'We think the tape still exists'

Town searches for police chief's alleged racist conversation

By JARRETT CARROLL carrollj@spotlightnews.com

In the midst of an investigation into an alleged tape recording of the Bethlehem police chief making racist remarks and allegedly ordering the tape erased, town officials said they believe the tape in question may still be out there. Bethlehem town attorney James Potter told The Spotlight on Wednesday, June 3, that the audio recording, which was brought to light by police officer Christopher Hughes, is still being sought. "We think the tape still exists," Potter said. "To go back to find a particular conversation from three years ago is a daunting task." Currently, incoming calls handled by the department's dispatchers are recorded and erased after 30 days. Potter said that system wasn't in place three years ago when Bethlehem Police Chief Louis Corsi supposedly took a phone call from the Albany County Sheriff's Office and made disparaging comments about one of his administrative officers. "We have no reason to believe the tape was erased," Potter said. "We're not even aware if it's possible to erase the tapes." That's a point Hughes has been making, as well.

EXCLUSIVE

Spotlight unveils local salary site G'land OKs new water contract

Pay scales for local town employees online

In an effort to allow readers to "follow the money" more easily during these times of economic woe, The Spotlight is unveiling its online database of all town employee salaries in its coverage area.

A new component has been added to www.spotlightnews.com that will allow users to enter a name, municipality, position, salary range or any combination of queries into the database that will show who's making what in your town.

The new salary database can be found at www.spotlightnews.com/salaries2009, or through a link on the Web site's main page, which will be updated at regular intervals to reflect new hires, retirements and pay raises.

In the towns of Bethlehem and Guilderland, the supervisors tend to bring in the biggest checks.

The Town of Bethlehem's top three salary earners are Supervisor Jack Cunningham, with $106,890; Director of Management Information Services Jeffrey Dammeyer, with $103,890; and Bethlehem Chief of Police Louis Corsi, with $103,761.

"I have absolutely no problem with public disclosure at all when it comes to salaries," Cunningham said. "I do Q and A's in the schools all the time, and the first thing the kids always ask is 'How much do you make? They're always amazed when I just tell them,'" he said.

The three highest paid employees in the town of Guilderland are Supervisor Ken Runion, at $100,947, Todd Gifford, highway superintendent at $95,359, and Police Chief Carol Lawlor at $92,188.

"Take our salaries in Guilderland and compare them to other municipalities," said Runion. "We're lower across the board."

Runion also said Guilderland has the lowest tax rate in Albany County. He noted that union negotiations regularly included data about average salaries for municipal employees, and the average salary of their employees is lower than neighbors Colonie and Bethlehem.

"I think we're doing pretty good," he said.

In the Town of New Scotland, the highest paid employee is Highway Superintendent Darrell Duncan at $69,884. The town's Supervisor Tom Dolin comes in second at $56,158, and building inspector Paul Cantlin comes in third at $55,828.

The salary information has been collected from payroll information provided by the town clerks offices of each municipality. The Web site database created for your town salaries will continue to grow as your town grows.

Agreement to run through 2028, keeps possibility of joint treatment plant

Exchange of ideas

Visiting Rotary Youth Exchange students to the Albany region gather for orientation last fall. Stas Kushchenko of Ukraine, third from left in back row, spent his year at Bethlehem Central High School. The Rotary Club of Delmar is seeking families to host a student for its Youth Exchange Program in the 2009-2010 school year and for students interested in applying for the program for the 2010-2011 school year. Most families must reside in the Bethlehem Central School District, and student placements are approximately three months per family. Most families provide room and board, supervise the student just as they would their own children, involve the student in family activities and chores, and enrich the exchange experience by including the student in family, community and cultural activities. In her most recent book, "The New Global Student," a handbook for students planning to travel abroad and their parents, Maya Frost writes that although hundreds of organizations offer exchange programs, Rotary Youth Exchange is the best option hands-down. # Voters pass library budget, pick trustee

Residents approve zero tax levy increase and write in town worker for board

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

With a proposed zero percent tax levy increase, the Bethlehem Public Library easily and overwhelmingly passed its proposed budget and also saw quite a few write-ins for board of trustee.

The library's budget ultimately passed 2,341 votes to 1,154 votes.

With no one running for the board of trustees seat of library board secretary Rachel Baum, residents were allowed to write in their own candidates, which resulted in the Town of Bethlehem assistant senior services director getting the nod.

Joyce Becker is the town's newest Bethlehem Public Library trustee with 42 write-in votes. She said she is interested in the goings on of the town's library and decided to mount a write-in campaign when she looked at an absentee ballot.

"I saw a write-in spot on my husband's absentee ballot and said, 'Gee, that's something I would like to do,'" said Becker.

Her husband wrote in her name and that was the beginning of her "campaign," said Becker.

"It was a civics lesson on writing in," said Becker. "I had no idea on how to do any of this. Actually, Matt Clyne was kind enough to come down and give us a little civics course and show us how to properly write in a candidate, which was very nice of him."

Clyne is the Albany County Democratic commissioner of the board of elections and the town's Democratic chairman.

Local businesswoman and Bethlehem Republican Chairwoman Melody Burns garnered the second most write-ins for the one open trustee seat at 27 votes. Burns said she wasn't seeking a trustee seat, but must have had "a few fans out there."

Library Director Nancy Pieri thanked the community for the support.

"This was a great show of support with a 2-to-1 margin for our budget," Pieri said. "We look forward to working with our new trustee."

There was no change proposed to the library's tax levy, so the tax rate will be similar to the 2008 rate. In Bethlehem, resident will pay $1.22 per $1,000 of assessed value and New Scotland residents will pay $1.20.

"I've been on enough boards to know that I don't know everything about the library, but I am willing to learn," Becker said of her new role. "I know they do a lot of good and hope I can be a part of that."

Beff's bids goodbye to Bethlehem, stays in Colonie

Swifty's Restaurant and Pub to open in popular Four Corners location

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

In a surprise announcement, a longtime community staple is saying goodbye to the Four Corners in Delmar while a new owner is being welcomed to the community.

Beff's Restaurant owner Mickey Blanchfield said the decision to close the Delmar eatery was a tough one. The doors shut Sunday, June 7, for the last time. A new pub called Swifty's Restaurant and Pub and is expected to open at the location in about two weeks.

Blanchfield said the Colonie Beff's on Everett Road will remain open, and he wished Swifty's owner Dave Swift well.

"It was hard," Blanchfield said of his decision to close the Delmar restaurant. "I've been running two places by myself, and the fact of the matter is, I wasn't doing justice to either by doing that. ... My daughter just turned 8, and she plays softball and does plays and it's just become too hard."

Swift comes from a family that owns businesses in the North Country and Adirondacks, and he has owned and still operates a business in the Speculator area in Hamilton County. He owns the Mountain Market in Lake Pleasant and formerly owned Swifty's Downtown Grill in Speculator.

"We moved down here about two and a half years ago. I live right here in Delmar," Swift said. "My wife's a nurse at Albany Med, and I was doing the commute for a little while but I'm here for good now."

Swift said he discovered Beff's when he first got to area and instantly fell in love with it.

"When we moved here, we actually walked over to Beff's to check it out and grab a beer and something to eat," Swift recalled. "I said to my wife, 'I'd love to own a place like this, it's perfect.'"

Swift told The Spotlight that he's going to keep a robust beer selection, and although he will have a whole new menu, there will still be traditional pub fare.

There are some small changes such as Calzones being added to the pizza menu, but there will be still be burgers and the like, said Swift, who added there will also be some new entrees on the menu.

The announcement was originally made on the pub's Facebook Web site, stating, "Beff's in Delmar will be closing permanently on Sunday, June 7. It will re-open under new management/ownership as Swifty's Pub."

Blanchfield said it's no joke, and he will miss the community that has supported him all these years, but he will still be open for the greater Capital District.

"Delmar is great," he said. "I want to thank the people here. We haven't always been perfect, but it's always been great working here."

The Delmar location was just a casualty of happenstance.

"The only reason Delmar was sold over Albany was because Albany is bigger, and we have a lot of banquets and my catering business is really taking off," said Blanchfield. "One place had to go."

Manager Rachel Kayser will be staying on through the transition and said all gift certificates and cards can be used at the 95 Everett Road location in Colonie near the Albany City line.

She said the response has been overwhelming only hours, and even minutes, after the announcement was made online on Wednesday, June 3.

"I've worked here a really long time, and I'm amazed at the interest everyone has in this," said Kayser. "This is a really great place."

Blanchard said he has confidence in Swift, saying, "Dave's a good guy," that he will do a "high-quality job."

Beff's signature dishes such as its "chicken toes" and "Irish Nachos" are coming with Blanchard because they are trademarked under the Beff's name.

"The person who bought this place did not buy Beff's," said Blanchard. "He bought this building, the chairs and some of the kitchen equipment."

Swift said that although his chef has a background in Cajun and Creole dishes, Swifty's isn't going to become a New Orleans themed restaurant—it will still be Delmar's neighborhood pub.

"The chef is very well versed; he grew up in Louisiana," said Swift. "We're gonna use some of his talents and some of his flare."

Most of the regular menu items will have an option to have it prepared "Cajun style," Swift said.

Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce President Marty DeLaney said the community will miss Blanchfield, and said she looks forward to seeing what Swift will do with the place.

"Although we'll miss Mickey Blanchfield and his signature menu at Beff's," she said, "we've met the new owner of Swifty's, and it looks like he has some innovative ideas for the place, so stay tuned."

Swift said he hopes to re-open by June 22.

"Hopefully people will come over and check us out," said Swift.

The pub is located at 367 Delaware Ave. in Delmar, near the Kenwood Avenue intersection known locally as "The Four Corners."

Not-so-green thumb achieves garden greatness

We must have had a really long, cold spring, because my family is especially excited to see this season turn into warm, sunny summer days. We celebrate this passage in many ways. First, we stay outside longer. Day by day, minute by minute, the time everyone comes inside gets later and later.

During the cold spring months, it's dinner, then maybe a short walk or soccer game in the backyard. Then a bath, a book or two, and the evening is over at 8:30. It feels good to tuck everyone into warm beds when it's cold and dark outside.

But now the evenings are long and warm. Dinner is rarely on the table before 7. My children race, hungry, to the table, eat heartily and run back to the yard.

There are many things pulling me outside right now, too. Elliot showing off his new two-wheeled bike. Zoe and Lucy doing a jump rope show. When I have a quiet moment, I like to walk in the garden, watching their progress. Homework, dinner, showers, all the things that have to be done, take a back seat to looking for toads, swinging and watering flowers. It just takes a little longer to get to all the things we have to do. We're all too busy with the fun stuff.

The change of season always makes me reconsider what we eat. As the farmers market season begins, the food on our table goes from warm stews to quick, light dishes – something like a simple piece of grilled meat, an easy salad and sliced fruit. The dishes are thrown in the sink, and there we are, back to the jump ropes and swings.

A ritual in our family as we step into summer is a trip to our favorite nursery. We choose flowers and herbs for our planters and window boxes. The kids get into it too, choosing a few flowers and declaring a small place in the garden their own. Each takes pride in this garden, for a few weeks, anyway. And when that small bunch of flowers is forgotten, Paul will take over, pulling the weeds and watering.

My husband really is the plant and garden person in our house. In my care, plants tend to die. Not so with Paul. He takes into account how much sunlight a certain place gets. And then he carefully chooses the right plant, considering the other plants around it. The result is a healthy plant, in a thoughtfully designed garden. My thought process goes something like this: Oooh. Pretty flowers. Plant near the other pretty flowers. It's no

A Really Nice Late Spring Salad

A few handfuls of baby lettuce leaves (1 handful per person)

- 2 cups sugar snap peas
- 2 ounces crumbled goat cheese
- 1/2 cup toasted almonds
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1/4 cup balsamic vinegar
- A few tablespoons chopped chives
- Cracked black pepper and sea salt

Wash and dry salad leaves. If they are small leaves, leave them whole. If not, chop into bite-sized pieces. Place salad in a bowl. Slice the snap peas diagonally, so that the peas are cut in half. Leave the peas in their pods and arrange around the top of the salad. Place goat cheese and almonds over the greens. Mix the olive oil, vinegar and chives together with a crack of pepper and a sprinkle of salt, and dress the salad with just enough dressing right before serving. Any unused dressing will keep for a few days in the refrigerator.

surprise that plants will die in my care.

Last year, I came home on a warm summer afternoon after spending the day at Indian Ladder Farms. I brought home a big bag of apples and a small apple tree. I was so happy and proud of myself that I had chosen an apple tree for our yard. It would grow next to our deck, near the table. In a few years, it would tower over my children as they sat at the table. They would sit in the shade of this tree, playing a game or drawing. Elliot would pick apples, offering one to his sisters. Sounds nice, right?

And then the cold, hard truth from Paul: this tree will never survive in our yard. It's not sunny enough. And it won't ever produce apples. Who knew that one apple tree needs another to produce apples? Paul did. Too proud to admit defeat, I marched around back with my baby apple tree. We would have a beautiful apple tree. Just one that didn't produce apples, that's all. A minor dent in my plan. Carefully, I dug a hole, planted the tree just as I have learned to do. Not too deep, plenty of water. Paul didn't say a word. A week or so later, the tree looked alright, a little droopy maybe. But then the leaves started to turn brown. There was some serious drooping. Then all of the leaves were brown and on the ground. The baby apple tree was officially dead. When I wasn't home, Paul dug it up and dragged it out to the curb. And he never mentioned anything about how right he was.

As our family stood in the nursery this year, each of us was drawn to something different. Lucy headed down to check out the cactus selection. Zoe and Elliot took off toward the fish pond, wagon in tow. Paul went in the direction of annuals. I floated. The memory of my tree still fresh, I was reluctant to choose something that would die in my care. Paul smartly chose flowers perfect for the planters, window boxes and the shady part of the yard. He helped Zoe and Elliot choose flowers for each of their own gardens. And he explained to Lucy that a cactus wouldn't survive in our garden (hey, even I knew that.)

While all of this was going on, I was making a few decisions of my own. First, I would choose the plants for the big boxes that hang from our back deck. Probably the sunniest spot in our yard, I didn't have to take any chances with a plant that didn't like morning sun, or part shade. It didn't need to be complicated. So I turned around and left the flower department.

I left behind the petunias, begonias and all the rest. When I stopped walking I was in the center of the herb and vegetable greenhouse. There were rows and rows of lettuces: red and green, romaine, Bibb and mesclun. Paul found me there, to find his herbs. I told him the change in our plans: the back yard planters would be filled with lettuces this year, not flowers. He agreed that it was a good decision, the light was right and they could grow well there (yes!). So far, the lettuces are growing beautifully. A friend wisely taught me how to cut the little leaves, from the outside. Then the plant will produce more leaves.

A few weeks after they were planted, our lettuce grows green and bountiful. Not a brown or drooping leaf in site. My kids do sit on the deck, flanked by the lettuce plants. They don't exactly tower over their heads, and Elliot isn't picking lettuce leaves for his sisters to eat. But with fresh, green salads every night, who needs apple trees, anyway?

The author is the food writer for The Spotlight and the mother of three children, Lucy, age 9, Zoe, age 7, and Elliot, age 5. She can be reached at news@spotlightnews.com.

Guilderland Performing Arts Center gala to honor two

Park, town band also celebrate milestone anniversaries

By DAN SABBATINO

The Guilderland Performing Arts Center is honoring two alumni at a multi-anniversary celebration on Friday, June 12.

Mona Golub and Don Webster are being honored at the event, which will be held at Mallozzi's Clubhouse on Western Turnpike, for their hard work and dedication to the performing arts center. At the same time, Tawasentha Park is celebrating its 40th anniversary; GPAC its 30th and the town band its 40th, rounding out what is being called the 40/30/40 celebration.

Golub, Price Chopper's vice president for public relations and consumer services, has booked shows for the GPAC's Thursday night concert series. Town band founder Webster is a retired Guilderland teacher.

Webster founded the town band in 1969 with a mix of students and adults, he said. In 1978, after the band had done performances at the Empire State Plaza, members considered forming something new.

Webster said he and the Guilderland League of Arts, which no longer exists, formed a committee and formally organized into the Guilderland Performing Arts Center in 1979. On July 4, 1980, the first show at the Guilderland Performing Arts Center at Tawasentha Park was held.

"It grew over the years," he said.

GPAC sponsors a Thursday night concert series that features free music and theater.

He said volunteers work hard to make the concert series possible.

"I felt very proud to work with all of the volunteers, contributors and supporters," he said.

He said Dennis Moore, director of parks and recreation, plays an important role in keeping the facilities up to par.

"He kept the whole thing going," he said. "He's an intricate part of the whole scene."

Webster sat on the board of directors and retired in 2001. He was also a music teacher, retiring in 1991, teaching at Guilderland High School and Farnsworth Middle School.

"I feel very fortunate to have the opportunity to teach instrumental music at Guilderland High School," Webster said.

Webster said he attends at least one show during the summer concert series. He has a home in Florida, near the Kennedy Space Center, and lives in Rotterdam with his wife, Mary Lynne, who also sat on the GPAC board of directors.

Golub said the park is the perfect place to host the Thursday night concert series.

"It's a unique and beautiful setting," Golub said.

She also said she is proud to have been able to help bring the concert series to the community.

She said she served on the Guilderland Performing Arts Center Board for a number of years, booking concerts for them as well.

"They're a wonderful organization, made up almost entirely of volunteers," Golub said.

She said she booked concerts in Central Park in Schenectady in 1990, then Washington Park in 1993, and GPAC reached out to her shortly after to help book its concerts.

Moore said he is excited for this year's concert series.

"It's sort of a big year for us."

They are planning a variety of different styles of music.

"We try to appeal to all different people in the community," he said.

There will be a theatrical performance of "The Titanic" this year, he said.

"We're glad to present these events. They're open to anybody," he said. "We have a lot of community support."

People are encouraged to bring picnic blankets and lawn chairs to the outdoor amphitheater.

"It's sort of like a mini-Saratoga," Moore said. "It's just a relaxing evening."

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

First, cut the fear mongering

Rudy Giuliani, during his 2008 presidential bid, came under fire for his persistent use of 9/11 as a plank in his campaign platform.

It seems as though Saratoga Springs Commissioner of Public Safety Ron Kim has taken a page out of Giuliani's book. Kim, reacting to Finance Commissioner Ken Ivins' recommendation that the Public Safety Department trim $1.3 million out of its budget, immediately proposed that the cuts be taken in the form of 14 fewer firefighters and 19 fewer police officers. The chaos that would ensue would be biblical in its proportions, Kim assured.

This is a favorite tactic in the public safety circles — playing on the fears of what is mostly a well-to-do populace. Police Chief Edward Moore did the same thing last fall when he was justifying his department's rampant overtime expenses. For that presentation, Moore trotted out Officer Adam Baker, who was injured on duty the year before, while trying to subdue a suspect. Moore played for the audience the frantic 911 call that went out to report Baker's near-fatal injury. It almost makes you wonder if on Sept. 5, 2007, when Seth Dawson used a razor blade to slice Baker's throat, he realized he was creating a spokesperson for countless inflated public safety budgets.

There has to be some middle ground between giving the public safety department whatever they want and letting all hell break loose on the streets of one of Upstate New York's premier destination cities. And, quite frankly, that middle ground has to be recognized by the city's leaders.

Suggesting that the Public Safety Department look at ways to save money does not mean a person is anti-safety, pro-crime or that they want — god forbid — another officer to have his throat slashed on the streets downtown. Posturing as though that's exactly what will happen if the public safety budget is affected in any way is petulant and unproductive.

There are responsible and productive ways to make cuts in the city's budget. Commissioners should take a hard look at their administrative payroll, for example. In a city where departments have commissioners, deputy commissioners and other underbosses, eliminating layers of management would be a good way to save money, but to do so would mean looking at charter reform in a serious and responsible way — much like the way looking at public safety cuts should be handled.

Editorial

Birth of CD is a labor of love

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

The writer is the sports editor for Spotlight Newspapers, but for this column, consider him to be speaking strictly as a musician.

After many, many months of recording sessions, mixing sessions and waiting for the finished product, I am proud to say I finally have my first "professional" CD.

To celebrate the completion of "Take Me Anywhere," I'm throwing a CD release party Saturday night on the downstairs stage at Valentine's Music Hall (17 New Scotland Ave., Albany). Along for the ride are roots rockers Sumac and Jo Henley.

(Side note: I put professional in quotation marks because I still don't consider myself to be a professional musician. But after listening to the finished product, I can say that this sounds professional, which was the overall intent. I wanted to make a professional-sounding album, even if I'm not a professional musician.)

It took quite a while to get to this point. I started recording the album in November 2007, and the final, fully mastered version wasn't complete until late April. Add in the pressing and packaging, and that takes me almost right up to Saturday's release party.

I didn't intend to take nearly two years to make this album, but when you record at a busy studio like Collar City Sound in Troy, you don't have the same convenient access as you would if you recorded at home. I was lucky if I got into the studio twice in one month.

Fortunately, when I did get into the studio, things went pretty quickly. Most of that has to do with my friend, Frank Moscovitz. Not only did he admirably handle most of the engineering duties, but he also made many valuable musical contributions to the songs whether it was playing an instrument, adding backing vocals or adding something as simple as a whistling solo (you'll find that on "Grasping at Straws").

Point of View

When Frank couldn't make it into the studio to engineer the recording sessions, Seamus McNulty filled in admirably. But when it came to the mixing sessions, Frank was there from beginning to end taking the various tracks and cleaning them up. I think Frank considered this album to be as much his baby as it was mine, which is why it turned out as well as it did. You want someone behind the dials who is as passionate about the project as you are. Otherwise, it's not going to come out the way you wanted it.

A number of friends helped me with the recording, as well. Steve Candlen handled most of the drumming duties and did yeoman's work on some backing vocals (he layered his voice at the end of "Livin' the Dream" to the point where he made himself sound like the Eagles). He also let me record one of his songs, "Calm before the Storm," which I think turned out great.

Albert Von Schaaf — better known to the area music scene as Albie — laid down some seriously rocking guitar solos. We're talking face-searing, gut-busting guitar solos. Seriously, when you hear "40 Miles out of Memphis" or "Freight Train," do not turn the volume past 10, no matter how tempted you might be. You will not have a face or any guts left.

When Albie didn't handle the lead guitar duties, Troy Pohl (of Kamikaze Hearts fame) and JV Abbey took over with some tasty, melodic licks. Troy also got into the layering spirit with a three-level guitar solo on "Gotta Get Goin'" that once again invoked the Eagles. JV did his part with some bluesy interjections on "Welcome to the Crew," which is one of my favorite songs on the CD. (Actually, all the songs are good, but some can't help but stand out. "Welcome to the Crew" is one that stands out.)

I lucked out when Katie Haverly agreed to come in one night and add some vocals. Her work on "The Old Town" turned a good song into a great song. She even made me sound good on the harmonies, which is no small feat since I'm not a classically trained singer.

(Side note: for those of you who haven't heard this woman sing, go and get one of her albums. She is a terrific singer-songwriter, not to mention very good at improvised comedy with the Mop and Bucket Company.)

Women figure prominently in the creation of the album. Besides Katie, I had help from violinist Megan Prokorym (knotworking/Swamp Baby) on "Grasping at Straws," and Amanda Fry and her friend Noel came in to lend their vocals to "Giants." Their contributions were great, even if it was for a song.

Once the recording and mixing sessions were finished, there was still the matter of making the album sound bright and lively. For that, I sent the album to Chicago, where Carl Saff put the tracks through his machines to master the product. The result is an album that sounds as professional as any mass-produced CD you'd find in a record store.

Now, I could have taken that final product, put it onto a computer and mass produced CDs on my own, but it wouldn't look as professional as what the gang at Sire Press in Philadelphia did with it. I sent them the album and the artwork (photographs courtesy of Alicia Solsman), and they sent me back 120 slick-looking CDs. Definitely a lot better than trying to do it on my own. I didn't want to hand-write 120 copies of track listings if I could avoid it.

So now that I have the finished product, it's time to take it to the masses. The first opportunity will be Saturday night, and the best news is that I will have a full band backing me up at the show including Albie on lead guitar and Frank Moscovitz on bass and backing vocals. Drummer Pete Sheehan will be joining us to provide the backbeat.

The crazy part for me is that I will be pulling double duty that night. Besides my own set, I'm playing keyboard in Sumac, which will be opening the show with 30 minutes of country rock (in the best sense of the phrase). So, I'm sort of opening for myself. Weird, huh?

If you want to get an idea as to what the album is like, I posted three songs on my reverbnation page (reverbnation.com/robjonas). There are also a couple of songs from an EP I recorded back in 2006 on the player, so you can hear the difference between the EP and the full-length CD.

But if you really want to hear this album, come on down to Valentine's Saturday night and see it being recreated on stage. After all, a musician only has one CD release party for any album, and I'm planning on making it the best party possible.

Mixed-age classes create 'Lost Children of Bethlehem'

Editor, The Spotlight:

Due to miscalculations in the enrollment estimates at Clarksville Elementary, Bethlehem Superintendent Dr. Michael Tebbano and the School Board have recently suggested that the current kindergarten class be merged next year with the class above or below.

So called mixed-age classes are surprisingly common in the Bethlehem Central School District and are fueled by budgetary concerns. What is unprecedented this time around is the highly probable plan that this group of students will be mixed-age for all of their elementary years and always will be educated at the lowest age. Both ideas are unique for BCSD and are unacceptable to any parent or child in the district.

We all pay our fair share of taxes, so why should any child's education be watered-down, especially given the current budget allocated for enough teachers to keep this group together? When faced with such logic, Tebbano made it clear that his focus is on the system (read: budget) and not any one child or group. That notion was echoed further when one special-needs parent asked how a single teacher could address her child fully along with both a kindergarten and first-grade group. Tebbano replied that the district "would do their best."

All of this was more than a little embarrassing to hear from the head of the Bethlehem School District, whose current school ranking is near, or at the top of, its class.

Temporary reshuffling of class sizes due to enrollment are palatable, especially given budget constraints, but the recurring loop plan offered is not. This group of Lost Children is being discriminated against in terms of educational quality based on redistricting mishaps. Tebbano and the board have lost their way and should be replaced. None of the members have children enrolled at Clarksville and none have encountered more than one year of mixed-age classes.

I am curious what the plan would be if Tebbano or the School Board did have a child facing this lesser, if not outright inferior, form of elementary education. What is clear, however, is the signal that Tebbano is sending across Delmar, New Scotland, Glenmont and Clarksville: the once stable brand identity and overall quality of education at Bethlehem are both in play.

Flash forward a few years from now: if Clarksville's enrollment is presently lower than expected, where will it be given the choices of potential homebuyers and future parents of students faced with the legacy of Bethlehem's Lost Children?

Iris society thanks Main Square Shoppes

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Capital-Hudson Iris Society again wants to thank Main Square Shoppes and Dennis Corrigan for allowing us to make use of the Main Square parking lot for our annual Siberian Iris and Perennial Sale. This year, the sale will be held on Sunday morning, June 14, from 9 a.m. to noon, to allow us more space for the plants and so that we don't interfere with the busy in and out of traffic at Main Square.

In the last few days, gardens all over town have been in their glory, irises in particular! The Capital-Hudson Iris Society likes to think that in some way we have been responsible for some of this beauty — by providing a source of beautiful Siberian irises in many colors at our June sale each year, and iris rhizomes of tall bearded and other varieties at our August sale at Faddegon's.

We hope people will again stop by the sale on Sunday morning, June 14, to expand their collection of irises and perennials, and that those who haven't yet taken advantage of this once-a-year opportunity will do so. All the plants have been grown in our member's gardens and are hardy in this area.

Profits from the sale are used to bring in guest experts from around the country to our free, open monthly meetings. Anyone who wants more information on the sale or on the Capital-Hudson Iris Society is welcome to call me at 439-3758.

Garden Tour a beautiful place to be

Editor, The Spotlight:

Today, June 10, is the 12th Annual Garden Tour and Plant Sale held by the Bethlehem Garden Club. You may have seen signs all around the town. This is the fundraiser for the club and the proceeds go to the club's two major projects: the beautification of the town gardens and the annual education grant. This year the grant was awarded to the Slingerlands Elementary School.

The garden tour runs from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at booths in the parking lot of the Price Chopper in Slingerlands and Glenmont for $15. The plant sale will be held on Borthwick Avenue next to the entrance to the Bethlehem Public Library. There is no admission fee. Plants may be purchased from 3 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. These events will be held rain or shine.

In addition, a Fine Gardening Raffle will be held. Tickets may be purchased at the plant sale. The winner will receive the services of a team of club members who will arrive at the winners home and perform several hours of fine gardening yard work. The winning ticket will be drawn by Ms. Kathleen Kalmer, the leader of the Slingerlands Elementary School team that won the 2009 Educational Grant.

We're hoping that many Bethlehem residents will turn out to be inspired by the garden tour homes and then buy plants to improve their gardens and thereby help us continue to beautify the public garden areas of the Town of Bethlehem.

Thanks for the roundabouts

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Department of Transportation and Town of Bethlehem should be congratulated for the installation of the traffic circles in town.

There used to be lengthy traffic backups in those areas, now there are none even in the high traffic times of day. While I expected some improvement in traffic with the circles, I never expected them to have this much of a beneficial effect.

G'land Industrial Park at risk of losing tax break

Change in legislation places nearly 650 businesses on cusp of losing Empire Zone status

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

The Northeastern Industrial Park Off Route 146 in Guilderland is among a number of business entities that could lose its Empire Zone certification, according to state officials.

Empire State Development is reviewing Empire Zone certified businesses in order to determine which have the best cost-benefit analysis.

"To participate in the Empire Zones Program, a business must first be located in an empire zone, or qualify as a regionally significant project, and become zone certified. To qualify for certification, a business must be able to demonstrate that it will create new jobs and/or make investments in the empire zone and be consistent with the local zone's development plan, including a cost-benefit analysis," according to the ESD Web site.

Members of the Empire Zone program received tax exemptions from the state and local level.

According to information from Empire State Development, changes include a Real Property Tax Credit reduction of 25 percent for businesses certified on or after April 1.

"The entire Northeastern Industrial Park is one of 647 identified for potential decertification under this year's Empire Zone reforms. Whether its certification is revoked or not, there is also a June 30, 2010 sunset date for the program which means that unless the program is reauthorized, then no additional businesses can be certified at that location," said Katie Krawczyk, Upstate director of public affairs for Empire State Development.

There are also three new grounds for decertification, according to Krawczyk's office.

"Shirt-changers," or businesses reincorporating prior to Aug. 1, 2002 in order to maximize tax benefits, will be decertified. Businesses in the Empire Zone program for a minimum of three years having a benefit-cost ratio of less than 1:1 will be eliminated from the program, as well as those with a change in ownership or those that leave the Empire Zone.

Multiple phone calls to representatives from the Northeastern Industrial Park were unreturned.

Senior Celebration a night of clean fun

Editor, The Spotlight:

Senior year is a time when big decisions are made and futures are planned.

Being a senior is arguably the most stressful year of high school with such daunting tasks as applying to college, looking for scholarships, working part time jobs and dealing with the infamous "senioritis." At the same time, kids are still going to school and partaking in the numerous other activities that students choose to get involved in.

For someone who hasn't even escaped the teenage years yet, it can be a pretty intimidating and stressful task. To combat these scary symptoms the senior parents team up every year to put together the Senior Celebration for the graduating senior class. The Senior Celebration consists of fun, food, staying up until the wee hours of the morning, prizes and more fun.

Every year, just about everyone in the senior class returns to the building of academics to party and enjoy themselves till sunrise. Now don't take the word "partying" the wrong way, the whole event is run very smoothly by parents and volunteers, and at the same time not hindering the ability to enjoy the night.

Another cool aspect of the celebration is the picture wall.

The hallway from the upper gym to the lower gym is lined with old pictures of all the seniors sent in by parents to help bring back old memories and really make it a special night. Who can find a way not to enjoy an opportunity to win the prizes that are given out? Everyone really appreciates the chance at winning the money, prizes, and gift certificates at the end of the night.

I know everyone really appreciates the people and businesses that donate to the event each year and without them the event really wouldn't be possible.

2007 BCHS graduate

We ignore the right to vote at our peril

Editor, The Spotlight:

I really liked the editorial, "No one cares anymore" (May 27). Here's my response:

One of my favorite bumper stickers reads, "Ignore your rights — they'll go away."

The people's right to vote in this country is hard-won. The American Revolution was just the beginning; suffragettes and civil rights activists extended and fulfilled the Founders' vision.

The vote is our single most potent tool for change. It has the power to dislodge complacency and injustice.

It reminds our elected officials that they work for us. It speaks in a very loud voice about who we are and what we value.

But it can do these things only if we vote often and in great numbers.

We ignore it at our peril.

Louise Grieco

Why bother voting?

Editor, The Spotlight:

In the May 27 editorial "No one cares anymore," you asked why more people didn't participate in the budget and school board votes.

I'll tell you why: Why bother?

We never had, and never will have, children in the Niskayuna School District. The Niskayuna school budget always passes even though we go and vote "no."

The contingency budget was higher than the budget we would have been voting on.

We bought a house that we could afford 16 years ago and now it's assessed at so much, our taxes are more than our mortgage.

Our taxes are already hugely high and there isn't a damn thing we can do about it. We're just lamb to be fleeced by every taxing entity in the state.

I wish I didn't love my home — then I could sell it and move the heck out of New York.

That's why we didn't vote.

WFP endorses Messina, Jordan

Working Families Party gives Messina and Jordan additional ballot lines

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Pulling in his second official ballot line, Councilman Sam Messina continues to build up support for Bethlehem town supervisor.

The Working Families Party of the Capital District has lent its support to both Messina and Bethlehem Independence Party Chairman Mark Jordan. The third-party line is Messina's second and Jordan's third.

"I am proud to accept the endorsement of the Working Families Party," Messina said. "I believe in the values of the party in how it speaks to the problems of everyday people. ... It means a lot to me to receive this endorsement."

Jordan, a leader in the world of third party politics himself, said he is thankful for the support.

"I'm very happy. If all goes well, I'm looking forward to appearing on four ballot lines," said Jordan. "I'm looking forward to an energetic campaign this summer and am grateful for the opportunity and the support I've received."

Karen Scharff, co-chair of the Working Families Party Capital District chapter, said even though Messina and Jordan may have some differences, they are both a good fit.

"They applied for the endorsement and we thought they both really epitomized the party," Scharff said. "Even though we realize in Bethlehem politics they may not be allies, we felt both of them displayed our core values."

Messina is an Independence Party member and was running for the same seat as his political boss, Jordan, before announcing his run for supervisor. Messina described his original interview with Jordan for Town Board as "uncomfortable." (See related story, page 10.)

Messina and Jordan received the Conservative Party endorsement, which is typically on the opposite side of political spectrum, but the supervisor hopeful said he is building a broad-based coalition of supporters in his 2009 election bid.

"I believe in many of the party's principals, such as campaign finance reform," Messina said. "I've been reaching out to people of all political backgrounds and have a history of doing so." Jordan said politics are a little different locally.

"There aren't too many races that a candidate receives three minor party endorsements," said Jordan. "There's a natural tension between the parties because of ideology, but the tension are lessened on the local level. ... Local politics are different than on the state level."

Jordan is chief of staff for Tim Gordon, I-Bethlehem, the state's only Independence Party member in the Assembly.

Scharff said the Working Family Party focuses on middle class struggle.

"We look at the records of all the candidates from both parties, and endorse the ones that will put working families first, ahead of big-money interests or their own political gain," Scharff said in a release. "When you vote on the Working Families line, you send a powerful message about good jobs and rebuilding an economy that works for the middle class."

The party reports that it drew over 210,000 votes statewide for its Congressional candidates and just under 160,000 votes for President Barack Obama last November on its "Row E" ballot line.

"I think lines are important, but not just in the practical nature," Messina concluded. "You are not only accepting the support of the party, but you are accepting the responsibility to represent the people who are a part of those parties."

Planning Board chair honored by EDC

Bethlehem's own George Leveille was named the 2009 Economic Developer of the Year Award at the state's Economic Development Council.

Leveille, who is currently the town's planning board chairman and works at Harris Beach LLP as an economic development consultant, was given the honor May 22 at the Economic Development Council's annual banquet in Cooperstown.

A release about the award stated, "George exemplifies outstanding dedication and performance and has demonstrated his leadership and commitment to economic development throughout his career in public service."

Before becoming planning board chairman and taking a job with Harris Beach, Leveille served as Bethlehem's executive director of economic development and planning and as director of the town's Industrial Development Agency.

Before that was the commissioner of planning and development for the city of Albany as well as the director of the city's IDA. He was also a one-time chairman of the Albany Convention Center Authority.

His award released also stated, "During George's tenure as Albany economic development leader, the skyline of the city changed dramatically, much due to his skills as an economic developer."

Leveille was appointed as Bethlehem Planning Board's chair in January having taken over the reins of long-time former chairman Parker Mathusa. A committee of peers presented him the award.

Fellow planning board member Katherine McCarthy lauded Leveille's achievements and recent honor at the Tuesday, June 2, planning board meeting.

George was recently named the 2009 economic developer of year by the New York State Economic Development Council," McCarthy said. "We're lucky to have George's skill and experience here on the planning board, congratulations, George."

Cunningham gets party nod over Messina

Independence Party endorses Bethlehem Democrats, party chair and Republican

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The Albany County Independence Party has unanimously endorsed Democrat Jack Cunningham based on his record over its own member for Bethlehem town supervisor.

The party also cross endorsed Democratic Councilman Kyle Kotary for re-election, Democrat Nanci Moquin for an open town clerk seat, Bethlehem Independence Party Chairman Mark Jordan for his first Town Board bid, and Republican Gregg Sagendorf in his bid for another term as highway superintendent.

All of the picks were unanimous.

Left out of the equation is Councilman Sam Messina, a member of the party, in his bid to unseat Cunningham as supervisor. Councilwoman Joann Dawson is also an Independence Party member

Guilderland incumbents get backing

Party holds off on New Scotland endorsements

Albany County Independence Party Chairman Paul Caputo announced the party has endorsed Ken Runion for Guilderland supervisor and Paul Pastore and Patricia Slavick for Town Board. All three are Democrats.

He also said the party endorsed incumbents Rosemary Centi for town clerk, Jean Cataldo for receiver of taxes and Denise Randall for town justice.

"I'm a big Ken Runion fan," Caputo said.

He said he admired the supervisor's work, especially considering the contentious relationship Runion has with Republican board members Warren Redlich and Mark Grimm. He made note of the low tax rate and high services offered in Guilderland, Caputo's hometown. Caputo is also vice-chair of the state Independence Party.

Caputo said that although the party did not endorse him, members were impressed with candidate Matt Nelligan, the Republican Party's vice-chair, and he said Nelligan will likely have a successful political career.

"I really think he's got a good future ahead of him," Caputo said.

In the Town of New Scotland, Caputo said, the Independence Party is holding off on endorsements until more information about the town's zoning law can be determined.

"We want to see what happens with the big-box down in the town," Caputo said.

He said the party is expecting to make picks sometime this month.

-Dan Sabbatino

on the board; meaning if Jordan and Messina won their respective seats, the party could have a majority on the board including the chairman, which would be a first in the town's history.

Albany County Independence Party Chairman Paul Caputo, who is also the state's vice chair, said he is impressed with this year's slate of candidates in Bethlehem and that although he believes Messina to be a good public servant, he said he felt Cunningham was the stronger candidate.

"We have endorsed Jack in the past and he's done a wonderful job and has been a proponent of open government," Caputo said. "He's been a very good supervisor."

Caputo described Messina as "a very fine gentleman" and wished him well.

Messina said he was "disappointed but not surprised" by the announcement and stated he would "definitely" seek a primary.

Cunningham said he was happy with the announcement and is looking forward to both the primary and general campaigns.

"I'm pleased to get this nomination and looking forward to a spirited campaign this summer," said Cunningham. "I work very hard on this job, and I hope residents see that and continue to support me for another term."

Messina said he is unsure why his party did not lend its support but that he will now be appealing directly to the people.

"I am in the Independence Party, and I have acted during my full Town Board involvement in the best interest of the Independence Party," Messina said when The Spotlight informed him of his nomination loss. "Bethlehem voters will make up their own minds about who they want."

Messina said Cunningham can expect to primary for the ballot line.

"I think I represent the people in Bethlehem who have registered in the Independence Party to be able to think and act independently," said Messina. "The bottom line is I am the only person in the Independence Party running for supervisor, and I am the only one in this race acting with independent values."

Cunningham said he is no stranger to primaries, particularly an Independence Party primary, after winning his first in 2001 for Bethlehem Town Board.

"I've won more Independence primaries than anyone else in Albany County," Cunningham said.

The endorsement comes as a big win for him after Messina announced his candidacy with accusations of political insider governance. Cunningham says the solid vote of confidence validates his tenure, while Messina says the endorsement only validates his point about political cronyism.

"Jack Cunningham has been entirely about control and expedience," Messina said of his opponent's record on open government. "The Independence Party has a chance to be great by being independent."

The announcement comes on the heels of Messina and Jordan's endorsement by the state's Working Families Party, adding an extra line for each of the Independence Party members (See related story, page 9).

As it stands now, Cunningham has the Democrat and Independence lines for supervisor and Messina has the Conservative and Working Families Party lines, but is expected to also receive the town's Republican Party nomination.

The Independence line could give Cunningham two lines, with a major party and a minor party line, or it could give Messina four lines, with a possible major party and three minor party lines.

Jordan said he was happy to get the Independence Party nomination.

"In Bethlehem, the Democratic and Independence parties have worked very well together in past years and we look forward to continuing to work with each other in the future," said Jordan who is the party's town chair and chief of staff for Assemblyman Tim Gordon, I-Bethlehem.

Jordan's cross-party "running mate," Kotary, said he was happy to get the unanimous support of the Independence Party for the second time in his re-election bid for Town Board.

"I'm very pleased and honored to receive this nomination again," Kotary said. "I'm very thankful to our town chair Mark Jordan and county chair Paul Caputo as well as Assemblyman Tim Gordon for all of their support."

Caputo said it was a special honor to endorse Jordan.

"One of my greatest joys as chairman is when I have the opportunity to endorse one of our own members for office," Caputo said.

However, passing up on Messina and the possible board majority was an issue of some contention between Messina and the party's leaders. Caputo said the possible majority strategy never came up during the party's nine-

Crossgates customers take part in free CPR class

Instructors say anyone can be a first responder

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Everyone is a potential first responder when someone has a heart attack. This is the reason the National Heart Group, along with Pyramid Security, sponsored a free class for Crossgates Mall patrons to learn the basics of first response and emergency CPR Tuesday, June 2.

"These are regular, run-of-the-mill people. They come from all walks of life," said Bill Gardner, one of the instructors at the class and co-owner of The National Heart Group, based in Latham. The National Heart Group is a privately owned, emergency medical training provider, according to its Web site. "We're showing them how to save their family or friend's lives."

Gardner said an e-mail and flier campaign, along with information distributed through area fire departments, encouraged participants to come to the event to learn CPR and use an automatic external defibrillator, or AED.

"This is the first line of defense for someone in cardiac arrest," Gardner said.

"The statistics are compelling," said Ed O'Brien, Gardner's counterpart at the National Heart Group in a written statement. "Knowing CPR doubles or triples the chances of survival for someone suffering cardiac arrest. The more people we can train, the more lives we can save."

O'Brien also added that knowing CPR is important since a majority of accidents occur in the home, where no AED is available.

Ed Rose, head of security at the Aviation Mall in Queensbury, security director of Pyramid Companies, certified CPR instructor and a regional representative of the American Heart Association, said the Aviation Mall has had 11 cardiac arrests dating back to 2003, and Instructor Ed Rose looks on as participants in a free CPR course practice life-saving techniques at Crossgates Mall on Tuesday, June 2.

Dan Sabbatino/Spotlight

each victim was successfully resuscitated by mall personnel trained in CPR.

Pyramid holds 30 to 40 classes each year, training 200 to 250 employees, according to the AHA.

Rose said offering the classes at a mall, to mall patrons, makes sense since such a high volume of shoppers are elderly and seeking to get exercise from walking around. Many of them are at high risk for heart attack, and the more people who are qualified to step in and perform emergency procedures, the better chance they will save a person's life, Rose said.

Rose explained the emergency response steps to the participants. First, a responder must lift the victim's head and chin and determine if he or she is breathing. Then, the victim's nose is pinched to prevent the air blown into the mouth from coming back out. The responder then gives the victim two, one-second breaths. After that, responders begin a series of "30 good, high-quality compressions" on the chest.

"That is the most vital part of CPR," Rose said.

Rose also discussed using the AED, and explained how the equipment instructions will describe to the responder what to do and whether shocks are required. Rose said it is basically mistake proof.

"It makes the decisions for you," he said. "It tells you everything you need to know."

Rose went over several unique situations, such as metal necklaces that might need to be removed, or a thick layer of chest hair. He said for the latter, a second set of pads is included in the AED kits, so that the first pair could be used to rip the hair off.

Gardner quipped that if the victim was able to feel the pain from ripping the hair off, as one participant was concerned about, you might have stung him back to consciousness.

Rose said the AED should be used in all possible cases. CPR should be performed until an ambulance arrives or the person performing it is physically exhausted.

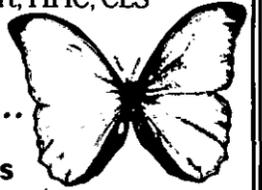

One participant, Heather Rider, said she decided to come to the class because she wanted to be prepared in case anything ever happened to someone in her family.

"It's something you need to know," Rider said.

The event takes place during National CRP and AED Awareness Week, according to information from the American Heart Association. By the end of the week, it hopes to have 1 million newly trained CRP responders.

member executive committee that ultimately made the Albany County endorsements.

"To be honest with you, we're a little different than other political parties," Caputo said about it. "We look at the individual records, we typically don't look at the party like that."

Messina disagreed with those sentiments, saying a political majority in town could help further the party's core values of open independent government outside of the rule of political bosses.

"The Independence Party should stand for something and stand on its own feet," Messina said. "That should be more important than developing political relationships with other parties that do not have independent values."

Thursday Night Poets bring artwork to library

Have you noticed "Alice's Feet" hanging at the end of our gallery corridor?

Take a look at the ceiling there and you will see them. The feet are the creation of Mark O'Brien, one of the most imaginative members of the Every Other Thursday Night Poets. This month, for the third time, the poets are exhibiting "artwork" in the hall gallery and Mark's has made a unique electronic contribution you should see.

One of our artist/poets showing here, also regularly exhibits at the Upstate Artists Guild and other venues. If you are at the Lark Fest, look for Tom Corrado's painting, "The Little Pastry Chef (After Soutine)," included in The People's Choice Show at Upstate through June 26. Tom's intriguing sculpture called The Reader is very visible in the main reading room at VPL.

Even those poets who have little or no artistic bent were implored to participate and came up with some interesting offerings. Many of the paintings and collages are accompanied by framed poems by the "artist". My own submissions for this show include a collage of some of my strange photographs called "Seeing Your Own Crazy" and a poetic tribute to my dad, arranged with old family photos.

There will be a reception on Thursday, June 18, from 6 - 8 p.m. for those of you who would like to meet the poets and see the show, which will hang for the remainder of the month.

Amy Delisle accompanies her daughter Madilyn on the Voorheesville Elementary kindergarten field trip to the library. Amy and Madilyn are the granddaughter and great-granddaughter of Jane Salvatore who was the library director for the Voorheesville School District and Public Library for almost 50 years.

Please drop in to eat and socialize.

The Thursday group has been meeting at the library since 1991 and has become well known as a thoughtful and constructive critique resource for those looking to improve their writing skills. Participants are all active in the Capital District arts/writing scene, and in promoting poetry. EOTNP welcome newcomers to the library meetings on the second and fourth Thursday of each month at 6:30 p.m.

The Library Friends Book and Bake Sale begins on Friday, June 12, from 5 - 8 p.m. with Sneak Preview Night for members only. Saturday, June 13, is the biggest sale day from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m., with baked goods and coffee for sale in the lobby. On "Buck-a-Bag" Sunday, June 14, from 1 - 4 p.m., you can bring your own bag and cram it full of books for just one dollar.

Family storytime meets at 6:30 p.m. on June 16.

Books come in, books go out — in large numbers

The Tuesday after the Memorial Day weekend is generally a busy day for our circulation staff, and this year was a whopper.

Over 4,000 items—books and media—went out and almost 6,000 items were returned, for a total of close to 10,000 circulation desk transactions in one day. In 2007, that total was a little over 7,000, and in 2008 it was about 8,700; you can see where the trend is going.

To give you an idea of volume, an ordinary day sees about 5,000 circulation desk transactions at our library—no small number as it is.

Of course, all those incoming materials need to be reshelfed. Our collection maintenance staff was up to the challenge, and order was restored by Wednesday morning. Returns over the Memorial Day weekend would overflow the outdoor drop boxes if our maintenance staff didn't leave their family picnics to empty them periodically.

The smoothness of our post-Memorial Day operation is just one of many hidden tasks that keep our library running well.

Study hall at the library

Beginning this week and continuing until Wednesday, June 24, Bethlehem students taking final exams can come to the library for group and individual study time in the library's meeting rooms. Our study hall schedule is posted next to the information desk. This has been a very popular service. We opened our meeting rooms for mid-term study last winter, and plan to expand our study hall schedule next year to include time for AP exam review.

June 19 hours

The library will open at 1p.m. on Friday, June 19, to accommodate an in-house staff development workshop for our employees in the morning. Book drops will be open, but there will be no phone service.

Old Songs Festival presents "Henry Hudson & the Half Moon" at GPL

"Henry Hudson & the Half Moon" is a musical presentation about Hudson's epic 1609 voyage of discovery; this free concert will be held Friday, June 19, at 7 pm in the Guilderland Public Library's Helderberg Room.

Presented in cooperation with the Old Songs organization, this very special event is part of the Hudson Quadricentennial as well as the Library's own Explore New York's Roots and Rhythms series. In song and story, six performers including Ankie van der Meer and Nanne Kalma — all from the Netherlands, and performing their original songs in Dutch and English — relate the tale of Hudson who, with his crew, sailed the Half Moon from Amsterdam northward towards the Pole in search of a shorter route to China. Against orders, Hudson changed course and sailed westward to search for the passage.

After crossing the Atlantic, the ship eventually arrived at the mouth of the river that would one day bear his name. Seeking passage, Hudson sailed up this newly discovered river to a point now known as Albany. Finding the river not navigable above that point, he ended the expedition. But the story really just begins there.

Hudson, as we all know, opened a new territory to trade and exploration. These wonderful performers relate the story in song. This Old Songs performance is free and open to the public. All are welcome to this extraordinary event.

The library's other musical presentation is "Songs from New York State: A Concert by Dave Ruch, Singer and Folklorist" Take a musical trip across New York state with songs from various characters and places around the Empire State as played by singer and folklorist Dave Ruch; this concert takes place at the library on Saturday, June 13, at 2 p.m. Musician and performer Dave Ruch is widely noted for his ability to engage audiences of all kinds. The Summer Reading Club plans to "Be Creative" this summer. The library brings books and creative activities to the town recreation programs. Families can also join the Summer Reading Club independently by registering at the Library (and coming soon, by online registration) Kids read books to earn beads that can then be traded for prizes from our Treasure Box.

The young writers workshop is a perennial favorite for children ages 9 and up, entering 4th grade and above. Over the course of the session the participants write, illustrate and bind their original story. The annual Young Writers Reception will be on Wednesday, August 12 at 7 p.m.

Session 1 - July 7 to July 22, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, 2-3:30 p.m.

Session 2 - July 28 to August 12, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, 2-3:30 p.m.

The new teen writing group is the natural progression for kids who have outgrown the Young Writers program. The group will plan field trips and other activities as well as meet with writing leader Linda Miller, who will guide their writing activities. Perfect for the writer who is writing on their own, or would like to be! Register by phone or email (felstenj@uhs.lib.ny.us).

The chess club for kids meets on Wednesdays from 4-5:30 p.m. Players of all skill levels are invited to sharpen their skills through friendly play with this mixed age group. Players should call the Library to register.

"Wagging Tales" brings specially trained canine friends to the library to listen to readers who want to practice their reading skills over the summer. Call the library to schedule an appointment with one of our furry "listeners".

The Bethlehem Schools will salute the Quadricentennial by focusing on education as an important part of life in Bethlehem all the way from yesterday's one-room schoolhouses to today's modern facilities. Hamagrael Elementary School will perform a play about Henry Hudson and have displays of historic interest created for public viewing. The play will be performed at Hamagrael Elementary School, 1 McGuffey Lane, Delmar. For information, contact Bethlehem Town Historian Susan Leath at sleath@townofbethlehem.org or 439-4955 ext 1160.

• Saturday, June 13: Hudson River Day: Relay Flotilla. The Relay Flotilla begins on Saturday, June 6, with the boat and yacht clubs of New York City sending out their memberships around the tip of Manhattan and around the Statue of Liberty to be led up the Hudson River by flagships. As these memberships are welcomed at the next northerly clubs, those clubs will send their members out to continue the relay tracing Henry Hudson's path to Albany. Commitments from the flagships Onrust, Clearwater, Woody Guthrie and Half Moon have been made. The schedule calls for a Saturday, June 13, departure from Castleton at 11 a.m., arriving in Albany at 12:30 p.m. On Saturday morning, June 13, after 11 a.m., the Flotilla will be passing Bethlehem shores and the public is invited anywhere along the Hudson River, particularly at the town's Henry Hudson Park. Nicole Sama can be contacted for further information at njsama@gw.dec.state.ny.us.

• Sunday, June 14: Bethlehem Hudson River Heritage Museum. The Bethlehem Historical Association is holding a kick-off to its Bethlehem Hudson River Museum at the Cedar Hill Schoolhouse, 1003 River Road, Selkirk. The 2009 summer exhibit will run on Sunday afternoons from June 14 until Oct. 25 and will feature Native America artifacts, ice harvesting, steam ships and other small industries on the Hudson. For more information call 767-9432. The event will also include an Opening Day Ice Cream Social and Bethlehem Art Association show and sale.

• Friday, June 19: Musical Presentation of the voyage of Henry Hudson to the New World. Henry Hudson and the Half Moon, with Nanne Kalma and Ankie van der Meer, will give a free performance in honor of the Quadricentennial at the Guiderland Public Library, 2228 Western Ave., Guiderland. The six performers from the Hudson crew are all from the Netherlands, and perform their original songs in Dutch and English. Kalma and van der Meer perform traditional & contemporary Dutch folk songs, including Hudson and maritime songs. For information, call Andy Spence at Old Songs, Inc., at 765-2815.

• Thursday, June 25: Guiderland Public Library Quadricentennial Series. The Guiderland Public Library will hold a lecture, "The French Language as it Persists in the Northeast Today." It is part of the series: The Continuing French Presence in the Hudson Valley. Long after French explorers and settlers followed trade routes through New York and beyond, traces of French culture can still be found in the Hudson Valley. Celebrate this Hudson-Champlain Quadricentennial year by learning more about our local history. Dr. Cynthia Fox, professor of French at the University at Albany, will explain the differences in the French language as it is spoken in France and as it continues to be spoken in the northeast, showing its roots in 17th century speech. The lecture begins at 7 p.m., in the Helderberg Room at the library, 2228 Western Ave., Guiderland.

South Bethlehem is embedded in state history

Small hamlet is part of just about every major structure in the Capital District

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Editor's note: This is the third article of a nine-part series of historical features on the hamlets of Bethlehem in commemoration of this year's Quadracentennial. The next feature article, in the second week of July, will focus on the hamlet of Selkirk.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM — If you're digging up a little history on South Bethlehem, you won't have to dig far. In fact, just about every major structure and arterial roadway in the Capital District has roots in the little hamlet near the Coeymans town line.

The hamlet has many historical offerings for the area, but far and away, it was Callanan Industries that put South Bethlehem on the map. As one of the area's biggest employers in the 19th and 20th centuries, the name Callanan has been stamped on a number of projects, from The Egg in Albany to the New York State Thruway that cuts across the state.

However, not all of the news from Callanan Industries was good. As we celebrate this year's Quadracentennial of Henry Hudson and Samuel De Champlain's explorations, coincidentally, exactly 100 years ago an explosion rocked South Bethlehem.

On May 12, 1909, about 20 people were killed, including two of the Callanan brothers, when more than 1,000 pounds of dynamite prematurely exploded.

The headline in the New York Times the next day read, "Blast in Quarry Kills 20 Men."

The notable deaths reportedly found at the blast site included John Hoyt Callanan of Albany, vice president and general manager; Charles D. Callanan of Albany, the manager's brother; Leroy McMillan of Voorheesville, assistant superintendent; John Hendrickson of South Bethlehem, steam driller foreman; Fred Snyder of South Bethlehem, master mechanic; James Maloney of South Bethlehem, a blacksmith; William Baumes of South Bethlehem, a fireman; and Fred Zappert of New York, an agent of the National Powder Company.

The Times reported that an additional "12 Italian workmen" died in the blast.

"One thousand pounds of dynamite exploded, scattering the bodies of the victims for hundreds of feet around, and it was with difficulty that the blackened, dismembered remains, mutilated almost beyond recognition, were identified," according to the article. "It was first believed that the death roll would reach thirty, but tonight several Italian workmen who had been reported as missing were accounted for."

There were also descriptions of a wagons being loaded up with the bodies as grief-stricken relatives gathered to identify their loved ones. The dynamite blast was scheduled for 5 p.m., but around 2 p.m., an explosion was heard that hurled tons of rock on the workers below.

Homes were rattled and windows were reported broken from substantial distances all around the South Bethlehem quarry.

To add to the mayhem, the explosion set off a fire in the nearby woods that spread in the direction of the company's dynamite storehouse. Fortunately, the fire was extinguished, before it reached the storehouse.

LEFT: This photograph taken around 1900 shows Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Davidson in their motor coach. He was a physician in South Bethlehem.

However, the five unexploded charges of dynamite remained at the blast site, which hampered recovered efforts, as those searching for bodies feared there could be another series of explosions at anytime.

The only fatal explosion at the quarry prior to that was 20 years earlier when three men were killed.

There was another explosion mishap on June 16 in 1891, and although nobody was killed, company founder Peter Callanan nearly died from embarrassment.

More than 2,000 people gathered in South Bethlehem from all across the area to see more than 50,000 cubic yards of limestone displaced from the quarry walls. Preparation for the event had been weeks in the making, with even New York Gov. David Bennet Hill in attendance, according to state records.

The Edison Electric Company of New York City was brought in to simultaneously set off the charges and put on a show for the spectators, which was a first for the Callanan Company at the time.

However, when 16-year-old Helen Callanan pulled the lever at 4:30 p.m. that afternoon, nothing happened.

Callanan Industries continues today. Its projects include the 1939 World's Fair - New York City; Empire State Plaza, The Egg; Albany International Airport; Schenectady County Airport; New York State Thruway; Hancock International Airport; Crossgates Mall and I-87 Northway Exits 17-22.

The company was founded by Peter Callanan in 1883 in South Bethlehem, as an aggregate mining company. A farmer and entrepreneur, Callanan helped pioneer the concept of a state highway system, and in 1895 won the first road-building contract given by New York State.

Callanan Industries was purchased in 1985 by Oldcastle, Inc., a multi-national Dublin, Ireland-based firm.

Tape

"I don't think they could have erased that tape even if they wanted to," Hughes told The Spotlight in an exclusive interview about Corsi allegedly asking his dispatchers to erase his recorded conversation.

Hughes said he has been the target of a town and police investigation since coming out with the allegations against Corsi as well as raising questions about other internal problems dealing with the union, complaints against a detective on the force and medical absence procedures.

"They're trying to force me out, but I'm doing this for the right reasons," Hughes said. "I've been in law enforcement for 17 years, I have nothing to hide."

The 13-year Bethlehem police veteran was been handed back-to-back 30-day suspensions in April and May, which he attributes to speaking out. Town officials say Hughes was suspended for abusing his sick time privileges and filing false documents for extra overtime pay and time off of work.

The town is insinuating Hughes cried foul against Corsi after being served his suspensions. The Bethlehem Police Benevolent Association has filed grievances against the suspensions.

Hughes said he was bringing up internal problems through the chain of command long before he spoke out about the alleged audiotape of Corsi stating, "We have a [racial epithet] in the wood pile."

Potter said the county may hold the audio recordings off site and be the only entity able to erase the recordings, but he could say little else because the matter is under investigation. An official complaint was filed with the Albany County District Attorney's Office Public Integrity Unit on Thursday, May 28.

Hughes said the recording of Corsi was three years old but suggests it sparked a town cover-up once he started raising issues about it. He said he spoke with Supervisor Jack Cunningham at his home about the alleged tape and was issued a "notice of intent to conduct interrogation" two days later about his conversation with the supervisor.

Although he didn't attend the interrogation on advice of his lawyer Steve Coffey, Hughes also sent out a letter to the town board in April that was never handed out by Cunningham. The supervisor said he did not give Hughes' letter to his board members on advice from Potter, who advised against it because of the ongoing nature of the internal investigation.

Potter said everyone with access to the tape was interviewed "to the best of our knowledge," but it is unconfirmed at this time if all the dispatchers and dispatcher supervisors have been interviewed in the ongoing investigation.

Hughes' allegation of an internal racism cover-up raises some questions about the nearly completely Caucasian male police force of 43 officers that serves the suburban town of around 35,000 residents.

There is only one female officer on the force, and she made discrimination allegations against Corsi and Lt. Thomas Heffernan in 2007. The Spotlight ran a story about the matter on July 18, 2007, when police officer Regina Cocchiara, a nine-year veteran at the time, claimed she was passed up for sergeant four times after applying for the job. She said she was passed over for male applicants even though she placed in the top three on the Civil Service exam.

Cocchiara was eventually promoted to patrol sergeant on Aug. 18, 2008. She is the town's first female police sergeant and is now an 11-year veteran of the Bethlehem Police Department.

"It has become apparent through some very deep reflection and discussions with my peers that I have been unfairly discriminated against in this process," Cocchiara wrote to the Town Board in 2007 after not being promoted. "I am concerned that my actions and courage to achieve justice may result in future disciplinary or punitive measures against me."

Hughes said the Cocchiara situation last year only highlights a pattern of discrimination and "punishing those who speak out."

Cunningham said that diversifying the town's police force has been a longtime goal of the town.

"Both my predecessor and I have encouraged diversity on the force, but we have to hire off of the Civil Service list, and an opportunity has not presented itself," Cunningham said. "It is something we are very cognizant of."

Hughes is currently out on "stress leave" until June 12, but he could be out longer. Although he was served the unpaid suspensions, he is in the middle of a union grievance process and therefore is still currently on the force pending the outcome of the grievance and permission from his doctor.

The Spotlight has obtained copies of both of the "notice of discipline," which effectively calls for Hughes' suspension, and both of the disciplinary grievances in response.

Hughes said on Sunday, June 7, that he received an official response from Cunningham's office that stated, "I agree with Deputy Chief [Timothy] Beebe," and that the "grievance was denied." The next step is arbitration, which Hughes said he was confident would go in his favor.

"The first suspension notice is ridiculous; it's not being taken seriously," Hughes said. "It sounds like the second one [the union] may actually sit down with them, but the charges are still nonsense."

According to the first disciplinary action filed against Hughes by the town in April, he is accused of three charges of misconduct: absence without leave on April 3, improper use of sick time and filing a false report.

Hughes said the town is trying to violate state HIPPA laws by saying the doctor's note he provided "wasn't good enough" and that he was asked to provide personal medical details of his reasons for absence.

A copy of the doctor's note dated April 5 reads, "Chris was seen today for an illness. He missed 4/3 - 4/5/09 as a result." A union grievance to the charges was signed by attorney Thomas Jordan on April 22, citing Section 22.2 (D) of the collective bargaining agreement.

The second disciplinary action filed in May accused Hughes of an additional three charges of misconduct: Making a false claim for overtime pay, filing a false instrument and filing false report.

A grievance citing the same section of the collective bargaining agreement as the first was filed on May 28.

Potter expressed some frustration over his legal obligations and said disclosure will be provided upon the conclusion of the investigation over the whole matter.

"I really wish I could say more but unfortunately, legally our hands are tied," he said. "He can say whatever he wants and get his side of the story out, and we can't do anything about it because this is still under investigation."

Water

Dec. 31, 2028.

"It's pretty standard for contracts of those sorts," William West, water superintendent said. West said Guilderland and Watervliet renegotiated their contract, originally signed in 1993. Under the new contract, Guilderland is required to use newer, more accurate water meters. West said under the old contract, Guilderland could have seen a rate increase in three years from 49 cents per 1,000 gallons on water a day to upwards of 75 cents per 1,000 gallons of water per day in three years if a new contract was not renegotiated.

Town Supervisor Ken Runion said the next billing cycle would see a $140,000 increase if the new contract had not been approved.

He said the way the language was penned in the contract signed in 1993, the Consumer Product Index was based and compounded from 1993 and would jump 3 percent after 2000 for every year since 1993, making it an 18 percent jump. Every three years after that, West said, the language was ambiguous, but seemed to indicate that the jump would be based on the CPI from 1993, not 2000, causing increases to compound each time they rose.

"In three years we would have been nailed," he said.

West also said that under the 1993 contract, the town paid for a minimum of 4 million gallons of water per day, but if they averaged more than that for one month, even by a little, the new minimum became 5 million gallons per day.

Under the new contract, the town must average more than 4 million gallons for two full months before the minimum is raised, and it would only go up in smaller increments if that happened.

West said an optimal contract would be one where you pay only for what you use, but this is a marked improvement from the 1993 one. It also has an option to opt out if Watervliet begins producing finished water, as it would be selling a different product. Either party has 60 months to do so.

Guilderland and Watervliet have discussed a proposal to build a new water treatment plant together.

"Ultimately I'd like to see if the two sides can sit down and see us at some common ground," West said. "For years and years we've talked about regionalization."

As part of the agreement, more accurate state-of-the-art meters will be purchased for about $10,000, which the town and Watervliet will split. Town Board Member Warren Redlich said the language of the new contract was a not clear and a change was made because it was approved. It was designed to clarify yearly rate increases.

"From a legal standpoint, you lawyers need to be comfortable with the language," West said.

Store founders celebrate a milestone year

Pearl Grant Richman's marks 50th anniversary as husband and wife team toast 70 years together

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

In 1939, Albert Einstein wrote a letter to President Franklin D. Roosevelt stating atomic energy might be more than just a fantasy. In 1939, the movie version of "The Wizard of Oz" took viewers on a fantastic Technicolor journey for the first time. In 1939, Rose and Jerry Richman were married in Albany at the Ohav Shalom temple, and they are celebrating their 70th wedding anniversary this year.

The Richmans, who founded Pearl Grant Richman's in Stuyvesant Plaza, now live in West Palm Beach, Fla. They will celebrate their anniversary on Thursday, June 11.

Jerry Richman, 91, said he met his wife, Rose, 92, one day while sitting out on a porch at a friend's house. He was in the process of moving from Schenectady, where he attended high school, to Albany, he said, and they hit it off.

"I got friendly with her and kept talking and finally starting dating," he said.

Richman said that was the year he graduated high school, 1935, and he married Rose a few years later.

He did not attend college, but instead went to the school of hard knocks.

"I learned from experience," he said.

Jerry worked at a men's shop before buying up the store that later became Richman's Cards and Gifts. He said after three days of receiving merchandise, they needed to expand, and they did, purchasing a lot right next door. At the time, rent was $575 a month for both stores.

Eventually, the owner of Pearl Grant, a store nearby in Stuyvesant Plaza, became ill, and her brother offered the store Jerry. It then became Pearl Grant Richman's. That was 50 years watching the plaza "maintain a degree of excellence" over the years.

Jerry and Rose Richman founded the Stuyvesant Plaza store Pearl Grant Richman's, the only original store still in business at the plaza. The Richmans are celebrating their 70th wedding anniversary. The store is celebrating its 50th anniversary.

"They always had very high ideals about how the center should look," Richman said. "Any changes have been for the better."

He said the most noteworthy improvement has been the restaurant scene "exploding" over the last few years.

Richman describes his store as a gift department store, with several different shops. "It allows us to go with the flow," he said.

He said as discount stores and big-box store come and go and try to "gobble up" family-owned businesses, its diverse products and "eclectic" selection has allowed his store to prosper.

"You never know what the hell what we're going to do next," he said.

There is a baby section, gourmet foods section, women's accessories, clothes and, of course, greeting cards.

Richman said the gift selection has changed the most dramatically over the years, shifting away from Chinese and Japanese imports toward American hand-crafted goods.

"We have the best selection of American-made gifts of any store of its type," he said.

Buying and selling American-made goods is what people want, Barry said.

"It's the right thing to do," he said. "People just love that it's American made."

The family has expanded into other businesses, opening a Crabtree and Evelyn store in Stuyvesant Plaza and Ta-Da, a novelty toy and gift shop, in Clifton Park, as well as selling a line of Vera Bradley merchandise.

The "young, hip crowd" loves Ta-Da, Barry said. His son, Michael Richman, runs the store.

Michael is slated to one day take over Pearl Grant Richman's, Barry pointed out, as he still works there as well as running Ta-Da.

"I can't do it without him," Barry said. "It's all going to be his some day anyway."

Jerry and Rose have two children, Barry and Robert. Barry has three children: Michael, Jennifer and Heather. Michael's 11-year-old son, Leo, has been known to help sell an item or two by smoothing over a customer, Barry quipped. Heather also has two children, Sigrun and Dagny.

'Walking with Dinosaurs' promises enormous fun for all ages

Tyrannosaurus Rex and her baby appear in Walking with Dinosaurs.

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
dominj@spotlightnews.com

During her years in the theater, Nellie Beavers has learned that bigger shows need as many as six or eight tractor-trailers to transport everything.

So when she tells colleagues how many trucks "Walking with Dinosaurs" requires, they're often stunned.

"We have 25 semi-trucks that carry this show," Beavers said.

That's "Walking with Dinosaurs" in a nutshell: a show that's enormous in every way. Capital District residents can catch the show that bills itself as "the arena spectacular" Wednesday to Sunday, June 17 to 21, at the Times Union Center in Albany.

The show is more than just giant dinosaurs stomping around an arena. An actor plays a paleontologist named Huxley who "takes the audience on a journey 200 million years ago," Beavers said.

But make no mistake – the spectacle is what will leave the impression. Some fun "Walking with Dinosaurs" facts:

- There are 10 large dinosaurs in the show. Each one weighs 1.6 tons, or roughly the same as a standard family car.

- The adult Brachiosaurus measures 36 feet tall and 56 feet long. The young Brachiosaurus is "only" 29.5 feet tall and 48 feet long.

- The Orinchocherius has a 38-foot wing span.

- The touring company includes 15 cast members and 45 crew members.

- It takes six to eight hours to unload all of the equipment from those 25 trucks, which means "Walking With Dinosaurs" never just rolls into a city, does a show and leaves town. Its engagements are always at least a few days long.

The tour kicked off in July 2007, and by the end of last year, it had visited 60 cities and put on more than 500 performances, selling $100 million in tickets. When "Walking with Dinosaurs" visited Philadelphia, one of the people in the crowd was Bob Belber, the general manager of the Times Union Center.

Belber and his family loved the show – "It really does leave you in awe," he said – and he got excited about the prospect of bringing it to Albany.

When he did some research, though, he found that "Walking with Dinosaurs" tended to visit only larger cities.

But Belber had an idea. The management group he works for, SMG, also manages arenas in Rochester and in Wilkes-Barre, Pa. So he proposed guaranteeing "Walking with Dinosaurs" three shows at each venue.

Organizers liked the idea, and Belber is confident audiences will like the show, too.

"You're almost going back in time," he said.

The technology, though, is cutting edge.

The large dinosaurs run on six roller blade wheels, and inside each is a team of three people: a driver and two puppeteers. One operates the head and tail, and the other is in charge of minor movements like opening and closing the mouth and blinking.

The smaller dinosaurs – "the baby T-Rex and the raptor, things like that," Beavers said – are called suit dinosaurs. There's just one person inside of those, manipulating the entire creature.

Adults are typically blown away by how realistic the dinosaurs are, Beavers said, while the younger set is fascinated by their sheer size.

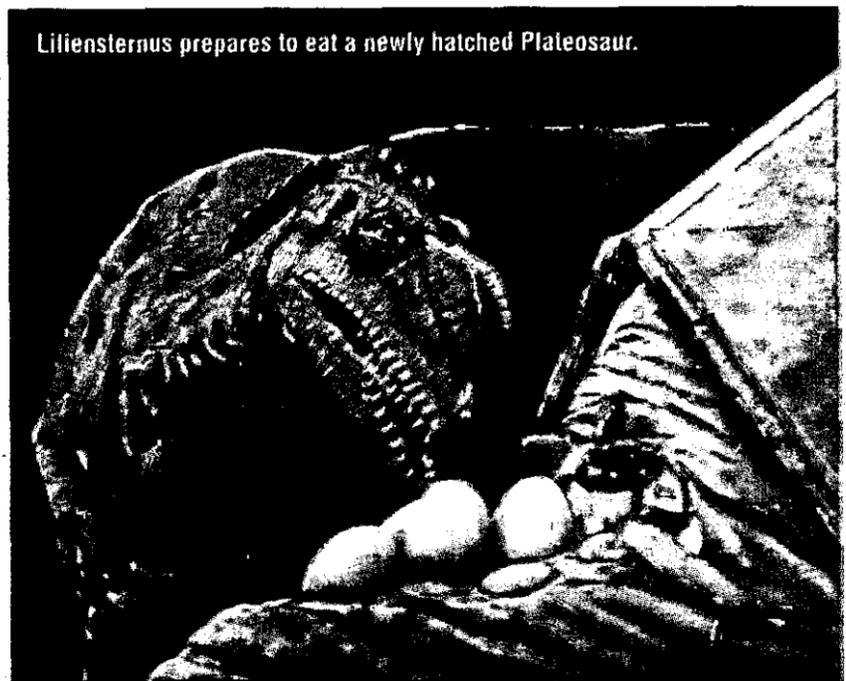

"We say that our age range is from 3 to 93," she said. "I've worked on a lot of shows, and the difference with this one is everybody really does have a great time. Everybody loves it."

"Walking with Dinosaurs" will take over the Times Union Center at 7 p.m. on June 17, 18 and 19; 11 a.m., 3 and 7 p.m. on June 20; and 1 and 5 p.m. on June 21. Tickets are $21.50 to $71.50 and can be purchased by calling 800-303-8368 or visiting timesunioncenter-albany.com.

Marion L. Hanlon

GUILDERLAND: Marion L. Hanlon died peacefully Sunday, May 31, 2009, at Our Lady of Mercy Life Center shortly after celebrating her 100th birthday on May 4th. Born in Jersey City, NJ, she was the daughter of the late James and Johanna Barr. Marion moved to Albany when her mother died at age 11 and was raised by her Aunt Mary. She was a resident of Selkirk before moving to Guilderland in 2002.

Marion was a homemaker for many years and did not get her first job until she was 62 years old, when she went to work at the Albany Senior Citizen's Center on Morton Avenue, retiring when she was 82 years old. Marion loved gardening and always had lovely flowers in her yard.

Marion was the wife of the late James Hanlon, who died in 1972. She was very proud of her

In lieu of flowers the family would appreciate donation in Marion's name to Our Lady of Mercy Life Center, 2 Mercycare Lane, Guilderland, NY 12084

Arrangements were by the Applebee Funeral Home, 403 Kenwood Avenue, Delmar.

Dutch sail to regional final

The Guilderland boys lacrosse team outscored Warwick Valley 5-1 in the second quarter on its way to a 10-6 victory in last Saturday's regional semifinal game at the University at Albany.

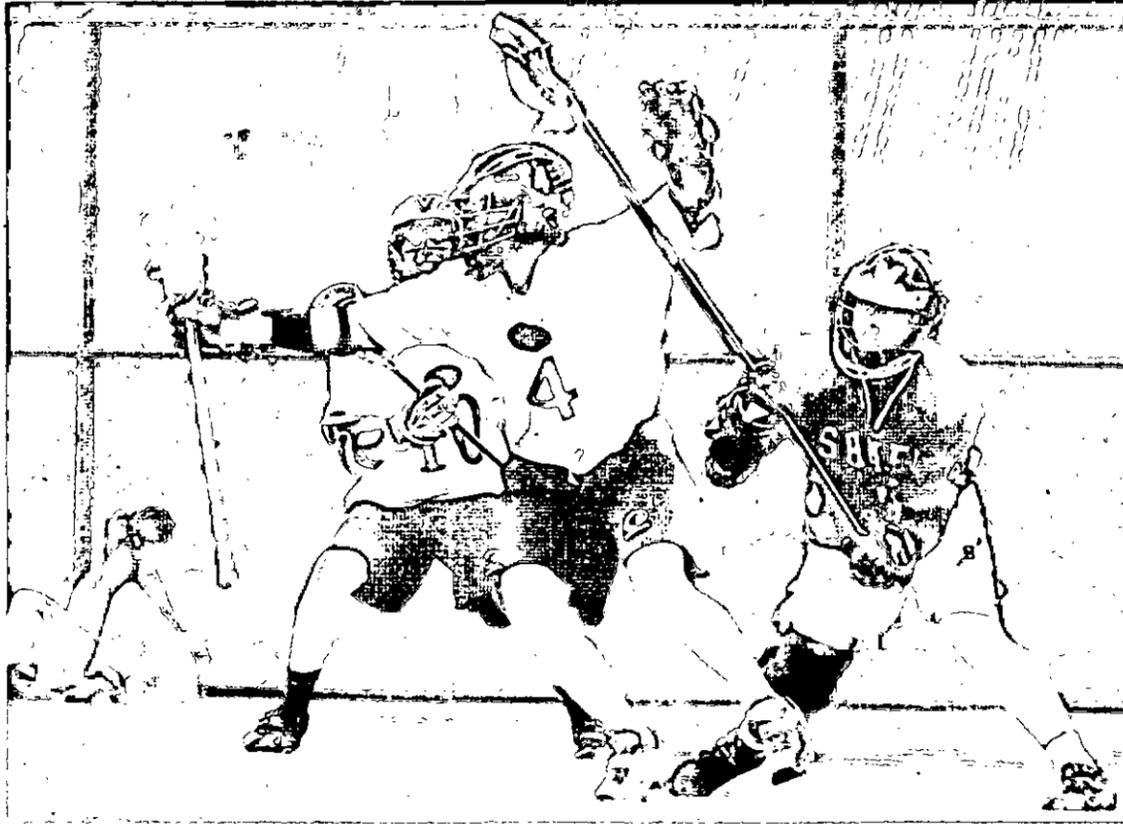

Travis Moore led the Dutchmen (18-2) with three goals. Paul Jones contributed two goals and two assists, while Rory Nunamacher tallied twice and chipped in an assist.

Goaltender Christian DePersis stopped 10 shots for Guilderland, which was scheduled to play Section I champion Yorktown in Tuesday's regional final at UAlbany.

The Dutchmen advanced to regionals by beating Shaker 8-4 in last Wednesday's Section II, Class A final at UAlbany.

Shaker scored three times in the second quarter to grab a 4-2 halftime lead before Guilderland closed the game with six unanswered goals.

Nunamacher had a hat trick, while Moore and Matt Siracusa each tallied twice for the Dutchmen.

Eagles lose on walk

By ANDY CAHILL
sports@spotlightnews.com

The writer is an intern in the Spotlight Newspapers sports department.

The Bethlehem baseball team exited the Section II, Class AA playoffs with a 5-4 loss to Christian Brothers Academy last Wednesday at Joe Bruno Stadium in Troy.

The Brothers rallied from a 4-2 deficit to tie the game in the bottom of the fourth inning and won it with a bases-loaded walk in the seventh to advance to last Friday's Sectional final against Columbia.

"It's been a while since we've gotten back here, even though we've had some good teams," said CBA coach Dave Doemel.

The game started out well for Bethlehem. The Eagles scored a run within their first four batters, and pitcher Randy Bowers dominated the Brothers with two strikeouts in the bottom of the first inning.

Alex Sobiecki drove in a pair of runs, and Kyle Niehaus added an RBI over the next two innings to help Bethlehem build a 4-2 lead, but it went by the boards after the Eagles allowed two unearned runs to CBA in the bottom of the fourth.

The Brothers threatened to take the lead in the bottom of the sixth inning. CBA hit consecutive one-out singles to get a runner in scoring position before Bowers got the last two batters on a pop up and a line out to the shortstop.

The Brothers took advantage of their next scoring opportunity, though. Bowers and reliever Sean Quinlan loaded the bases, and then Matt Sand walked to bring in the winning run.

Despite the loss, Bethlehem coach Rob Helm was proud of the work his team put into the season.

"They really pulled it together and they had a great season ... they played great all season, I'm proud of them," said Helm.

CBA's playoff run ended with a 5-1 loss to Columbia in the finals.

Albany gets first victory

Three pitchers combine to strike out 15 Saratoga Phillies

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

After a pair of tough losses to Watertown and Glens Falls to start the season, the Albany Dutchmen broke into the win column with a 5-3 victory over the Saratoga Phillies in last Saturday's New York Collegiate Baseball League game at Bleecker Stadium.

Three Dutchmen pitchers Ben Klimesh, Jack Dilday and Jon Shepard - combined to strike out 15 Phillies, and shortstop Kevin McCall walked four times and scored two runs in Albany's win.

"It's good to get into the win column," said Albany manager Ryan Horning. "The thing that sticks out in my mind is that the team chemistry is strong. In a summer league, it's important to get that team chemistry down pat early, and we've done that."

Neither starting pitcher was sharp in the first inning, as Klimesh and Saratoga's John Shippee - a Shenendehowa High School graduate - each allowed bases-loaded walks. But while Klimesh was able to work his way out of his jam allowing just the one run, Shippee allowed a bloop single by designated hitter Sean Munley that gave Albany a 2-1 lead.

"It was a wild beginning," said Saratoga manager Greg Zackrisson. "Both pitchers didn't have their control, but for all of those walks (allowed) and all those miscues, not a lot of runs were scored."

McCall was a thorn in Saratoga's side early on. After walking, stealing a base and scoring a run in the first inning, McCall repeated the feat in the bottom of the second. This time, he came around on centerfielder Jarred Jimenez's two-out RBI double to the left-center field wall, which gave the Dutchmen (1-2) a 3-1 lead.

"The coaching staff has been searching for a No. 2 hitter, and I think we've found one," said Horning of McCall, a freshman

Mohon truly Mighty Warriors in 2008-09 season

I spent Sunday night in the House of Blues to see a flock of Doves rock the city of Boston.

Why is going to see a British rock band playing a club show significant information in a sports column? It isn't really, except for the fact that the House of Blues is directly across Lansdowne Street from Fenway Park. So on top of having a great time at the show, I also had the opportunity to see how Red Sox Nation handles a 6-3 loss to the Texas Rangers. Let's just say the disappointment was palatable.

(Side note: I think a scientist at MIT should develop a time machine so he can transport the 2007 version of David Ortiz to today's Red Sox. That scientist would become the most popular person in New England. Trust me.)

With that out of the way, here are some more relevant thoughts about the Capital District sports scene.

• Mohonasen High School accomplished a rare feat this year.

With the baseball team's 2-1 victory over crosstown rival Schalmont in last Friday's Class A final, Mohonasen has won a team sport title in all three varsity seasons (fall, winter and spring). Mohonasen also won Class A titles in boys soccer and girls basketball.

The impressive part is that Mohonasen is one of the smallest schools in the Suburban Council, and as such has often struggled to be competitive against larger schools such as Shenendehowa, Colonie and Guilderland. Case in point: Mohonasen's baseball team won only four of its 16 league games this season before winning

Mohon

Sectionals for the first time since 1982.

But this year, Mohonasen turned the corner in boys soccer and girls basketball. Both teams finished the Suburban Council season with winning records, with the girls basketball team also claiming the South Division title.

(Coincidentally, of the three large schools mentioned two paragraphs ago, only Guilderland has won a soccer, basketball or baseball/softball title this season (boys soccer). Shen and Colonie were shut out.)

Now I don't have an exact year in which Mohonasen last accomplished this feat, but I know it hasn't happened in the nearly nine years I've been working at Spotlight Newspapers. If anyone knows when Mohonasen last accomplished such a feat, e-mail me at jonasr@spotlightnews.com.

• As successful of a year as Mohonasen has had in team sports, Bethlehem had a slightly better year and could have had a dominating year.

On top of winning Sectional titles in girls soccer, girls volleyball, girls basketball and boys tennis, Bethlehem's girls lacrosse team reached the Sectional finals, and its baseball and softball teams made it to the semifinals. With a little luck, Bethlehem could have had six Sectional championships in team sports, but it will gladly take the four it earned.

• Shenendehowa opened up its new pool last Saturday, and though I missed the opening ceremony (which included dumping water from all the other pools the swimming program has called home over the years), I understand it's a tremendous facility.

Personally, I'm happy the Shen swim team finally has an on-campus pool. Having to endure years of traveling to every meet, only to come out stronger by winning several Sectional championships, is a testament to what the program's coaching staff - particularly Pat Seligman - has been able to do with these swimmers. Now, they have a place to call their own, and it's a multi-million dollar beauty.

• With the school year winding down, it's time to start looking at where this year's seniors are heading. Here is a short list that I have from my e-mail files:

Colonie - Jami Cordell (Central Connecticut/softball)

Scotia-Genville - Aubree Cristello (Arizona/gymnastics), Megan Hart (LeMoyne College/softball), James Jansen (LeMoyne/men's basketball) and Dan Riggi (Bunghampton/wrestling)

Shaker - Caroline Rehfuss (Princeton/women's lacrosse), Alexis Dal Col (Harvard/women's lacrosse), Mike Battaglia (Siena College/men's lacrosse), Shannon Delaney (Siena/field hockey), Craig Weiss (Albany/cross country, track and field), Oluebube Abara (Albany/track and field), Caitlin Cahalan (Siena/women's soccer) and Alvin Porter (Manhattan/track and field)

Shen - Jamie Glover (Quinnipiac/track and field)

I know there are many more high school seniors that are already committed to competing in collegiate sports next year, and I'd like to include them in my off-season columns. Send their names, their schools and their sports to me at jonasr@spotlightnews.com.

• Finally, a quick RIP to Memorial Auditorium in Buffalo, which was felled by the wrecking ball over the weekend to make for new development by the city's lake shore.

The only event I attended there was my eldest sister's graduation from Buffalo State in 1978, but it will forever be remembered by hockey fans as one of the loudest arenas in the league - at least, when the Buffalo Sabres were good.

Farwell, sweet Aud.

infielder from the University at Buffalo. "He's very patient at the plate, and he's very fast on the basepaths."

Klimesh got over his early wildness and pitched well in the second and third innings before running into trouble in the top of the fourth. Following a single by first baseman Pat Epps and a double by leftfielder R.W. Zeller, catcher Patrick Reardon laced a single to drive in Epps and trim Albany's lead to 3-2.

The Dutchmen gave themselves the breathing room they needed in the bottom of the fifth inning. Third baseman Brad Steinbach drove in his second run of the game by punching a single into left field, and Munley added a sacrifice fly to put Albany ahead 5-2.

Once they had a three-run lead, the Dutchmen turned to Dilday and Shepard to secure the victory. Dilday threw three strong innings, allowing only a run on a wild pitch in the top of the eighth inning, and Shepard worked a perfect ninth inning to pick up the save.

"We got a great quality start from Ben Klimesh, and then Jack Dilday and Jon Shepard came in and pitched four quality innings," said Horning.

Shippee pitched six innings for Saratoga, which saw its record fall to 1-2 with the loss.

"He battled. I guess you could call it wildly effective," said Zackrisson of Shippee, who is coming off a season with Monmouth. "He didn't pound the (strike) zone, but he kept us in the game."

Albany and Saratoga will become more familiar with each other this week, as the teams are scheduled to play each other twice in Saratoga Springs Wednesday and Friday.

"I think we've got a really competitive team," said Horning of the Dutchmen, who lost to Watertown 13-12 and Glens Falls 3-1 in extra innings in their first two games.

"I'm very confident we can turn it around," said Zackrisson. "We're missing four or five guys who will hit in the middle of the line-up when they get here."

Lady Dutch cruise past regional competition

The Guilderland girls lacrosse team is heading back to SUNY Cortland for the state tournament.

The Lady Dutch (22-0) had little trouble in the Class A regionals, downing Section IX champion Kingston 17-10 last Wednesday and defeating Section I champ Lakeland-Panas 16-6 last Saturday.

The final score of last Wednesday's regional semifinal at Kingston wasn't as close as the seven-goal margin of victory indicated. Guilderland jumped out to a 14-4 halftime lead before cruising to the win.

Jen Madsen, Danielle Tetreault and Courtney Davis all had hat tricks for the Lady Dutch. Madsen also dished out four assists, and Tetreault added three assists.

Davis was at it again in last Saturday's 16-6 win against Lakeland-Panas. She scored five goals to lead a balanced Guilderland attack.

Amanda Best contributed three goals for the Lady Dutch, who play in Friday's state semifinals at SUNY Cortland.
