Two dozen residents spoke recently at a public hearing on Kendall Square, a proposed mixed-use development in the Glenmont area seen in artist's renderings here and below. Many neighbors said the apartments and commercial space would disrupt traffic patterns in the area.

A public hearing on a proposed hamlet-style apartment building project in the Glenmont area saw a strong turnout of residents who would neighbor the development, with the vast majority expressing their disapproval of the plans.

Kendall Square would be built at the corner of Feura Bush Road and Elmsmere Avenue. The proposal calls for a total of 110 housing units, mostly apartments, to be divided into three- and eight-

Eliminated programs save G'land $73,000, but booster clubs eye private funding sources

The booster clubs of Guilderland High School will be working hand-in-hand with the Guilderland Chamber of Commerce to try to save a number of sports programs that have been eliminated in the 2010-11 budget.

After hearing public outcry about the elimination of freshman and repeat sports at the Tuesday, April 13, school board meeting, the district said it would entertain the idea of continuing the sports programs if they are funded by private sources. The elimination of the programs saved the district $73,000, and affects 220 students.

At the Tuesday, May 11, school board meeting, board member Emilio Genzano said he was in talks with the various booster clubs, and Kathy Burbank, executive director of the Guilderland Chamber of Commerce, to come up with methods by which the different clubs

After months of uncertainty about the closing of Thacher Park, as of Monday, May 17, the park is closed off to the public due to lack of funding to keep it open.

In February, Governor David A. Paterson announced that 41 parks and 14 historic sites around the state, including Thacher, will be closed due to a 20 percent cut in the Office of Parks, Recreation and Historical Preservation's proposed 2010-11 budget.

Bethlehem police release annual report

The Bethlehem Police Department has compiled its annual report for the year 2009.

As in past years, the reports contains not only a breakdown of department structure and community programs, but budgetary and statistical information, as well.

In short, the department last year had an operating budget of over $7.2 million, or nearly 19 percent of the total town budget. Most of the department's overhead are personnel expenses.

As a result of the state's Department of Criminal Justice Incident Based Reporting system, the department has at hand detailed breakdowns of the types of arrests and services calls conducted during the year. Data for the past three years are available.

The data for 2009 show a slight uptick in offenses the police department responded to, up about 150 to 2,746.

Police made 142 arrests for driving under the influence, down 45 from 2008's number.

While instances of burglary and larceny were up, the number of arrests made for shoplifting were barely half of what they were the year prior.

There was a slight decrease in the number of calls for service in 2009, after the number of calls had been on the rise for a number of years.

New to the 2009 report, the department compiled a list of significant cases. Highlights include:

The February seizure of 2,148 "decks" of heroin following a traffic stop.

In July, an investigation later concluded a man found on fire outside his SUV in the Henry Hudson Park in Selkirk had lit himself on fire.

In August, police arrested Daniel Heeren, a volunteer firefighter, and charged him with multiple offenses after he allegedly arranged over the Internet a meeting with what he thought was a 14-year-old boy, who was actually a police officer.

The execution of a search warrant in September at a Feura Bush Road home resulted in the seizure of 12 pounds of marijuana. Further investigation resulted in the recovery of more marijuana, weapons and stolen property.

The annual report can be found on spotlightnews.com, is on file at the Town Clerk's office, and will be posted on the town's Web site.

DWI arrest yields BAC of over four times legal limit

Guilderland police arrested Dylan A. Jones, 44, of 7241 Bellevue Drive, Schenectady, on Thursday, April 29, and charged him with aggravated DWI.

Police said they observed Jones rear-end another car on Carman Road. Police said they observed a strong odor of alcohol emanating from Jones upon approaching the vehicle. Jones failed subsequent field sobriety tests and was arrested for DWI.

A breath test would later reveal a BAC of 0.33, over four times the legal limit of 0.08. Jones was arraigned at Guilderland Town Court on Thursday, May 13.

Other arrests

Guilderland police arrested Lewis Edmund Merritt, 54, of 461 Route 146, Guilderland Center, on Monday, May 10, and charged him with DWI with a prior conviction, a felony.

According to police, police pulled Merritt, over on Route 146 when they observed an expired inspection sticker on his windshield.

Police said when asked for his license, Merritt said he did not have one. Merritt failed subsequent field sobriety tests and was arrested for DWI.

Police said that Merritt had three previous DWI convictions dating back to 2006, which upgraded the charge to a felony.

Merritt was arraigned in Guilderland Town Court later that day.

Guilderland police arrested Aaron A. Anderson, 45, of 1031 Van Antwerp Road, on Saturday, May 8, and charged him with DWI.

According to police, Anderson was stopped in the parking lot of The Carman Wine and Liquor Store after the store was closed. Police said upon approaching the car they observed a strong odor of alcohol emanating from Anderson.

Police said Anderson admitted to consuming alcohol and upon failing subsequent field sobriety tests, Anderson was arrested for DWI. A chemical test would later reveal a BAC of 0.18, twice the legal limit of 0.08.

Anderson will be arraigned at Guilderland Town Court on Thursday, May 20.

Guilderland police arrested Kyle Brent Harris, 17, of 21 Putnam St, Albany, on Friday, May 7, and charged him with robbery in the 3rd degree, a felony, and petit larceny, assault with intent to cause physical injury, and possession of burglar tools, all misdemeanors.

According to police, Harris allegedly stole a number of clothing items from the Macy's store in Crossgates Mall. Police said Harris allegedly punched a loss prevention officer while making the attempt.

Police said Harris was identified by a loss prevention officer while at a bus stop near Crossgates and was taken into custody.

Harris was arraigned later that day and remanded to Albany County jail.

Guilderland police arrested Michelle Lisa Barbolla, 48, of 3545 Carman Road #37 on Saturday, May 8, and charged her under Leandra's Law.

According to police, Barbolla was pulled over after driving over the white fog line while traveling on Carman Road.

According to police, a strong odor of alcohol emanated from Barbolla. Police said was slow to respond to question and exited the vehicle after being asked to do so three times. Upon failing subsequent field sobriety tests, Barbolla was arrested for DWI. A chemical test would later reveal a BAC of 0.25, over three times the legal limit of 0.08. Barbolla was charged under Leandra's Law due to the fact she was traveling with her 12-year-old daughter in the car.

She was arraigned at Guilderland Town Court later that day.

Locals lend a hand through AmeriCorps

Program provides service opportunities to every age, type

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

With a job market that's still sparse and a stock market that's none too certain, more and more Americans of all walks of life are taking up volunteerism.

And here in the Capital District there are many examples of how people young and old are getting involved through AmeriCorps, the nationwide program that offers an ever-increasing range of options for those willing to lend a hand.

Kyla Philbrook, a Latham resident, took time off from studying at UAlbany to enroll in AmeriCorps's National Civilian Community Corps program. Last October, she undertook a month of training at a NCCC campus in California, and was then sent out to work with nonprofits around the country with a small team of other young people.

"It's an experience I don't think you can get anywhere else," she said. "I did it just because I had never been further away from Albany than Delaware. I knew there was a lot about this country that I didn't understand."

Over 540,000 Americans have participated in AmeriCorps since its founding in 1993. From relatively simple roots, the program has grown into a multifaceted effort that has opportunities for many levels of service, from local community building work to traveling groups that go where they're needed.

That brings a diverse spectrum of people to AmeriCorps. The base requirements are that you be over 17 and willing to devote 9-to-12 months to service.

Now, Philbrook is stationed in New Orleans, where she and 10 other volunteers are installing free compact fluorescent lights in homes as part of the Green Light New Orleans program. They've also been going into area schools to teach kids about the environment and living green, which translates well to Philbrook's goal to become a high school counselor.

"It's an experience I don't think you can get anywhere else."

— Kyla Philbrook, Latham resident and AmeriCorps participant

She'll also receive an educational stipend of $5,000 upon completion of the program to go towards her tuition and student loans.

Leading Philbrook's team of 18 to 24-year-olds is Bryant Gilchrist, who, entirely by coincidence, hails from Watervliet. When he graduated from SUNY Oswego with a degree in education, he decided to enroll in AmeriCorps's Vista program.

"Vista's aimed at fighting poverty, and it's all about building sustainable organizations and giving people the resources to help themselves," he said.

Gilchrist spent a year before going to NCCC working with parents in low-income Washington, D.C. school districts to advocate for better educational opportunities for their children.

But the program isn't only for the young. Delmar resident Terry Rooney is well into his first year participating in AmeriCorps, and in his ninth year of retirement from the state Department of Transportation. He's an avid volunteer, but AmeriCorps's modest stipend appealed to him.

"You don't make much with AmeriCorps, but it was a tough year last year for retirees," he said. "I thought this was an opportunity to volunteer and continue my work, and also get a small stipend." He'll also be able to transfer the educational stipend offered to younger volunteers to a family member once he completes his year.

Rooney has spent his AmeriCorps time with the Schenectady Inner City Ministry, which runs a food pantry serving 4,000 city residents. He uses his background to manage the group's books.

Rooney continues his work volunteering elsewhere in the city. He spends time as an English-as-a-second-language teacher, primarily tutoring Afghan refugees, and volunteers at the Grand Street Community Arts Center, also in Schenectady.

Having a spirit of volunteerism has helped Rooney make the most of his AmeriCorps experience, he said.

"You have to kind of know what you want and know your passion or interest, then you can use AmeriCorps to kind of spring off of," he said. "It's definitely a great thing for retirees, it's wonderful. Retirees know what they're doing."

Philbrook said her only regret is that she didn't enroll sooner, and that the program has helped her realize what she wants to do after she finishes her final two years of school.

"I wish I had done it straight out of high school," she said. "I didn't know what I wanted to do. ... I wasted time and college credits. ... If you're not sure and you don't have that direct path in mind, I think it's a great experience for anyone who's not sure."

Philbrook, Gilchrist and the rest of the NCCC team will soon be moving their sites to the St. Bernard Parish of New Orleans, which was largely destroyed by Hurricane Katrina, in order to supervise and help volunteers doing construction and rebuilding work.

Visit www.americorps.gov for more information on AmeriCorps and to volunteer.

New Scotland OKs property tax break for Cold War vets

Public hearings in the coming weeks to address a number of local laws on the table

By RYAN MUNKS
munks@spotlightnews.com

The Town of New Scotland passed its first Local Law of the year Wednesday, May 12, granting an additional property tax exemption for veterans of the Cold War.

In the weeks leading up to Wednesday, June 9, the town will also hold public hearings on all of the other Local Laws proposed this year, with the exception of the size-cap law.

The law, officially labeled Local Law 1 of 2010, would allow 15 percent of the real property value of a home, up to $36,000, to be exempt from the town's share of the property tax for veterans of the Armed Forces who served between 1955 and 1991. The exemption will not apply to the more burdensome school property tax.

The law passed without debate by the Town Board, however concerns were raised by Edie Abrams, a town resident, who wanted more information about the fiscal impact of the law.

"I think it's irresponsible to pass a revenue bill without knowing what the fiscal impact of that bill is," she said.

"[The town] anticipates probably seven people will apply for this," said Supervisor Tom Dolin.

He said that the maximum exemption a person can gain from the law would be $59 dollars per year. If seven property owners apply for the exemption and all seven claim the maximum exemption of $36,000 of property value, the town stands to lose $413 by passing the law.

The Town Board also considered Local Law E, which would allow the Town Board to determine by resolution the technician specification for pipes and fittings for water mains and apparatuses. Although there was no comment or debate on the law, the board tabled it at the request of Town Attorney Michael Mackey.

"Speaking with Keith [Menia, town engineer,] today, he felt we should have this apply to several other subdivisions of our Local Law," said Mackey.

The Town Board will consider a revised version of the law at its next Town Board meeting on Wednesday, May 26.

Also at that meeting, the Town Board will hold public hearings on Local Law C, a law providing new rules for home occupations, allowing the use of an accessory structure, and Local Law D, providing a code of conduct and term limits for members of the Planning Board.

The board will hold the last of its scheduled public hearings at its Wednesday, June 9, meeting, on Local Law A, a law establishing a code of ethics for town officials and employees, and establishing the structure of the town's ethics board.

The only proposed local law not being considered in the next few weeks is Local Law B, also known as the size-cap law. The size-cap law was defeated in March after the board failed to gain the supermajority needed to pass it, with council members Rich Reilly and Deborah Baron voting no.

At the time, Reilly said he voted no because of the potential for the law to negatively effect existing businesses, while Baron said she feels the law will only allow residential development in the town's commercial zone.

Since then, Councilman Daniel Mackay has taking the lead on the size-cap law.

"We are drafting language that seeks to appropriately address issues they [Baron and Reilly] have raised. My next step will be to discuss this material with them, and then present a revised size cap law to the board and public for discussion," said Mackay.

He said he hopes to have a revised version of the law ready by early June at the latest.

They just grow up so darn fast

By WILLIAM R. DEVOE
devoew@spotlightnews.com

My son turned about 30 over the weekend.

It started Saturday afternoon when my wife, Jess, and I were outside doing some gardening. Kevin, the 7-turned-30-year-old in question, and his 2-year-old brother were inside, posting videos on YouTube or something. I'm perfectly willing to let our kids run rampant through the house, exposed to all sorts of media and probably beating each other with curtain rods if it means I can have a little quiet time outdoors with my wife.

Jess had to ruin the day by deciding the weather was too good for the kids to be inside. When we went inside to get them, Kevin told us we needed to call Grandma back.

"It's not that important, but she'd like a call back," he said businesslike.

"Did you talk to Grandma or did she leave a message?" asked Jess.

"We talked for a little bit and then she talked to Nathan," he said.

This took us aback. It was, as far as I know, the first time he's answered the phone and had a conversation unsupervised. I'm just glad it wasn't some politician or salesman.

The next morning, I'm awoken to the sort of whisper-yelling people do when urgency and stealth are of equal importance.

"Bill! Bill!" my wife is shaking me awake. "Get up. I think someone's in the house!"

"What?" I'm still half asleep.

"I heard the door open," says my wife. "I think someone's breaking in."

"We don't have much, they'll be gone soon enough," and I turn back over.

Jess has more of a sense of urgency about the safety of her children than I do. She thinks of all the potential harm that could come from our house being burglarized with us still in it, and I think of the wonderful learning opportunity this would present to the kids — don't leave your valuables out in the open, don't talk to strangers even if they're in your room, and so forth.

"Dammit, Bill, get out there and make sure the kids are OK!"

So up I get, and I arm myself with the only things I can find in our room: wire hangers.

"Doesn't anyone in this house play baseball?" I ask.

"Get out there!"

I take the first corner like a ninja — an old, overweight ninja with wire hangers in his hands. I think back to the hand-to-hand combat training I got in the Army and am immediately disappointed.

I was a crewmember on a M1A1 battle tank and the training went something like this:

Drill Sergeant to my training unit: "Can all of you maggots throw a punch?"

Us: "Yes, Drill Sergeant!"

Drill Sergeant: "If you puked make it through boot camp you will be gunners on a 65-ton, $4 million battle tank that can engage a target up to two miles away. If you find yourself in a situation where you have to throw a punch, something has gone seriously wrong."

After that, we were dismissed.

Anyway, I hear Kevin's voice in the backyard and immediately think someone is abducting him. I ready my wire hangers and spring onto the deck with a mighty "Hiyaah!"

There I see Kevin and the dog playing fetch on the lawn.

"Hi dad," Kev says nonchalantly.

"What are you doing out here, Bubba?"

"The dog wanted to play, and I didn't want to wake you up. Don't worry, I wasn't going to go off the lawn."

"Well, you scared the daylights out of your mother. You should really tell us before you go outside, even if you have to wake us up."

"All right," says Kevin. Then, "What's with the hangers?"

Kevin's been getting too old for quite some time now, and it doesn't help that kids these days (really? Did I just use the phrase "kids these days?") have more electronic gizmos than Bill Gates.

iPhone, PSP, Dsi, iPod — you name it, Kevin wants it.

"I need a phone," he tells me the other day in Target. We were there because I happen to need a new cell phone because the one I use now is so old it has a rotary dial on it.

"Kevin, you're 7 years old; you don't need a phone."

"Robert has a phone and he's 7," Kevin says, invoking the "all the other kids do it" line of reasoning.

"First off, I'm not Robert's dad," I say. "And secondly, who does Robert call? Seriously, who could Robert possibly be calling at his age?"

He could call me, but I don't have a phone," says Kevin. "Robert's got a 'Friends and Family' plan."

"You're kidding me, right? I don't have a 'Friends and Family' plan and you don't need one, either." I point to Jess, who is pushing Nathan in the shopping cart. "Kevin, your friends and family are right here, OK? A third of your 'Friends and Family' plan is riding in the cart, stuffing goldfish in his mouth and cannot use the potty, let alone a cell phone."

"Oh, Nathan's not in my Fave 5," says Kevin.

"Kev, this is all moving a little too fast for me," I say. "Why don't your mother and I talk about this for a while, all right?"

"OK, but please hurry," he says. "I'm going to need that phone when I start to drive."

Guilderland panel revises zoning law

Crossgates falls within 'conforming uses' under new wording

By RYAN MUNKS
munksr@spotlightnews.com

After a number of issues were raised by the Town Board, Guilderland's Zoning Review Committee met at a working session on Friday, May 14, to consider revising amendments to the town's zoning law. Among the changes made were making Crossgates a conforming use, adding a definition of uses that will not need a permit for a minor home occupation, and clarifying what may be considered mixed-use development.

The committee has been working to update the town's zoning laws since August. The proposal streamlines the process for home occupations, and allows for mixed-use developments to contain a number of residential uses in addition to a business.

The law was considered at a public hearing at the Tuesday, May 4, Town Board meeting and drew a number of criticisms from councilmen Mark Grimm and Warren Redlich, as well as Supervisor Ken Runion.

Grimm and Redlich said the law should include a list of conditions in which a person working from home would not need a permit. Redlich and Runion said making Crossgates a non-conforming use by limiting regional shopping centers to 1 million square feet (with Crossgates being 1.6 million square feet) would have a negative impact on the town. Redlich said doing so would invite legal action against the town, while Runion said making it a non-conforming use would devalue the mall and have an impact on its tax assessment from which the town benefits.

The Zoning Review Committee changed the draft to allow Crossgates, a super-regional shopping center, to be in conformity with town law up to 2 million square feet, which would allow the shopping center to expand an additional 400,000 square feet.

"I think we should allow Crossgates to expand," said Donald Cropsey, chief building and zoning inspector.

Kathy Burbank, member of the committee and executive director of the Chamber of Commerce, said "We are looking to make this stick for 20 years. What is Crossgates going to be in 20 years?"

Chuck Klaer, a former member of the Zoning Board, questioned the committee's decision, saying that the town's comprehensive plan does not favor Crossgates expanding to 2 million square feet, and that the mall does not have enough parking to handle an additional expansion.

"The only thing [the comprehensive plan] doesn't favor is another super large retail center," said Stephen Feeney, chairman of the Planning Board.

Feeney said there could be additions to Crossgates that complement the services already offered without having a negative effect on the surrounding community.

Peter Barber, chairman of the zoning board, said he was more in favor of a 200,000-square-foot expansion, which could accommodate a space as large as Macy's.

Ken Brownell, chairman of the committee, said that ultimately, the decision on how much Crossgates would be allowed to expand is up to the Town Board.

The committee also considered Runion's concern that allowing more residential uses in mixed-use development would lead to overdevelopment along Western Avenue. In the end, the committee left the proposed law relatively unchanged, with the exception of adding a line that says "the residential use is intended to be secondary to the non-residential use."

Feeney, who proposed the change, said including the sentence would give direction to the Zoning Board in determining what qualifies as a mixed-use building.

"I think this alleviates Runion's concerns too," said town planner Jan Weston.

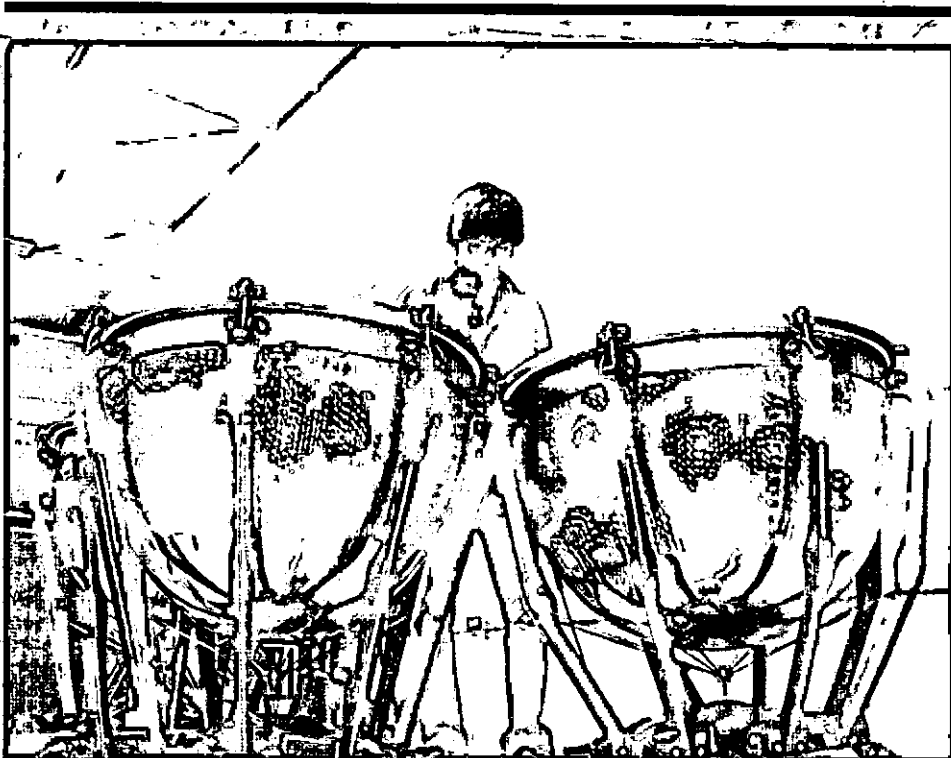

Feeney cited development in the area, specifically on the SUNY Albany campus, and the residential opportunities that come along with the development.

"I think we need to take advantage of residential opportunities along Western Avenue," he said.

He also said given the limitations imposed in the law, such as limit four units per building in the local business district, and two units per building in the business non-retail professional district, a second wave of development is unlikely.

Finally the committee amended the proposed law to define conditions under which a person working from home would not need a permit. The law now says "a certification or fee is not required if the minor home occupation has no advertisement, Internet presence, phone listing or other public information, associated with the minor home occupation, and complies with conditions for minor home occupations."

The local law will likely be considered by the Town Board at its second meeting in June.

Drum donation

The Bethlehem Music Association has donated four new timpani drums to the district. BMA President Karen Latter presented a check for $9,570 for the drums to the district at the April 21 Board of Education meeting. BCHS junior percussionist Eric Segerstrom is shown with the drums.

Matters of Opinion in The Spotlight

Can Rail Trail dodge Thatcher's fate?

It's a bad week for parks and trail lovers in the Capital District.

After the John Boyd Thatcher State Park was padlocked on Monday, May 17, The Spotlight has learned the 20-year-old plan to construct an Albany Rail Trail is being held up by a federal grant application.

From Charles Wiff's page one story on the matter, the county has secured $2.4 million in funding under the Federal Transportation Improvement Plan, but that will not cover the cost of completing the 9-mile trail. To do that, as well as repair eight pedestrian bridges along the trail, the county has applied for $5 million from the Department of Energy's Energy Efficiency and Conservation Block Grant Program, which would almost cover the remainder of the estimated $7.8 million cost of the project. Officials hope to know the results within the month.

If you go to the county's Rail Trail Web site, www.albany-county.com/railtrail, you'll see the county planned on being done with the planning and design phase of the project by now and scheduled construction to be finished by the fall of 2010.

We know that's not the case.

But we at The Spotlight think the Rail Trail may have a brighter future than Thatcher Park, and we have state finance law to thank for it.

There is a misconception that our state constitution requires a balanced budget — it does not. Our state constitution (a copy of which can be found at www.dos.state.ny.us/info/constitution.htm) mandates the governor submit a balanced budget to the state legislature, but makes no requirement for the legislature to adopt a balanced budget.

That provision is made by state finance law, and it is that provision that gives the Rail Trail better odds at getting funding than Thatcher Park.

Here's why: Unlike New York state, the federal government has no provision for a balanced budget and can spend like a drunken sailor. One of the ways it does this is by using various federal departments, like the Department of Energy, to act as sugar daddies for projects like the Albany County Rail Trail.

The DOE grant program is intended to assist municipalities to develop, promote, implement and manage energy efficiency and conservation projects and programs designed to reduce fossil fuel emissions; reduce the total energy use of the eligible entities; improve energy efficiency in the transportation, building, and other appropriate sectors; and create and retain jobs.

Maybe the Rail Trail does all that and maybe it doesn't, but one thing's for sure — Albany County, the seat of the state capital and home of numerous politicians that preside over a state that can't afford to keep its own parks open, knew it had to look to the federal government for the Rail Trail funding.

Maybe they can do the same for Thatcher.

The writer is the senior regional director of communications for the American Heart Association and American Stroke Association.

Reaching for the salt shaker can just be a habit. And every recipe calls for a pinch of salt. But they all add up, and when you take into account the salt that goes into prepared food, we're eating an awful lot of unnecessary salt.

Why cut down on salt? Mostly, to avoid or reduce high blood pressure. To that end, the American Heart Association and the National Salt Reduction Initiative, a national collaboration led by the City of New York, share a common goal — to gradually lower the amount of sodium (salt) in the American diet.

"Lowering sodium is essential to reversing the trend of more Americans developing high blood pressure — a major risk factor for heart disease and stroke," said Nancy Brown, the chief executive officer of the American Heart Association.

"Adjusting our taste preferences, food manufacturing and marketing methods isn't easy — but efforts such as National Salt Reduction Initiative are steps in the right direction. These efforts are to be commended as an important first-step toward significant sodium reduction in the food supply," Brown said.

High blood pressure is a major risk factor for heart disease and stroke. The vast majority of Americans are consuming sodium at levels that are too high to be considered safe.

The American Heart Association recommends that all Americans consume less than 1,500 mg/day of sodium — a nearly impossible task for most people in a national food environment where over 75 percent of the

A milligram count should follow the sodium or sodium content description. You can also take a look at the % DV, or percent of the recommended daily intake. If it's more than 20 percent, pass the product by: too much sodium! If the sodium content is 5 to 20 percent, use with caution and monitor the portion size. If a food has 0 to 5 percent sodium, it's a low-sodium food.

How does a family cut down on salt? Experts say that by gradually reducing salt content, our taste buds will adjust.

Here are some other tips:

1. Go for flavor — have some fun with herbs, spices, garlic and lemon juice.

2. Add more natural foods with low levels of sodium into your diet. Fruits, vegetables whole grains and beans are low in sodium and high in fiber.

3. Snack wisely. Go for dried fruit, unsalted crackers or nuts instead of salty snack like chips, nuts and salty cheeses.

4. Avoid processed food. Replace processed cheeses and meats with fresh chicken, lamb or turkey and cheeses like mozzarella, cheddar, cream cheese and cottage cheese.

5. Choose low-sodium products. Look for low-salt stock cubes, low-sodium or reduced-sodium condiments.

6. Breakfast cereals. Check the sodium content; go for low-sodium products.

7. Eating out. Ask the chef to hold the extra salt, and have the sauces on the side.

8. Rinse! Run canned tuna, salmon, feta cheese and capers under water before eating and you'll remove some of the excess salt.

9. Take the salt shaker off the table. In time, your taste buds will adjust to your new, healthier lifestyle.

10. Eat potassium-rich foods. Fruits and vegetables are high in potassium, which will help reduce the negative effects of sodium.

Weekly poll

This week's question is:

Does your family eat healthy?

Log on to www.spotlightnews.com to cast your vote and see results.

Last week's poll results:

Question: "What is the best way to save small towns?"

- Linkage. Communities have to be walkable to retain that small-town feel.: 34%
- Small-business development. Mom-and-pop stores are the backbone of small towns.: 41%
- No big-box or industrial development. Small towns are built around people, not retail mega-marts or smoke-belching factories.: 10%
- Raise taxes. That's the only way we'll be able to promote small business and build sidewalks without an industrial or big retail tax base.: 13%

sodium consumed by Americans comes from processed foods.

Currently, one in three Americans has high blood pressure, and an estimated 99 percent of middle-aged adults will develop it in their lifetime.

The American Heart Association has set a goal for 2020 to improve the cardiovascular health of all Americans by 20 percent while reducing deaths from cardiovascular diseases and stroke by 20 percent. Part of that goal is helping people reduce the amount of sodium they eat to less than 1,500 mg/day.

"We must — and we can — work together as a country to help each and every American eat a heart healthy, delicious diet — while consuming no more than 1,500 mg/day of sodium," Brown said.

Eating too much salt also puts people at risk for osteoporosis and cancer. The damage to the heart from high blood pressure can be great. When the heart has to work hard to push blood through the arteries, it creates small tears in the artery walls. As the body mends these with scar tissue, they can trap plaque, which can lead to heart attacks.

To check sodium content, read the labels on foods you buy.

Your Opinion in The Spotlight

Bethlehem burial sights easy enough to check out

Editor, The Spotlight:

This is in reply to Kim Vining's letter to the editor on May 5 about a particular cemetery near the Dowerskill creek that might contain the grave of a Revolutionary War veteran (Town should dig up info on Dowerskill cemetery).

As a member of the Tawasentha Chapter, National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), I would like to state that over a long period of years, all of the 126 graves of these soldiers that are located in the towns of Bethlehem, Gunderland and New Scotland are published in a booklet by Tawasentha Chapter in October 1940. There are many other cemetery publications that address this also and these are all available at your public library.

Tawasentha Chapter has recently had a project of marking most of the graves located in the town of Bethlehem. A few property owners did not allow markers on their property. The heavy iron signs are similar to the New York state historical markers and can be seen along various roadways in the town.

Tawasentha Chapter recently celebrated its 100th birthday, making it one of the town's longest operating organizations. We have given a century of service with historical, patriotic and educational contributions.

Canceling Bike Expo a tough call, but message of safety never stops

Editor, The Spotlight:

Making the decision to cancel the Bike Expo on Saturday, May 8, was a great disappointment.

However, the message of bicycle safety should still not be lost. With the prime bicycle riding season just upon us, the importance of riding your bicycle safely and understanding the rules of the road is even more paramount.

When riding your bicycle please remember to:

- Always wear a Helmet
- Be Visible – Wear bright reflective clothing
- Ride Right / Obey the rules of the road
- Inspect your bike each season

Additional bicycle riding safety information can be accessed by visiting the PaTHs 4 Bethlehem Advisory Committee page on the Town of Bethlehem Web site, www.townofbethlehem.org.

Also, the newly created Capital Coexist, a project of the Capital District Transportation Committee (CDTC), provides some great resources and information, <http://www.capitalcoexist.org/education-safety/>.

It is anticipated that the Capital Coexist website will become the clearinghouse for bicycle education material in the Capital Region; a one-stop location for bicycle educational material, safety tips, current bicycle projects and events.

I extend a thank you to the following businesses for their donations and time: Steiner's Sports, Mad Dog Bikes, Walmart, Hannaford, Slingerlands Price Chopper, Stewarts Shops and The Spotlight Newspaper.

Lastly, please mark your calendars for the rescheduled Bike Expo Event – Saturday, Sept. 25 (rain date, Sept. 26).

We still have six brand new bicycles to give away to kids who participate in the bicycle rodeo portion of the event!

Detailed information about the Bike Expo will be in the Fall Park Playbook which will be mailed out to all residents in August.

Safe travels.

Friendship Singers thank donors

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Friendship Singers say "thank you" to everyone who came to our spring concert and donated to a program of the Capital District Community Gardens.

It was a fun evening of song and dance, and our audience of about 300 people showed their appreciation by giving us a standing ovation.

Better yet, they donated $900 to keep the Veggie Mobile running—which is how fresh fruits and vegetables get delivered to residents of inner city neighborhoods.

We've been entertaining area groups for almost 30 years now, and look forward to continuing this tradition. New members are always welcome.

New Guilderland board to address vacant seat

Cuneo to step down after serving one term

By RYAN MUNKS
munksr@spotlightnews.com

As one of its first responsibilities, the Guilderland Board of Education elected Tuesday, May 18, may decide the process to be used to replace a member stepping down at the end of the month.

School board member Julie Cuneo will leave the board June 30, when her family moves to Saratoga. Cuneo received the highest number — 2,266 — of votes in the 2009 election.

"I am, of course, very sad to be leaving the Guilderland community and to have to leave the school board," said Cuneo. "This role has been very rewarding, and I have learned a tremendous amount."

She said her departure was for "family reasons," specifically to allow her husband to spend more time with their kids.

When she steps down June 30, Cuneo will have completed the first of a three-year term that began on July 1 of last year. The school board is now tasked with determining the process that will be used to fill her seat.

"My understanding is we could run a special election, pick someone or leave [the seat] vacant until next year," said Richard Weisz, president of the board.

Last year, after the death of longtime board member John Dornbush, the board chose to appoint Emilio Genzano to replace Dornbush. Cuneo said she suspects that the board will follow a similar method to replace her.

Weisz said that the district is consulting with its attorney to decide whether dealing with the seat is the responsibility of the current board, or the board that will take the reins in July.

Superintendent John McGuire said that due to the timing of Cuneo's announcement, the seat will not be able to be filled by the candidates running in the upcoming elections. He also said the district has decided the responsibility to replace Cuneo will rest with the board that will be put in place on July 1.

"[The current board] may discuss it, but it will be up to the new board," said McGuire.

He also said that of the three options highlighted by Weisz, he would suggest the district follow the same process they used to replace Dornbush.

"I will recommend that... It was a good process," he said.

Bethlehem's first forum hailed as a success

Meeting meant to foster communication between town, businesses

By CHARLES WIFF
wiff@spotlightnews.com

More than 30 business owners, town officials and members of the public gathered early on Friday, May 14, at Bethlehem Town Hall with coffee in hand for what organizers hope will be the first of many "Focus on Business Forums."

A joint venture between the town and Chamber of Commerce, the public meetings were envisioned to serve as a means to foster communication between businesses and town government — two elements of the town that are unlikely to survive without each other.

Chamber President Marty DeLaney said the meeting was a success, and a good starting point for an ongoing dialogue with members of the Town Board, all of whom were in attendance.

"They were listening and interested in what everybody had to say," she said. "The Chamber board isn't going to let it go... They obviously want to hear from us."

Supervisor Sam Messina expressed similar thoughts following the roughly 90-minute meeting. It's now up to participants to follow through on what was discussed, he said.

"We had to have this dialogue start between the Chamber and Town Board," he said.

The meeting featured several presentations before a question and comment period. Town Director of Economic Development and Planning Michael Morelli brought attendees up to date on the town's Delaware Avenue Hamlet Enhancement Study, which is roughly slated for a fall completion.

ABOVE: Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce President Marty DeLaney kicks off the first joint town-Chamber "Focus on Business Forum." More than 30 business owners, town officials and members of the public came out to hear presentations and share their thoughts on business-town interaction. LEFT: NYSERDA's Tom Barone briefly outlined some of the grant opportunities available to small businesses.

Charles Wiff/Spotlight

the town should work to attract more businesses, it should also ensure retail is diversified so services are not duplicated.

"If we keep bringing in retail businesses, the pie keeps getting smaller and smaller," said James

The main challenge to the group tasked with creating the report has been balancing the artery's need to effectively move traffic with the desire to create a walkable, pedestrian-friendly "main street" atmosphere.

Having concrete guidelines in place for how businesses should look and be positioned is better than a nebulous idea, Morelli said.

"What they hate to do is come in and not have direction," he said.

Also presenting was Tom Barone of the New York State

Energy Research and Development Authority. He briefly outlined some of the grant opportunities available to small businesses.

William Herbert, of BBL Development Group, gave the meeting an update on development in the Vista Technology Park, and faced some pointed questions in regard to when shovels will actually be in the ground there.

He said as the economy warms back up, the tenants will be willing to commit money to developing the site, possibly later this year.

"It's not out call, it's our tenants' call," he said.

While it's hoped large businesses will play an increasing role in town through Vista, most Chamber members consist of smaller operations with unique needs. Several business owners said while Giaccone, the owner of My Place restaurant and bar.

And while there was general agreement more could be done to show Bethlehem is business friendly, it was less clear how that would be accomplished, especially as the town does not have the funds to offer economic incentives.

"We can have a vision and try and implement it, but there's a cost to everything," said Councilman Kyle Kotary.

DeLaney mentioned an ongoing project with Jimapco to transfer the Chamber's business directory into a map format, which would help interested developers understand where businesses might work.

Appearance notwithstanding, business owners who spoke said the town has been increasingly open to assisting businesses.

"We have a road map, we have the directions and we have a staff that's responsive," said realtor Jessica Richer. At the same time, there are only a few decent commercial centers in town for her business clients, she said.

"I have a hard time finding them locations. There isn't a lot here," said Richer.

Town and Chamber officials said they'd like to see another forum with focus on other areas of town. Quarterly meetings had previously been discussed.

Town wants drivers to slow down on Krumkill

Heavy fill causes road to shift near Normanskill; supervisor calls it a 'money pit'

By RYAN MUNKS
munksr@spotlightnews.com

The Town of New Scotland is imposing an advisory 10 mph speed limit on Krumkill Road where it passes over Normanskill.

According to Supervisor Tom Dolin, the fill under the road has been shifting for more than a decade at about 1-2 inches per year, creating the conditions for a potentially catastrophic failure of the road.

"In 1998 we spent about $300,000 trying to repair it. That lasted a while, but in the last few years it's starting to deteriorate," he said.

At the root of the problem, according to Dolin, is the clay fill that measures 40 feet deep underneath the road. The clay becomes very heavy when it takes on water, which causes it to shift and causes the road to shift with it.

The town's highway department has been dealing with the road on a yearly basis. This year, however, attempts to realign the road have failed.

"In the past [Highway Superintendent Darrell] Duncan has been trying to patch and realign the road where it separated. This year the patch didn't hold... Our attempts to patch it aren't working anymore," he said.

On Wednesday, May 12, the town authorized $14,300 in addition to the original $5,000 to Stantec Engineers to continue monitoring the condition of the road.

"This whole thing has become a money pit," Dolin said at the meeting.

Since 2007, the town has spent $89,000 on engineering studies related to the road sliding.

"This has been basically engineering and consulting. This doesn't include what we spent on repairs," Dolin said.

At the board meeting, town engineer Mark Dempf informed the town that removing the road's surface and replacing the clay fill underneath with a lighter weight fill would cost a minimum of $3 million dollars.

Considering the immediate needs of the town, Dolin directed Dempf to explore the cost and effectiveness of alternative solutions, including driving piles down 40 feet to help stabilize the road, and diverting the road away from the heavy clay fill, however, Dempf said no study has been done to determine the effectiveness or cost of either project. He said plans have moved forward with replacing the fill because it was the project that would be most enticing for the state and county.

"What we did was we took the path of least resistance," said Dempf.

Dolin said that ultimately the Town Board will have to decide how much it can absorb in costs to repair the road.

"My anticipation is if it got to the $100,000 range, we couldn't do it without assistance," he said.

According to Dolin, the town has approached Congressman Paul Tonko, D-Amsterdam, and the Capital District Transportation Committee, for funding to replace the road. The CDTC is the local agency responsible for doling of federal transportation funding.

Chris O'Neill, a senior transportation planner at CDTC, said there are 65 project candidates worth a total of $595 million vying for an anticipated $57 million worth of transportation funding.

"There is a lot of competition there," said O'Neill.

He also said that the $57 million is merely anticipated funding, and "it's making the assumption that federal transportation will have a significant increase."

O'Neill said the committee is considering the 65 projects, although funding is not guaranteed because of the lengthy process it takes from selecting, planning, and completing the project. He also said it will take five to seven years for projects that receive funding to get under way.

Until a solution is presented, the town imposed the advisory speed limit of 10 mph on the section of the roadway, and asked the state to make the limit enforceable.

"We are advising a speed limit with the anticipation of closing it," said Dolin.

He said that the situation is being continuously monitored by the town's highway department and the department could issue an emergency closure of the road at any time if Duncan deems it necessary.

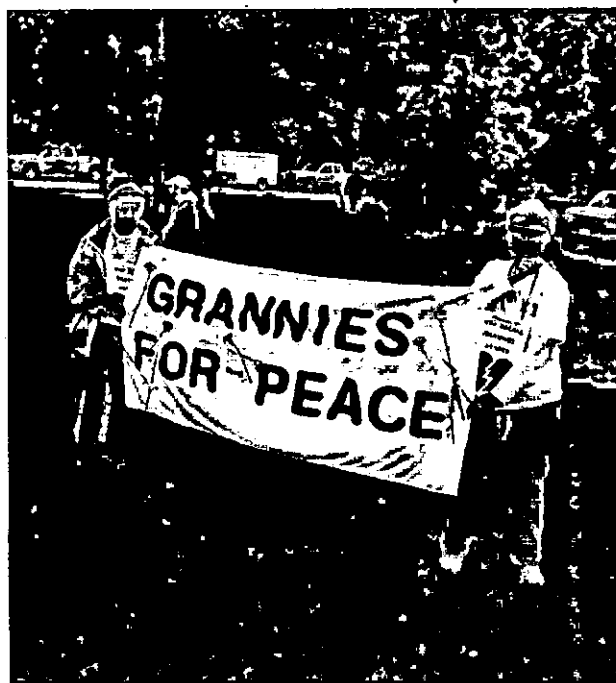

Dolin described the roadway as a major artery of the town, and said if it is closure the 2,800 cars that travel the road per day will have to find an alternative route.

McLaughlin announces candidacy for 108th

Banker will stage a second run on Tim Gordon's seat.

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

Steve McLaughlin's hoping the second time's the charm.

After failing in 2008 to unseat Tim Gordon, I-Bethlehem, from his position in the state Assembly, the Republican announced on Tuesday, May 11, he would again seek to represent the 108th district.

In a later interview, the business banking officer said he has all but secured the blessing of GOP leadership in the district and intends to build upon his previous effort, taking advantage of what he sees is a developing voter backlash.

"At the end of the day we were outspent nearly 10-to-1, and we still did second best of any Republican in the state," he said of the last election. "The winds have shifted around completely. You can see the anger in the public right now."

Saying state government has suffered a "complete meltdown" in the past two years, McLaughlin said he's confident voters will identify two-term term incumbent Gordon as part of the problem.

"The only thing the guy knows how to do is how to go down to Albany and spend our money," he said. "Take a look at his record, and if you're happy with the direction of the state, Tim's your guy."

Gordon, on the other hand, said his record is exactly why he will secure another victory over McLaughlin.

"I certainly am proud of what I have been able to accomplish here during what has been a difficult time in the state economy and national economy," he said. "I think I have kept my promises."

Gordon also defended himself against McLaughlin's assertion he is in lockstep with Sheldon Silver, D-Manhattan, and other Assembly Democrats.

"It's a tired out argument, seeking to connect me with my downstate colleagues for no other purpose but to try to create division between fellow New Yorkers," he said. "I'm more interested in bringing people together than creating division."

A former commercial aviator, McLaughlin now works for Citizens Bank. He and his wife Maggie, who works as a teacher, reside in Melrose with their two sons.

McLaughlin said if he had to vote on the recent controversial extender bill that included furloughs to state workers, he would likely have cast a "no" vote, like Gordon did. The two expressed similar thoughts about the latest crisis in state finances, saying government payroll should be culled from the top down.

"The state work force needs to shrink. It is far, far too large," McLaughlin said. "However, I do not want to see people making $30,000, $40,000, $50,000 a year, thrown out on the street."

"I had several major concerns with the furloughs," said Gordon. "That it essentially targeted some workers who were making $27,000 or $30,000 a year, while the state continues to use a number of rather high priced consultants who were not being furloughed."

As of the most recent count, voter registration in the 108th was roughly split between Democrats and Republicans, at just over 25,000 voters each. About as many have no affiliation, and nearly 10,000 others are registered in a third party.

Group builds kitchen garden at school

Parents, students, teachers pitch in at Hamagrael Elementary

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

More than 100 parents, teachers and students convened at Hamagrael Elementary School Saturday, May 15, to build an organic "kitchen garden" on the school's grounds.

Organized by the school's Healthy Kids Committee, the project was largely made possible through a $500 state grant from the New York Agriculture in the Classroom's "Kids Growing Food" program out of Cornell University. Best Cleaners and the Hamagrael PTO also donated money to the cause.

The six raised vegetable beds were planted with lettuce tomatoes, spinach and peas, to name a few foods, which will eventually be used for snacks.

"We're trying to get kids back in touch with where food comes from, and eating healthy," said Kathy Witherspoon, of the Health Kids Committee. "Long term, we're hoping to work with the kitchen staff on incorporating some of the vegetables into the schools lunch program."

The garden will also be incorporated into the 4th grade's ecosystem unit for a hands on educational experience.

Several other schools in the Bethlehem Central district, including Elsmere Elementary, and the middle school, also have functioning gardens.

While students will maintain that garden during the school year, the committee is seeking families to adopt the garden over the summer. Contact Witherspoon at klspon@hotmail.com, or Karen Shaw at kshaw2@nycap.rr.com if interested.

Suspect defuses so-called 'joke'

Man arrested at Colonie flower wholesaler says prank had nothing to do with explosives

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Sean Michael McMahon, who was arrested on a felony charges for allegedly placing a false bomb on Monday, May 3, said he wanted to give his side of the story to clear his reputation.

After the story broke, McMahon told The Spotlight on Wednesday, May 5, he was not trying to make a joke about explosive devices, and the hoax leading to his arrest was intended to trick his boss into finding the device.

"Now my name's out there with the word 'bomb' attached to it," he said.

Colonie police arrested McMahon, 25, for allegedly taping a "flower thermo device," which is used to regulate temperatures while transporting flowers, under a table at 5 Avis Drive, Seagroatt Riccardi Ltd., a wholesale flower dealer. The thermometers make a noise when the temperature changes in a way that is detrimental to the flowers, and the device was found beeping under the table in one of the break rooms.

McMahon told police the incident was a joke meant to "loosen the stress of the Mother's Day rush." Elaborating on that statement Wednesday, McMahon said he wanted "nothing to be portrayed as a bomb," and although the thermometers blink and flash, he assumed everyone who works on the loading dock would know exactly what the device was when it was found.

He said he never expected the thermometers to be confused for a bomb, but a secretary who does not work with the thermometers on a regular basis was the one who found the device first.

He said the beeping device was only about 10 to 12 feet from his boss' desk, and he was hoping it would be relatively easy to find.

"It was placed as close to my boss' desk as possible," he said.

Sean Michael McMahon

"[I] wanted nothing to be portrayed as a bomb."

McMahon said he wanted to be clear he was unaware of an incident in Times Square on Saturday, May 1, involving an un-detonated car bomb, since he was working all weekend.

According to information from Senior Town Justice Peter Crummey's office, McMahon appeared in court Wednesday, May 5, and is scheduled for another court date on Wednesday, May 19.

McMahon cannot be tried for a felony in the Town of Colonie, with all felonies tried at the county level, and as of press time the Albany County Court has not picked up the case.

Albany County District Attorney Spokeswoman Heather Orth said county prosecutors will review the case and determine if it should be prosecuted as a felony, or kicked back to town court as a misdemeanor.

McMahon also has the option of making a plea agreement, rather than going before a grand jury.

"I have counsel if the incident goes any further," he said.

McMahon also said there are witnesses at the loading dock who could attest to the fact he was not trying to portray the device as an explosive, but simply hide it as part of an effort to ease the stress of Mother's Day, a particularly busy time for the flower industry.

Guilderland schools set to borrow

Governor's decision to withhold state aid puts district in unusual position

By RYAN MUNKS
munksr@spotlightnews.com

Guilderland's Board of Education on Tuesday, May 11, authorized the school district to issue revenue anticipation notes to cover the funding void left by Gov. David Paterson's decision to withhold state aid.

"Right now he is withholding $2.7 million from March. The potential exists to withhold another $2.35 million from June," said Neil Sanders, assistant superintendent for business for the district. "If that occurs, we will need to borrow money."

Board of Education President Richard Weisz said that in his 10 years on the board, the district has never had to take such an action during the school year to remain solvent.

"Of the amount we have been promised, $5 million is now in doubt, and but for our reserves, we would have had to go out and borrow to make payroll already," he said.

According to Weisz, the $5 million the district expects to receive accounts for about 20 percent of state aid funding, and

"If it's not there and we don't get further state aid, then our budget will be out of whack."

Board of Education
President Richard Weisz

about 5 percent of the entire budget.

Superintendent John McGuire said that issuing the notes was "new territory" for him as well. He cited a study that said 39 percent of school districts in New York have had to go out and borrow money already because of the decision by the governor to withhold aid.

Board member Denise Eisele asked what would happen if the governor decided to permanently withhold funds from the district, something Weisz said is possible.

The district has about $5 million in its reserves and fund balance; about $3 million has been slated in the 2010-11 school year budget to offset the tax impact of the budget. If the state funds are permanently withheld, the reserves would be depleted, and the 2010-11 budget would have a shortfall.

"If it's not there and we don't get further state aid, then our budget will be out of whack," said Weisz.

According to Sanders, the district will take a loss on the state money through borrowing, but with interest rates of 1 to 1.5 percent, the loss will be minor.

"That's the only silver lining in this - interest rates are low," he said.

After the meeting, Sanders said that the district will have to borrow money even if the governor decides to withhold one payment and release the other.

"We really need to have that revenue to complete the school year," he said.

The school board also authorized the district to borrow up to $5 million to cover costs in the summer time between the beginning of the school's 2010-11 school year on July 1 and the time revenues begin to come in during September and October. According to Sanders, this type of borrowing is a more routine type of borrowing.

"There are instances where we have bills and payrolls during the summer, and we really don't have any revenue coming in," said Sanders. He said he expects the district to run at a deficit of $5 million before revenues begin to come in during the fall.

Grant encourages college study

Ten Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk high school students with college aspirations enjoyed a special visit to Albany's College of Saint Rose campus on April 29, accompanied by guidance counselor Peter Dwyer and three representatives from Stars Interger Inc., the Glenmont nonprofit agency that provides intergenerational programming for the school district and local communities.

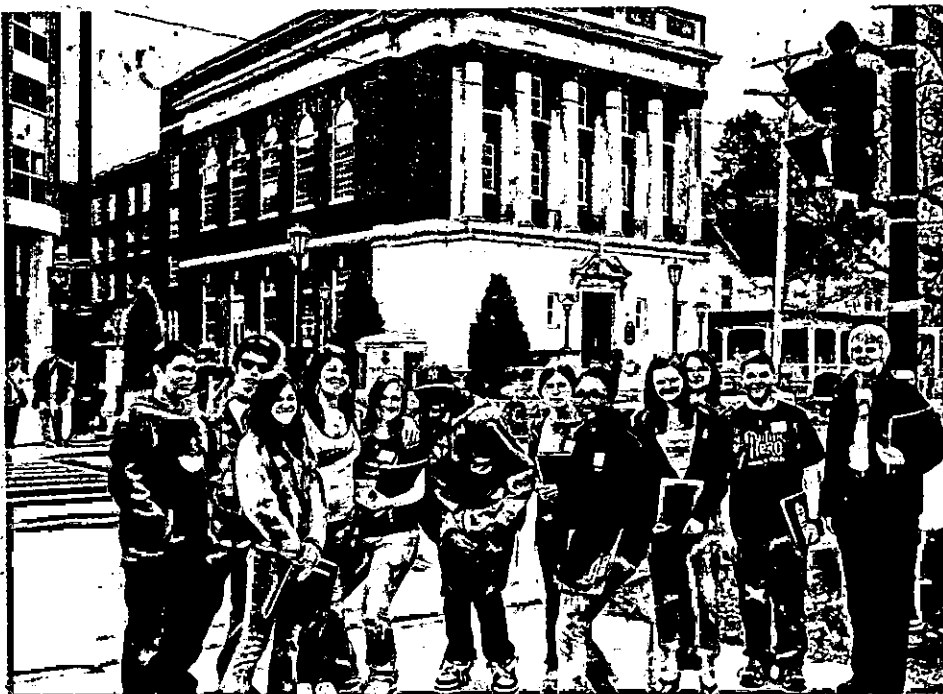

Stars Interger Director Karen Harmon, Board President William Schwartz and STARS volunteer Marilyn Kaltenborn accompanied Dwyer and the students on the tour.

Last fall, Stars Interger Inc. received a $1,000 mini-grant from the Community Foundation for the Greater Capital Region's Standish Family Foundation Fund to help Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk students explore college and career opportunities through field trips and other activities.

"Many students aren't aware of the number and variety of colleges and programs that are out there and may not have the opportunity to visit an actual college campus," said Dwyer. "This grant allows students to see the dorms, dining hall and classrooms and talk to college admissions counselors."

RCS social worker Eileen Hoffmann agreed. "It is vital for all students to see the possibilities for life after high school. Some students' parents just don't have the means or time to go on scheduled college trips, which mostly occur during the work day. Discussions about tuition, college life, college classes, majors, etc make it more real when they are actually held at a college campus," she said. "For many students there is a whole 'about face' once they make these trips. It refocuses their academic efforts and gives them something to look forward to and to work toward."

High school junior Cierrah Forte was equally enthusiastic about the Saint Rose visit. "I really enjoyed it and wish that I had started looking at colleges earlier," she said. "People ask me where I want to go to college and I don't know yet. If the STARS Program goes on any more college tours, I want to go."

The students were not the only participants who benefited from the tour. Kaltenborn, a Delmar resident, enjoys volunteering as a STARS mentor. "As a recent retiree, I found that going on the St. Rose tour with the high school students was an exceedingly rewarding experience which I hope to repeat many times," she said.

Stars Interger Inc. recruits retirees to serve as STARS (Seniors Teaching and Reaching Out to Students) volunteers in Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk elementary- and middle-school classrooms. STARS volunteers give students individualized attention to help them improve reading and other academic skills and increase their self-esteem.

Navigating the customer of the future: An interview with Cindy Colomon

By RUTH MAHONEY
Senior Vice President
Key Private Bank

Several years ago, customer service and leadership expert Cindy Solomon finished one of her crowd-pleasing presentations in Las Vegas. With time to spare and a room at the Bellagio, Solomon did what any reasonable person would do—she tried her luck at the roulette wheel.

At first, Solomon jokes that she may as well have taken a lighter to her money. Then a dealer named Rose rotated to her table. "As soon as Rose spun the first ball around the wheel, we knew it was a different ballgame," Solomon said. "She radiated warmth and good humor...and by the time she finished her first turn with us, our table had so much fun that we rotated with her—en masse!"

At the end of evening, Solomon was sure that, of the group of six who followed Rose from table to table, none had come out ahead. But because she had so much fun losing money, Solomon wrote a letter to Steve Wynn, owner of the Bellagio, stating how impressed she had been with Rose's abilities and personality. Two weeks later, Solomon received a return letter from Wynn himself. He conveyed that, thanks to Solomon's letter, he had named Rose Employee of the Month and awarded her a dinner gift certificate to the Bellagio restaurant. He also sent Solomon a certificate for a free night's stay at the Bellagio to thank her for pointing out great customer service and appreciating his employee.

"Most companies have a hard time making bad things better when there is a customer complaint. Not only does Wynn do that well—he knows how to make good situations phenomenal. Essentially, he takes customer service to the next level," Solomon said. "It's because of his ability to focus on, foster, and reward positive actions that Steve Wynn has been able to create some of the best service experiences in the world. The way he treated us caused both his employee and me to care tremendously about the success of his business."

As someone who has helped hundreds of organizations build long-term, profitable relationships with their customers, leaders and employees, Solomon understands that great service begins by making it a top organizational value. And on June 11, as keynote speaker at the 9th Annual Key4Women Forum, "The Customer of the Future," she will share with women from across the Capital Region how they can make it happen.

Here she offers some thoughts about the customer of the future and delivering excellent service.

The title of your presentation is "Customer of the Future."

Ruth Mahoney

Who is the customer of the future?

The customers of the future are more challenging than they've ever been. And regardless of what product or service they are buying, regardless of price point, regardless of industry and regardless of geographic location what we're seeing are four major themes.

First is a constant escalation of customer expectations. We are requiring more of the companies we work with day in and day out. We want more value for our money. We want more service for our money. We want the interaction to be easy, quick and clean. So what that's done, in our point-and-click world, is change our competition. Our competition is no longer our competitor down the road. Our competition is whoever best and most appropriately served our customer last.

Second, the power of one. Technology has changed how data is shared about companies and their products and services. For example, anyone who has seen the YouTube video that chastises a major U.S. airline for mishandling a passenger's luggage, knows the brand damage that one person can cause. The video documents a musician's odyssey to have the airline replace a guitar their baggage handlers broke. The video has been viewed close to 8.5 million times, and experts estimate that it created up to $100 million in brand damage.

Third, time is still the primary currency. If you compete on price, you will never create loyal customers who stick with you through thick and thin. For example, when I'm in front of audiences, I always ask: "how many of us pay more money for something because it's easy?" Nearly 99 percent of people raise their hands.

Finally, relationships matter. Customers want a deeper relationship. And when things go awry, as they occasionally do, if you can recover, the customer will be 40 percent more loyal to you. But if you don't have a relationship with the customer, you have no chance.

You mention technology. It seems more companies are incorporating technology into their customer service initiatives. Don't they risk putting a wall up between themselves and their customers?

Yes. Technology can be really tricky, but if you have a dialogue with your customers, they will tell you what is most important to them. The thing is to talk with them and not to make assumptions. If you actually listen to them you can use technology to give them more of what they want.

But you often cite a statistic that 80 percent of customers who defect from a company are actually satisfied? What's a company supposed to do?

It's horrifying, isn't it? The thing to consider is that satisfaction and happiness do not necessarily equate. Satisfaction no longer equals loyalty. And the statistic shows that the bar is just being raised. You need to be able to continue to meet ever-changing expectations by always delivering what the client needs and expects.

For the small business owner or manager who wants to focus on improving service, what are the questions they should be asking themselves.

First and most important is to truly understand your strengths. Second, do research. Find out what your customers want, and match your strength to customers' needs. One of the biggest mistakes I think too many people make, especially entrepreneurs, is trying to be everything to everybody.

You referenced the YouTube video that negatively highlights a national airline. How does a company recover from a public customer service embarrassment?

Don't wait until something goes wrong to create a recovery process. Create a recovery process inside your company that everyone is clear on and that everyone has the authority to execute. For example, at Ritz Carlton, every employee has a certain amount of money they can spend to make something right for a customer. Also, ask one simple question: what do I need to do to make this right? Finally, look at how you can learn from your mistakes.

One last question—is the customer really always right?

No. In fact, there's a statistic that indicates the customer is the problem at least one-third of the time. However, if you open up a dialogue with your customer and operate toward your strengths you will discover you'll have more of the right clients than the wrong ones.

Building a culture of service excellence

Cindy Solomon will be the keynote speaker at the Ninth Annual Key4Women Forum, "The Customer of the Future," on Friday, June 11, at the Glen Sanders Mansion in Scotia. Here she provides four tips for organizational leaders on motivating employees to become customer service champs.

- Engage people who have a common understanding and passion for what it is you're trying to do.

- Inspire people by giving them a meaningful role in achieving the goal they've committed to.

- Enable people to do great things by giving them the skills and training they need to be successful.

- Reward people. In satisfaction surveys, public recognition, thank you notes, additional responsibilities and professional development all rank higher for employees than money.

Meet Mr. Voorheesville 2010

Student crowned in weekend pageant

By RYAN MUNKS
munksr@spotlightnews.com

Clayton A. Bouton High School student Greg Frering became Voorheesville's first "knight in shining armor" when he won the title of Mr. Voorheesville 2010 in a competition Friday, May 14, at the school.

Frering had to compete against nine other high school students in a number of areas including causal wear, talent and formal wear competitions. Although he lost the popular vote to fellow high school student J.D. Springer, and the talent portion to Patrick Soloviev, who played the piano blindfolded, Frering received the high total score from a panel of judges.

This year's theme was "Who Will be our Knight in Shining Armor?" The event began with guest judge Miss New York 2009 Alyse Zwick asking each candidate why he should be her knight in shining armor.

"Miss New York, pick me; I'm the only one who can grow facial hair," said Jack Seay, the first candidate to vie for the title.

Seay was followed by nine other candidates including Springer, who said, "I don't grow facial hair, but I'm the whole package."

Following the opening number was the casual wear competition, following by Zwick doing ballet to Christina Aguilera's "Fighter."

After Zwick's performance came the talent portion of the competition, which featured singing, instrument playing, skateboarding, high jumping, and fancy basketball dribbling.

The judges were wowed by Soloviev playing "Apologize" by One Republic on the piano while blindfolded.

The talent competition was followed by an intermission in which the audience voted in the popular vote and had the opportunity to meet Zwick.

"I'm just here supporting. I think it's great to be involved in the community and pageants," said Zwick.

In addition to preparing for the Miss America pageant, Zwick spent the past year traveling the state attending many pageants and community events and traveling to Washington, D.C., to advocate for soldiers overseas.

Zwick said that Mr. Voorheesville was the first pageant she attended featuring men, and the Miss New York Organization is considering borrowing the idea to hold a Mr. New York competition to help raise money.

After the intermission, the show went on with the formal wear competition, and an impromptu question for each candidate.

Proceeds from the event will go to benefit the girl's volleyball team and the school's chapter of Students Against Destructive Decision's. Shayna Morse, co-captain of the volleyball team and co-president of SADD, said, "[Mr. Voorheesville] psyches up our school a lot. It's a chance for Voorheesville to come together and get a taste of something different."

She said the proceeds will go to help the volleyball team attend a summer camp at SUNY Albany held with the university team's players and coaches.

"It's a big portion; it helps out a lot," she said.

Proceeds will also go to fund $100 scholarships on behalf of SADD.

Sandy Vorse, coach of the volleyball team and coordinator of the event, said she appreciated the candidates performing to raise money for the team and SADD.

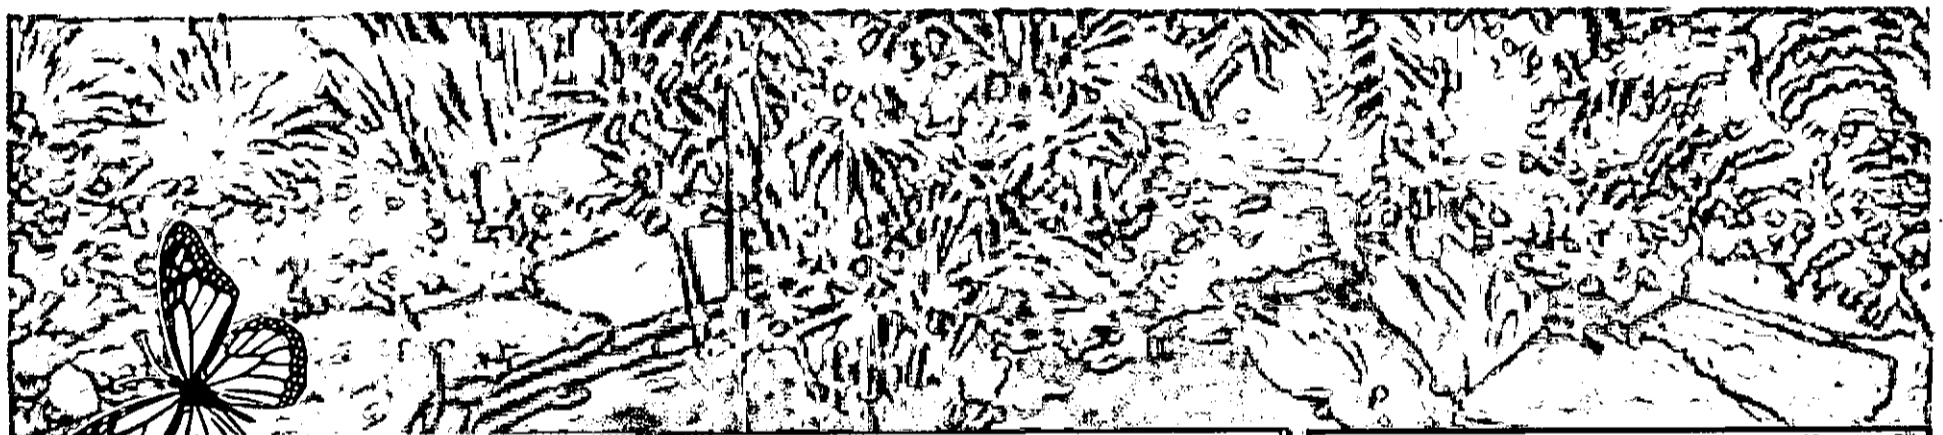

"It's overwhelming when the boys do this for us and volunteer their time," she said. "They have good spirit."

Although final numbers were not in by press time, Vorse hopes that the competition raised enough money to grant three $100 SADD scholarships and help reduce the cost of the summer volleyball camp by half, or $175.

Clayton A. Bouton High School students compete for the title of Mr. Voorheesville 2010 in a competition Friday, May 14, at the school.

Entertainment in the Spotlight

Avery Chase, 2, of JSelkirk, meets a goat at the Indian Ladder Baby Animals exhibit on Friday, May 14.
Photos by Sean Ahern/Spotlight

For more than 10 years, Indian Ladder Farms has held Baby Animal Days in the month of May. This year's event, ending Sunday, May 23, offers children a chance to learn about farm animals like sheep, cows, pigs, chickens, turkeys, ducks and a goat named Charlie. The experience is popular with families and school trips and helps younger kids understand the relationship between animals and the products they give us.

ANIMAL ATTRACTION

'INDIAN LADDER FARMS' BABY ANIMAL DAYS ALLOWS PEOPLE TO GET A CLOSER LOOK AT FARM LIFE

By ALYSSA JUNG
junga@spotlightnews.com

Baby animals need tender loving care, just like children, and that's something Indian Ladder Farms is trying to show with Baby Animal Days, which takes place through Sunday, May 23. Families or school groups spend time in the barn learning about proper care of baby farm animals, gently touching them or taking pictures with them. Then they can head over to the learning center attached to the store for demonstrations involving bees, wool and other aspects of animal care.

"The important reason we do it is to expose children to natural farm animals because there are a lot of opportunities for children to go and visit zoo animals or exotic ones, but this is one of the few places they can see regular farm animals," said Cecilia Soloviev, retail manager. "Kids aren't really sure if a chicken takes milk, or anything about farm animals, so this is a way for city kids who don't see animals on regular basis to learn."

Soloviev gives barn tours and demonstrations during the monthlong event. Her hope, she said, is to help young children — and even their parents — gain an appreciation for what a farm animal does and why they're so important.

"When we appreciate what a farm animal does for us, we start to appreciate why it's important to take care of them and why what farmers are doing for us are important," said Soloviev. "People lose track of where our food is coming from and forget it's important for all of us to work together. Milk doesn't come from a truck; it comes from a cow. Animals are important in a bigger picture of the world."

Soloviev knows firsthand how important farm animals are to making the world go 'round. She grew up on a farm in California and in addition to everyday farm work and animal care, she formed a special bond with them.

"I once had a baby goat that was, like, my most favorite goat and it was really sick, so I had to sleep with it to make sure it was OK all night. That's the extent that I feel for animals," said Soloviev. "No matter what attitude I come to work with, by the time I'm finished working with them, even if it's freezing or hot, I'm relaxed, happy, calm and everything is right with the world. It's a way of touching the Earth and realizing our place within it."

When the baby animals arrive for their monthlong stay, Soloviev tries to gather a mix — goats, sheep, cows, pigs, chickens, ducks, turkeys and rabbits. She also does a demonstration with the farm's observation bee hive to show where honey comes from and why bees aren't something to be afraid of but something we need.

"A part of them really opens up when they touch and interact with the animals," said Soloviev.

When Baby Animal Days wrap up at the end of May, another chance to learn about life on a farm and animal care will start up in the summer. Barn School Day Camps, specifically the program called Life on the Farm in the 1800s, teaches home skills that were required for farm life centuries ago.

"On the last day we dress up in period costumes and do all of our chores and activities in dress up. These are great programs that help to teach forgotten skills to a new generation of young people," said Soloviev.

The farm is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and admission is $5 per child for Baby Animal Days.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Board OKs budgeted borrowing

Bethlehem will use $1.4M to cover expenses

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Town Board has approved $1.4 million in borrowing that will cover many expenses approved in the 2010 budget.

The board voted unanimously Wednesday, May 12, to allow the comptroller to seek lending for this year's road paving projects, various equipment purchases and the purchase of three police cars. The matter had been set to be decided at the last board meeting in late April, but board members had outstanding questions about the bonding process.

Joseph Scott, of Hodgson Russ Attorneys, the firm acting as bond counsel to the town, was present to address some of the concerns, which included the timing of borrowing, the town's outstanding credit and how long the loans would be taken out.

Scott's firm works as bond counsel for most of the large suburban communities in the area, and essentially prepares an opinion on the municipality and borrowing for potential lenders. Putting an independent stamp of approval on the resolutions comes at a premium though—in this case, $2,000 per instance and $1 for every $1,000 authorized for bonding.

Thus, grouping the resolutions together saves the town money.

The town has traditionally avoided borrowing, preferring instead to pay cash on all but the largest expenses. More small-scale bonding was included in the 2010 budget, however, in the midst of uncertain financial times and with the rationalization that bonding purchases over the life of the item is a more equitable scenario for taxpayers.

"There's a strong fairness argument for spreading the municipal projects over a period of time, because people are enjoying them over a period of time," Scott said.

A prime example is the estimated $780,000 worth of paving the town's Highway Department was authorized to borrow for this year. The average Town of Bethlehem road lasts for 13 years, said department Superintendent Gregg Sagendorph, so the idea is to distribute the burden to all who will use it rather than hitting current taxpayers with the cost all at once.

The town plans to pave roads in Colonial Acres and on Elm Avenue from around the town park to Feura Bush Road.

The town will also bond for items like a sewer vacuum truck and backhoe truck, among other equipment, and buy three police cars for $80,000. Four cars were previously discussed, but because one car was totaled and replaced by insurance in December only three are needed.

The fact short-term interest rates are extremely favorable also makes borrowing a better decision, said town Comptroller Suzanne Traylor.

"Right now, we're looking at short-term BANs (bond anticipatory notes) around 1 percent," she said.

The town can then roll those notes into long-term borrowing or continue taking short-term notes for up to five years.

Supervisor Sam Messina said borrowing can be required to maintain the quality of life the town's residents are accustomed to.

"I think it's a good idea, and I'm glad we supported it," he said.

More than $400,000 of work to Town Hall was not included in the authorized borrowing. The renovations, which included repairs to the courthouse roof and building masonry as well as expansions of upstairs offices to make way for new staff, were the subject of some debate at the previous board meeting.

Messina said the resolution would be taken up at a later meeting, after town staff have had a chance to come up with more precise numbers on what the project would entail and how much it would cost.

"It was kind of a more current situation that we're dealing with," he said of the repairs. "I believe this will be brought back to the board again in about a month or so."

The Town Board also approved the hiring of Robin Nagengast to the position of an administrative aid in the Planning Department.

Director of Economic Development and Planning Michael Morelli said she would fill in for two employees that left the department, and one of the vacancies will be eliminated.

There was some question as to how the decision fits into the town's hiring freeze. Messina said when he tried to check the provisions of the freeze, which was implemented under the previous administration, he could not find anything in writing.

"I don't think we've ever been under a hiring freeze that I can document, and we're not under one now," he said.

The position also was not advertised on the town's Web site. Human Resources Director Mary Tremblay-Glassman said for civil service positions like this one, the town must first check with the county to see if there is a list of scores from the last service exam and, if there is, interview from that. If there is no list, the position would be advertised.

"We can't post a position if we have to fill it from a civil service list because technically now anyone can apply for it," she said.

A motion to pass a resolution declaring support for Bethlehem becoming a Fair Trade Town was removed from the agenda at the request of the Fair Trade Delmar Campaign.

Library offering wireless printing

It's happened to most of us — important correspondence, a school paper, or a business project is done just under the wire, we go to print...and nothing happens. So we copy it to a disk and make a mad dash to the library so we can print it before the doors close at 9 p.m.

Well, the library has heard your panicked cries and responded. We now offer wireless printing service, and it's easy. Forward your print job from your home computer, laptop or mobile device to a dedicated printer at the library information desk. You will receive a unique numeric release code. Just punch in the code on the keypad next to the printer, and voila!

The system ensures privacy and security. Documents are not printed until you enter your code. Your document is permanently deleted after it's printed. Documents left unprinted for more than 24 hours are automatically deleted.

You can access this service from a link on our website or in the library from our network. Visit or call the information desk at 439-9314 ext. 3009 for help with a walkthrough.

"Baby-wearing," or carrying a baby on your chest, hip or back using a sling, wrap or pouch, is a worldwide tradition that has garnered interest among U.S. parents in recent years. Experts say that this method promotes bonding, soothes colic, and facilitates preemie development.

You can learn safe and proper baby-wearing techniques at a workshop Thursday, May 20, at 7 p.m. at the library. Volunteers with the local interest group Sling Babies will facilitate the workshop. An educator with training from Babywearing International will be on hand to demonstrate a variety of carriers, answer questions, and address concerns.

This "bring your own baby" program is part of the library's parenting series "It Takes a Village." Call the library at 439-9314 for more information.

unit buildings. Developer Lee Rosen recently added several townhomes to the mix.

In addition, 20,000 to 40,000 square feet of commercial space in four buildings would be built at the intersection of the roads. Sixty to 65 percent of the 17-acre lot would be preserved as green space, but that's generally federal wetland areas that would be unlawful to develop.

The project is in a hamlet zone, a result of the town's Comprehensive Plan designed to encourage neighborhood-scale mixed-use developments. The district was created as a reflection of the town's need to diversify development, said Planning Board member John Smolinsky, who was also involved in the creation of the town's Comprehensive Plan.

"Out tax base consists primarily of residential, single-family development, and in a nutshell, that doesn't always pay for itself," he said.

The Planning Board scheduled the public hearing — which is not required under law — after many nearby residents protested the project. More than 20 residents spoke against it, and almost every one hailed from one of the surrounding developments like Colonial Acres, Walden Fields or Chadwick Square, all of which Rosen's father spearheaded.

By far the most often-cited concern was traffic congestion, with many residents saying they already have trouble getting out of their driveways or developments at times.

"Adding vehicles to a road that has failing or near failing grades constitutes a problem," said David Kissinger, who has co-chaired a group of Walden Fields residents opposed to the project.

"It's hard enough to get out of Colonial Acres now ... and with increased building it will be even more difficult," said resident Joan Travis.

The intersection of Feura Bush Road and Elsmere Avenue has a DOT rating of "F," but town Director of Economic Development and Planning Michael Morelli said this rating applies only to the peak evening rush of traffic, and the intersection works fine at other times.

"There is some buildup of traffic there; there's no question about it," he said. "The DOT is satisfied with this proposal."

The Kendall Square plans call for creating three exit/entrance points on Feura Bush and Elsmere to keep travelers away from the intersection.

"The majority of the trips generated by this project will not pass through that intersection," said project engineer Francis Bossolini.

Morelli outlined the town's plans for road development in the Glenmont area at the meeting. The plan all along has been to use development to connect roads in the area, he said, creating more local traffic options and also making north/south, east/west connections in an Elsmere Avenue extension and the completion of Kimmey Drive.

"The idea is interconnected neighborhoods," Morelli said.

Planning Board Chairman George Leveille pointed out road development is an expensive burden to put on taxpayers.

"We have to look towards the development process to pay for some of these improvements," he said.

The town's traffic plan also makes allowances for the development of sidewalks, with the goal of letting nearby residents walk or bike to services at places like Kendall Square.

But many neighbors said on Tuesday it was pointless to put commercial space in the middle of a residential area, and said they would continue to travel to Route 9W and not patronize any business at Kendall Square.

"Why on earth would you go to some little place here rather than where you need to go for your gasoline, your groceries, whatever?" said resident Mary Richards.

Others suggested small businesses should stick to established commercial zones, and fill empty storefronts there.

The developer does not have any businesses lined up yet, but has suggested the spot would be ideal for small offices, dry cleaners or cafes.

Others were more general in their comments, including Albany County Legislator Charles Dawson, who lives in Chadwick Square.

"I oppose this project. I do not think it adds anything to our town, or community. In fact, I think it detracts from it," he said.

Among other topics, residents also questioned the tax benefit of the project, its visual impact and the stability of the apartment market.

There were a few attendees who spoke either in support of the development or in favor of landowner's rights in general. Resident Bob Jazinski, who is a frequent attendee of town meetings, said if the project fits the zoning guidelines it should be allowed to go ahead.

He also said the majority of protestors were neighbors of the development, and called their concerns a "local" issue.

"I wonder if all of these people are going to appear at the other Planning Board [meetings]," he said. "I could've got up when Walden Fields was proposed and said I don't like it — I live on Bender Lane."

Trail

in funding under the Federal Transportation Improvement Plan, but that will not cover the cost of completing the 9-mile trail, said Mary Duryea, a spokeswoman for County Executive Michael Breslin.

"We haven't really set a construction time to begin because we first want to get the funding in place," she said.

But the county has applied for $5 million from the Department of Energy's Energy Efficiency and Conservation Block Grant Program, which would cover the remainder of the estimated $7.8 million cost of the project. Officials hope to know the result within the month.

Of the total project cost, an estimated $3 million will be spent to repair eight bridges crossing various waterways and roads. The trail would be unsafe without the work, said county Department of Public Works Commissioner Michael Franchini.

"We're making the minimum changes that can be made to make them safe for bicyclists and pedestrians," he said. "There seems to be a misunderstanding with some people that we're doing something else with these bridges. We just want to make them safe."

Of those eight bridges, he continued, two are lacking decks. The bridge over New Scotland Road has been damaged from trucks colliding with it because it doesn't meet the clearance requirement.

"Replacing it with a premanufactured pedestrian bridge would actually be cheaper than repairing it," Franchini said.

That replacement is estimated to cost $1 million.

Completing the trail in one go rather than building it in pieces will save on construction costs, said officials. But local advocates said if the money doesn't come through, the funding that is in place should be spent.

"If the Department of Energy grant is not awarded, we would like to ask the county to strongly consider moving forward with a reduced scope project to build a section of the Rail Trail so the community can realize the value of the Rail Trail immediately," said Dan Rain, co-chair of Friends of the Rail Trail, a part of the Mohawk Hudson Land Conservancy.

"If that funding doesn't come through, then there aren't really any other significant grants options right now," he continued.

Rain said FORT has researched three ways the secured funding could be used to partially build the trail.

Information on the county's Web site tentatively indicates that "the planning and design phase will be completed by the end of 2009 and that construction will extend into the fall of 2010."

If funding is secured through the Department of Energy grant, it's possible that some work may be done this year, said Franchini, but officials did not offer specifics on a timeline even if the DOE grant comes through.

"Without funding in place, it's impossible to set a date for the rail trail's completion," said Duryea.

Construction would likely take one construction season, or about nine months.

"The county completed purchase of the rail trail corridor from Canadian Pacific Railway in January, using a joint grant from the state Office of Parks and Recreation and the Scenic Hudson nonprofit. The trail is set to travel through the City of Albany, towns of Bethlehem and New Scotland and the Village of Voorheesville.

Park

Since then both the assembly and senate proposed versions of the budget that included funding for the office to keep the parks open, however, nearly seven weeks have passed since the Thursday April 1 deadline from the legislature and governor to pass a final version of the budget.

After the budget deadline had passed in early April, the possibility of Thatcher closing down began to look more like a reality, when staff closed down the bathroom facilities in the park.

As of Monday, May 17, the entire park has been closed, with the exception of the overlook. "The Park is closed, the parking lots are gated, with the exception of the overlook," said Eileen Larrabee, director of communications for the Office of Parks, Recreation, and Historical Preservation.

Larrabee said that park has ceased its mowing and trail maintenance operations, closed the bathroom facilities, and reassigned staff to parks that are to remain open.

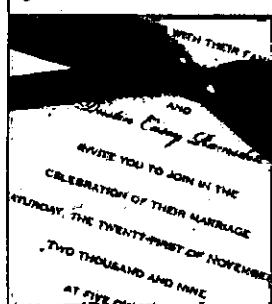

"This is about the economic realities this agency, like other agencies, are dealing with," she said.

Larrabee said since the budget deadline passed the park has been operating on a week to week basis; however, as the weather gets warmer and more people utilize the parks services, the office does not have the funding to accommodate the crowds. "We are getting to the point where the number of people coming to the park has grown," she said.

According to Larrabee, the eventual fate of the park depends upon the enacted version of the state's budget and the amount of funding the office receives. Until then she said the office discourages people from heading to the park.

"We would discourage people from going to the park, except for the overlook," she said.

Sports

could raise money to continue those sports eliminated in the 2010-11 budget. Genzano is also the president of the Football Booster Club.

Burbank said there are a number of challenges to local business raising money for the booster clubs.

"The school district telling the booster clubs to go raise money isn't as easy as it sounds," she said. "The problem is there are booster clubs for every single sport."

She said that raising money for each individual club could create a strain on local businesses. "You're talking 20 or more sports. ... It's going to stress all of them," said Burbank.

She said the chamber would be more open to hosting a few large fundraisers for the eliminated programs as a whole, as opposed to many different smaller fundraisers.

"I want it to be a coordinated community effort," said Burbank.

She specifically mentioned holding a fundraiser alongside National Night Out, a crime awareness event hosted by the Guilderland Police Benevolent Association that draws 3,000 people.

According to Burbank, raising money in a few large fundraisers would make it easier to divide the money fairly among the different clubs, and would pose less of a strain on local businesses. She also said she was speaking with Crossgates about the possibility of hosting a fundraiser in September.

Joe Castaldo, general manager of Crossgates, said that the mall is open to the idea of hosting the district's parent-teacher organizations and the booster clubs in a "Guilderland PTA night" to help them raise money.

"We are already on it," he said.

Castaldo said that one idea would be to have representatives from the programs hand out literature and accept donations from mall patrons.

"There are a litany of things you can do," he said. "It's really about how creative you want to be."

"If the clubs could come together and do one fundraiser in July, one in August, and one in the mall in September, they would be in good shape," said Burbank.

Movies are back

Last year's "Disney Family Fridays" film festival at the Guilderland Public Library was so popular that many parents and children asked the Library to do it again, so the next series begins Friday, June 4. This first event will be a showing of a movie about a Swiss family - named Robinson - who become shipwrecked on a tropical island. (They build the coolest tree house you've ever seen.) The series continues on most Friday evenings during June and July.

This season, going to the movies at the library will be even better. Thanks to a grant from Assemblyman Jack McEneny, a new ceiling-mounted projection system has been installed; it provides a bigger, brighter, and crisper picture. So when you come to see these Disney classics, you won't have to worry about bumping into the projector or blocking the screen. (Pre-show shadow puppets, as always, are encouraged.) And it gives you more room to spread out. Will there be popcorn? Of course.

Zanotta sets home run record in win

Matt Zanotta is the new single-season home run king in Section II.

The Guilderland first baseman clubbed two homers in last Thursday's 16-13 Suburban Council victory at Columbia to increase his season total to 15 — two more than the previous mark held by Saratoga Catholic's Tim Stauffer.

More importantly for the Dutchmen (8-6 league, 9-6 overall), they clinched a Section II Class AA playoff berth with the win. They can finish no worse than .500 in the Suburban Council, which is the cutoff for making the playoffs.

Luke Stark also homered and added a single for

Guilderland, which hosted Averill Park Monday in a Suburban Council South Division game.

Nick Keefe and John Stanley had home runs for Columbia, which dropped to 6-8 in the league.

Eagles regain their momentum

After a 2-5 stretch in the middle of the season, the Bethlehem boys lacrosse team got itself back on track with Suburban Council victories over Colonie and Columbia last week.

It wasn't a breeze for the Eagles. (6-5 league, 8-6 overall), though. They needed overtime to defeat Colonie 7-6 last Wednesday before handling winless Columbia 12-5 last Friday.

Bethlehem had a 3-2 halftime lead on Colonie (4-8, 6-9); but the Garnet Raiders scored three times in the third quarter. Only a pair of Eagle goals kept the game tied at 5.

Both teams scored once in the fourth quarter before Andy Conroy won the game for Bethlehem with his second goal of the afternoon midway through the first overtime period.

Conroy also had a pair of assists to complete a four-point game, and Eric Halek added a hat trick for Bethlehem. Davey Mitchell tallied three times for Colonie.

The Eagles had little trouble establishing control over Columbia (0-13, 0-15) in last Friday's Suburban Council South Division game. Bethlehem jumped out to a 7-2 lead in the first quarter and tacked on four goals in the second quarter to put the game out of Columbia's reach.

Halek and Stephen Russo provided much of Bethlehem's offense. Halek scored five goals and assisted on another, while Russo contributed two goals and four assists.

Pat Johnson — in his second game back from a knee injury — added a pair of goals for the Eagles.

Bethlehem looked to extend its winning streak to three games Tuesday when it visited South Division-leading Guilderland.

The Dutchmen (9-3, 10-5) had been on a four-game winning streak of their own before suffering a 9-5 loss to Shaker last Friday.

The Blue Bison (7-4, 8-6) clung to a 6-5 lead before scoring three times in the fourth quarter to break the game open.

Dan Casale tallied four times, and goaltender Kenny O'Connor made 19 saves for Shaker, which can still tie Guilderland for first place in the South Division by sweeping its final two games and a Dutchmen loss.

Paul Jones had a goal and an assist for Guildersland.

Playoff

Shaker – the top two seeds in Class A. As to who wins, I'll take the Lady Dutch in a close game.

• Something else to think about when considering how early the girls lacrosse playoffs start around here: the Section II baseball seeding meeting is NEXT Monday. The baseball playoffs begin just as girls lacrosse crowns its Sectional champions.

• Sticking with Section II baseball, why do teams still pitch to Guilderland's Matt Zanotta? The senior first baseman cranked out home runs No. 14 and 15 in last Friday's 16-13 victory over Columbia to break Tim Stauffer's record of 13. What's freakier is that Zanotta only needed 17 games to hit his 15 home runs.

If I was a Suburban Council baseball manager, I'd be telling my pitchers not to give Zanotta anything to hit and take their chances with the rest of Guilderland's line-up. While the Dutchmen have several more kids who can hit the ball with authority, none of them are as likely to launch one into the stratosphere as Zanotta.

• Early call on the Section II Class AA playoff field: While Shenendehowa, Columbia and Bethlehem are the obvious favorites to reach the finals, don't discount Niskayuna. The Silver Warriors have a solid offense, and eighth-grader Ali Frary has done well in her first year as the starting pitcher while senior Lauren Giglio has been sidelined with a stress fracture in her left foot.

Getting to the finals for the second consecutive year might be difficult for Niskayuna, given the talented pitchers the Silver Warriors may have to face in the semifinals (either Shen's Danielle Amyot, Columbia's Jena Servidone or Bethlehem's Toni Edwards). But if Niskayuna's offense can give Frary some run support, that might be enough to propel the Silver Warriors into the June 4 championship game.

• If revenge is a dish that's best served cold, is satisfaction a comfort food? (Damn, I'm becoming a philosopher in my middle age.)

• I'll say this much about F.J. Zwicklbauer's strategy of placing 10 former Section II soccer stars on his Albany BWP Highlanders roster – it's working well.

Former Shen standout T.J. Popolizio scored both of Albany's goals in the Highlanders' 2-2 tie with Portland in last Friday's home opener at Union College. Then, former Mohonasen star Roberto Sgueglia tallied the lone goal in Albany's 1-0 victory at Western Massachusetts Saturday to give the Highlanders a 1-0 1 record in the Premier Development League.

Will the Highlanders keep this pace up? Hard to say. There were times in last Friday's home opener where I thought Albany was outplayed (and in talking with Zwicklbauer, he agreed with that assessment), but the Highlanders fought hard to pull off the tie. And, I'm not certain what the competition is like in the rest of the PDL's Northeast Division because we're only one weekend into the season.

But as the Highlanders have more time to practice and play together, it could get interesting. At least, they're worth watching if for no other reason than to see how Section II alumni like Popolizio, Sgueglia, Shaker's Robert Millock, Bethlehem's Darko Knezevic and Mohonasen's Trey Jasenski have developed as soccer players since going to college.

• With the new high-definition video scoreboard, ribbon advertising boards and outdoor lighting coming to the Times Union Center, area sports fans should see just how boring the Albany Devils with ease. Luckily those same things will be used during Siena Saints men's basketball games, so the arena's new bells and whistles won't go to waste.

• A quick word association game...

New York Yankees: solid

New York Mets: shaky

Boston Red Sox: challenged

Philadelphia Flyers: resilient

Boston Bruins: idiots

Pittsburgh Penguins: golfing (same thing goes for Detroit Red Wings)

Boston Celtics: Rondo-riffic (not a word per se, but it works)

Cleveland Cavaliers: doomed (with or without LeBron James)

Triple Crown: nevergonnahappenagain (again not a word, but you get the idea)

• Just throwing this out there, but would anyone watch a World Series between San Diego and Tampa Bay?

• Finally, I wonder how New York Rangers fans feel about losing in a shootout to Philadelphia on the last day of the NHL's regular season, thus being deprived a shot at competing in the topsy-turvy Eastern Conference playoffs. Then again, had the Rangers won that game, they would have been the No. 8 seed and probably gotten stomped on by the Washington Capitals – which would have set up a semifinal series between Alex Ovechkin and Pittsburgh's Sidney Crosby. DAMN YOU, RANGERS! You deprived us of Ovechkin vs. Crosby, Part II.

That's it for this week, folks. If you'd like to comment on this column (or add to my little word association game), e-mail me at jonasr@spotlightnews.com.

Bethlehem closed out its regular season with a 21-2 victory over Columbia last Friday.

The Lady Eagles scored 17 goals in the first half on their way to winning their fifth consecutive game after a 4-5 start in the Suburban Council.

Shirah Fudin scored four times and added three assists for Bethlehem. Megan Duffy and Moriah Greenstein each contributed three goals, while Erin Blanchard and Tori McGrath added two goals apiece.

The winners of Tuesday's quarterfinal games at Guilderland and Bethlehem meet in Thursday's semifinals.

Adam Costello (Saratoga Springs) and Robert Millock (Shaker).

"Our local players played really well tonight," said Zwicklbauer.

More Section II alumni will likely be seeing playing time as the three-month PDL season plays out. Bethlehem grads Darko Knezevic and Austin Hughes are on the Highlanders' roster, as are Shen's David Burke and Schalmont grad Joshua Gregg.

Popolizio said the opportunity to play soccer this summer was what lured him to the Highlanders.

"I'm happy to get back here and play in front of some people who probably haven't seen me play in a little while," said Popolizio. "Rhode Island [where Brown University is located] isn't all that far from here, but it's nice to play closer to home."

The Highlanders will have plenty of opportunities to play close to home in the next three weeks. After visiting Vermont Friday, they begin a three-game homestand Saturday when Brooklyn visits Frank Bailey Field. Then following Memorial Day weekend, the Highlanders host Vermont June 4 and Ottawa June 6.

Buehler leaps to the podium

Bethlehem's Paul Buehler added to his trophy case with a pair of top-three finishes at Saturday's Eddy Meet at Union College.

The senior leaped 22 feet, 10.5 inches to finish second to Bay Shore's Brando Hutchinson in the long jump. Hutchinson took first place with a distance of 23 feet, 11 inches. Hutchinson bested Buehler again in the triple jump with a winning distance of 47 feet. Buehler was third with a distance of 46 feet, 9 inches, 2.75.

Lady Eagles keep pace

BC remains tied with Columbia for division lead

The Bethlehem softball team remained tied with Columbia for first place in the Suburban Council South Division following last Thursday's 3-0 victory over Colonie.

The Lady Eagles (11-3 league, 15-3 overall) scored twice in the bottom of the second inning and added an insurance run in the third inning to give pitcher Toni Edwards all the support she needed to pick up the victory. Edwards allowed three hits and struck out 10.

Colonie (6-8) had a chance to get on the scoreboard in the top of the seventh inning, but Bethlehem catcher Samantha Smaldone tagged the runner out at home plate to end the game.

Edwards and out-fielder Shelbie Ballard each drove in runs for the Lady Eagles. Ballard accounted for half of her team's hits with a double and a single.

Columbia (11-3, 15-3) kept pace with Bethlehem by defeating Guilderland 7-0 last Thursday in East Greenbush.

Columbia played Bethlehem Monday to determine first place in the South Division.

Highlanders start on right foot

Section II alumni lead new soccer team to undefeated weekend

By ROB JONAS

jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Two recent Section II graduates helped Albany's newest soccer team get off to a 1-0-1 start in the United Soccer League's Premier Development League.

Shenendehowa graduate T.J. Popolizio scored both of his team's goals as the Albany BWP (Black Watch Premier) Highlanders tie Portland 2-2 in last Friday's home opener at Union College. Then, Mohonasen grad Roberto Sgueglia recorded the lone goal in Albany's 1-0 road win against Western Massachusetts Saturday.

Highlanders coach F.J. Zwicklbauer – a former Guilderland High School star, and Albany Alleycat – was pleased with his team's efforts, especially last Friday's tie in which Albany rallied from a 2-1 second-half deficit.

"I'll take a 2-2 decision right now," said Zwicklbauer. "I was really happy with the intensity we had."

Popolizio had a big hand – or foot – in the decision against Portland. The Brown University forward rebounded his own missed shot in the 12th minute to give the Highlanders a 1-0 lead.

"I hit it off the crossbar, and I was lucky enough to have it bounce back to me and knock in the rebound," said Popolizio.

Portland pulled even in the first minute of the second half when Michael Donald scored. Seventeen minutes later, Jason Massie converted a rebound in front of the Albany goal to give the visiting Phoenix a 2-1 lead.

The Highlanders – who had been outplayed by Portland for the first 18 minutes of the second half – regained their stride and started attacking the Phoenix goal. That effort paid off in the 71st minute when a collision between an Albany player and the Portland goaltender gave Popolizio an open net to shoot the ball into to tie the game.

"I'm not sure who it was, but it was a brave play by him for taking on the goalie," said Popolizio. "All credit on that goal goes to him."

Zwicklbauer was impressed with Popolizio's energy in his first PDA game.

"I call him 'pop-pop-pop' because he keeps on going," said Zwicklbauer. "I was really happy with his performance."

Several more Section II alumni played significant minutes for Zwicklbauer in the Highlanders' home opener including Sgueglia, Trey Jasenski (Mohonasen),

Is it girls lax playoff time already? G'land earns No. 1 seed

You know that old sports adage, "It's not how you start; it's how you finish." Right next to it should be a picture of the 2009-10 Boston Celtics. OK, moving on...

I've never understood why the Section II girls lacrosse playoffs have to start so early. The winning teams wind up waiting up to 10 days before they play in the regionals – an eternity in the sports world (just ask the Orlando Magic what happens after a long layoff).

With that said, there won't be a lot of suspense in Sectionals. Niskayuna should easily claim the Class B title after its strong regular-season performance, and Guilderland and Shaker should meet for the Class A title next Wednesday.

From the
Sports Desk

Rob Jonas

That Guilderland-Shaker game will be a great one. The Lady Dutch have one of the top goaltenders in the area in Amanda Santandrea, and the Blue Bison have one of the top offenses in the area led by Adrienne Devine (51 goals). Guilderland has its own offensive force in Erin Mossop (52 goals), so if Shaker does get more than a few goals past Santandrea, Mossop and Company should provide an adequate response.

Are there any possible roadblocks to a Guilderland-Shaker final? I suppose Colonie or Bethlehem could upset Guilderland in the semifinals, but it would take a perfect game on their part and a bad game on the Lady Dutch's part to make that happen. On Shaker's side of the bracket, Saratoga Springs has a nice one-two punch with Sarah Campbell (49 goals) and Julia Sirianni (48 goals). That could give the Blue Bison some serious problems defensively.

Still, I believe it will come down to Guilderland and

□ Playoff Page 31

The Guilderland girls lacrosse team locked up the No. 1 seed for the Section II Class A playoffs following last Friday's 17-2 Suburban Council victory over Averill Park that also wrapped up the South Division title.

The Lady Dutch (14-0 league, 14-1 overall) hosted No. 8 Columbia in one quarterfinal game Tuesday, while No. 4 Bethlehem (9-5, 9-6) played No. 5 Colonie in another quarterfinal contest.

Guilderland eased into the playoffs thanks to a team effort against Averill Park. Six players scored multiple goals, led by hat tricks from Kristen Cagino and Erin Mossop. Kendall Cietek, Jenna Crupi, Shelby Iapoco and Kelsey Michele all contributed a pair of goals.
