Tebbano touts own multi-age education; board to discuss matter

Bethlehem Superintendent Michael Tebbano recently addressed some concerns aired by a group of Clarksville parents about enrollment and class size at Clarksville

Elementary School.

Tebbano said that not only does Bethlehem have a long tradition of multi-age classrooms — he's a product of a multi-age education himself.

"Multi-aged classrooms are not unique to Bethlehem and are not unique to Clarksville. I want to clear the air because there's a lot of misinformation out there," Tebbano said. "The main concern is that

21 votes cast on $400K truck bond

G'land Center residents say they were unaware of vote as new fire truck is approved 17-4

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Several Guilderland Center residents voiced concern about low voter turnout to bond a $400,000 fire truck, but noted the new equipment is necessary to protect residents.

The bond to purchase a new fire truck at the Guilderland Center Fire Department was approved 17-4 on Tuesday, June 9.

• All residents in the Guilderland

Center fire district were eligible to vote. The department has close to 50 volunteers.

One Guilderland Center resident, Barbara Mabee, said she was concerned the vote was not better advertised.

"I think it's shameful," Mabee said. "We have the right to vote."

She added, though, that while the government often carelessly spends money, she would have supported the fire truck bond if given a choice.

Another resident echoed that sentiment: Henry Elario said he was unaware of the vote, but would have supported the measure if he

Cunningham disputes cop's claim

Says Hughes implied he had copy of the Corsi tape; seeking own copy this week

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The fallout from Bethlehem Police Chief Louis Corsi's alleged audiotape of him making derogatory remarks continues as Supervisor Jack Cunningham disputes some details of police officer Christopher Hughes' portrayal of a conversation between Hughes and the supervisor.

Cunningham contends Hughes told him he had a copy of the three-year old Corsi audiotape, in which the police chief allegedly uses a racial slur, when the two met on May 17. Hughes claims he specifically told the supervisor he never had the tape and wrote a letter to the town stating as such on May 21.

"Hughes represented to me that he had a copy of the audiotape in his possession," Cunningham told The Spotlight. "Right now the matter is under investigation but I am going to a meeting with the people who hold the disks this week, the whole thing is a lengthy process."

The audio recordings are contained on disks held by the county.

Hughes said he was careful in his language with Cunningham and that he never claimed to have a copy of the tape. "My recollection of nearly exactly what was said was, 'It's my understanding that there are copies out there,'" said Hughes.

The Albany County District Attorney's Office is currently investigating the matter, as well as Hughes' May 28 allegations of being targeted by the town and department brass after speaking out about the tape and internal matters.

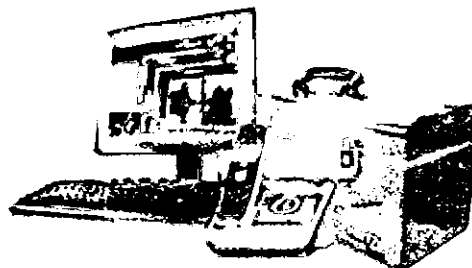

He spoke with Cunningham on May 17 and was issued an "intent

Police Blotter

Slingerlands woman overdoses, gets busted on heroin charge

Bethlehem police arrested a Slingerlands woman on drug charges after she was found passed out and unresponsive inside of her home with drugs in plain view. She later tried to flee police custody while in shackles.

Amanda R. Levine, 23, of 1319 New Scotland Road, Slingerlands, was arrested on June 5 for seventh-degree criminal possession of a controlled substance; second-degree criminal use of drug paraphernalia; possession of a hypodermic needle — all misdemeanors — and possession of marijuana, a violation.

Bethlehem police said they were responding to the address to check on the welfare of a woman, and upon arrival officers found a woman in the back of an ambulance who was identified as Levine.

Another officer said "he observed drug paraphernalia, marijuana, hypodermic needles and a spoon with cotton containing heroin within the residence in plain view," according to the arrest report.

When police arrived on the scene the officer knocked on the door of Levine's home and, when he looked through a window, "observed a woman on the living room floor," the report states.

Levine was handcuffed "due to officer safety" and there being drugs in plain view, according to the arrest report, and she was transported to Albany Medical Center and eventually sent to the Bethlehem Police Department.

Police said Levine was processed and arraigned by Bethlehem Town Justice Ryan Donovan and sent to the Albany County Correctional Facility in lieu of a $1,000 cash bail "pending her commitment to a treatment center."

The report also states Levine "made an attempt to leave the squad room prior to the jail run," but that she was secured by her leg irons and "did bang her head against the plastic Plexiglas divider," but was not injured.

Other arrests

• Lily J. VanDyk, 23, of 42

McKinley Drive, Delmar, was arrested on May 5 for fifth-degree criminal possession of stolen property, a felony.

VanDyk voluntarily turned herself in at the Bethlehem Police Department in reference to an on-going investigation and gave police a voluntary statement, according to the arrest report.

She was arraigned by Bethlehem Town Justice Paul Dwyer and released on her own recognizance on the advice of the assistant district attorney.

• James L. F. Sterling, 42, of 33 Godfrey St., Buffalo, was arrested on May 6 on River Road for DWI; refusal to take a breath test; speeding; and failure to keep right.

A patrol officer saw Sterling driving north on River Road at a speed about 55 MPH and continue at a high rate of speed until her was stopped by police near Corning Hill Road, according to the arrest report.

When asked if he had been drinking, Sterling responded "he drank a few beers at a bar," the report states, and he was asked to exit his vehicle and perform a field-sobriety test, which he failed.

Police said Sterling refused to take an alcohol pre-screening test and that he was placed under custody and transported to the Bethlehem Police Department.

"Due to James being a refusal and urinating on the patrol room floor two times, he was read the DWI warning four times," the report states, and Sterling was arraigned by Bethlehem Town Justice Paul Dwyer.

He was sent to the Albany County Correctional Facility in lieu of a $1,500 cash or bond bail and he vehicle was towed, according to police.

• Benjamin Quinton, 33, of 229 North Pearl Street, apartment 2, Albany, was arrested on May 26, for third-degree bail jumping, a misdemeanor.

Bethlehem police said Quinton turned himself in in the presence of a bail enforcement agent and that he was processed without incident and arraigned by Bethlehem Town Justice Ryan Donovan.

He was transported to the Albany County Correctional Facility without incident in lieu of a $5,000 cash bail or a $10,000 bond, according to the arrest report.

Quinton is scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on June 16.

• Guilderland Police arrested Melissa Amanda Permaul, 22, of 22 Second St. in Albany, on felony charges of possession of a forged instrument in the second degree and identity theft in the second degree, according to police reports.

Permaul was arrested on Tuesday, June second for allegedly used her sister's identity to purchase a $1,200 piece of jewelry from Kay's jewelry at Crossgates Mall. The incident dates back to July of last year.

She was arraigned later that night.

• Guilderland Police arrested Shonda M. Vanhoesen, 33, of 1630 Central Ave. in Albany on felony charges of possession of a forged instrument in the second degree and identity theft in the first degree and the misdemeanor charge of petit larceny, according to police reports.

Vanhoesen was arrested on Thursday, June 4 for allegedly for fraudulently opening an account in another persons name and purchasing $402.14 in merchandise. The incident dates back to July of last year.

She was arraigned later that night.

• Guilderland Police arrested Derrick J. Sydnor, 21, of 70 Dana Ave. in Albany on felony charges of possession of a forged instrument and a misdemeanor charge of petit larceny, according to police reports.

Sydnor was arrested on Wednesday, June 10, and arraigned later that night, and the offense was dated from May of last year.

A fresh face in firefighting

High School student, 16, is youngest member of G'land Center company

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Today's youth have been accused of apathy, carelessness and a lack of civic responsibility, but one Guilderland Center resident plans on proving those naysayers wrong.

Eric Long, a student at Guilderland Central High School, recently graduated as the youngest firefighter in the department's history at 16 years old. Long, along with 37 other firefighters from across the county, graduated Wednesday, June 3.

For Long, volunteering has been a dream of his for a long time.

"Our firehouse is right down the road for me," Long said. "Since I was a kid, when I heard the siren I've always ran down to see the trucks."

Long said giving back to the community is important to him, and he expects the job to be a rewarding experience, however the training was difficult.

"It was a long couple of months. It was a lot of work and a lot of time," Long said of his training.

Long is certified in Firefighter 1 training, which allows him to work inside the building, which he can't do until he turns 18. Until then, Long will help outside of the buildings, working with the trucks and hoses.

Long said he has been on about 45 to 50 calls as an observer, but now, with his certification, it's a whole new ball game.

"You just stick to your training," he said. "I think I've helped out."

Long has been on several calls since his certification, including a seven-hour battle against a residential structure fire in Knox.

He said he is happy to be part of such a close unit.

"Everyone works together," he said. "There's no arguing or bickering." Long described the fire

"Our firehouse is right down the road for me. Since I was a kid, when I heard the siren I've always ran down to see the trucks."

— Eric Long, 16, Guilderland Center fire fighter company as a "close-knit" family.

Long added that he is planning to go to college, but he is unsure where. He said, though, he is planning to stay local and volunteer at Guilderland Center, and eventually wants to make a career out of the firefighting.

"I haven't really thought about [college] that much. I don't really want to leave this department," Long said.

One disappointing truth for Long is that while he is in school he can carry his beeper, but the department's by-laws do not permit him to leave school to help with a fire.

"It's unfortunate, but it's part of our by-laws," he said.

Don Albright, chairman of the board at Guilderland Center Fire Department and chief fire inspector in town said the graduation ceremony was a great event, and he is proud of his new staffers.

"I thought it was terrific," Albright said. "It's really a bigger deal than people think it is."

He said the department now has more than 50 volunteers, the most it has ever had, and now has several new "young bloods" to carry out the work of the department.

"Everybody came of age," he said. "One got interested, and they kind of recruited themselves."

Albright said some of the veterans can rest easy knowing there are so many energetic youths at the house.

"You can guide the ship instead of driving it," he said.

Beth GOP backs Messina

The town's Republicans support Independence councilman for supervisor

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem Republicans are backing Councilman Sam Messina in his bid to take on incumbent Democrat Jack Cunningham for the town's top spot.

In what has become an early campaign season of crossover endorsements and accusations of political impropriety, Bethlehem elections are finally taking official form, as petition gathering is now under way. Messina lauded the town's GOP for not playing politics as usual and making their selection based on substance and representation for all.

"I am pleased to get the Republican endorsement for supervisor," Messina said. "It's important because it is a major line, but it's also important to me because the Republican interview team asked important and probing questions."

Concluding, he said, "I told them I would represent them and that I would do the best I could to represent all of the people in the Town of Bethlehem."

This gives Messina his third ballot line and first major party line against Cunningham, who recently got endorsed by Messina's own Independence Party. Messina said he will face off with Cunningham in primary for the Independence Party line. If he wins the Independence nod, he will have four lines to Cunningham's single Democratic line.

Messina's other two ballot lines are with the Albany County Conservative Party and the Working Families Party of the Capital District, an unusual mix in terms of political philosophy, but it wasn't the only one. Bethlehem Independence Chairmar Mark Councilman Sam Messina talks about his campaign when he announced his bid for Bethlehem town supervisor in May.

Jarrett Carroll/Spotlight

Jordan, who voted against Messina for his party's supervisor endorsement, also received the Working Families and Conservative joint endorsements.

Bethlehem Republican Chairwoman Melody Burns said the full committee voted to endorse Messina on Monday, June 8, as well as Melanie Calzone for town clerk. The party has also endorsed incumbent Republican Gregg Sagendorf for highway superintendent.

Calzone, a political newcomer, will face Democrat Nanci Moquin who is currently the administrative assistant to the town's planning and zoning boards. Calzone reportedly has the endorsement of current town clerk and longtime Republican Kathleen Newkirk, according to Burns.

Newkirk has not yet weighed in on the campaign.

Sagendorf, also a Republican, appears to have support across the board with cross endorsements from the Democrat, Independence and Conservative parties.

There has been no announcement about Republican nominations for Town Board positions.

In the GOP's pick for supervisor, only one committee member voted against Messina because he wasn't a registered Republican, according to Burns.

"There was some discussion on that, but we feel he's fiscally conservative, which is very important for us," said Burns.

As for the delays in putting up Town Board candidates, Burns has said throughout the selection process that the committee was only seeking qualified and committed candidates and was not going to be rushed into "just filling a slate with names."

"We're really thinking carefully about who will get our endorsement," she said. "Whenever we endorse someone, we want to make sure they are prepared and fully committed to serving the town and representing us."

Burns said they are making the announcements as quickly as possible, however, in order to be able to begin gathering petition signatures.

If Messina is successful in his quest for supervisor, it would be the first return of a Republican-backed candidate to the Town Board since Democrats and Independence Party members took unanimous control in 2005, which Messina was a part of. Democrats won a majority on the board for the first time in memorable history in 2003 with the election of former Democratic supervisor Theresa Egan.

Messina said he has begun gathering Independence Party signatures to force a primary with Cunningham for his party line. He needs to gather 5 percent of the 1,400 registered party members in town, or around 70 signatures.

"I'm getting very, very good feedback," Messina said of knocking on the doors of party members. "I don't have a political organization out there financing me ... but I am going door to door and people are supporting me."

Petition signers can only sign the petition of one candidate — so Independence Party members will have to decide to either support Cunningham, a Democrat, or their own party member, Messina, for supervisor.

The primary election this year will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 15, and Election Day is on Tuesday, Nov. 3, according to the Albany County Board of Elections.

'So what?' and other lessons from my dad

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

Every bathroom in our home has a toilet-shaped clock. This allows me to keep track of time while doing my business. And I owe it all to my dad.

As I recall, the bathroom clocks were among the first of his "Ceramic Era" productions, created in the crafts room of a Florida retirement community.

My father gave the clocks away as gifts. Anyone who visited the powder room and uttered, "Oh, isn't that toilet clock cute," within earshot of my dad, received one. He'd even customize the clocks, for example, painting the numbers mauve to match the recipient's home décor.

Eventually dad switched from toilet clocks to serving platters, the latter for use outside the bathroom.

An artist by hobby, Dad takes creative license with his designs. The largest platter he gave me has an assortment of animals, painted cartoon style. Along with the elephant, giraffe and other wildlife, he included the phrase, "Welcome to the zoo." And while this design is not something I would've necessarily picked out on my own, it's a decidedly

Commentary:
From

fitting statement for our family gatherings.

Long before the Ceramic Era, my father experienced the "Wood Phase." The son of a carpenter, my dad had a collection of tools. He carved a wall hanging of Don Quixote and Sancho Panza, modeled after a Picasso painting. He also produced a chiseled block where he displayed a selection of his papa's tools. And he made several wooden clocks, carved and painted with creative designs.

Prior to the Wood Phase was the "Painting Era." I proudly display a selection of his art, most of which he says he modeled after greeting card illustrations that caught his eye. I believe he did these paintings before I was born, which explains why I have no memory of seeing him paint on surfaces other than wood or ceramics.

I refer to one of his paintings as "Curious George." Most people look at the painting and see a brown rock in the ocean. To me, the rock resembles the profile of a monkey. It looks like the children's book character Curious George floating in the waves.

My sketching abilities pretty much max out at stick figures and smiley faces. Clearly, I did not inherit any of my father's drawing talent.

I did, however, inherit my father's ability to see the big picture and think outside the box. How else would I be able to make a monkey out of a rock?

Unfortunately, I'm also adept at making a mountain out of a molehill, turning small worries into big ones, and devising numerous "What if?" scenarios where peril lurks at every corner.

Luckily, my dad never balks if I call and vent about being overwhelmed. He is especially helpful when talking me through work-related dilemmas, and he often jokes that he should charge consulting fees.

Dad sometimes calls me at work to say hello.

"I'm feeling stressed," I'll tell him.

He says, "Clean your desk."

"Clean my desk? I don't have time to clean my desk. I have multiple projects that need attention."

To which he replies, "So what?"

"So what??? Listen, I'm not retired. I'm working here and I'm expected to produce results."

He says, "I'm telling you to clean your desk."

"Dad, I need to finish the such-in-such project by the end of the week and I'm short staffed."

"So what?"

"So what? So I need to get the stuff done."

"And what happens if it doesn't get done by the end of the week?" he says calmly.

"Um, I guess nothing drastic," I concede.

And then I get off the phone and look at the unruly pile of papers and folders on my desk. And then I spend some time getting organized, filing papers, and making a priority list. Suddenly things look more manageable.

I call my father that evening. "I cleaned my desk and I felt a lot better afterward," I confess.

"Sometimes you need to take a breather and then start anew," he says knowingly.

In the past few years, my father has used me as a sounding board. He calls me his psychiatrist because I am willing to listen. I have spoken to him pretty much every day since my mom passed away suddenly several months ago. I encourage him to have lunch with friends, get out of his apartment, and go play bingo.

Generally my father is upbeat, but his health issues, compounded by the loss of my mother, have taken a toll on his psyche.

His newest schpiel goes like this: "I'm overweight, I use a walker, I've got to shlep around an oxygen tank, my teeth aren't real, and my get up and go got up and went."

"So what?" I tell him.

"So, who wants to hang around with someone like that?"

"It sounds like you are having, a self-esteem issue," I say.

"You may be right."

"Dad, a lot of people your age need walkers and wear dentures. You are a friendly and funny person. Just be yourself and people will like you," I encourage.

"It takes me three or four years to open up to people."

"Uh, you're 79, I think you might need to accelerate that process."

Parents feel helpless when they can't fix their children's problems. I find that it's just as heartbreaking when you can't cure your parents' troubles.

At 43, I'm still Daddy's little girl. He continues to teach me that I must accept what I cannot change. I can't get him a new pair of lungs, but I can offer kinds words, hugs and an occasional home-cooked meal. I can bring him groceries and help him get to doctor's appointments. I can offer compassion when his mood is low.

It's only fair. I vent to him, he vents to me.

And truth be told, I do far more of the complaining even though I have far less to complain about.

When I was young and overwhelmed, he would say to me, "How do you eat an elephant?" And then he'd answer, "One bite at a time." That little gem continues to help me when I am overloaded.

I'm now trying to incorporate his newest offering, "So what?" into my bag of survival tricks. Instead of taking offense at this phrase, I'm trying to take a step back and reflect: What exactly is the problem? Is there really a problem or is it "so nothing?" I think this is what my father is trying to tell me.

I know he wants the best for me. I want the best for him.

Gee, look at the time. I better stop admiring that funny clock and start my grocery list for Father's Day dinner.

Happy Father's Day, Dad. I love you.

Size cap opponent makes bid for N.S. town board

Republican chair calls Roz Robinson a 'renegade' within the party

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Roz Robinson, former chair of the New Scotland commercial zone advisory committee, announced she will be collecting signatures in a bid for Town Board, in a letter dated Tuesday, June 9.

Robinson, a Republican Party committee member, said she was unhappy that only candidates supporting a 50,000-square-foot size cap on retail buildings had been in the mix until she and Karen Moreau, a newcomer to New Scotland politics who is collecting signatures for the supervisor position, decided to run. Moreau is president of the newly formed advocacy group PRIDE of New Scotland, which supports business and property rights.

"The voters were really getting shut out of having a choice," Robinson said. "It's really about choice for me."

Supervisor Tom Dolin, who is seeking re-election, is a supporter of a 50,000-square-foot size cap on retail structures.

"Within the last few weeks it has become crystal clear that the leaders of [New Scotland] for Sound Economic Development] along with the Republican and Democratic party elite are limiting the choices for supervisor and Town Board in the upcoming election," Robinson wrote in the letter announcing her candidacy.

NS4SED is an advocacy group favoring a 50,000-square-foot size cap on retail development. Its president, Daniel Mackay, announced he is seeking a position on the town board.

Mackay was unable to be reached for comment.

Incumbent Doug LaGrange, a Republican, and Chuck Voss, a planning board member, have received support from the Conservative Party, and were discussed as the Republican Party's picks for town board, but Robinson said she is throwing her hat in the ring and hoping to force a primary election. Both LaGrange and Voss support the size cap. There are two seats open, with Robinson, LaGrange and Voss all collecting signatures for the Republican line.

Democrat Peg Neri's seat is also up for grabs in November, although the Democratic Party has not had its caucus to decide its candidates yet.

LaGrange and Voss officially announced their candidacy on Monday, June 8.

Joseph Defronzo, Republican Party committee chair, said the committee has officially endorsed LaGrange and Voss, and said Robinson and her supporters are "renegades" within the party.

"She came out of the woodwork. The reason - I have no idea," he said.

He said there are some committee members who are supporting Robinson.

"I'm sure there's going to be some members who are going to be carrying her petitions, which is unheard of," said Defronzo.

He said once the committee decides on candidates, it should deal with them exclusively, citing that as "protocol."

Defronzo said that while he was chairman of the Queens County Republican Party, he worked with 1,500 committee members and never had anything like this happen.

"A large number of New Scotlanders do not want the huge development," he added, explaining the party's decision to back LaGrange and Voss.

Robinson noted that she is not supporting "big-box" development in town, but wants to keep the option of having a development similar to Stuyvesant Plaza open.

She also said the commercial development issue is not the only one facing the town. She added that Clarksville, Unionville and Feura Bush, on the opposite side of New Scotland's commercial zone also have noteworthy issues and should be addressed in the town board race.

The New Scotland Democratic Committee has not endorsed any candidates yet, and is expecting to do so later this month.

The Democratic caucus is scheduled for Tuesday, June 23, and committee members will choose their candidate for the open seats in New Scotland.

Paul Caputo, the Albany County Independence Party chair, said it is expecting to make endorsements at some point later this month. Caputo said the party is waiting to see how the commercial zone issue plays out in coming weeks.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

Truck vote turnout highlights ineffective communication

What if they threw a fire district vote and nobody came?

That's about what happened in Guilderland Center last week, as 21 people voted on a bond to appropriate $400,000 in taxpayer money toward the purchase of a new fire truck.

The result was overwhelmingly in favor of the truck, at 17 votes to four. It was a landslide, really.

This week, The Spotlight brings you news that many more Guilderland Center residents would have voted in favor of purchasing the truck — if only they had known about the vote.

Before we take the district to task for the low voter turnout, let's note that the legal requirements for announcing the vote were met. Notice of the vote was placed in The Altamont Enterprise, the town's paper of record, on May 7, more than a month before the vote.

But meeting a legal requirement and effectively informing your constituency are two different things. And the district's efforts to inform the public — the legal notice, a post on the town's Web site and a sign in front of the Guilderland Center firehouse — were anything but effective. The district couldn't even get their own numbers to come out and vote — it has close to 50 volunteers.

We can't say if the failure to adequately advertise the vote was done with malice or was simply mishandled by district officials. But it's this type of mismanagement — especially when it concerns this large of an amount of the taxpayers' money — that leads to the mistrust and suspicion of a governing body by its constituents.

Getting the word out about these types of votes early and effectively can go a long way in endearing the public to the district's cause, and eliminates a lot of the bad taste that is left in the public's mouth when they feel they don't know what their own government is doing.

As one Guilderland Center resident told reporter Dan Sabbatino, she would have voted for the truck wholeheartedly, but said the fact that she didn't know about the vote was "shameful."

Combined households face challenges

By SALLY STALNAKER
news@spotlightnews.com

The author is with Home Instead Senior Care.

It's happening in the White House and in homes throughout Albany County. When President Obama's mother-in-law, Marian Robinson, settled in with her family in Washington earlier this year, they became part of a growing national trend.

The increasing number of seniors now living under the same roof with at least one other generation is more than just political news. According to a recent survey conducted for the local company Home Instead Senior Care, 43 percent of adult caregivers in the U.S. ages 35 to 62 reside with the parent, stepparent, or older relative for whom they or someone else in their household provides care. The Census Bureau confirms this growing trend: In 2000, 2.3 million older parents were living with their adult children; by contrast, in 2007, that number jumped to 3.6 million — a 55 percent increase.

The challenges that can arise from intergenerational living prompted Home Instead Senior Care to launch a public education campaign to help families determine if living together is a good idea and to provide tips on how to make such an arrangement work well for seniors as well as their family caregivers. This campaign will help adult children begin to address such issues as the stress of caregiving under one roof, adapting a home for two or more generations and merging household finances. Several factors are driving this trend, according to Susan Walter, owner of the local Home Instead Senior Care office.

"We see families coming together to share family caregiving duties for economic reasons and emotional support. Sometimes the seniors need care, but in other instances the older adults could be providing care to their own grandchildren. Seniors may feel they need the emotional support of an extended family and, in these difficult economic times, financial assistance.

Regardless of the reasons, combining households is a big decision. Some families may decide that maintaining separate residences is the best alternative.

At the center of the campaign is a handbook, available free from the local Home Instead Senior Care, which addresses the emotional, financial and comfort and safety aspects of intergenerational living. The handbook was compiled with the assistance of three national experts: Matthew Kaplan Ph.D., Penn State Intergenerational Programs extension specialist; Adriane Berg, CEO of Generation Bold and a consultant on reaching boomers and seniors; and Dan Bawden, founder of the CAPS (Certified Aging in Place Specialists) program for the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB). A Web site, www.makewayformom.com, provides additional support and information, including a calculator that will help families compute and compare whether living together or maintaining separate residences is the best financial option.

In addition, the Web site features a virtual tour of an intergenerational home where visitors can hear from a real family and see firsthand how they've adapted their home.

Kaplan said that families should approach decisions of combining households from a partnership perspective. "Ask yourself, 'Can I get the whole family behind the idea?' When a decision is made to combine families, expectations must be set right away. Family members must listen and become engaged in conversation. The more the entire family buys in at the beginning, the more likely they will be to come up with great ideas," he noted. "People need interdependence, but seeking interdependence and family unity are important as well, particularly in today's hectic and demanding world."

For information about Home Instead Senior Care or to order a copy of the free Too Close for Comfort handbook call 437-0014 or log on to www.makewayformom.com.

Intergenerational living seems to generate positive feelings of care and accomplishment combined with stress. That's what recent Home Instead Senior Care research indicates.

Consider this: Those who live with their senior loved ones say the best thing about being a caregiver is providing the best care possible (30 percent); followed by a sense of accomplishment (27 percent) and staying connected/becoming closer (22 percent). Seventy-two percent of these caregivers believe that caring for their relative has been rewarding.

The worst thing about being a caregiver is finding no time for themselves (41 percent). Seventy-two percent of those who said they lived too close to their loved ones rated their stress as a 5 on a scale of 5. Kaplan offers these tips:

- Take a family partnership perspective. Everyone needs to be informed and to give input into household arrangements.

- Set expectations right away. Avoid conflict by working to ensure upfront that family members see eye-to-eye about each person's roles and responsibilities.

- Ask for help. Engage children in responsibilities around the home and make it clear to adult siblings that you want them to be involved. If extended family will not help with respite care, arrange for a professional caregiver service.

- Make family unity key. Strive for routines, rituals and traditions that bring the family together including family movie night or a walk.

- Find threads of common interest and build on those to develop family activities that are conducive to building deeper relationships.

- Focus on something very simple that seems to generate a common bond, such as ethnic cooking, family history, health or wellness.

- Keep lines of communication open. Recognize the importance of private time and family time for every member of the household. Visit www.4070talk.com for more information.

- Distinguish between private space and shared space. Shared space should be stocked with material inviting for all ages and items that could stimulate discussion, such as a child's project or "brag book" of photos. Make clear rules regarding the private spaces set aside for each member of the household.

Adult children who move a senior into their home, or who move into a senior's home, should ensure that their loved ones are safe by conducting a physical inventory with an eye toward safety and comfort, according to Dan Bawden owner of Legal Eagle Contractors in Houston and the founder of the Certified Aging in Place Specialists (CAPS) program.

Thanks for kicking in for soccer tournament

Editor, The Spotlight:

Bethlehem Soccer Club held the annual Bethlehem Invitational Tournament Saturday and Sunday, May 16 and 17, at the Soccerplex on Wemple Road. We had over 80 teams participate from across the state and Vermont. We had boys and girls teams from under 8 years old through college.

This tournament was very successful. The weather held out and it only rained at night. Trophies were awarded to first- and second-place teams in 16 divisions. We also awarded trophies to the team in each division that displayed the best sportsmanship on and off the field.

We had a penalty kick shootout competition and a speed gun to record the speed of kicks. Some balls were clocked at nearly 70 mph. There was plenty of food on hand, including cotton candy and plenty of hot drinks on Sunday when the temperature hovered around 50 with a stiff breeze.

Tournaments do not happen by themselves. They take an army of volunteers. We had nearly 400 volunteers beforehand and over the weekend.

I'd like to thank our volunteers for making this a fun day for all the Bethlehem children as well as those players from surrounding communities.

We also owe a debt of gratitude to Jerry Wright from Wright Refuse service, Greg Sagendorph and the Bethlehem Highway Dept., The Bethlehem Police and Bethlehem Volunteer Ambulance Departments, our neighbors on Wemple Rd. for the major inconvenience over the weekend, Dunkin Donuts of Slingerlands, Angela's Pizza & Pasta, and McCarroll's.

I'd also like to thank Art Scheuermann, Anne Hildreth, Frank Cristofaro, John Biszick, Joel Rosenberg, David Wright, Larry Navasky, Andrew Clinton, Theresa Barrowman, Dave Schubmehl and

Ron Russell for their leadership. Special thanks go to Mike & Sue Weiss of the U14 Girls Premier team for their generous donation of the electrical service and lights for our new concession building.

The tournament would not have happened if not for the selfless work of Anne Marie Masters, tournament co-director, Mary Ann Schubmehl, tournament registrar and Jim Gunty, concession stand manager.

Lastly, I'd like to thank the 2000-plus players, parents, coaches, referees, team managers that came out to our fields and played soccer. On a related note, we raised over $3,000 in donations to help the Angermeier family. James Angermeier is a senior at Bethlehem and is a player on our U19 Boys Travel team. He is currently being treated for cancer. The funds will help defray medical costs not covered by insurance.

Area artists team up for storytelling event

Delmar resident and author Norman G. Cohen and storyteller Nancy Marie Payne, of Berne, will team up for a storytelling event and book signing Saturday morning, June 20, 11 a.m. to noon at the Perfect Blend Espresso Bar & Café at 376 Delaware Ave., Delmar. Admission is free.

Payne, an accomplished area storyteller, will tell stories from Cohen's "Fables by jambbal, simple stories for complex people...and children," available for purchase online at www.fablesbyjambbal.com, or at the book signing event for $19.95 plus tax.

The family-friendly event will feature original stories by jambbal (Cohen), whose tales inspire a better life by observing nature and learning its lessons. Cohen has a history of area's "A Passover Play" has been performed by elementary schoolchildren. He wrote the lyrics for "Piccolin" recorded by vocalist Nino Rossano on the Strawberry Records label. For nearly five years in the early 80s, Cohen wrote a weekly column for The Spotlight, some of which were compiled into his first book, "Family Matters." The New York State Press Association twice awarded Mr. Cohen's columns for excellence.

Supporters help make beautiful music

Editor, The Spotlight:

Thanks to our over 300 contributing member families, board participants and BCSD music faculty members, the Bethlehem Music Association has been able to support the music program very effectively during the economic challenges of this school year.

Each year the BMA provides grants for students to attend the Suburban Council and Area All States Festival, the All-State, All-Eastern and National festivals, and funds senior music awards and scholarships. It commissions original pieces and funds a guest conductor for our annual district-wide music festival. It advocates on behalf of the music program, and publicizes the program's many successes. It subsidizes the summer music program, and raises funds for extraordinary musical instrument needs.

This year we purchased a high quality drum set for the high school, funded guest artists and master class programs in many of our schools, and funded the wonderful "Building Community Through Dance" program at Glenmont Elementary. We also provided the volunteers to serve judges and students at the NYSSMA festival.

I would like to thank the following people for their hard work and dedication to the BMA this year. They are Helen Smith, Holly Lutz, Maggie Moehring, Fran Pallozzi-Wittman, Lisa Finkle, Lisa Callahan, Debbie Mazzone, Marge Prinzo, Terri Sutkowski, David Norman, and Laura Crandall.

The BMA also wishes to congratulate Stephen Smith and Joseph Tanenbaum, this year's winners of the BMA Scholarships.

We are very grateful for the strong support that we receive from the Bethlehem community, and look forward to a great 2009-2010 season.

to conduct an interrogation" notice two days later on May 19.

Bethlehem Town Attorney James Potter said the town is researching the legal ramifications of the allegations in question.

"Assuming the statement was made, whether that could be the subject of disciplinary action is something that we're looking into," he said. Potter added that the outcome of the case would still remain a "personnel matter."

"Of course people think I got off half-cocked because I've known this a long time that the rumor is out there, but I do my homework and it's not a rumor, it's fact," Hughes said. "Sources who do not want to be named tell me there are copies of that tape out there."

Hughes claims Corsi

asked subordinates in the communications department to erase the tapes.

"I don't know the exact date of this, but [it] couldn't be erased if they wanted to erase it, the technology was not in place to do that," Hughes said. "If it could be done, they would have done it."

Cunningham and Potter agree that dispatchers couldn't erase the tape.

Hughes said he exposed the audiotape because Corsi was targeting him for causing waves and being vocal about union issues.

"I told [Cunningham] about the tape to prove a point that the police and the command staff are throwing stones here and living in a glass house," Hughes said. "All I want to do is come back to work and be treated fairly."

Hughes is still out of work on an undisclosed medical leave, not for the back-to-back suspensions he was dealt in recent months (see sidebar).

Hughes contends the charges are bogus and the Bethlehem Police Benevolent Association is in the middle of a grievance on his behalf.

Cunningham said he doesn't believe there have been any other suspensions during his past three years as supervisor. Hughes said suspensions are rare but have happened at least "two or three times" in the department during his 13 years on the force.

Hughes has been vocal about union issues over the past few years, including the decision to remove police sergeants from the grievance process. Hughes said he was willing to show Cunningham his personnel records in order to prove he was not a problematic officer, but was unable because he has not been allowed access to them. "I told him I would love to show him [my record] but I've been FOILING the town for months and they won't give me my file," said Hughes.

Both sides say the other is falsely misrepresenting the facts of the case to prove the other one is discriminating or trying to prove misconduct.

"The timing of this is really the issue," said Hughes. Hughes said he came forward because he had no other choice.

"Do I want to do this stuff? Do I want to embarrass my police department?" Hughes asked. "No, of course not, but I'm being forced to because the chain of command has been broken and I'm forced up against the wall."

Tale of the tape

The following is a timeline of actions taken by Town of Bethlehem officials and police officer Chris Hughes regarding an alleged racist comment made by Bethlehem Chief Louis Corsi:

• Dec. 16, 2008—Corsi sends a letter to officer Hughes regarding "a pattern of abuse or excessive sick time use."

• March 12, 2009—Hughes writes a six-page letter to Bethlehem PBA president about internal problems.

• March 16—Hughes sends an addendum to the March 12 letter to the PBA president about "false rumors" and more internal issues.

• April 3—Hughes does not show up for his shift and calls in sick for what his doctor later diagnoses as a Strep infection.

• April 5—Hughes sends a new six-page letter to the PBA president asking for his personnel file and complains of more internal problems. He hands in a doctor's note for his most recent absence.

• April 10—Corsi sends a letter to Hughes about absences on April 3-5, saying the doctor's note he supplied was "inadequate," and asks for "specific information."

• April 14—Hughes' doctor writes a letter stating Hughes had "a Strep infection" and was advised to remain out of work until April 8 "because he could have been contagious." A 30-day suspension over the April 3 absence is believed to be given around this time, but the document is undated.

• April 21—Corsi sends a second letter to Hughes directing him to provide additional medical documentation "by not later than April 28, 2009."

• Hughes drops off five copies of a letter about the matter at Town Hall for the board. Supervisor Jack Cunningham doesn't disseminate the letters on advice of counsel.

• April 23—Hughes sends Corsi a response to his two previous letters saying the request is a "direct violation" of HIPPA and the Americans With Disabilities Act. Hughes hands over the April 14 doctor's letter "under protest." The PBA files a grievance against Hughes' first 30-days suspension.

• May 10—Hughes claims a scheduling conflict occurs for the Mother's Day Race. The town states he filed for overtime on this day without showing up.

• May 17—Hughes goes to Cunningham's home to discuss internal issues in the department. Cunningham says Hughes claimed he had an alleged audiotape of Corsi making racist comments. Hughes denies the claim, states he only talked of its existence.

• May 19—Hughes issued an "intent to conduct interrogation" for possible criminal charges in regards to his conversation with Cunningham.

• May 21—Hughes sends a letter to Town Hall saying he never had the audiotape, nor said he did, and states he and newly hired attorney Steve Coffey will not attend the "interrogation."

• Hughes calls Councilman Sam Messina to ask if he received the April 21 letter. Messina states he never got the letter.

• May 22—Hughes is given his second 30-day suspension from the town and charged with three new counts of misconduct on his over-time request for the Mother's Day Race.

• May 23—Messina finds a letter "with several addendums attached" inside of his home mailbox. The letter was not in an envelope, but was from Hughes.

• May 26—The PBA files a second grievance on behalf of Hughes against the new 30-day suspension.

• May 28—Hughes files a formal complaint with the DA's office about Corsi's alleged tape and being targeted by the town for speaking to Cunningham about the matter.

• May 30—The DA's office confirms its Public Integrity Unit is investigating the matter.

• June 3—Cunningham holds an "informational" executive session at Town Hall to update board members of the situation. The board takes no action on the matter.

G'land GOP backs former school board member

Candidates discuss possible debate in race for town seats

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

The Guilderland Republican Party is seeking signatures on behalf of former Guilderland school board member Peter Golden for the upcoming election for town supervisor, according to Ted Danz, party chairman. Golden does not have a registered party affiliation.

Golden, a writer and political newcomer, said he is flattered by the Republican attention and is waiting to see how the petition process goes.

"Let's let the process run its course," he said.

Golden said he has identified a number of issues, and if he does run, he has some suggested solutions on hand.

Danz added that David Fraterrigo, son of school board member Barbara Fraterrigo, has the party's support in his bid for a town board seat.

Danz also said the party has begun collecting signatures for all its candidates.

Fraterrigo, a member of the Conservative Party, will be collecting signatures for that line on his own. Danz said the Republican Party can't go door-to-door with Fraterrigo to help him collect signatures for the Conservative Party without a special notary, since he is not registered with the party.

However, the Republicans can collect signatures for him on their petition.

Republican Matt Nelligan, a town board candidate, said he expects the party to collect enough signatures for each of its candidates to run.

Fraterrigo is attempting to seek a primary in the Conservative Party, since the Conservatives did not endorse him last month, but instead chose Democratic incumbents Paul Pastore and Patricia Slavick for Town Board. Fraterrigo will need at least 5 percent of registered Conservatives in order to force a primary, Danz said.

Town Supervisor Ken Runion, who is seeking re-election, said the Republican candidates all have ties to the school district, and that could be detrimental to constituents.

"It's kind of a strange year," he said. "All the disenchanted people from the school district are trying to take over the Town Board. The Republican Party has now become the school district party."

Runion said he is wary of the implications of mixing the two worlds.

Golden, who served on the school board from 2005 to 2008, said he became involved in town politics as a matter of community service.

He said he hopes the race will be free of personal attacks, with issues such as taxes, traffic and safety being more important.

Runion said he welcomes the opposition because it allows his record to get more public exposure.

"I've been more in the background because I've run unopposed," he said. "I think it's a good thing. We want people to compare and contrast records."

He added he is proud of the low tax rate he has maintained during his 10 years in office.

Runion said having an opponent in the election will yield a higher voter turnout, which he said should favor the Democrats. He said he believes running unopposed in the previous election contributed to victories by Republican Town Board members Mark Grimm and Warren Redlich.

The possibility of an organized debate was discussed at a Guilderland Chamber of Commerce event Thursday, June 12.

"We've always debated. I love debating," Runion said.

Golden said he was glad to hear that Runion is interested in a debate, and he is looking forward to the opportunity.

"I agree with Mr. Runion," said Golden. "That's why I've been looking into the possibility of having a public debate with him that can be covered by the media. I'm sure someone who's been in office for almost 10 years and is running for his sixth term has plenty to say."

IN BRIEF

Delmar resident wins fellowship

Thirty-five future teachers from around the country, including Ethan Levine of Delmar, were recently awarded Knowles Science Teaching Foundation Fellowships worth up to $150,000.

The fellowship's purpose is to nurture, support and encourage the best and the brightest to pursue math and science teaching careers.

Levine always loved math but did not think of becoming a math teacher. Instead, he majored in linguistics as an undergraduate at the University of Pennsylvania. In college, he participated in a tutoring program where he led small group discussions in a 10th grade geometry class. He also spent the summers working with high school students at a sleep away camp. Both experiences led him to reconsider his career choice, making him realize how much enjoyment he could get out of teaching while making a difference.

The KSTF Teaching Fellowships combine financial support such as tuition assistance and stipends for professional development with structured mentor relationships, regular meetings, engagement with new curriculum and teaching methods and online resources.

Homestead to offer historical exhibits

The Saddlemere Homestead (Knox Museum) will be open Sundays, June 21 and 28, from 2 to 4 p.m., featuring exhibits of times gone by in the Pillbox

Glenmont man a larger than life inspiration

Born with no hands or knees, John Robinson is the subject of 60-minute documentary on WMHT

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

At 3 feet, 9 inches, John Robinson doesn't stand very tall, but the story he has to share is larger than life.

Born as a congenital amputee — no hands, no knees — Robinson came into the world looking a little different. He has long since come to grips with his disability and has led a healthy and productive life that some might even say is more than many people with both of their hands and knees experience.

You won't hear Robinson, 40, saying that, however, because he'll tell you he's just like everyone else — which is what makes his story so special.

"Even though I may look different on the outside, inside I'm just like everyone else," he said. "Growing up I wanted what everyone else wanted. I wanted to be on the team as a kid. I wanted to play sports and have fun."

All grown up, Robinson still sought and achieved a normal life. "The overriding theme of my story is that while I may appear different,

LEFT: John Robinson, a Glenmont man who was born with no hands or knees, drives a car that's been modified so he can reach the pedals. ABOVE: Robinson as a baby.

I'm not," he said. "I've got the wife and kids and the dog and the mortgage payment and all of it, and it's a good life like any other."

Robinson moved to Glenmont from Syracuse in 2000 to work as a broadcast salesman. He now holds a management position, and only recently began to publicly share his story. He is the subject of a 60-minute documentary called "Get off your knees: The John Robinson Story" that is airing on WMHT on Thursday, June 18, at 8 p.m. It will be rebroadcast on Sunday, June 21, at 7 p.m.

Robinson's story is one of inspiration, determination and overcoming.

"My hurdles may be a little different than other people's hurdles, but if someone hears my story and feels better about themselves or motivated to do better for themselves, then that's a good thing," Robinson said.

A graduate of Syracuse University, Robinson leads a busy life. When he was born with arms only to his elbow and his legs attached to his hips without knees, his parents had many questions.

Would he go to school? Would he be able to find gainful employment and support himself?

Married with three children, Robinson does much more than just support himself. He drives a car, plays golf, coaches soccer, holds committee positions and even helped carry the torch in the 1996 Summer Olympics in Atlanta, Ga.

Another personal highlight for Robinson 10 years later was taking his son to see the Pittsburgh Steelers win the 2006 Super Bowl in Detroit.

Robinson said he enjoyed making the documentary and was pleased with the final product.

"At first I was not used to having the camera around all over the place, but we got used to it pretty quick," he said. "Overall it was a fantastic experience, and I was glad to share it with my family."

Longtime friend Libby Post, who is president and CEO of Communication Services in Albany, said Robinson is pure inspiration.

"He's one of the most amazing people I've ever met. His determination and ability to put people at ease given his physical presentation is just phenomenal," Post said. "He's just been able to accomplish so much in his life."

Robinson is also gearing up for the launching of his autobiography called, "Get Off Your Knees: A Story of Faith, Courage, and Determination," which is being published by Syracuse University Press later this summer.

Much like the documentary, the book will outline Robinson's life.

"I had kept a journal for a long time growing up ... and I began to put it together and Syracuse University Press decided they were interested in printing it," said Robinson.

WMHT will post video segments on its Web site, www.wmht.org, and will make the complete film available on DVD. The Council of State Administrators of Vocational Rehabilitation, the Office of the Chancellor of Syracuse University and Cornell University were all sponsors of the film.

Robinson's autobiography will be available through shopwmht.org, SU Press and all major book retailers.

Home Performance with ENERGY STAR®

Ensure Quality Improvements with a BPI-Accredited Contractor

Many New Yorkers are making energy efficiency improvements in their home to save money and take advantage of the latest rebates and incentives in the marketplace.

The first and most important step to saving energy in your home is to schedule an energy assessment through New York's Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® Program. Administered by the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA), this Program has already helped more than 24,000 households save more than $16,800,000 in energy costs annually.

Using qualified contractors accredited by the Building Performance Institute (BPI), the Home Performance with ENERGY STAR Program provides a comprehensive assessment of your home to determine where you're losing energy while also checking for certain health or safety features. Only BPI-Accredited contractors can provide you with incentives through NYSEDA's Program. If you are counting on NYSEDA's financial incentives to complete your project, be sure to verify that your contractor is participating in NYSEDA's Home Performance with ENERGY STAR Program by logging on to www.GetEnergySmart.org or calling 1-877-NY-SMART.

What sets NYSEDA's award-winning program apart from many others, is the fact that participating contractors must first be accredited by the BPI, a national organization that sets the standard for building performance. New York currently has more than 150 participating BPI-Accredited contractors in the Home Performance with ENERGY STAR Program. BPI-Accredited contractors are certified in building performance science, a systematic approach to improving the whole house, not just a part of it. Whole-house building performance incorporates energy efficiency, comfort, durability, and health and safety into one comprehensive package.

Only participating BPI-Accredited contractors can provide you with incentives through NYSEDA's Program.

If you want detailed advice on ways to save energy in your home, consider having a professional energy assessment. Many experts agree that it is best to hire a trained professional who is certified by an independent credentialing organization such as BPI to conduct a complete assessment.

In addition to assessing a home's energy efficiency, participating BPI-Accredited contractors may install recommended improvements, subcontract the work, or refer the customer to another BPI-accredited, participating contractor. For quality assurance purposes, participating contractors are subject to random third-party inspection of their projects to ensure that their work adheres to industry standards and equipment is properly installed. Customers can be assured that their contractors meet high standards, that the work scope is reviewed, and, in some instances, the work is inspected to ensure the job is completed properly.

During the assessment, the participating contractor will test the home for air leakage using a blower door and will look for opportunities to improve the home's insulation and overall building envelope. The windows, appliances, and lighting will be assessed. The contractor also will test combustion appliances such as heating equipment, ovens, and water heaters to make sure dangerous combustion gases like carbon monoxide are not leaking into the home. In several cases, life threatening carbon monoxide levels have been identified and immediately addressed by a BPI-Accredited contractor.

After the assessment, the contractor will provide a report with recommended health and safety and energy-efficiency improvements, as well as the cost of making those improvements. The contractor will also identify the financial incentives available through NYSEDA. In addition to attractive financial incentives, this program can reduce your home's energy use by up to 40 percent.

Owners of one- to four-family homes in New York who receive electric service from Consolidated Edison Company of New York, Inc.; Orange and Rockland Utilities, Central Hudson Gas & Electric, National Grid, New York State Electric and Gas (NYSEG) and Rochester Gas and Electric (RG&E), are eligible for the program. Income-eligible households may also receive grants for up to 50 percent of the cost of the work; more in some areas.

If energy costs have you digging deep into your wallet, look closely at the Home Performance with ENERGY STAR Program. Only participating, BPI-Accredited contractors are eligible for NYSEDA incentives, so make sure your contractor is participating. To find a participating BPI-Accredited contractor near you, visit www.GetEnergySmart.org or call toll-free 1-877-NY-SMART.

Bethlehem talks future of 9W corridor

Town Board hears presentation about the future of main town corridor

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The Town of Bethlehem listened to a presentation from its planner on the Route 9W Corridor Study that shows the possibility of multiple roundabouts and a "central alignment" of Clapper Road to the Thruway.

Town Planner Jeff Lipnicky told Town Board members on Wednesday, June 10, the linkage study was funded by a grant from the Capital District Transportation Committee (CDTC). He said the study shows several possibilities for the busy corridor and looked at future growth and commercial development, particularly in the Glenmont portion of the roadway.

"The focus of the study was transportation, so we looked at the transportation network in the area," Lipnicky said. "What we found ... from at least a traffic perspective, is that it functions pretty well."

He said there was little in the ways of bike transportation routes in the corridor and a mixed network of sidewalks currently in place. He said

"We see a roundabout necessary at Feura Bush Road."

Town Planner Jeff Lipnicky

future infrastructure needs are necessary, but pointed to the four corners in Glenmont as one of the more immediate needs.

"We see a roundabout necessary at Feura Bush Road," Lipnicky said about the busy Route 9W intersection that contains two gas stations, a small strip mall and a larger shopping plaza. The study suggested a single lane roundabout would have the least amount of disturbance to the existing structures and parking lots at the intersection.

Lipnicky said the area between Wimple and Becker roads is area that traffic is projected to be heavy into the future. He said there could be a possible roundabout at the Becker Road intersection and a sidewalk along on side 9W to Jericho Road as well.

There was also discussion of building some sidewalks to the Albertus W. Becker Elementary School to which Lipnicky said there was an estimated 2,300 new units expected to be added to school.

Ridership of the CDTC Route 7 bus that runs from Bethlehem to Albany has increased significantly of around 450 percent since 2003, which is when the Towne Center Plaza was developed. Ann Benware of the CDTC said annual ridership was up to 18,000 annual riders from 4,000 riders in 2003.

Lipnicky also brushed upon the controversial road alignment formerly known as the "Selkirk Bypass."

"The bypass dates back to 1989. Since that time the project has pretty much languished because of disagreements," he said. "The central alignment near Creeble made the most sense."

The proposed measure has been somewhat controversial because the residents in the area say the alignment would affect their quality of life and home property values by diverting heavy trucking to and from the Thruway through their backyards.

There have been several petitions containing hundreds of signatures opposing the project, but the town has yet to commit to any single option. The town is currently putting together a traffic study on the project to submit to the state Thruway Authority.

Lipnicky said resources, meaning money, were limited and funding would have to come from a joint private and government collaboration, adding Bethlehem would be competing for funds with other needy projects in the area.

The project could cost anywhere from $27 to $40 million, out of which the town is currently being offer about $12 in financial aid, but the CDTC warned that the money "is not going to last forever."

Councilman Sam Messina said the Clapper Road alignment has been "one of the lightning rods for public interest" as of late. He asked for a cost analysis that could get all of cost details associated with project in "actual dollars" to see if the means don't outweigh the outcome.

One of the suggestions of the alignment is to build a two lane roadway with a 35 to 45 MPH zone in the Clapper Road area and connect to the state's Thruway system at the Clapper Road bridge.

Councilman Kyle Kotary asked about the speed limit and was told it was kept lower to reduce vehicle noise and because it was a more direct line to the Thruway would be a much shorter lane of travel, so increased speed wasn't necessary.

He agreed with Messina's suggestion of a more detailed cost analysis and said the study was the proper approach.

"All of these improvements aren't needed now," he said, "But we now have a plan for this."

Councilwoman Joann Dawson agreed.

"This was an amazing accomplishment, you have a lot of details," she said about the CDTC grant funded study.

However, she took issue with Lipnicky's assessment of travel conditions.

"I think the word you used was 'adequate' or 'tolerable,' but I think a lot of people traveling three would disagree," she said. "The area appears to be at its maximum. ... That's an area that's just screaming for attention and I think it's a real priority for the town."

Lipnicky said he, too, believed it was a priority and said the words he used was an "engineering term" and not necessary the viewpoint of any given driver on the road because it is open to personal interpretation.

Supervisor Jack Cunningham thanked everyone involved with the study and said the findings would be used as "an important tool" for the town.

Glenmont Job Corps goes 'green'

National leaders have called for the creation of a "green" job corps to help prepare the nation's next generation of skilled workers to meet the needs of this emerging industry. The recently passed American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009, which provided Job Corps with $250 million, included language encouraging the development of programs that would lead to careers in the energy efficiency and renewable energy industries.

The Glenmont Job Corps Academy is preparing for these green careers in several ways. "We plan to expand our students work experiences and training programs, specifically those that prepare enrollees to enter auto, construction and manufacturing sectors," says Dennis Lamberd, center director. "This will require us to enhance and refocus our career technical programs to incorporate green technologies, training and development."

The academy will be implementing various green projects and activities throughout its campus, beginning with an $83,000 energy efficient project due to start in mid-June. Some other activities will include plantings and beautification by the Job Corps' Garden Club; made up of staff and students; building a gazebo with solar lighting added, and the collection and reuse of rain water.

Glenmont Job Corps is a residential career technical training and education program for young adults ages 16 through 24 who are willing to make a commitment. To learn more about the Job Corps Program, call 767-2295.

Sign up for summer reading program

Be Creative—Explore! at our library this summer. This year's summer reading program is a combination of the New York State theme and our state's quadricentennial celebration of the 1609 voyage of Henry Hudson that began the flow of Dutch settlers to the New Netherlands.

Summer reading signup begins next Monday June 22, at the library or online at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org. (Preschool signup is at the library only.)

We're offering three levels again this year: preschool (age 3-4), school age (grade K-5) and teens (grade 6 and up). Weekly prizes, a bookmark contest, and a calendar full of special programs and events means lots of reading, learning and fun. Read all about it in the July/August issue of our library newsletter /footnotes/, mailed to all BCSD households this week.

Reporting for prizes begins Monday June 29. Book report hours are Monday-Friday, 10am-noon, 2-4pm and 6-8pm in the youth services area. School age kids and teens can log their reading online wherever they may be—in town, at camp, or on a family trip. At the end of the summer they'll be able to print out a complete list of the books they've read.

Teen volunteers

We couldn't run the quality program we have without our teen volunteers. Teens in grades 6-12 staff the summer reading desk and help with all manner of activities. On Tuesdays and Wednesdays in July and August they'll team up with librarians for "Read to Me," sharing books and storytime activities with preschoolers. Also in July and August, teens will also be working on sets, costumes, puppets and parts for Drama-Rama, a special summer's end performance for all reading program participants and their families.

Volunteer training

Teens—don't forget to attend your orientation session on one of the following dates: Saturday June 20, Monday June 29 or Tuesday June 30, 2:30-4:30pm. A session is also being offered at 6:30pm on June 29. Teen story-reader training is scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, July 8-9 at 10:30am.

Study hall at the library

Before all this fun begins, there are exams to take. Bethlehem teens taking final exams can come to the library for group and individual study. Time has been set aside in our meeting rooms for this purpose until June 24; the schedule is posted at the information desk.

June 19 hours

Please remember that this Friday June 19, the library will be closed in the morning to accommodate an in-house staff development workshop for our employees. Book drops will be open, but there will be no phone service. The library will open at 1 pm and close at the usual time, 9pm.

'Old Songs' meets 'Henry Hudson' at GPL

This Friday, June 19, at 7 pm, the Guilderland Public Library will host the Old Songs organization's presentation of "Henry Hudson & the Half Moon," a free concert about Hudson's epic 1609 voyage of discovery.

The concert is in Dutch and English, and features six performers who relate the tale of Hudson who sailed the Half Moon from Amsterdam northward towards the Pole in search of a shorter route to China. As we all know, he found Albany (at least, the land that would become Albany) instead. These wonderful performers relate the entire story in song.

And "Henry," by the way, will be there, too. Kids and parents can get their picture taken with him. "Henry," as you've probably seen from local newspaper and television news coverage, is not camera-shy. Even though he's just a life-size doll, he really seems to enjoy the attention.

This Old Songs performance is free and open to the public. All are welcome to this extraordinary event.

Summer Reading Club sign up June 22

This year's Summer Reading Club theme is "Be Creative @ Your Library." Children from preschool age to those entering sixth grade are encouraged to take part in this fun summertime activity. Registration begins Monday, June 22; you need to register for this in person.

What will you do? Read books you enjoy. Then record their titles in your Reading Record. During July and August, enjoy the many special programs that will be offered as part of the program.

And then in late August, we'll have a small party to celebrate another successful Summer of Reading. But it all starts with you coming to the Library and registering for the program.

Ready, Set, Shred!

"Shreddy" is back by popular demand (and we do mean demand).

GUILDERLAND PUBLIC LIBRARY
www.guilpl.org

On Saturday, June 27, from 10 am to Noon, the Guilderland Library Foundation will hold the next of its Quarterly Shredding on Saturdays. It's a classic win/win: you get to safely discard all those old personal papers you want to recycle but want to shred first, and the Library Foundation raises extra funds to support the Library's special programs for children and adults.

It's better to have material stacked neatly. We ask that you stay with our volunteers as they shred your material, or you can shred it yourself; this is to preserve your privacy.

If you do have a large amount, consider making a special appointment for shortly before or immediately after the 10 am to noon walk-in shredding session. Call the Foundation at 456-2400 x 12 if you have any questions or want to make an early or later appointment.

Just $3 a vertical inch is the suggested donation. Sound like a lot? It's not when you consider the safety and timesaving this service gives you. And your donation supports many special Library programs unfunded by taxpayer dollars.

Mark Curiale

All library events are free unless otherwise posted. The Guilderland Public Library is at 2228 Western Ave., Guilderland. Call 456-2400, ext. 12, for information, or visit the library's Web site at www.guilpl.org.

COLLEGE ADMISSION: JUST A CLICK AWAY

By Jennifer Wing jwing@
cnylink.com

In the days of information technology, applying to a college or university is but a click away. This is an increasingly-popular way to apply, according to Kristine Duffey, Onondaga Community College associate vice president of enrollment services. OCC first offered the option of applying online to the class of 2007, and has since seen a steady increase in online applications.

"We're getting about 80 percent of our applications via email," Duffey said. "I think students are finding it's simpler to apply online."

LeMoyne College in Syracuse is also getting 80 percent of its applications online, according to Denny Nicholson, director of admission. Nicholson credits the ease, speed and accuracy of the online application process for these huge numbers.

"I would imagine that over the course of the next five years many schools will have this be the only venue available for applying," Nicholson said. "Not only does it benefit the student and the environment, but it benefits the school in processing the applications."

Why apply online?

Verification

The benefits of applying online include confirmation that the school received the application – something that could only be done in the past by sending an application via registered or certified mail.

Speed

In the blink of an eye, or the click of a mouse, a student's application is on its way with no stamps, no visit to the post office or overnight service and all the convenience of being able to send this so-important document from the comfort of home.

The response time to the application can also be significantly less.

"There is a quicker turnaround when applying online," Duffey said. "The application loads within 24 hours of its being sent and the [timeframe for processing] an application is about five to seven days."

Cost savings

Many schools do not charge for an online application.

"There is no fee for a local application," said Duffey. "But there is a $45 fee if the application comes through SUNY."

At LeMoyne, the $35 application fee is waived if the application is submitted online.

Accuracy

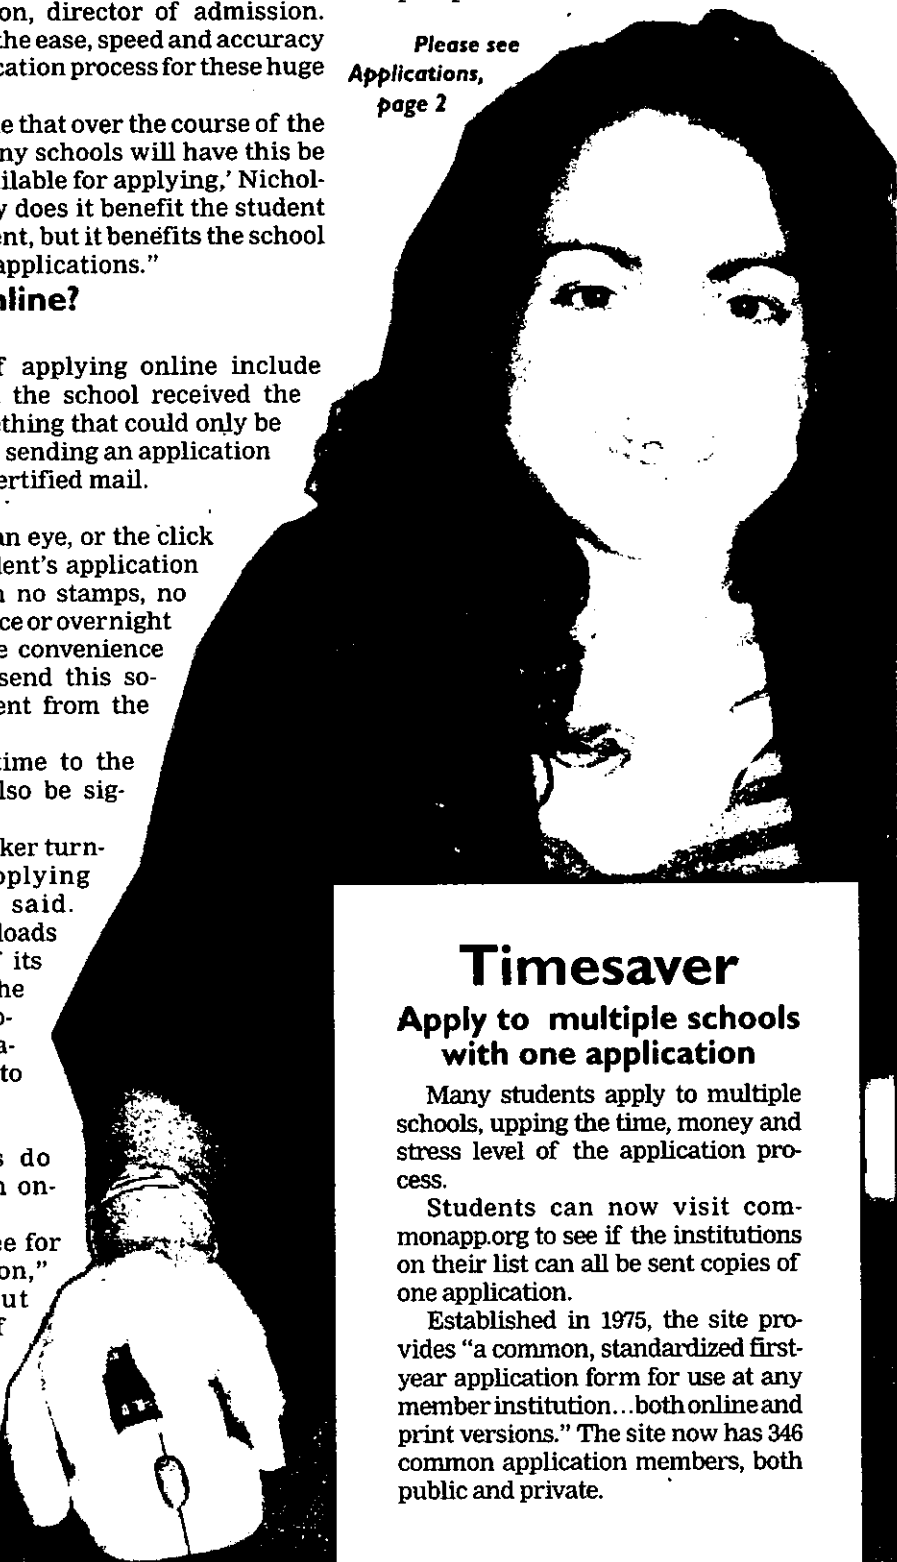

Since there is not a need for the school to input data received online, the accuracy of information on the application is increased.

"It also improves our data, in the case of online versus mailed applications," Duffey said. "They are more readable and things such as addresses are sure to be correct in the system."

Communication

The electronic filing of an application can also open up a window of communication to the admissions department as well as other facets of the institution. Questions, concerns and comments can be made through the use of email, helping to form a clearer picture of the prospective student for school admissions

Apply to multiple schools with one application

Many students apply to multiple schools, upping the time, money and stress level of the application process.

Students can now visit commonapp.org to see if the institutions on their list can all be sent copies of one application.

Established in 1975, the site provides "a common, standardized first-year application form for use at any member institution...both online and print versions." The site now has 346 common application members, both public and private.

Ask the expert

Mistakes to avoid in the application process

1. Believing it's much harder to get into college than ever before.

Of the 2,500 colleges and universities nationwide, only 150 accept less than 50%. Most colleges accept 7 out of 10 applicants.

2. Believing the more well-known or selective a college is, the better that college is.

3. Not doing careful self assessment and research.

The key is to find a school that is a "good fit."

4. Believing you can control the outcome of the admissions process at very selective colleges.

5. Not viewing all your choices as "first choices."

Build a college list from the bottom up, not from the top down.

6. Not understanding how financial aid works.

Parents should understand the difference between "need-based aid"

The real numbers tell the real story

By Richard C. Iannuzzi

It is difficult these days to pick up a newspaper or magazine, listen to the radio, or search the Internet without being bombarded with numbers and statistics. All of which brings to mind a statement allegedly attributed to Benjamin Disraeli and made popular by Mark Twain: "There are three kinds of lies: lies, damned lies and statistics." Treading very gingerly, therefore, I'd like to take a look at three sets of numbers that came out recently.

Richard Iannuzzi is president of New York State United Teachers, representing more than 600,000 professionals in education and health care.

In my role as the president of New York State United Teachers, the largest state teachers federation in the country, these statistics are ones I should certainly be crowing about. They're very positive:

better than 97 percent of school budgets passed on the first try;

in grades 3 through 8, English Language Arts scores jumped almost 6 percent and math scores rose 11 percent; and the achievement gap for African American and Latino students closed by more than 10 points in math and nearly as much in ELA.

It's all very positive news. But, if taken out of context, it has the potential of being — well, using Twain's word — lies.

Those who might claim that a 97 percent approval rate for local school budgets means school financing in its current form works are lying. It doesn't. There is too great a dependence on local property taxes, and those taxes are levied without consideration of the homeowners' income and ability to pay.

Also, those who claim third-through eighth-grade test scores indicate that all is well with education are also lying. It isn't. And, it is just as misleading to suggest that narrowing the achievement gap is an end in itself. Narrowing that gap is not the same as ending it, and we cannot rest until the latter happens.

Voter confidence in public schools and a willingness to make financial sacrifices to maintain those schools should make teachers, parents and community members proud. And, yes, they should also be very proud of the progress all students are making and the fact that the achievement gap is closing. Yet, while New York has some of the best public schools anywhere, it also has too many that continue to struggle. Thus we can't let these statistics make us complacent, or allow us to mislead the public — or ourselves.

These statistics don't tell the whole story.

This year, school budgets passing in record numbers was as much a result of federal intervention — stimulus funds — and local collaboration in finding savings as it was a measure of community support. In these difficult economic times, this infusion of federal funds and local savings was critical. As was the communities' support and understanding that, for the economy to turn around, schools must be able to provide the skilled graduates who can and should be the mainstays of a strong work force.

This year's gains in student achievement validate that community support. While standardized test scores are a one-dimensional measure of student achievement and can never give a truly accurate or complete picture of an individual child's performance, they can be fair indicators of the overall progress of a school, a district, or a community, and this year's scores point clearly in the right direction.

No doubt some will find fault with this interpretation of these statistics, saying that their value is overstated. But what cannot be denied is that communities, when they see money spent well and progress being made, will support public education.

The public, especially parents and grandparents, look right past all the news about numbers and statistics. They look right at the child and know whether he or she is succeeding — and for public education to succeed, that's the most important measure of all.

Do you have the skills local employers are looking for?

In today's challenging economic climate, where more people are seeking fewer jobs, you need every advantage you can get to make certain that you stand out in the eyes of employers. One career strategy that can help distinguish you from your competition is to make sure you have the specific skills and training employers want.

Bryant & Stratton College, with campuses in Albany, Liverpool and Syracuse, offers Associate degree programs in business, health care, technology and the legal field.

All of Bryant & Stratton College's programs were developed after close and ongoing consultation with employers throughout this area because Bryant & Stratton understands that earning a degree won't do you much good if it doesn't help you start a great career.

The teaching method used at Bryant & Stratton College is also influenced by local employers. While you will have classroom instruction, you'll also learn by doing. One of the points many different employers told Bryant & Stratton College is that they want their employees to have the kind of practical skills they'll need to use everyday. To that end, Bryant & Stratton College classes emphasize hands-on learning.

The degree programs offered at Bryant & Stratton College can be completed in as few as 16 months. Classes are small so you'll receive all the personal attention and support you need to succeed.

In fact, the entire atmosphere at Bryant & Stratton College is focused exclusively on helping you make the most of your true potential. Not only will you enjoy small class sizes, but if you're having trouble understanding something, you'll receive personal instruction. If you need help outside of class, you'll receive tutoring. You can be assured that as a Bryant & Stratton College student, you will never be "left behind."

The focus on your success at Bryant & Stratton College is most dramatically evident in their placement rate. An impressive 92% of the students who earn their degree at the College get good jobs in their field of study.

Bryant & Stratton College is regionally accredited, which means that once you graduate and start your career, if you ever decide to go back to college, you can most likely transfer the credits you earned there to another college or university and continue your education.

Bryant & Stratton College is accepting applications now for their fall semester. You can contact their Albany campus at 518.437.1802, their Liverpool campus at 315.652.6500 or their Syracuse campus at 315.472.6603. You can also visit bryantstratton.edu.

officers as well as of the school itself for the applicant.

"There is no way to staff our office to give instantaneous service 24/seven," Duffey said. "And many times it is difficult for the student to be able to take time out to reach us during regular business hours. Taking care of things online is an easy way for the student to be in contact with us."

Possible pitfall

A downside to applying online is there is a possibility that the applicant's other information may not get to the school.

"It is important that the student follow up with their guidance counselor to make sure that their records, transcripts and other documentation is sent from their high school," Nicholson said. "If you have a teen in his or her bedroom that decides to fill out and send an application at midnight, we will receive that the next morning. If the guidance counselor doesn't know the student is applying, however, the other information may not be sent."

Duffey agreed.

"Sometimes the ease of applying online can result in a higher percentage of incomplete documents and applications that are sent without the other necessary documents," she said.

The solution for this is to keep the counselor informed, Nicholson added.

"Nowadays, high schools have a good system of checks and balances to try to avoid this."

and "merit aid. Need options require that students applying for grants or loans to make up the difference between tuition costs and what they can afford. Merit involves the school's financially supporting a student it desires.

7. Procrastination.

It makes the process worse, because there is less time for research and preparation for strong applications.

8. Failing to keep the college process in perspective.

Admission is not an evaluation of someone's worth or potential success.

Schooling your kids to save in the current economic environment

By ANTHONY J. LANZILLO,
Senior Vice President,
Retail Banking, KeyBank

Other than the Super Bowl, when is the last time you got excited about watching a television ad?

The answer is probably a resounding never.

But have you watched television with a kid lately? Did you try to catch a quick peak at the news between episodes of Hannah Montana or Sponge Bob Squarepants? Forget about it. Commercial time for a kid is gold.

Tell me if this sounds familiar?

Kid: Oooh. Can I get that for my birthday?

You: Your birthday is four months away.

Kid: How about Christmas?

You: Christmas is six months away.

Kid: [New commercial plays] Oooh. I want that, too. Can I get that, too?

You: Do we have to watch the commercials?

Kid: Commercials are the best. [McDonald's commercial plays] Can I have a Happy Meal for dinner?

You: No. Do you realize you want everything you see?

Kid: Can I have everything I see?

You: Sure.

Kid: Really?

The scary part is, if you tell most kids younger than age 11 that they can have everything they see on television or in a magazine, they actually believe you. They don't care if you're working 12-hour days or struggling to pay the bills. Money is a pretty foreign concept to them. Sure, they know there are four quarters in a dollar and that getting pizza for lunch on Fridays costs $1.75, but if you ask them where the money you spend comes from they will probably say either that you make it, like a cow makes milk, because that's your job, or from the ATM.

On the surface, it's cute. The give-and-take between commercials makes for good banter. But in a bad economy, money and stability are a very real issue, and how you deal with it can shape your kids' relationship with money for the rest of their lives.

The 800-pound gorilla can be fun
In many families, money is taboo. It's just not something that gets talked about. But ignoring the money issue doesn't make it go away. It just makes the conversation one-sided.

How, you ask?

Television.

According to the American Psychological Association (APA), the typical American child watches, on average, more than 100 commercials a day. Furthermore, a task force of APA psychologist found that children younger than age eight lack the cognitive development to understand the persuasiveness of an ad's intent. As a result, children are perceptible to media messaging, which not only places pressure on parents to spend money on the products being pushed on their kids, it also shapes

Tips for parents in a bad economy

In an economic downturn, most people can't move their focus past finances. However, money concerns often lead to health concerns, mainly stress-related disorders. For this reason, the American Academy of Pediatrics has provided the following list of tips to help parents and their children cope with tough economic times.

1. Take care of yourself.
2. Limit television and media time.
3. Choose your words carefully.
4. Be sensitive to each child's needs.
5. Let your pediatrician know if you think your children are showing signs of stress.
6. Plan family meetings.

For the full APA document, "Talking to kids about the economy: Tips for parents and other caregivers," visit the APA website at www.apa.org/disasters/economy.cfm kids' lifelong perceptions of products and their long-term values. It is no wonder, then, that advertising to children is a $12 billion a year industry. It works.

This is why it is so important for parents to teach kids the value of money. And the good news is it isn't that hard. Here are some age-appropriate ideas.

Ages 5 through 8

- Teach your child that money is earned by providing an allowance for chores or paying them for helping you with special jobs around the house.
- Explain where money comes from. Your job is not actually making money. You have a skill that earns you money and that purchases you make on your debit card or with a check is money that you have already earned and put into your "piggy bank."
- Establish the difference between needs versus wants.
- Make your child responsible for small purchases.
- Ensure that your child understands the value of money by teaching her or him how to identify bills and coins and count money.

Ages 9 through 12

- Prioritize. At this age, your child will have a long list of wants. Help them determine what they really want by reviewing the pros and cons of purchases. Then make them save for it.
- Introduce the concept of interest to reinforce savings behavior. You can even offer a savings match, contributing a dollar for every dollar your child saves.
- Encourage your child to contribute to charitable efforts. In addition to giving money, or in lieu of a donation, your child can volunteer their time.
- Help your child understand the value of a budget by predetermining what portion of an allowance can be spent and how much will be saved.

The other 800-pound gorilla—the economy

Raising kids is always tough. Raising them in the information age amidst an economic downturn makes it even tougher, because according to the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP), adults transfer their emotions to their children. So if we're anxious, our kids are anxious. And in recession, there's a lot of anxiety.

The best way to deal with this anxiety is to talk about it, says the AAP. In a release they state: "Children can become anxious or upset if no one communicates with them. All they need is a very basic explanation of why people are upset or worried and what impact it will have on them personally." The AAP also suggests choosing your words carefully. Focus on reassuring your kids that things are okay and point out positives in your situation, such as Mom and Dad are both employed or that the house is not in jeopardy.

The important thing to remember is that young kids are just beginning their relationship with money. It's confusing. It's even confusing for many adults. So be patient. Don't get angry that your child wants everything they see on television, and don't look at it as a failure of your parenting skills. Instead, accept it for what it is—a byproduct of the times we live in, as well as an opportunity to discuss the value of money with your child. Because we won't judge our kids by what they do now, we will judge them by their actions in the future, and hopefully negative savings rates and huge debt won't be a part of it.

Pair of women focus attention on Afghanistan

Local photographer and human rights advocate share views on Afghan life

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

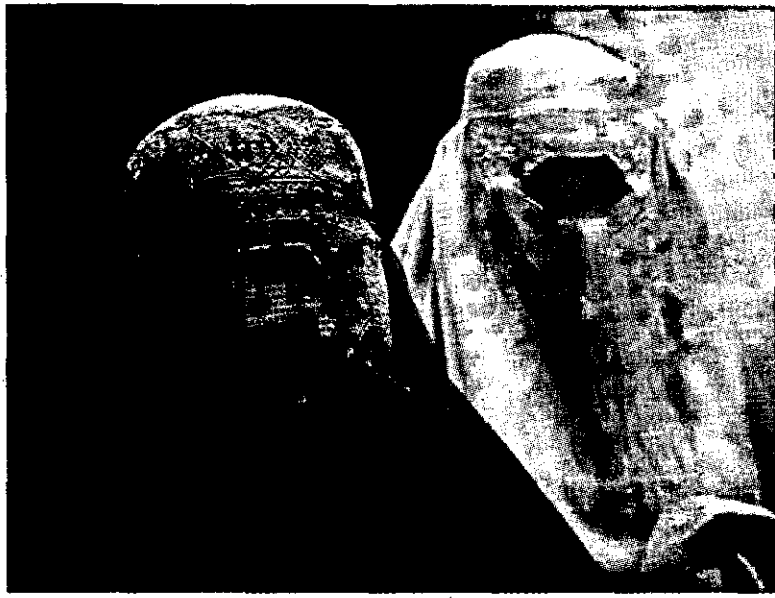

A former running mate of Ralph Nader and a local photojournalist teamed up to talk to Capital District residents about the new American focus on the war in Afghanistan.

Madelyn Hoffman, executive director of New Jersey Peace Action, and Connie Frisbee Houde, a freelance photojournalist and Albany resident, spoke Saturday, June 13, at the First Unitarian Universalist Society of Albany.

Their presentation, which included a Power Point slide show, titled "Afghanistan: Understanding the Issues. What Can We Do?" was presented by Women Against War.

Both speakers are against the increase of troops in Afghanistan proposed by President Barack Obama, and they are calling for the end of unmanned drones over the border into Pakistan, which Hoffman said kill numerous civilians and propagate hatred for Americans in the region.

"The situation in Afghanistan had begun to really deteriorate in 2005, and suicide bombings began to happen with frequency when it was rare before," Hoffman said. "I began talking about this Local freelance photojournalist Connie Frisbee Houde took a number of pictures during her last trip to Afghanistan in 2005. Houde says she was enjoyed the subjects she found abroad, but she was shocked at their lifestyles.

Connie Frisbee Houde/Spotlight

to shift the public discussion and public debate that Afghanistan is the good war and the war we have to complete to, 'Why did we go in there in the first place?'"

Hoffman was in Afghanistan in 2005 as a member of a Global Exchange delegation, and she often speaks on U.S. foreign policy. She ran for New Jersey governor in 1997 on the Green Party ticket and was Ralph Nader's running mate in New Jersey in 1996. For 16 years, she also directed a statewide environmental organization working with 200 citizens groups on toxic chemical pollution.

Hoffman, who has spent years advocating for human rights issues, said she was shocked during her first trip to the country.

"I thought I understood what poverty was, but I did not until I traveled to Afghanistan," Hoffman said. "The basic level of cleanliness, even in Kabul, which is the capital city, was unbelievable, and the standard of living got worse the more rural the area."

Disease was a major issue, according to Hoffman.

"When I was there, there was an outbreak of cholera because of open sewer lines," she said. "There was basically a trough dug into the road. ... Even Third World nations can deal with simple sanitary issues like cholera."

"I was there for 10 days, and it took me three months to adjust back to the U.S. because of the contrast of the standard of living," Hoffman said.

Houde traveled throughout Afghanistan in 2003, 2004 and 2005 and presented "Afghan Women: Listen to Their Voices." She has exhibited her photos widely and spoken about her experiences with an Afghan eye care organization and about the need for development assistance.

"While in Afghanistan, I quickly fell in love with people I met - the noble faces of the men, the strength of the women and the poignant beauty of the children whose eyes were windows to their souls," Houde said. "I am simply looking at the Afghans through my lens. I am capturing them looking back at us."

Maud Easter, a Delmar resident and an organizer with Women Against War, said it was an honor to invite Hoffman and Houde to speak.

"We are thrilled to have Madelyn and Connie share with us their firsthand knowledge of Afghanistan and their ideas for alternatives to the U.S. military occupation," Easter said. "As Afghan civilians and U.S. soldiers continue to die, we know we need alternatives of diplomacy and development, but we need to hear from Connie and Madelyn how these can be most effective."

Information is power when it comes to initiating change, according to Hoffman.

"The first thing anyone can do is inform themselves," she said.

A real drag

Bethlehem Central Middle School held its fourth annual "Night at the Races" on Thursday, June 11. Students, along with their families and friends, cheered as they watched the model C02 dragsters race down an 80-foot long track. The top three students from each 7th grade technology class were invited to test out their class designs on the run in the middle school's lower gym. The students spent weeks preparing for the race, and members of the audience learned about some of the steps of the design process as students answered questions about their work. The fastest dragsters zipped down the track at speeds of more than 30 miles per hour.

Class

they're saying multi-age classes are a substandard form of education, and they couldn't be further from the truth. That notion is an insult to all of the people who have received a multi-age education."

The parents said they are dissatisfied with the low enrollment at Clarksville and the prospect of having multi-age classrooms indefinitely, and they are pointing to the new Eagle Elementary School as part of the reason.

Clarksville resident Martin Gordinier wrote a letter about the issue to The Spotlight, which was published Wednesday, June 10, and has submitted similar material on other area Web sites about the matter.

"Due to miscalculations in the enrollment estimates at Clarksville Elementary ... Tebbano and the School Board have recently suggested that the current kindergarten class be merged next year with the class above or below," Gordinier wrote, describing the group to be merged as the "lost children."

"So called mixed-age classes are surprisingly common in the Bethlehem Central School District and are fueled by budgetary concerns," Gordinier wrote. "What is unprecedented this time around is the highly probable plan that this group of students will be mixed-age for all of their elementary years."

Gordinier further contends that permanently merging kindergarten and first grade at Clarksville would leave the kids "discriminated against in terms of educational quality based on redistricting mishaps."

Tebbano fundamentally denies these notions, saying there was no "miscalculation," and "there is no truth that this class will stay together all through elementary school."

"The enrollment at Clarksville is not the result of a miscalculation, and it is not because of redistricting," he said. "Enrollment at Clarksville was slightly higher this year than projected during redistricting, and next year it's projected to be lower, so these numbers change all the time — it's not an exact science."

Gordinier did not return calls to expand on his written comments to The Spotlight.

The district held an informational session at Clarksville on Thursday, June 4, to discuss the situation with parents and make a presentation on multi-age classrooms, which Tebbano said was attended by 20 or 30 people.

Clarksville Principal Dorothy McDonald said she has a core group of teachers with multi-age classroom experience and that aside from this year, which doesn't have a multi-age class, there has been a multi-age class every year at Clarksville.

She said of six of her seven years as principal have been multi-age, and Clarksville has had 25 sections during that time. Tebbano said this year has been the only year Clarksville hasn't had a multi-age class since it opened in 1949.

"That is a tremendous amount of experience within this particular teaching cadre that are here at Clarksville now, and there's tremendous historical experience for all of that," said McDonald. "We're not reinventing here. We are highly confident in our ability to educate our children in any configuration."

Some of the parents have said they are not saying "no" to all multi-age classes, but that there should be equal multi-age classroom in all of the schools across the district.

The Bethlehem Board of Education will discuss the matter at its Wednesday, June 17, meeting at 7 p.m. Community members are being invited to attend the meeting and give feedback on the matter, Tebbano said.

A sign indicates the time and location of a vote on a $400,000 bond for a new fire truck. The bond was approved 17-4.

Dan Sabbatino/Spotlight

Truck

had been aware there was a vote.

"They didn't do much to promote it," he said.

The residents did not display concerns about the affirmative vote to bond the truck and each of them enumerated reasons why it is important to have the best possible equipment for the volunteers.

"This poor little fire department. They need equipment," said one resident Emilia, who did not want her last name published.

She added that with housing developments like Glass Works Village being planned, and ones like Dutchmen Acres being discussed, it is important that the fire departments are prepared to handle an emergency.

A volunteer at the Guilderland Center Fire Department who asked not to be named said low turnout has always been an issue, and a vote with 21 people is not uncommon.

The Guilderland Town Board passed a resolution on the bond on April 20, and notice of the vote was first given on the town's Web site last month. The vote took place on Tuesday, June 9, from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Town Supervisor Ken Runion said, due to state legislation, the town, in addition to the fire district, was required to post notice of the vote, even though the district is distinct from the town.

"They're almost considered separate municipality," Runion said.

Notice of the vote was placed in The Altamont Enterprise, the town's paper of record, on May 7.

The town is replacing and selling a 25-year-old truck with a new truck, in order to extend the life of another fire truck purchased in 1993, said Don Albright, chairman of the board at Guilderland Center Fire Department and chief fire inspector in town.

Attempts to determine if the bond will result in a tax increase were inconclusive.

Albright said the department must keep up with a myriad of mandates and regulations passed down from the other governmental entities.

"In doing so, we need to change the way we respond," Albright said of the mandate. "We're trying to stay ahead of the eight-ball."

Albright said due to increasing technological demands and requirements on the specifications of the trucks, it is no longer feasible to hold a truck as long as departments used to.

"You used to be able to buy and replace trucks for 30 years," he said. Now he said, holding a truck for more than 20 years is hardly workable. He did say, though, that the current truck is still in good condition, and it will eventually be put into a trade magazine for sale.

The fire department is also planning to use $260,000 toward a smaller truck, used only for putting out fires, from its reserve fund, Albright said. The larger truck will be capable of ice and rope rescue, as well as extrication and fighting fires, he said.

GPAC kicks off 30th season

Variety of bands to perform at Thursday night series

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Irish folk singers will finish off what Saratoga-area rockers are about to start – The Guilderland Performing Arts Center's Thursday night concert series.

"I tried to find a lot of diverse groups so there's something for everybody," said Kerry Dineen, GPAC's booking agent.

The free concert series, celebrating its 30th anniversary, features a show every Thursday, and kicks off at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 18, with a show by Saratoga rockers Fear of Flying.

The Guilderland Town Band will perform June 25, followed by children's band Red Grammer on July 2. The Town Band will return July 16, and The Riverview Ramblers, a bluegrass and country band, are slated for July 23. The Georgie Wonders Orchestra is playing on July 30.

The Guilderland Town Band has its last performance of the series on Aug. 6, and Alex Torres and his Latin Orchestra are performing on Aug. 13. Closing out the series is Hair of the Dog, performing on Aug. 20.

Fear of Flying has been described as a progressive rock band in the spirit of Yes, King Crimson and Peter Dinklage. It has opened for Asia, according to information from the town's parks and recreation department.

Dineen, who sits on the board of directors for the GPAC, and acts as their booking agent, said in her second year at that position she tried to find big names and quality performers that the whole family can enjoy, especially since GPAC is celebrating a special anniversary.

Dineen said she got involved with GPAC because of her love of music – she teaches in Guilderland Central School District – and because Carl J. Walters Tawasentha Park is named after her grandfather and she wanted to keep the tradition alive in her family.

Dennis Moore, director of parks and recreation, said sound and lighting crews have been working hard to get Tawasentha Park in shape for the concerts.

"The flowers are all planted," Moore said. "We're just hoping for good weather."

The concert series also has two shows that do not take place on a Thursday night. On Friday, June 19, the Nervosity Concert is scheduled to start at 6 p.m. and expected to run until 10 p.m. Also between Wednesday, July 8, and Sunday, July 12, the Family Players are presenting the play "Titanic." Tickets for the play will cost $10.

The Nervosity show is a fundraiser and is featuring a high-school battle of the bands. Proceeds will be donated to Forgotten Voices, according to information from the town.

Concert organizers said the goal is to raise $10,000 to build an AIDS clinic in Zimbabwe. Organizers said that in past years, Nervosity has raised money to build another AIDS clinic, as well as a clean water well. This is the third year the organization will be donating to help aid the Zimbabwe clinic.

Jonathan Hentrich, director of the Nervosity Concert, member of GPAC and director of Student Ministries at Christ Church, said the funds raised from the show will help pay for medicine, food and education for AIDS patients in Africa. He said for the first few years Guilderland and other high school students performed at the battle of the bands to celebrate the end of the school year, but the last three years have been dedicated to a cause.

"Obviously seeing the money make an effect is cool," he said.

He said giving the students an opportunity to perform in front of so many people is rewarding as well.

"It's the biggest stage most of the kids ever played on," he said.

Hentrich said there will be T-shirts for sale advocating free trade, as well as raffle tickets for gift cards and a laptop computer. In addition, concession sales will help raise money for the cause. Organizers said they are also hopeful for general donations he added.

Ellen Shaffer, co-director of church relations with Forgotten Voices International said the organization supports communities in Africa directly, rather than Americans working there.

"It's kind of like church to church," she said. The organization helps educate the local people about AIDS, as well as teaches them farming, social supports and pays school fees she said.

"I won't be at all surprised if they achieve [their goal]," she said.

Retired Lt. Col. Gilbert Mitchell of the U.S. Army Band performs as a special guest conductor for the Guilderland Town Band at last years GPAC series. The concert series is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year.

Training the Mind in Compassion

One of the treasures of the teachings of Buddha is the 'training of the mind' in compassion (Lojong in Tibetan), which lies at the heart of the Dalai Lama's very own spiritual practice. This exceptional body of practical teachings and methods promotes a radical transformation in our thinking and way of life, and contains enormous potential for cultivating both individual happiness and compassion in society.

The Tenzin Gyatso Institute will develop ways to make this training available to a wide audience, and specifically to leaders from business, government, education, the arts, and the helping professions.

Entertainment in the Spotlight

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
dominj@spotlightnews.com

When John Bove decided to open a restaurant in Malta in the early 1980s, theme restaurants were all the rage. So he looked for a concept around which he could build his place.

He toyed with the idea of a Marilyn Monroe-themed restaurant, but decided he'd need a Victorian house to make that work. John Wayne intrigued him, but the restaurant would have to look like a depot.

Bove's building looked more like an old roadhouse – the kind of place where Frank Sinatra made his name. So that, Bove decided, would be the focus of his restaurant, and the My Way Cafe was born.

The concept has been a hit – the My Way Cafe is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year. And while Bove stressed that a theme restaurant is nothing without good food, the Sinatra angle certainly has its appeal. The restaurant has monthly Sinatra tribute nights, including two shows planned for Father's Day, that have been steady draws in the 15 years Bove has been offering them. The Father's Day shows always bring a packed house.

"You usually get your dad a lawn mower or a fishing rod or a tie," said Bove, a father three times over himself. "This is something different. It's something he'll remember."

The restaurant's silver anniversary isn't the only career milestone Bove is celebrating this year. It's been 50 years since he first got his start in the restaurant business. Long before he was hanging pictures of Sinatra on the walls of his restaurant at routes 9 and 67, he ran Roma Pizzeria in Cohoes. Then he moved to Clifton Park, expanded and upgraded, running The Roma where Ravenswood is now located.

Bove's parents are Italian immigrants, and they too were restaurant owners. His mom was the namesake of Mary's in Troy, where Bove honed his cooking skills. He also learned about the trade by reading lots of books.

Initially, though, he thought he would pursue a different career path. At Hudson Valley Community College, he studied business and engineering. But after a short stint as an electrician, he got his start in the food business.

"It was just sandwiches and pizza, and now here I am," he said.

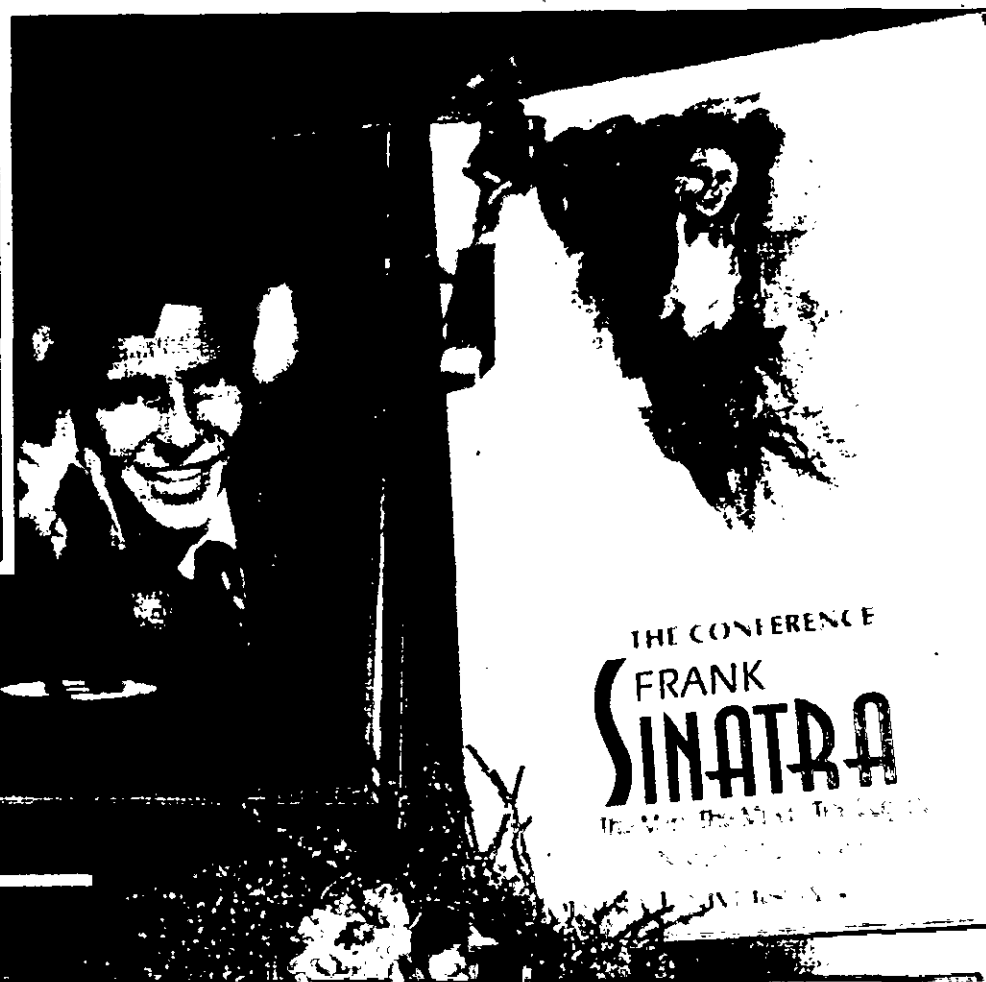

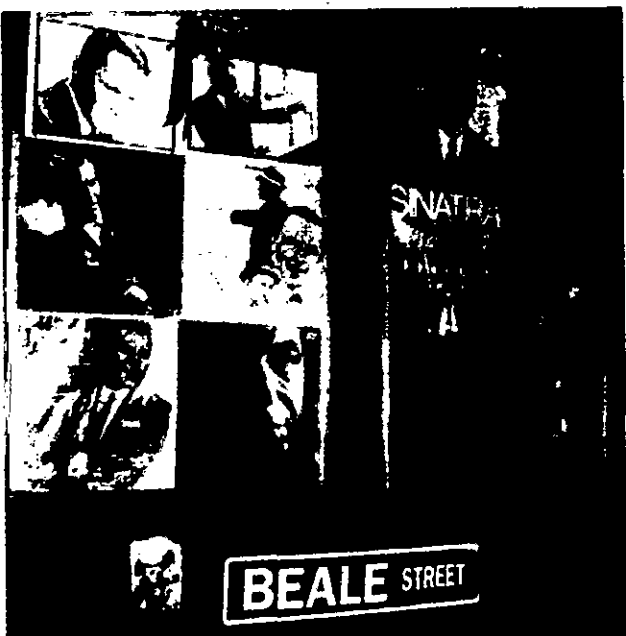

His decision to move to Malta came after Roma proved so popular that Bove wanted to try something smaller. It was hard work managing a big staff, he said.

That's not a problem at My Way Cafe. There are only four people who work there. Bove does all of the cooking, two women wait tables and Bove's wife, Susan, does a little bit of everything, working behind the bar, serving food, helping to open and close.

Like John, Susan has a long history in food service. She's worked for 35 years as the food service manager at Little Sisters of the Poor in Latham. Bove's mother was a resident there, and when Susan heard 15 years ago that he needed help at his restaurant, she came on board. About eight years later, they were married.

They've never had a problem working together, both say.

Frank Sinatra memorabilia, including pictures and album covers, line the walls of the My Way Cafe in Malta.

His RESTAURANT, His way

Cafe in Malta celebrates 25 years in business as it gears up for Father's Day which he makes daily in 4-inch containers.

Bove is grateful that people have continued to come to the restaurant despite the construction and looks forward to welcoming fathers and families on Father's Day. He's not sure how many more Father's Days he'll have at the restaurant; he just turned 73 and has an eye on retirement.

"I keep saying that, but I just really enjoy what I do," he said.

Singer Brian D. will perform Sinatra songs at 4:30 and 7 p.m. on Father's Day, Sunday, June 21. Dinner and the show cost $25.95 and include a choice of 12 entrees. Reservations are suggested by calling the My Way Cafe at 899-4196.

There's no great secret to their working relationship; they simply enjoy each other and their jobs.

"We're best friends," Susan said.

She admitted that when she first started at My Way Cafe, she wasn't too familiar with Sinatra's songs. Over the years, though, she's grown fond of the man nicknamed Ol' Blue Eyes and even boasted that his great-niece has stopped in to eat several times.

Bove said he tries to keep people coming back with an emphasis on fresh ingredients. All of the restaurant's dishes are made to order, many of them accented by herbs he grows in a garden behind the restaurant. This year, he had to move the garden to his house because of the construction (created by Global Foundries) outside the restaurant. One of his specialties is flower pot herb bread, Susan and John Bove married after working together at the My Way Cafe for about eight years.

Deserving trio takes home Good Samaritan Awards

The 16th Annual Good Samaritan Awards were presented on Sunday, June 7, at Good Samaritan Nursing Home in Delmar. Congratulations to Jane Sanders, LMSW, Bethlehem Senior Services Outreach staff member, who was presented with the award for professional contribution, as well as Janet and Bob Burns, Senior Services volunteers, who received the award for volunteer contribution.

The Good Samaritan Awards recognize individuals who raise awareness and work to improve the quality of life for older residents in our area. Sanders and the Burns certainly deserve their awards for all they continue to do every day for our community and its seniors. We salute them.

Frank J. Pascalides

DELMAR-Frank J. Pascalides slipped away on June 8, 2009, at Good Samaritan Nursing Home in Delmar just hours after enjoying a beautiful sunny afternoon, sitting outdoors chatting and visiting with other residents. He was 85 years old. He was the son of Speros and Eleanor Pascalides, stepson of Thomas Woolas. Born in Hyde Park, NY, he lived in Poughkeepsie, where his mother and father operated a successful restaurant business. The family moved to the Capital District following his father's untimely death and he resided in the area since. He is survived by his wife of 64 years, Ruth E. Baker Pascalides, whom he adored and always referred to as "my beautiful wife." He is also survived by his beloved daughter, Barbara.

Frank was the owner and operator of Frank's Trucking Company, a local commercial trucking company, for close to a half century until his retirement. When not working, Frank loved putting in his yard and going out to eat, sampling all the local restaurants. He loved to shop for great bargains and was especially fond of gadgets, always buying the latest and the greatest gadgets and always in mass quantities. He also loved to travel with his family and especially loved cruises. Henry Hudson Park in Bethlehem was one of his favorite places to relax; he always connected deeply with the Hudson River and just loved to sit and take in the scenery and the river activity. And mostly, Frank loved to talk. No doubt, he's chatting up a storm with all the friends and family who greeted him on the other side.

Besides his loving wife and daughter, Frank is survived by a sister, Roxanne Stamatakis Iannone of Sunnyvale, CA; nieces: Nancy (Gary) Walz of Milton, VT, Eleanor Pascalides Ash of Rumford, RI, Helen Farnham of Sunnyvale, CA, Diane (Dale) Kliethermes of Sunnyvale, CA, Roxanna (Walter) Yeaw of Vancouver, WA, Judy (Mario Ruano) McCormack of Albany; and nephews: Dr. James (Theona) Pascalides of East Greenwich, RI, Charles (Eileen) Snow of Richmond, VA, and Theodore (Claire) Snow of Japan. He is also survived by many great nieces and nephews. He was predeceased by two dear sons, Theodore and Speros, and two cherished brothers, Theodore (Victoria) and John (Kay).

Ruth and Barbara wish to thank all their wonderful neighbors and their very dear friends, Carolyn and Lynn Riley of Ponce Inlet, FL and Cindy and Albert Greene and their daughters, Casey and Kendall of Latham, and Mrs. Lillian Comer of East Brunswick, NJ for their loving support and thoughtfulness during Frank's illness. Many thanks to Jacqueline Lindsay who good-heartedly tolerated Frank's teasing everyday. They also extend sincere thanks to all of Frank's caregivers at Good Samaritan and The Community Hospice and to Dr. Robert Quimby and his staff and Dr. Harry Odabashian and his staff who took excellent care of Frank for many years.

We are eternally grateful to Eileen Snow for the support and excellent advice, for tolerating the frantic phone calls at all times. We couldn't have gotten through this without her.

Arrangements were entrusted to the care of the Applebee Funeral Home, 403 Kenwood Ave., Delmar.

Groser, Fredenburg to marry

Melanie Groser, daughter of Fred and Renee Groser of Yardley, Pa., and Joseph Fredenburg, son of Richard and Carol Fredenburg of Gunderland, are engaged to be married.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Our Lady of Mercy Academy at Loralton Hall in Milford, Conn. She works for Withum, Smith and Brown in Princeton, N.J.

The future groom is a graduate of Christian Brothers Academy in Albany and the University of Massachusetts, Boston, where he received a bachelor's degree in economics. He works for JBH Technologies in Glenview, Ill.

The couple plans a September wedding.

Dalers edge Dutch in finals

Goal with nine seconds left propels Farmingdale

By PHIL BLACKWELL
pblackwell@cnylink.com

Win a draw here, or take a better shot there. Force one more turnover, or make one more save.

Anything of this sort might have allowed the Guilderland girls lacrosse team to become the first Section II squad ever to win a state championship.

Yet, it was Long Island champion Farmingdale that finished in front, rallying to beat the Lady Dutch 10-9 in Saturday's Class A title game at SUNY Cortland.

"It was a great game to watch," head coach Gary Chatnik said. "We controlled the ball well and played well. But we just didn't execute (in the final minutes)."

These two sides were familiar with each other, with Guilderland having lost to Farmingdale in last year's state semifinal round.

"We felt comfortable and confident this time around," said Chatnik.

Part of that confidence was in knowing that Farmingdale's defense was going to hone in on Danielle Teterault—the Harvard-bound senior whose seven goals had pushed the Lady Dutch past Section V champion Fairport 13-9 in last Friday's semifinal.

"We figured that would be the case," Chatnik said. "But we have other people who can score, too."

Sure enough, as Teterault lay quiet, her teammates shook off a 4-2 deficit caused by two Dalers goals 23 seconds apart midway through the first half. Amanda Best and Bridget Daley both scored to tie it, and Best hit on her third goal of the game 1:22 before halftime to give Guilderland a 5-4 lead at the break.

Ali Derizzo, Amy Branchini, Corinne Chatnik and the rest of the Lady Dutch defense kept Farmingdale off the board for more than 17 minutes, yet Guilderland could not stretch its lead past two goals.

Down 6-4, the Dalers tied it 7-7, only to see Guilderland make its own push. Off a feed from Daley, Jen Madsen scored with 9:12 left to put the Lady Dutch back in front, and Casey Gerety's coast-to-coast run to the net resulted in another goal with 6:44 to play to make it 9-7.

But just like it did the day before when it dethroned two-time defending state champion West Genesee in the semifinal round, Farmingdale came back. Less than 90 seconds after Gerety's goal, Kelly McPartland scored to cut the Guilderland lead to 9-8.

Moments later, the Lady Dutch appeared to get a break when the referees whistled a Dalers' fast break dead for an injury to Madsen. When play resumed, goaltender Amanda Santandrea stopped Janine Hillier on a point-blank shot.

Guilderland tried to run out the clock, but turned the ball over with 1:20 to play. Farmingdale ran down and, with 59 seconds left, Melanie Raso beat Santandrea for the tying goal.

Raso then won the ensuing draw, allowing the Dalers to hold for one shot. When Kyra Ochwat charged to the net, she drew a foul that Guilderland questioned, but stood. On the ensuing free position shot, Ochwat waited for a split-second, then fired low past Santandrea with just nine seconds left to give Farmingdale the lead for good.

To get to the state finals, Guilderland first had to negotiate last Friday's state semifinal against Fairport.

Perhaps nervous at the outset, Guilderland watched Fairport seize a quick 2-0 lead on goals by Lindsay McKinnon and Shelby Vakiener. Then, Teterault took over. In a span of barely six minutes, Teterault put together four unanswered goals, giving the Lady Dutch the lead for good.

Best and Courtney Davis scored 15 seconds apart to increase Guilderland's margin to 6-2 at halftime. Fairport closed the gap to 6-4 early in the second half, but that only awakened Teterault,

Athletes shine at states

Saratoga Springs' Madalayne Smith repeated as the girls Division 1 (large school) and Federation 100-meter high hurdles champion at last weekend's New York State Track and Field Championships at Cicero-North Syracuse High School.

Smith won impressively in last Friday's Division 1 finals with a time of 13.88 seconds. Williamsville South's Kailyn Arcury was second in a time of 14.23 seconds. Smith then bettered her time in last Saturday's Federation final, winning with a time of 13.80 seconds over Arcury.

Smith added a fourth-place finish in the Division 1 long jump with a distance of 17 feet, 10.5 inches and ran with Melinda Boyce, Kelley Fredette and Hannah Reeves on Saratoga's 400-meter relay team, which finished 13th with a time of 50.10 seconds. Smith was sixth in the Federation long jump with a leap of 18 feet, 1.75 inches.

Another Saratoga runner, Keelin Hollowood, made a strong debut at the state meet. The eighth grader placed fifth both among large school runners and overall in the Federation 1,500-meter race with a time of 4:33.02.

Shenendehowa's 3,200-meter relay team picked up Division 1 and Federation titles with a time of 9:01.00. The team consisted of Danika Simonson, Alex Burtnick, Cara Janeczko and Lizzie Predmore. Saratoga's team of Hollowood, Brianne Bellon, Amanda Borroughs and Cassie Goutos was third with a time of 9:09.49.

Predmore and Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake's Samantha Roecker had top-six finishes in the Federation 3,000-meter race. Roecker was third in a time of 9:47.54, and Predmore placed fifth in a time of 9:49.58.

Meaghan Gregory concluded her stellar BH-BL career with a third-place finish in the 2,000-meter steeplechase. The senior finished with a time of 6:52.72. Suffern's Shelby Greany won the Federation title with a time of 6:36.90.

Shen's Michelle Quimby placed fourth in the Federation pole vault after clearing the bar at 11 feet, 6 inches. Quimby was also 13th in the Federation high jump after clearing 5 feet, 2 inches.

Shen's Kelsey Hanson was fifth among Division 1 athletes and ninth overall in the Federation pentathlon. Hanson finished with 2,977 points, with her best performance coming in the 100-meter hurdles (second place, 15.22 seconds).

On the boys' side, Shen's Evan Palmer grabbed a second-place finish in the Division 1 discus with a throw of 165 feet, 6 inches,

Glens Falls rallies past Albany

The Albany Dutchmen's bid to reach the .500 mark fell short, as Glens Falls rallied for four runs in the top of the 10th inning to defeat the Dutchmen 8-4 in Sunday's New York Collegiate Baseball League game at Bleecker Stadium.

Siena College's Gary Derhagopian had the big hit for first-place Glens Falls (7-3) with a three-run home run in the top of the 10th.

Anthony Giansanti, another Siena player, added an RBI single to seal the victory.

Albany tied the game at 4 with a pair of runs in the bottom of the seventh inning. Catcher Dylan Swift started the rally by driving in first baseman Sean Munley with a groundout, and left fielder Zach Jones hit a sacrifice fly to score shortstop Jordan Lurie, who pinch hit for Kevin McCall.

Munley had two of Albany's six hits, and center fielder Jarred Jimenez hit a home run. Giansanti led Glens Falls' 14-hit attack with three hits including a double.

It was the first game in three days for the Dutchmen (3-5), who had two contests rained out last weekend.

Albany's previous home game was a successful one, as the Dutchmen defeated Amsterdam

3-0 in a rain-shortened game last Thursday.

First baseman Ryan Mallory singled and scored on a fielder's choice for Albany's first run in the bottom of the fifth inning. Mallory and Swift both scored on an Amsterdam error in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Ben Klimesh pitched a complete-game four-hitter with four strikeouts for Albany.

and he was ninth in the Division 1 shot put with a toss of 52 feet, 1.5 inches.

Schalmont's Jennes Coleman took fifth place in the Division 2 (small school) shot put with a throw of 49 feet, 10.5 inches.

Colonie's Tyler Stewart had a third-place finish in the Division 1 800-meter race with a time of 1:54.86. He came back stronger in the Federation final with a time of 1:52.00, but he still wound up third.

Niskayuna's Connor Reilly finished fifth in the 100-meter dash finals with a time of 11.13 seconds, which earned him a berth in the Federation finals. The senior placed eighth in the Federation event with a time of 11.01 seconds.

Louis Serafini also had a top-six finish at states: The Niskayuna senior was fifth in the Federation 1,600-meter race with a time of 4:13.58.

Shaker's Prince Abban and Scotia-Glenville's Kyle Palombo both qualified for the Federation placed a respective fifth and sixth in the Division 1 triple jump. Abban had a distance of 46 feet, 1.75 inches, and Palombo had a leap of 45 feet, 11.25 inches.

Saratoga's Alex King finished fourth in the Federation long jump with a distance of 22 feet, 4 inches after placing sixth in the Division 1 long jump with a leap of 22 feet, 7.75 inches.

Bethlehem's Jake Platel took fifth place in the Federation pole vault by clearing the bar at 14 feet, 6 inches. Queensbury's Nick Gerardi was the overall champion after clearing 15 feet.

BH-BL's Otis Ubriaco finished sixth overall (fourth among Division 1 runners) in the Federation 3,200-meter race with a time of 9:10.64. Ubriaco also teamed up with Chris Fernandez, Scott Maughan and Kent Harlow on BH-BL's 3,200-meter relay team, which finished fifth in the Federation final with a time of 7:51.89.

Bethlehem's Sam Smith netted a sixth-place finish in the Federation pentathlon with 3,334 points. Smith's best individual event was the shot put, where he finished second with a throw of 13.51 meters.

as she scored two more goals, less than two minutes apart, to double the margin.

Erin Mossop's goal with less than 15 minutes left sparked the decisive run of five unanswered goals that made the margin 13-5 before Fairport made a futile late comeback. During that time, Teterault put in her seventh goal, and Kelly Comardo converted 13 seconds later.

All this led to Saturday's final, where a large contingent of red-clad Guilderland fans roared throughout the game, and kept their spirit despite the sad ending, shouting "We love you, Dutch" as the awards were handed out. Teterault, Daley and Best were named to the All-Tournament team.

That trio departs this season - Teterault to Harvard, Daley to Syracuse University and Best to Fairfield. They were part of a senior group that went 45-2 the last two seasons, just missing the state championship on both occasions.

"This was the best group of seniors," Chatnik said. "This (loss) is going to hurt for a while, but they have nothing to be ashamed of. They made the community proud."

Jim Morrell wants his customers to have a good night's sleep. But the way he treats his employees is a NIGHTMARE!

When Jim Morrell, the owner of the Albany Airport Holiday Inn Express in Latham, learned seven of his employees were launching a campaign to form a union with Workers United Local 471, you know what he did? He illegally fired three of them.

These folks love their jobs. Becky Wallis made sure the hotel guests were well fed. As an Assistant Engineer, Craig Prusky, made sure everything was in top running order. Molly Anastasio made sure the guests' beds and rooms were ready for them.

These are real folks with real families and now they're out of a job with no health insurance because Jim Morrell refuses to let his employees organize for better wages and working conditions.

Jim Morrell is one of the wealthiest people in our area—he owns Albany Broadcasting and six local car dealerships. Send Jim Morrell a message. Be fair to your workers and endorse the Fair Election Pledge so that your employees can make their own decision about the union—a decision based on free choice, not fear.
