1991, Greece donated the ship to the Destroyer Escort Sailors Association, a Florida-based group. But it stayed in Greece for two more years, until destroyer escorts around the country raised $275,000 to bring it back to the States. A Russian tugboat brought the USS Slater from Crete to New York City in 1993, docking it next to the Intrepid until a permanent home could be found.

Enter Albany Mayor Jerry

Jennings, who visited the ship and talked with officials about bringing it to Albany.

"He decided it would be a good thing for the city," Gipe said.

So, in 1997, the USS Slater sailed up the Hudson and arrived at the Port of Albany. Before it opened to the public, though, staff and volunteers spent two years refurbishing it under the direction of historic ship expert Tim Rizzuto.

The work that has been done on the ship is what tends to make a lasting impression on visitors, rather than the Slater's sheer size, Rivet said.

"It's actually a very small ship," he said. "As ships go, we're not big. We'll fit inside a battleship five times. The level and quality of the restoration is what sets us apart."

Battleships that are open to the public often have "empty compartment after empty compartment" because they're so big that it's hard to fill them with artifacts, Rivet said.

The Slater, on the other hand, is teeming with historical items. In the radar room, real Morse code is tapped out. The captain's uniform is on display. Officers' cabins boast items donated by the actual World War II occupants.

"It's the best ship you'll see," Rivet said.

Visitors often get to see the ship through the eyes of veterans, who frequently guide tours. Gipe said veterans also convene on the Slater for destroyer escort reunions. And although Rivet noted that destroyer escorts are small, relatively speaking, when they were afloat, they were packed with people.

"We'll have people who served on the same ship and never knew each other," Gipe said. "Maybe one was in the engine room and one was on the bridge."

The USS Slater is open for tours Wednesdays to Sundays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., until November. Families and individuals do not need to call ahead, but reservations are required for Scouts and other groups. Admission is $7 for adults, $6 for seniors over 65 and $5 for children 6 to 14. Kids 5 and younger are admitted free.

For information or reservations, call 431-1943 or email info@uss Slater.org.

Area resident volunteers to provide health, education and support for Ugandan children

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Most children in the United States get up in the morning, get dressed and go off to public, private or home schooling. For children in the village of Ddegeya, Uganda, the $2.50 it costs for a required school uniform is out their family's price range.

The work of some Bethlehem and New Scotland residents is seeking ways to change the circumstances of those children.

Theresa Weinman, a Glenmont resident who works for the Department of Family Medicine at Albany Medical College, recently took a trip with some colleagues to Uganda, to provide much needed medical care and find schools for children who otherwise would never receive an education. Weinman has never experienced anything like the trip, she said. "I didn't even have a passport. I've never even been out of the country."

Weinman's trip to Africa served two purposes: The first was to provide medical attention at a clinic, the Engeye Health Clinic, founded by Stephanie Van Dyke, a fourth-year medical school student at Albany Medical College. The second was to scout out schools, and talk with headmasters about how more children could be placed in school.

"My job was to go check on these kids and make sure everything was OK with the schools," Weinman said, adding the trip was perilous. Police with machine guns, roadblocks and checkpoints were some of the obstacles between the group and the clinic.

The living conditions of the villagers there are equally as dismal as the difficulties in making the trip, she said. "They, literally, live in mud huts with nothing, there's not a possession, not a chair or a bed," she said. "Sometimes there's an open fire with some utensils."

Weinman said she has support for her initiative coming from many places. Bob Pae-glow, an awards-winning humanitarian and physician with his own practice in Albany, has made 26 trips to Africa, and Weinman said he is largely responsible for the possibility for her to make this trip.

Weinman said she has made extraordinary connections with the villagers. A friend, and beneficiary of Weinman's efforts, was 14-year-old Susan Nabukenya. Nabukenya burned 80 percent of her body in Uganda. Susan was not able to receive the medical attention she needed. However, Weinman, VanDyke and Peglow stepped up for Susan. They helped bring her to the United States, where she was treated at the Shriners hospital in Boston, which donated care for Susan.

Weinman's congregation provided some additional assistance. "Pastor Sandy [Damhof] really stepped up and helped me financially," she said. The funds raised by the congregation helped provide food and money to house Susan while in America.

Damhof is pastor of the Journey United Church of Christ in New Scotland, to which Weinman is a member.

She said the people in Uganda have far less than we do, and helping them puts things in perspective.

"It gives us something to focus on beyond ourselves," Damhof said. "Some kids complain they don't have any clothes for school—these kids can't go to school."

She said her congregation is still looking for children in need of sponsorship.

Nabukenya had never been to school. It costs $800 each year to send a child to school, and now, Weinman, along with Bethlehem and New Scotland residents have helped send seven children so far, with seven more on a waiting list to private schools in the area.

She said for the children in Uganda, it is not feasible for them to get an education. "It's so far out of their parents financial ability," she said. "My little church is pretty tiny...almost everybody is part of the sponsorship of a child."

Some kids they are trying to get into the public schools, which are not as advanced as the leading private school in the area, Bishop Dungu, which has hot water and electricity.

Weinman said, though, "It's a start."

She said many children there cannot afford the $2.50 uniform to get access to the public schools. They are hoping to raise money to put as many children as possible in schools.

She said she is hopeful to get as many students into Bishop Dungu as possible, but helping improve the public schools is also a goal. "We're learning as we go," Weinman said.

She said the public schools are in need of pencils and maps. Many children, she said, do not know of the world beyond their village.

She said one volunteer, John Kaule, is keeping in touch with Weinman from Uganda. She said he has installed solar panels and connected them to power a laptop computer, and is sending pictures from overseas. The pictures show the children wearing clothes and shoes donated to them. Teenagers and colleges students love that, she said.

"I've been amazed by how interested people are in this village in Africa," Weinman added.

Water

was proposed. Some advocacy groups have pushed for a 50,000-square-foot size cap, but the issue has been divisive. (See related story, page 5).

Greg Widrick, Managing Partner for Sphere Development LLC, said he is not surprised Bethlehem has pledged to not supply water to the development.

Widrick recalled comments by Cunningham previously made supporting a moratorium on commercial development in New Scotland.

"It's kind of absurd that a 16-inch water line runs right by the site and Bethlehem wouldn't allow us to tap into it," Widrick said.

Cunningham said he frequently talks with New Scotland Supervisor Tom Dolin, and the issue of water access came up when Bethlehem was asked about extending water and sewer to the proposed New Scotland Senior Living Community near the Bender Melon site.

"They had come to us to extend our sewer district to the senior development," Cunningham said. However, he said he stipulated the extensions "does not include water or sewer to the Sphere project."

Widrick told The Spotlight he asked Dolin about where water can be obtained. He said he petitioned Dolin to ask Cunningham, "informally" if Sphere could tap into the water supply.

Dolin, who has expressed opposition to the development, said he did not speak to Cunningham about the issue specifically and confirmed they talked about the proposed senior development using Bethlehem's water.

Cunningham said that although it is possible to provide municipal services to the Bender Melon site, the Sphere development is not the right fit for the area. He said, however, service lines are "close enough now for another development."

He said he's against service to the site primarily because of the residential resistance to the Sphere proposal, not because he's trying to guide development to Bethlehem.

"There's a real concern in the Town of Bethlehem over this proposal and how it could affect us," Cunningham said. "And there's a fear in New Scotland that we here in Bethlehem want to try to block this to bring more development over here."

Sphere said initially, plans to use Bethlehem's water were not included in the development, and a self-contained water supply is still an option. Widrick said, though, intensive studies about its viability would not be conducted unless the zoning law permits the development.

A local engineering and surveying expert, who didn't wish to be named because of current business dealings in the Capital District, said an on-site water and wastewater treatment might be slightly more expensive than a municipal connection.

However, he warned that there needs to be sufficient groundwater to build an adequate well or wells for hundreds of thousands of square feet of retail development.

"From my experience in that particular area of New Scotland ... the well systems are poor producing," he said. "They would have to do some significant testing, but they could get lucky on that particular site."

The water issue was pushed to the forefront in Bethlehem when Edie Abrams, an outspoken opponent to the Sphere development and member of a group called New Scotlanders for Sound Economic Development, or NS4SED, spoke at a Bethlehem Town Board meeting on Feb. 25.

"You may have heard that a developer wants to put in the fourth-largest shopping center in the area in the Town of Scotland," Abrams said. "I'm pretty confident to say that most of the residents are against it."

She then asked for Bethlehem's help and for the board to write a letter of opposition to Dolin. "We have met opposition from both the planning and our town board," said Abrams. "The reason I'm here tonight is because we are neighbors. This development is not only going to affect the Town of New Scotland, it's going to affect Bethlehem, especially Slingerlands."

Abrams said a number of children live along Route 85 and that a pediatrician told her there was a "stark difference" between the number of children with asthma who live in urban areas like Albany and along major highway, as opposed to those living in a split rural and suburban area like Slingerlands.

She said the traffic generated by the proposed development would affect the quality of life in Slingerlands and that children and seniors would "be put at danger."

Spotlight file

"We have beautiful home on [Route] 85, I just can't imagine a four-lane highway on 85," she said. "The developer has a radius of customers that reach into Rensselaer."

Bethlehem Councilman Mark Hennessey, who described himself as a friend of Abrams, said he understands her concerns.

"We haven't written a letter to the Town of New Scotland, but it's certainly something we have discussed," Hennessey said. "The effect a big-box store can have on Slingerlands could be significant."

Hennessey said he would be against extending water or sewer to the site and reiterated Cunningham's stance that the infrastructure could not handle the development.

Councilman Sam Messina said he wasn't outright against the project, but is against it as it's currently proposed.

"If I have to vote on extending water or sewer right now, I would vote 'no,'" said Messina. "I think this project needs to be looked at and studied a lot more."

Abrams concluded her pitch to the board by stating there were several shopping plazas within 10 minutes of the proposed site and that the "largest Wal-Mart in the world" was on Washington Avenue Extension in Albany.

Pipe

The McKownville neighborhood is made up of approximately 1,000 homes, and rests near the City of Albany border.

The sewer system is just one of several issues Reeb has raised. He said stormwater is a growing problem in McKownville. Last July, a storm damaged the basement of Ken and Laura Plant when poor water drainage in the area led to the collapse of a portion of the foundation. McKownville residents held fundraisers to help restore the damage.

Reeb said after most storms, the McKownville Fire Department often pumps three to four dozen basements. Sometimes the pumps need to be run 24 hours a day in order to mitigate the water problems.

Reeb also said the problem is getting worse, not better. A national geological testing facility located on the edge of McKownville behind Alumni House at the University at Albany indicated that water levels have risen in recent years, he said. According to the United States Geological Survey, well water has risen approximately 5 feet since August 2002.

He said the University at Albany and the university's College of Nanoscale Science and Engineering have also paved several areas of land, and that, coupled with the Nanoscale college draining water to the south, rather than north into Patroon Creek, have contributed to the problem.

He said he asked Runion to apply for federal stimulus money to fix the sewer pipes and improve the water system.

He said another possibility to secure funding for a new sewer system would be for the town to issue a bond. However, in order to do so, the five-member board would need a four-vote supermajority. Reeb indicated he is not optimistic about a getting a supermajority considering a tax raise would come with the bond.

Reeb said the major concern he and other McKownville residents have is the long-term damage that stormwater brings.

"I know there are more important things than storm sewers—but if the flooding problem gets much worse, it will depress home prices and then people will be 'trapped' in their homes—unable to sell them at the expected price—and then the neighborhood becomes a different type of place," he wrote in an e-mail to residents.

Most of the league's coaches like the new divisional alignments, but BH-BL coach Paul Deluca said he isn't crazy about having his Class A school in a division dominated by larger Class AA schools.

"Basically, I've got to play up (a class) with the exception of two games," said Deluca. "As we saw last year, we have to go out and beat some of these double A schools if we want to make the playoffs."

The one thing working in the Spartans' favor is that most of the North Division teams are in the midst of reloading their rosters after graduating several starters last year. Shen only has four returning starters, while Shaker has only one returning starter.

"I think the North Division has some unproven pitching and some unproven talent," said Shen coach James Carrese.

The South Division appears to be the power division on paper with Columbia, Bethlehem and Guilderland leading the pack.

"It's going to be tough," said Columbia coach Chris Dedrick. "There's some very good teams in there."

Here is a closer look at the Suburban Council.

North Division Ballston Spa Scotties

Head coach: Kevin Sheremeta

Newcomers: Josh Fabian, Cooper McGowan, Brendan Shannon, Brian Guilder

Outlook: Sheremeta moves up to the varsity level after coaching the freshman team, but he has experience as the varsity coach at Morris High School. "I'm not familiar with the play of the other teams (in the league) because this is my first year, but I feel confident with this group," said Sheremeta.

Burnt Hills Spartans

Head coach: Paul Deluca

Symer (outfield), Justin Bariteau (pitcher/outfield), Jake Chernesky (outfield)

Outlook: Though the Spartans are returning most of their starting lineup from last year's team, they are still a young bunch. "I've got five juniors and two sophomores," said Deluca.

BH-BL suffered a minor setback during a pre-season trip to Connecticut when Pennings injured his shoulder, but Deluca said he should be back shortly to help with the Spartans' defense. "Our defense, when we are intact, should be our strength going into the season," said Deluca.

Niskayuna Silver Warriors

Head coach: John Furey

Key players: Peter Furey (second base), Mike Krasodomski (outfield), Gregg Rahn (first base), Shawn Callahan (catcher), Dan Peters (third base), Zach Griesche (pitcher)

Outlook: The Silver Warriors have experience in the field, but not a lot on the pitcher's mound, which may hurt them in close games. "We'll see how it pans out," said coach Furey. "There's a lot of good teams and good ballplayers."

Saratoga Blue Streaks

Head coach: Rich Lofink

Returning starters: Mike Allen (infield), Matt Coleman (pitcher), Scott Hladik (catcher), Erich Lange (infield), Leejay Pollacchi (outfield)

Newcomers: Chris Davis (infield), Luke Fauler (infield/pitcher), Nate Foster (outfield), Kyle Willmott (outfield)

Outlook: Like Niskayuna, Saratoga will be reloading its pitching staff after graduating some key players last year. "I think we'll be doing pitching by committee," said Lofink. "Hopefully, the young kids will step up."

Defensively, the Blue Streaks will have a solid core with Hladik, Allen, Lange and Pollacchi. "Our strength is up the middle (catcher, shortstop, second base and center field)," said Lofink.

Shaker Blue Bison

Head coach: Pete Mravlja

Key players: Brian Cary (pitcher/outfield), Mike Petilli (pitcher), Mike Nowak (pitcher/third base), Kyle VanVleet (pitcher/third base), Tyler Young (outfield/first base), Derek Gardella (catcher/pitcher/first base)

Outlook: The Blue Bison graduated most of their starters last year, so their success depends on how well the current crop of players adjust to their roles. "We have one true starter back this year," said Mravlja. "We have a lot of guys who played limited roles last year."

Cary and Petilli head up a young group of pitchers, though neither have been on the hill since their sophomore years in 2007. "We have eight arms. We just have to figure out who can pitch," said Mravlja.

Shenendehowa Plainsmen

Head coach: James Carrese

Returning starters: Bryan Marotta (catcher), Tyler Dehmer (pitcher), Travis Belleard (infield), Brandon Cogsworth (shortstop)

Outlook: With only four returning starters, Carrese said that the Plainsmen will not be the favorites to repeat as the Suburban Council's best team. "I think Columbia and Bethlehem are the top two teams in the league," he said. "You have to have good pitching in this league, and they have it."

South Division Averill Park Warriors

Returning starters: Tim Murdick (pitcher/outfield), Andrew Goyer (catcher), Nick Cioffi (pitcher/infield), Josh Gustafson (first base)

Newcomers: Tyler Listing (pitcher/infield), Josh Sprague (utility)

Outlook: "We are very young with just six returning players," said Conroy. "But this group has versatility and has been working hard in the pre-season. We lost some leaders to graduation, but we have great enthusiasm among this year's group."

Bethlehem Eagles

Head coach: Rob Helm

Key players: Randy Bowers (pitcher), Sean Quinlan (pitcher), Matt Branigan (catcher), Alex Sobiecki (outfield), Kyle Niehaus (infield), Mike Fish (outfield)

Outlook: The Eagles are hoping for another long run through the Section II, Class AA playoffs after reaching last year's semifinals. "I love the guys we have back," said Helm. "They're all class kids, and on the field, they're great players."

Bethlehem is dedicating its season to assistant coach Pete Dorwaldt, who died last month after a long battle with cancer. "The players are getting wristbands, and there's a sign in the dugout - 'Dorwaldt Avenue,'" said Helm.

Colonie Garnet Raiders

Head coach: Kevin Halburian

Key players: A.J. Monin (catcher), Matt Weinman (shortstop), Paul Nylin (pitcher/third base), Matt Vetrone (second base), Colin Mooney (outfield)

Outlook: Halburian takes over for long-time coach Greg Lanni, and the team Halburian is inheriting is a blend of veterans and rookies. "It's a good challenge. It's something that I've been preparing (to do) for the last 15 years," said Halburian. "It's a great group of kids. We only have six seniors, so we're young."

Columbia Blue Devils

Head coach: Chris Dedrick

Key players: Patrick Puentes (outfield), Nolan Gaige (pitcher/designated hitter), James Vooris (outfield), Eric Hilton (pitcher), Ian Gaule (pitcher/first base)

Outlook: To get back to the Class AA finals, the Blue Devils will need Gaige, Hilton and Gaule to lead a pitching staff that took a couple of big hits last year to graduation. "We lost our No. 1 and our No. 2 starters, but we've got our top lefty back in Nolan Gaige," said Dedrick.

Guilderland Dutchmen

Head coach: Doug LaValley

Key players: Steven Anderson (first base/designated hitter), Matt Roth (third base), Jason Sherwood (catcher), Kyle LaValley (pitcher/first base), C.J. Lozano (pitcher/second base), Pat Quinn (outfield)

Outlook: The Dutchmen gained some confidence in the pre-season after beating Bethlehem and Columbia in scrimmages. "I feel pretty good about them," said coach LaValley.

"Defensively, we're going to be very strong. We're going to be tough because we can play defense."

LaValley also said he likes the way the players have come together. "We may not have the big names we've had in the past, but we have great chemistry," he said.

Mohonasen Mighty Warriors

Head coach: Jim Huggins

Returning starters: Robert Tedesco (pitcher), Jacob Papa (outfield), Vinny DeMarco (catcher), Dominic Bianchi (pitcher)

Newcomers: Luke Flood (pitcher), Brandon Logon (outfield), Ben Dalton (outfield)

Outlook: The Mighty Warriors are in reloading mode after graduating several players from last year's Class A finalist team. "We have only two starters coming back, so our big thing is having a support staff for everyone else," said Huggins. "Obviously, we'd like to try to repeat getting to where we were last year. It'll come down to how quickly the new guys come together."

any track athlete would have been mortified.

The reason why Paretta's teaching license was revoked - allegations of sexual misconduct with athletes at Columbia High School in the late 1980s and at a New York City high school in the early 1990s - is certainly serious. Though he's never faced criminal charges for those allegations, they still hang over him, and that was enough for the Board of Regents to revoke his teaching certification in 1996. It also should be noted that there have never been any allegations against Paretta since then.

Paretta was well liked by all accounts, and his Shen teams were very successful. To have it come to such an ending is unfortunate, but state rules dictate that you have to have certification in teaching or coaching in order to coach a high school team. Paretta didn't have the necessary certification for 13 years.

I just wish someone at Shen had noticed sooner.

"It wasn't too bad," said Bryans. "It was a windy, raw day, so I was happy with my time."

Without any women to push her, Bryans fed off the pace being set by the men near her.

"I don't find it difficult," she said. "There's always some men (running nearby), so I just try to stay with them."

Bryans said she is hoping to build off the momentum of Sunday's performance as she prepares to run in the Boston Marathon in two weeks.

"I feel I'm in pretty good shape," she said. "I've been putting in the miles, and I'm really looking forward to the next couple of weeks where I can taper and get my legs ready for the marathon."

BC tennis team aims for top of Sectional heap

By ANDY CAHILL

sports@spotlightnews.com

The writer is an intern in the Spotlight Newspapers sports department.

Last year, the Bethlehem boys tennis team lost to Niskayuna in the sectional tournament.

This year, the Eagles are back and confident that they can avenge last year's loss.

"We have a mix of veteran leadership and new talent," said coach Steve Smith. "We have two eighth graders and six seniors."

Smith specifically mentioned three players that will help the team be "very solid."

"Mike Amico, Jesse Hoffman and Peter Collins are tremendous tennis players who could be number one on almost any other school's team," he said.

But, the Eagles know that they are not the most feared team in the Suburban Council. Looking at the schedule, only two teams appear to be capable of beating them - Guilderland on April 21, and Niskayuna on April 28.

"Guilderland is very strong... [but] Niskayuna is the top dog. They won the Sectionals last year. They won the Suburban Council. They have their entire team back," said Smith.

Fortunately for the Eagles, their two toughest games are both on their home court, where their leadership can shine through.

Overall, the upcoming season should be a good one for Bethlehem.

Spotlight On The Run

Gearing up for 2009 Freihofer's Run

The runners take off at the start of the Freihofer's Run for Women.

For several thousand women from across the Capital Region - as well as hundreds nationally and internationally - the arrival of spring means the coming of one of the preeminent road races on the national calendar: the Freihofer's Run for Women 5K, scheduled for Saturday, May 30, at 10:15 a.m. in Albany.

For many regional running enthusiasts, no other race creates as much excitement or anticipation each year as the Freihofer's Run for Women.

"I love the fact that the race is a national event and brings elite athletes from all over the world right here to Albany," said Jory Waldman of Clifton Park.

Now in its 31st year, the event is expected to draw a record number of people.

The participant numbers for this year's 5K is at an all-time high," said event director George Regan. "The field of elite national and international athletes continues to grow as well, which tells us our invited field will be extremely competitive and one of the top fields ever assembled in this the 31st year of the event."

For the second year in a row, the International Association of Athletics Federations (IAAF) has awarded the Freihofer's Run for Women a "silver label" designation, recognizing it for not only being organized according to the highest professional standards, but also attracting enough elite athletes and media attention to warrant international recognition.

Only three other races in the United States can currently lay claim to the same "silver label" designation: the New York City Marathon, the Chicago Marathon and the Boston Marathon.

Race weekend will feature a host of other activities as well, including the CapitalCare Health & Fitness Expo, the USA Open and Junior 10K Race Walk Championships, the 22nd annual Freihofer's Kids' Run and the 21st annual Freihofer's Community Walk for charity.

Subway, a new sponsor, is offering a $5 coupon off the regular entry fee. Visit any Subway restaurant for an entry form and a coupon. (Note: The coupon can only be used for mail-in entries. No purchase necessary.)

To register or for information about the slate of events that weekend, visit www.freihoferstrun.com or visit the guest services counter at any Price Chopper.

Scenes from the Delmar Dash

The 2009 Delmar Dash took place under cold and windy conditions on the streets of Delmar Sunday morning. Despite the less-than-ideal weather, the annual event had its largest number of runners (633). There were also one-mile and half-mile kids runs, which were sponsored by Spotlight Newspapers.

While Pat Cullen and Emily Bryans took top honors, there were many more sights from the Delmar Dash. Along with these pictures, check out www.spotlightnews.com for video clips of the five-mile and kids one-mile races. Results of all the races will also be on the Web site in the sports section.

Clockwise from top left: The pack takes off down Kenwood Avenue after the starter's horn sounds at 9 a.m. Ninety minutes later, three girls head down the same street during the one-mile kids race. A short time earlier, the first two runners cross the finish line at Bethlehem Central Middle School in the boys one-mile race. A small pack of runners breaks away from the larger group as they hit the midpoint of the five-mile adult race near Hamagrael Elementary School. Participants in the girls one-mile race stretch before heading out on the course.

BC, Guiderland look to challenge for division titleBy ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

The Suburban Council is back to a two-division format for baseball.

But instead of dividing the league by school size, the divisions are set geographically. The North Division features the four Saratoga County schools (Ballston Spa, Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake, Saratoga Springs and Shenendehowa) along with Niskayuna and Shaker, while the South Division contains most of the Albany County schools (Bethlehem, Colonie and Guiderland) along with the two Rensselaer County entries (Averill Park and Columbia) and Mohonasen.

The Bethlehem Eagles are hoping their veteran-laden team will be able to pull out the Suburban Council South Division title this year. Among the seniors are, from left, Alex Sobiecki, Matt Branigan and Kyle Niehaus.

Pat Cullen, left, and Chuck Terry are neck and neck midway through Sunday's Delmar Dash. Cullen pulled away from Terry at the end to win by seven seconds.

Rob Jonas/Spotlight

Cullen wins latest duelSaint Rose runner dethrones Terry
as championBy ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Arivalry is developing between Pat Cullen and Chuck Terry on the local road-racing circuit.

Entering Sunday's Delmar Dash, Cullen and Terry had raced against each other in two Hudson Mohawk Road Runners Club events in 2009, with each runner finishing ahead of the other.

So, it was no surprise when Cullen and Terry pulled away from the pack early in the Delmar Dash and began a duel that didn't end until the final stretch – a duel that Cullen ultimately won by a seven-second margin.

"That was rough," said Cullen, a 23-year-old College of Saint Rose track athlete. "Me and Chuck probably put at least five moves on each other before I got to pull away from him."

Cullen and Terry – both Albany residents – charged to the front of the pack in the first mile. By the halfway point of the five-mile race, they were clear of any other challengers, though the pace was not to Cullen's liking.

"I didn't think it was going to be so fast," said Cullen. "He was trying to go faster, and I was trying to go slower."

Cullen finally took the lead for good as the two runners hit the final stretch along Kenwood Avenue toward Bethlehem Central Middle School. Cullen finished with a time of 25:27, while Terry – the defending male champion – crossed the finish line second in a time of 25:34.

"That was my goal today – to beat Chuck," said Cullen.

There wasn't a significant challenger for Schenectady's Emily Bryans in the women's division. Bryans won her fourth Delmar Dash title with a time of 30:24, nearly two minutes ahead of Ashley Gorr of Albany.

No excuses for Shen's lack of knowledge

After some April Fool's levity last week, it's time to get serious again.

The circumstances surrounding Shenendehowa boys track and field coach Don Paretta's suspension (and likely firing) are bizarre, to say the least.

The mere fact that 13 years-worth of Shen school administrators did not know that Paretta's teaching license had been suspended back in 1996 is hardly plausible or forgivable, especially since the state Board of Regents informed all school districts of its decision. The school district should have known this and taken the appropriate action at the time. That no action was taken until now doesn't speak well of previous administrators.

The timing of the school district's decision was also unfortunate. The track season was about to begin last week when the school district informed Paretta that he was being suspended immediately. So just as the athletes were getting ready to compete, their coach was being taken away from them. The only thing that would have made the timing worse would have been if it happened in the days leading up to the Section II meet.

Add to that having a bunch of TV cameras show up to a practice at the school on the day the news of Paretta's suspension comes out, and you can understand why
