Professor: 'These aren't kitchen sink chemicals'

Brother of Keenan

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

Police last week arrested the brother of a Delmar teen caught in an explosion a year ago for allegedly storing harmful chemicals in the basement of his apartment complex.

Bethlehem police arrested Jason Sanchez, 24, Tuesday, Nov. 30, and charged him with reckless endangerment in the first degree, a felony, resisting arrest and obstructing governmental administration in the second degree, both misdemeanors.

Police allege Sanchez had chemicals including acetone, xylene, laboratory grade nitric acid, sulfuric acid, propane and butane, and also had "a commercial grade vacuum chamber" in the basement. In arrest reports, police said the items "pose[d] a serious risk of death" to residents of the complex and emergency responders.

A state Department of Health report on the Lafarge cement plant in Ravena has shed little light on whether that factory's emissions are having any effect on residents' health.

The report states that while the public could be exposed to chemicals from the plant by air and settled dust, health data collected in the ZIP codes around the plant "appear to be similar to rates across New York State." The plant has been in operation for almost 50 years.

The Community Advocates for Safe Emissions (CASE) group pressed the DOH for the study in 2009, but at the release of the findings said they were unhappy with the scope.

"I'm not sure that our questions are completely answered by what we have here," said CASE's Elyse Kunz, who noted the five ZIP codes covered by the study do not completely cover the area surrounding the

Albany County passes 2011 budget

Spares county nursing home,

By CHARLES WIFF and ANDREW BEAM

beama@spotlightnews.com

After dragging County Executive Michael Breslin through the mud for wanting to close the Albany County Nursing Home and raise property taxes by 15 percent, the Albany County Legislature on Monday, Dec. 6, passed a 2011 budget that will spare the nursing home and raise taxes by 5 percent.

With only two dissenting votes from Legislators Brian Scavo and William Hoblock, many of the remaining 36 legislators and members of the community congratulated and thanked Audit and Finance Chair Shawn Morse for his hard work on the budget.

"We were looking at a living breathing document that will affect many people's lives," Morse said. "This is a very difficult budget, but I believe through our hard work and a lot of effort through this legislature it was understood that there are people that will be affected and they need us to step up and be creative if figuring out ways to solve these problems."

In the legislators' budget, property taxes would only rise by 5 percent and it would keep the current nursing home opened until a new one is built. Morse said as his first year chairing the Audit and Finance Committee, it was certainly not a very enjoyable experience

IN BRIEF

Ten Broeck to hold holiday tea

A holiday tea will be held at Ten Broeck Mansion, 9 Ten Broeck Place, on Dec. 12, with the first seating from 1-3 p.m., and second seating from 3:30-5:30 p.m.

An elegant holiday tea will be served in the Formal Dining Room amid the festive decorations. Participants can also shop in the mansion's holiday shop. The cost is $20 per person and pre-paid reservations required. Call 436-9826 for information.

Woman's Club hosts concert

The Woman's Club of Albany December meeting will feature a night of music Monday, Dec. 27, with conductor and pianist Gioacchino Longobardi, violinist Alberto Vitolo and vocalist Tiziana Pizzi. The event is free and open to the public. The evening begins at 6:30 p.m. and the program will start at 7 p.m. at The Woman's Club of Albany, 725 Madison Ave., Albany. Light refreshments will be served.

The Woman's Club of Albany is a nonprofit organization whose membership strives to heighten awareness about the historical, social, and legal movements of women; and promotes community service and philanthropy, particularly for children and families in the Capital District. Please RSVP via e-mail to womansclubsvp@hotmail.com or by calling 465-3626. For more information, visit www.womansclubofalbany.org.

More donors are needed to 'adopt' families

The Albany County Department for Children, Youth and Families needs more donors for the annual Adopt-A-Family program.

The Adopt-A-Family program connects individuals, groups or organizations to a family in need during the holiday season. Donors are provided details about the family including the ages and interests of the children and appropriate gifts according to the needs of the family. Many families need basic items, such as blankets, winter coats and sheets.

In 2009, the Adopt-A-Family program benefited more than 250 families.

To participate in the Adopt-A-Family program or learn more, contact Sherri Chromik in the Department for Children, Youth and Families at 447-5659 or by e-mail at Sherri.Chromik@albanyccny.com. Donor forms are also available at www.albanycounty.com.

Police Blotter

Woman arrested with 0.27 BAC

The Bethlehem Police Department on Monday, Nov. 22, arrested Monika Bonacci, 47, of 4 Orchard St., Feura Bush, and charged her with aggravated DWI and failing to stop at a stop sign.

Police said they received several calls reporting Bonacci's 2000 Subaru Legacy driving erratically in the area of Kenwood Avenue, but could not locate the vehicle. The car was later seen parked at 380 Feura Bush Road with a woman sitting in the driver's side of the vehicle. Police responded there and waited for the car to move again, according to arrest reports.

Bonacci allegedly failed to stop at the stop sign when turning onto Feura Bush Road and was pulled over in the parking lot of 329 Feura Bush Road. Police said she had the odor of alcohol on her breath, watery eyes and was slurring her speech. She allegedly failed field sobriety tests and was taken into custody. A chemical test at the police station showed her BAC to be 0.27 percent, more than three times the legal limit.

Bonacci was remanded to Albany County jail on $10,000 bail, and a preliminary hearing was set for Monday, Nov. 29, with a return date set for Tuesday, Dec. 21.

Parking offenders nabbed

The Albany County Traffic Safety Board released its numbers on Nov. 29 on the number of tickets each police department issued on the dates of Nov. 26-27, after conducting a Handicap Parking saturation initiative titled "Project Access," revealing that Colonie doled out the most.

The total amount of tickets issued was 57, adding up to $8,945 in fines. Colonie contributed 26 of those tickets and collected $3,380 in fines. The Albany Police Department collected the second most with 20 tickets.

Colonie Police Lt. Ken Pero said most of the tickets were issued outside of commercial businesses such as Colonie Center, Northway Mall and the Kmart located on Central Avenue. He said the officers don't stick around for people to come out but speculated the reason as to why people have been misusing the handicap parking spaces.

"I think it's just laziness," he said. "It's people not wanting to have to look for a spot and not wanting to walk."

Back to you, Ed

Longtime Capital District anchor releases book

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

If you tuned in to the news on a regular basis during the past few decades, chances are you remember Ed Dague.

An instantly recognizable figure to longtime Capital District residents, Dague has seen many of the events of the 20th century, local and otherwise, from behind the news desk at channel 6 and later channel 13, and now he's releasing his first book looking back on his career, "Six and Eleven," after the two newscasts he anchored and produced.

Dague took his leave of the anchor's chair due to a battle with chronic pain, one he still wages today. That made penning the book a challenge, sometimes forcing him off his medications to keep a clear head. He managed the task by treating it as an assignment.

"I had to push myself to write," Dague said. "When the pain is really bad you find what it most affects is your concentration..."

"Part of what I wanted to do is a history of a period of journalism that's now gone ... television is never going to have that kind of impact again."

Ed Dague

I'm really kind of pleased with the book, but I wasn't when I was writing it."

But it is clear Dague wants to look beyond his health and even his own life. Though there is an autobiographical element to the book, "Six and Eleven" also contains Dague's thoughts on the television news business — past, present and future. Those looking for a tell all memoir will likely be disappointed.

"I don't really take on anybody, because I don't really have any anger," he said. "Part of what I wanted to do is a history of a period of journalism that's now gone ... television is never going to have that kind of impact again."

For Dague, it is obvious that with the advent of the Internet age the relevancy of the television newscast has diminished, no longer able to easily outdo other mediums when it comes to speed and image. But he's also candid about the importance of print media, and how the two can complement one another. With the newspaper business in a lurch, the ex-newsman worries for the future of journalism as a whole.

"Television absolutely requires newspapers ... we read the papers to find out and go shoot it," he said.

Dague recalled one instance when, much to the chagrin of station managers, he advised viewers looking for details on the state budget to buy a newspaper the next morning because an issue so complex couldn't be covered in 30 seconds.

"Part of my idea with that was to show how small television staffs were," he said of the book. "I think ownerships deliberately misled the public on how large the staffs were."

But for those who want to follow in Dague's footsteps, his book offers unique insight on interviewing techniques and the nuts and bolts of the business. It's something that might be of use to journalism students, and its informative content is why Three Lakes Publishing picked up the book.

For that local outfit,

"Six and Eleven" is the only release of the year. The publishing house focuses on quality over quantity, said company partner, former Times Union managing editor and local media mainstay Dan Lynch, who also wrote the book's introduction.

"Ed is a very smart guy, he has seen a lot, thought about it a lot, and has produced a book that ought to be of great interest to anybody who has any interest in the interaction of public affairs and the news media," Lynch said. "It was just the kind of book that we want to publish."

Dague remarked that penning the book's 172 pages was far from the type of writing he was used to, boiling down stories for the nightly newscast. Still, he said he's happy with the result.

"I had never thought of writing a book, it was not my plan to write a book, but when Dan Lynch called it sounded like a good idea," he said.

"Six and Eleven" is available on amazon.

Airport overcomes security measure obstacles

Few complaints at Albany International over pat downs

ANDREW BEAM
beama@spotlightnews.com

While the news has run rampant with passenger complaints over new security measures brought on by the Transportation Security Administration, the agency claims the reports on the new procedures have not been accurate.

"The media has blown this out of proportion to such a degree," said TSA spokeswoman Ann Davis. "Passengers are complimenting us and are happy with what we've been doing."

Before boarding a plane, passengers must undergo a full body scan by using one of the Advanced Imaging Technology machines, or they can opt out and be administered a pat down, which TSA Administrator John Pistole has admitted is a more invasive than previous pat downs.

In Albany International Airport's case, since they do not have the AITs in place, if a passenger sets off an alarm when they go through a metal detector and the issue can't be resolved, they must then be administered a pat down. Albany

"We try to be sensitive to both children and, of course, the parents."

— TSA Administrator John Pistole

International spokesman Doug Myers said on Nov. 24, one of the busiest traveling days of the year due to the holiday, that there were no complaints coming from passengers.

"Our average line today was 5-8 minutes," Myers said. "People were surprised they could walk right up to our check point."

The airport reviews projected statistics of passenger loads and ticket loads and analyzes how much staff they will need for the day, said Myers. With the new security measures, he has advised that passengers arrive 90 minutes before the flight.

"It seems to have worked very well today," he said, adding that they will most likely follow the same procedures during the Christmas travelling period.

Davis said that while Albany International is "well suited" for the machines, she hasn't seen a plan for when they will be put in place.

"It's a complex endeavor," she said. "They're large, heavy and tall. Screening equipment would need to be relocated and electrical requirement would have to be put in place."

The implementation of the AITs and pat downs were a result of the 2009 Christmas Day bombing plot involving Umar Farouk Abdul Mu'allab, Passengers wait at a checkpoint before entering the terminal at Albany International Airport on Nov. 29. While the airport has not installed AITs, it will ask passengers to submit to a more invasive pat down.

Stretching the evergreen to forever green

By WILLIAM R. DEVOE
devoew@spotlightnews.com

My wife is nuts.

This is what goes through my head every year we head to Jim Ely's tree farm out in Nassau to cut our own Christmas tree.

I don't see the difference in Christmas trees. Now, I'm not saying that I can't tell the difference between a Colorado Blue Spruce and a Scotch Pine (I can't, by the way), I'm saying that I don't see the difference between "great" Christmas trees and those that are just "good."

My wife can see that difference. If you give her about two-and-a-half hours to look at every single tree on the farm, that is. Like I said, she's nuts.

We usually go late in the season, which doesn't help with the selection. Usually the farm's been pretty picked over by the time we get there, so if you think you want a tree but want to look around a bit more, etiquette dictates you mark the tree with a glove or mitten to let others know you're coming back.

But, because my wife, Jess, is nuts when it comes to Christmas trees, about an hour into our tree search, she's standing in her thermal underwear by her latest find. She has left in her wake a path of good-looking trees marked with mittens, boots, a hat, a scarf, her snow pants and one of my children.

After she's marked the ones

Commentary:

Pop Culture

she's considering, there are approximately two trees left on the 4-acre farm for other families to choose from: a scrawny, Charlie Brown Christmas tree that stands 3 feet tall and has a form of athlete's foot that up until then I was sure trees could not get, and a 7-foot, immaculate plastic tree — fully decorated — that my wife has planted as a decoy.

She calls us over to the one she's standing near — well, not the son she left at the Douglas fir a few rows over.

"What do you guys think?" she asks.

"I think it looks like every other tree on this farm," I say.

"Can I let go of this tree now?" yells my son. At least, I think it's my son. A few other families have taken my wife's lead and started using their kids as markers.

We decide on that tree and while my wife is gathering her clothing, Kevin, almost 8 years old, and I cut it down and start to carry it to the car. On the way there, we notice Nathan, our 3-year-old, has a collection of new gloves.

"Nathan, where did you get those gloves?" asks Jess.

"The trees gave them to me," he says. We spend the next half hour trying to find the owners of the gloves in question and apologizing profusely to them if their trees have been taken.

We get the thing home and lay it on the kitchen floor so I can cut off another 3 or 4 inches of the stump. Jess goes into the other room to ready the ornaments. As I cut, our Golden Lab, Sophie, alternately fights and tries to mate with the tree. This causes my son Nathan to come to believe there is a squirrel in the tree that the dog is trying to get out. My other son, Kevin, starts shaking the tree a little to convince Nathan the "squirrel" is moving. Nathan then starts beating the tree with a broom, which scares the dog so much she pees on the floor and bolts out of the room, knocking Kevin over in the process.

"What are you people doing!?" my wife screams as she comes back into the kitchen.

The kids look around, scared to say the wrong thing.

"There is something wrong with that dog," I finally say, and move to get the mop.

Putting the tree up is a two-phase construction project. First comes the seating of the tree in the stand so that it at least looks straight. Everyone knows their role when we adjust the tree: I hold the tree with a pair of work gloves; Jess stands in the kitchen, 20 feet away, so she can tell me when it's straight; and the kids are relegated to the couch, out of the way.

After about 30 minutes of needles scratching my arms to shreds and falling into my eye sockets, my wife has found what she believes is the perfect position for the tree. She then takes about five steps closer, changes her mind and I finagle the tree for another half hour.

Then we water it.

Now, there are many old wives' tales as to what to put into the water in a Christmas tree base so that tree lives the longest. I can tell you we've tried them all.

We've done water and lemon juice, water and vinegar, adding aspirin, adding sugar. We've rubbed the stump with molasses (I really don't know where we got that one from) and Jess has even stayed up late at night reading to the tree in order to give it a reason to live.

One year, we tried encasing the base of the tree in Vaseline to keep it from losing moisture. And while it did make a cool sucking noise when we took the dead stump out a few days later, it did not have the preserving effect we thought it would.

In recent years, I have found that a mixture of ginger ale and white rum has been the most successful — not at preserving the tree, but rather at preserving my sanity as the dog and I drink it from the stand after everyone's fallen asleep.

While my wife is looking, however, I add boiling water.

After that's done, Jess emerges from the basement wearing a hardhat and carrying a set of blueprints. This is important. There is an order in the universe as to where a certain Christmas tree ornament should go. The store-bought silver bells cannot be higher or more prominent than the hand-blown-glass ornament my Aunt Kathy got us for our first Christmas as a married couple. The ornaments Kevin made from construction paper cut outs of his hands, while cute, should not be higher than the wooden sled that has little wooden mittens with all of our names on it.

Like I said, nuts.

I give my wife a hard time about her Christmas tree antics, but the truth is that my mother was the same way when I was growing up, and my brother and I loved it.

We used to joke that my mother would put up her Christmas tree the Friday after Thanksgiving and not take it down until July, which is only a little bit of an embellishment. The latest the tree ever stayed up was Cinco de Mayo, at which point it had been decorated with Valentine's Day cards, St. Patrick's day shamrocks and, for some reason, an alarm clock, which I can only guess was put there to commemorate Daylight Savings Time.

I can see Jess being the same way as my mother, putting the Christmas tree up earlier and keeping it up longer. And that's fine, as long as we don't get to a point where we're putting up the new tree right next to the old one.

Local pol commissioned to U.S. Navy

Albany County Legislator and Colonie resident Carl Zeilman commissioned to U.S. Navy as a public information officer

ANDREW BEAM
beama@spotlightnews.com

Carl Zeilman

While serving his county as an Albany County Legislator, Carl Zeilman will now also be serving his country as being commissioned in the public affairs community in the U.S. Navy Reserves.

Zeilman, 34, from Colonie, was commissioned in August but was not called to drill until Nov. 3, the day after Election Day where he had served as spokesman for Republican Candidate for the 46th Senate District in New York State Bob Domenici. Zeilman said it was a two-year process where he had to get recommendations, submit writing samples, submit to a background check and have the Navy look through his educational experience.

"You sit before a board where you're either selected or denied," he said, adding that he appeared before captains and admirals for the interviewing process. "I was selected into a very small community, which is public affairs."

His friend, Michael DeMartino, a Lieutenant in the Navy based out of Rome and Colonie resident, suggested the position to him and Zeilman referred to him as his "big brother" throughout the process. He helped Zeilman in purchasing the right attire for the interview, helped purchasing the right equipment and helped him even with saluting correctly.

"Carl is a long time friend of mine and we came up in politics together," said DeMartino who currently works for the District Attorney's Association. "Politics aside, you tend to recognize people who are full of it and are self interested in their own careers as opposed to people who want to get out there and get in the fabric of society and be a public servant."

DeMartino said he learned Zeilman wanted to serve at a higher level when they got to talking about his father who served in the Navy during the Vietnam War. DeMartino said he knew the Navy does direct commissioning with people who have skills already and don't need to be trained as a public information officer, just need to learn how to wear a uniform and how to march.

"Carl stands up straight and puts himself out there as someone who wants to help," he said. "I was more than happy to put my name on a letter of reference."

For his next training date, which he speculates will be in the spring or the summer, DeMartino said he will go through two weeks of programming where he will learn about the ins and outs of the U.S. Navy.

"Things like proper use of uniform, Navy jargon and rules and regulations," he said.

Zeilman said he will go through all the normal training besides boot camp, which DeMartino said he doesn't even need it.

"He's already self motivated," he said. "He just needs help in learning to become a naval officer, which he'll learn like introducing and duck to water."

Information such as Navy letter writing, how many squadrons make up an air wing and knowing who to salute

"It's a great responsibility and I'm looking forward to doing it. Being it's such a short time, I encourage people out there looking for something to give back to the community that this is a great way to do it."

Albany County Legislator, Carl Zeilman

and who salutes you, will be the types of things Zeilman will learn.

The position is an act of Congress and will be an eight-year term, said Zeilman, but he said this will have no interference with his position as an Albany County Legislator, which only meets once a month and has committee meetings at the end of the month.

His duties for the navy will be writing press releases, writing letters, maintaining the website and crafting news articles for papers and magazines, most of which can be done from home, even though he is based out of Norfolk, Va and attends Naval War College in Newport, R.I.

"There shouldn't be conflicts of interest or time conflicts," he said, adding that he has a certain amount of drills per year he must complete but said he could roll four into one week. "It's a little more flexible."

As a volunteer firefighter and a volunteer EMT, Zeilman said he is "giving back to the community at a greater scale," and cited it as one of the main reasons he wanted to be a part of the Navy. Even though it is an eight-year term, he sees himself holding the position longer than that.

"I can see myself doing more than the allotted time," he said. "There's opportunities to travel around the world and there is a chance you might be called to active duty and put in harms-way, and that's all a part of it. This was my first opportunity at doing so and I was fortunate enough to be selected."

Zeilman admitted to being a little nervous when having to put on the uniform and having to make sure everything was being worn correctly, but now that the moment has passed, he's ready to jump into it.

"It's a great responsibility and I'm looking forward to doing it," he said. "Being at such a short time, I encourage people out there looking for something to give back to the community that this is a great way to do it."

Holiday Ingestion

As Thanksgiving came and the Holiday Season is in full swing. As mentioned last week, rich fatty foods can predispose our furry friends to pancreatitis and gastrointestinal upset. Mistletoe, holly berries and poinsettia plants can also cause gastrointestinal irritation. Severe clinical signs such as seizures and shock can be appreciated with the ingestion of large quantities of mistletoe. If you believe your pet has ingested any of the above plants, contact a veterinarian immediately.

Another area of concern around the holiday season is the potential for foreign body ingestion. Cats and kittens are attracted to tinsel and ribbons. Once ingested, the linear material can cause the intestines to bunch together and even perforate or rupture. Ornaments or small objects can also lead to intestinal obstruction if ingested. If you know that your pet has ingested a foreign object it is advised to seek veterinary assistance immediately. Symptoms consistent with obstruction include but are not limited to vomiting, lethargy and anorexia. As you decorate the tree or the rest of your home, make sure that ornaments and linear objects are out of your pet's reach. Electrical cords should also be carefully placed. Electrocuting in pets can lead to painful burns around the mouth and throat, fluid in the lungs, cardiac arrhythmias and death.

As we prepare for the Holiday Season, it is important to keep the safety of our companions in mind. Please consult your veterinarian with any questions that you may have. All of us at The Animal Hospital wish you a safe and Happy Holiday season.

Matters of Opinion in The Spotlight

While waiting for answers, support improvements

As Charles Wiff reports on page one, the issue of Lafarge's impact on the health of the people who work and live near the cement giant's Ravena plant is one that has yet to be fully settled.

A State Department of Health study collected data in the ZIP codes surrounding the plant, and the resulting report found that while the public is exposed to chemicals from the plant by way of air and settled dust, its health is similar to statewide levels. Now, of course there are those who are unhappy with the methodology of the study — saying the scope was too narrow, not including all of the surrounding communities — and they are right to be skeptical of its findings thus far (a second phase of the DOH study will focus on potential impact).

Editorial

We at The Spotlight aren't saying we don't think the DOH study is adequate, we're saying the residents of Ravena, New Baltimore, Coeymans, Selkirk and the other communities near Lafarge are well within their rights to question any information given in regard to something that has potential health implications. This is not, however, a tacit endorsement for residents or groups like The Community Advocates for Safe Emissions or the Friends of Hudson to shop around for studies until they come up with results that confirm their preconceptions.

Hardly a concrete stance on our part, we know. So we will offer this:

Regardless of the studies, their findings, the beliefs of the industry and the layman, we can support Lafarge's endeavors to improve their operation and its impact on the community. The Department of Environmental Conservation recently accepted the company's draft environmental impact statement for a modernization project, one that will change its production process and therefore its emissions. The cement maker wants to replace the current wet-kiln process with a dry one that promises to save energy and reduce many emissions.

The 90-day public comment period is now open on the project. Written comments can be submitted to the DEC at an informal public information session on Wednesday, Dec. 8, at RCS High School at 6 p.m.; at the legislative hearing on Jan. 20, 2011; hand-delivered or mailed to the DEC Region 4 office at 1130 North Westcott Road, Schenectady, NY 12306-2014; faxed to the DEC Region 4 office at 357-2460; or e-mailed to the DEC Region 4 office at r4dep@gw.dec.state.ny.us.

For or against, The Spotlight encourages you to comment. The DEIS document can be viewed at lafargeravenafacts.com or on the DEC website at www.dec.ny.gov/permits/70477.html.

Christmas trees without guilt

Each year in the United States about 35 million evergreen trees are harvested specifically for use as Christmas trees. The flip side of the harvest is that more than 100 million trees are planted each year as potential Christmas trees.

By BOB BEYFUSS
news@spotlightnews.com

The writer is a retired extension agent, Greene County.

Each year in the United States about 35 million evergreen trees are harvested specifically for use as Christmas trees. To some people this may seem like an ecological disaster or a crime against nature but in fact, the opposite is true. The flip side of the harvest is that more than 100 million trees are planted each year as potential Christmas trees. The net result is actually a gain of more than 50 million evergreen trees that would never have been planted if the Christmas tree market did not exist.

In New York alone there are more than 1,000 members of the state Christmas tree grower's association. Christmas trees are a wonderful example of a renewable resource that provides many environmental benefits. Don't feel guilty about cutting down or buying a pre-cut Christmas tree. It has been grown as a crop, just like a poinsettia, to delight your senses and help celebrate the holiday season.

Nobody feels guilty about

Cornell University

killing a potato when they order french fries at McDonald's and no one should feel guilty about buying a Christmas tree.

In Upstate New York it requires at least 8 to 12 years to grow a decent Christmas tree depending upon the species. During the growing period these trees provide oxygen, habitat for wildlife and preservation of open space as well as income for the rural landowners who raise them. The trees are a long-term agricultural commodity that benefits the local economy and sequesters significant amounts of carbon in the process. Visiting a local "choose and cut" Christmas tree farm is also a great way to enjoy the outdoors for a family adventure.

We are lucky to have a wide variety of evergreen trees to choose from in this region. I seem to recall that only white or Norway spruce trees were available when I was a kid growing up in Jersey City, although at the time, I did not know the difference between a spruce and a fir or a pine. I do recall that the needles were sharp-pointed, short in length and they quickly dropped off the branches onto the tracks of my toy train set. This pretty much describes spruce trees, but freshly cut ones will hold their needles for weeks indoors if kept well watered. Blue spruce trees are very beautiful with stiff branches that support lots of lights and ornaments but their pointed needles are not nice to touch.

Pine trees such as Scotch pine or Austrian pine, Red pine or White pine have the longest lasting needles. Like all pines, their needles are arranged in bundles of two to five that are joined at the base. Pines may be cut as early as August and will still retain their needles until after January or even later. Fir trees such as Douglas fir, white fir, Balsam fir, Fraser fir and noble fir are perhaps the most fragrant types with good needle retention and a wide range of needle lengths, and different shades of green.

Whatever type of tree you select, be sure to make a fresh cut on the base of it when you get it home and immediately place it in a pail of water. Cut off at least two inches from the bottom to allow for easier water uptake. A freshly cut tree may "drink" as much as a quart of water a day indoors. This insures that the tree will smell and feel nice as long as the holidays last and not present an undue fire hazard. After the holidays the tree can be recycled as an outdoor bird feeder. I will have more to say about this in a future column. Happy Holidays!

Doctors will ring in New Year with pay cut

Editor, The Spotlight:

At the stroke of midnight on Dec. 31, doctors who treat Medicare patients are scheduled to absorb a 25 percent pay cut – a cut that threatens the ability of seniors to see their physicians and receive the care they need. It is up to Congress to stop this pay cut and ensure that doctors are not driven out of Medicare.

On behalf of the more than 2.3 million AARP members in New York State and all seniors who have earned their Medicare benefits by working hard and paying into the system, I am calling on Congress to take responsibility and act to ensure that older Americans have access to the doctors they trust.

AARP is not alone in believing that the Medicare payment system is broken and requires a permanent fix. But it isn't the flawed physician payment system that concerns so many of our members here in New York and elsewhere. It is, rather, the prospect of suddenly being without a physician.

According to a recent AARP poll, over 80 percent of AARP members are concerned that a Medicare pay cut will threaten access to their doctors. As people age, they face increasing health issues so a trusted relationship with their physician becomes increasingly important. They are also less likely to be able to travel long distances for care.

As the New Year approaches, there is one resolution that Medicare patients would like to see made by Congress: honor the commitment to Medicare patients and the physicians who care for them.

We offer congratulations to the Bethlehem Girls Swim and Dive team and coaches Allison Ayers and Jennifer Gough on their recently completed successful season. The girls finished third at Sectionals and 5 members of the team competed at States. The girls did a great job at States helping Section 2 finish second overall; Section 2's best finish in 11 years!

Special congratulations go out to the 200 medley relay team of Tara O'Donnell, Grace Ayers, Bethany Powhida and Lauren Zemmering (pictured), who finished 4th overall, and in the process, broke the Section 2 record in the event that had stood since 1982!

Congratulations girls on breaking a 28-year-old record!

Bridge the gap between the 'haves' and 'have-nots'

Editor, The Spotlight:

The gap between the "haves" and the "have-nots" is growing increasingly vast, especially for low-income individuals and minorities where unemployment hits hardest.

Good-paying, family-sustaining jobs are few and difficult to attain. The age-old tradition of trade apprenticeships as a pathway to earning a living wage still exists, but there are only limited openings, with tough entry criteria of skills, knowledge, math and experience requirements.

In 2008, the Building Bridges program was developed for low-income and minority individuals to prepare for the apprenticeship application process at no cost to them. Created in partnership between The Capital Region Workforce Development Center and with direct input from the Building Trades Council, the outcomes have been remarkably good. Of those who have graduated, 99 percent have been minorities and the majority of them are in apprenticeships or on waiting lists to start one.

The content of the program includes construction math, safety training, work readiness training, reading comprehension and more. Hands-on experience is offered and on-going mentoring helps assist the participants through the process. The program has been so successful that the same model is being used in two other regions of the state.

The program is meeting the greatest economic goal for many in our country right now—JOBS. People are getting jobs that will provide them with living wages, health benefits, and decent pensions. I am very proud of the program and look forward to holding it in Schenectady County in the very near future.

Anyone interested in participating, or would like more information, please call 595-9525. I would not hesitate to give references from people who have gone through the program successfully, or from apprentice coordinators in the trades who are working with the graduates.

Search, shop and give to charity

National initiative benefits local charities

By ALYSSA JUNG
jung@spotlightnews.com

This holiday season—and year-round—it's easy for people to give to their favorite charities without spending a dime. GoodSearch.com and GoodShop.com are two websites that allow the average Internet surfer or online shopper accomplish their task and donate to the organization of their choice, at the same time.

"GoodSearch is a search engine powered by Yahoo, so it's the same results. Except the first time you go on site, enter your favorite charity and every time you search, about a penny goes to that cause," said J.J. Ramburg of GoodSearch. "With GoodShop, you enter your favorite charity and then click through to more than 1,600 partner retailers we have. You shop on their site as you normally would and spend nothing extra, but a percentage of what you spend goes back to your charity. You might save money too, because we offer thousands of coupons and free shipping for those stores."

Ramburg said 500 people searching four times a day will earn approximately $7,300 a year for any given charity.

The initiative—GoodSearch was created in 2005 and GoodShop representative. Half of that came from online purchases through GoodShop.

"This gives the

"What if every gift you gave helped a cause without you spending any more money?"

—J.J. Ramburg,
GoodSearch

in 2007—is particularly useful now during the holidays, when people are pinched as it is, said Ramburg.

"Now with holiday shopping, what if every gift you gave helped a cause without you spending any more money?" said Ramburg.

There are several Saratoga County organizations listed on GoodSearch and GoodShop, and any not on there can visit the website to find out how to get involved. Already benefiting are Waldorf School in Saratoga Springs, Sweet Adelines International—Saratoga Soundtrack Chorus, Alcohol and Substance Abuse Prevention Council of Saratoga County, NorthStar Church, Shelters of Saratoga, Foundation for Human Movement Studies, Round Lake Library and more.

Round Lake Library has already received just over $100 in the first six months, according to Sandra Debus, a library library money to fund new children's literacy programs and resources and programs for job searchers," said Debus. "Thanks to those who do this already."

On the search side, money is raised through advertisers the same way other search engines like Google or Bing raise money, said Ramburg, but GoodSearch donates 50 percent of that revenue. Shopping money comes from the retailers, so the stores are donating the money but it's getting to the charities through GoodShop.

"We started GoodSearch because we wanted to come up with a way to support causes that didn't take time or money. There are all the people out there that care about something but don't have extra time or money, so we wanted to make doing good and giving back easy," said Ramburg. "It's grown faster than we could have ever imagined. When the economy took a dive, people were looking for ways to support causes and the charities were looking for ways to fill funding gaps when people couldn't make donations. There's just no reason not to do it."

Visit www.goodsearch.com and www.goodshop.com to see what Saratoga County charities are listed.

Fund aims to have Loudonville man a top marksman neighbors helping one another

The Bethlehem Festival Fund's annual Holiday Appeal is underway with a goal of at least $30,000 to assist Bethlehem individuals and families who are experiencing financial difficulties.

The Festival Fund, formerly known as the "White Christmas Festival," is an all-volunteer nonprofit organization that began in 1942. All donated money goes to help local individuals and families with temporary needs not otherwise met by traditional assistance programs. Last year the Festival Fund provided 110 turkeys and holiday baskets for needy Bethlehem recipients and this year has assisted over 280 families and individuals with temporary needs.

"We help students, senior citizens, families and individuals with health concerns and economic difficulties caused by job loss, house fires, divorce, illness or other life changes," said Treasurer Paul Gutman. He added that he feels good when he reads thank you letters from recipients with messages such as "Thank you for your donation for my prosthesis. It is nice to know there are people out there willing to help." He pointed out a card from a young student who drew a picture of two smiling faces leaning on each other and wrote, "Thank you for everything. I'm so happy you are helping my mom get the flute. You're my best friend."

The Festival Fund collaborates with school personnel, the Bethlehem Seniors Services Department and other local service providers in identifying students, families and individuals who need temporary help with items such as utility bills, eyeglasses, clothing, field trips and supplies for students. It also provides assistance to local food pantries at the Bethlehem Town Hall and First Reformed Church of Bethlehem. In addition, the Festival Fund provided three $1,000 college scholarships to local high school graduates last spring.

Donations are tax-deductible and can be mailed to: Bethlehem Festival Fund, P.O. Box 341, Delmar, NY 12054. For additional information about the Festival Fund, contact President Greg Jackson at 462-6731 or BethFestFund@aol.com.

Lawrence A. Corbett ranks in National Guard's annual competition

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. - For the son of a Loudonville couple, earning a top spot as one of the National Guard's top shooters has become almost an obsession over the past year.

Army National Guard Spec. Lawrence A. Corbett, son of Dr. Lawrence P. and Kathleen Corbett of Loudon Parkway, Loudonville, was one of more than 400 of the top National Guard marksman throughout the country who converged on Camp Robinson, in Little Rock, to determine the best shooters in the nation.

The 40th annual Winston P. Wilson sustainment training exercise and marksmanship competition focused on training that combined marksmanship skills with combat tasks to gauge the overall readiness of the National Guard soldiers.

placing as high as 17th in the Combat Rifle match.

He also led his team to a 15th place finish in the Rapid Fire rifle match.

"This is a great opportunity to compete against the best shooters in the nation," said Corbett, a 1993 graduate of Bethlehem Central High School, Delmar. He went on to earn a bachelor's degree from State University at Albany.

competition of this magnitude is a year-round affair for these guardsmen and women, with hundreds of hours of practice on the firing range with several different types of weapons. But, more than simply a shooting match, the Wilson competition is even more about preparation for combat.

"We participated in many state and regional matches to first qualify for this competition," said Corbett.

Win or lose, the soldiers who compete here not only learn where they stand against the best in the business, but they take away a game plan for what it takes to survive on today's battlefield.

"This is a great opportunity to learn from the best, and hopefully apply those lessons in the future."

RCS Library slates Pianist to replace Copernicus Duo vacation week activities

Count on the library to help beat the boredom of a winter vacation week. Not only does the library have its usual selection of books, videos and music to check out, but there will also be two special vacation week activities just for kids.

Library Pictographs

Make your mark on the newly refurbished library. Kids age 10 and up are invited to help create artwork for the new juvenile non-fiction area on Wednesday, December 29th from 1-2:30. Young artists will choose a non-fiction subject area and create a picture to represent that topic.

Kids Construction Zone

The Library Construction Zone re-opens Thursday, December 30th from 10:30-12 in the Library Annex. Build the highest tower or the craziest spaceship - this activity always brings out creative construction! Bring a friend for a construction play date. Lego fans are invited to let their imaginations run wild with our collection of building blocks.

Vacation activities are free and open to the public. For more details call the Library at 756-2053 or visit our website at www.uhls.org/rcscl.

There has been a last-minute change to our Sunday Music schedule this weekend. Rouben Aivazian will replace the Copernicus Duo this Sunday Dec. 12 at 2pm. He will play works by Bach, Scarlatti, Schumann and Chopin.

A performer for 35 years, pianist Rouben Aivazian gave more than 150 concerts with the National Philharmonic Orchestras of Armenia, Georgia, Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania, Russia and Azerbaijan before emigrating to the United States.

His extensive teaching experience includes work at the Special Music School of Armenia, the Armenian State Conservatory, and the State Pedagogical University in St. Petersburg, as well as many years as an accompanist for instrumentalists and vocalists.

Aivazian holds a Ph.D in Piano from the State Tchaikovsky Conservatory in Moscow and is a Laureate of the Vianna Da Motta International Competition in Lisbon.

A Little Sunday Music is generously supported by Friends of Bethlehem Public Library. The concert is free and open to the public.

Recent publications

The 2010-11 edition of Community Contacts is now available at the library and online. This library publication features smaller community groups which do not have a permanent address and contact information. Each group's listing includes a phone number, email and web address if available, meeting and membership information, and a brief description of the group's activities. The publication is updated annually.

Our Gifts for Book Lovers brochure has been streamlined. This pocket-size publication contains gift-giving ideas in the form of thumbnail book reviews by our librarians. Gift ideas for kids and teens as well as adults are included. Pick one up today at the information desk.

Holiday hours

The library will be closed

Friday and Saturday Dec. 24-25 for the Christmas holiday, and also on Friday and Saturday Dec. 31-Jan. 1 for the New Year's holiday. We're open all the time online at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org and www.bplkids.org.

Budget

as many legislators agreed that this year's budget was one of the hardest. He said that many seniors and people with fixed incomes making poverty level wages could not afford Breslin's budget.

The main topic of the evening was the nursing home, in regard to which the legislature passed a bill to issue a Certificate of Need to the State Department of Health with a vote of 36-2. Legislator Timothy D. Nichols said that through this budget process it appeared that Breslin was doing everything he could to make sure the facility was shut down.

"The executive is obsessed with closing the nursing home," he said. "And the realization came through when we saw his budget."

Nichols referred to the vote on the Certificate of Need as a "referendum" on needing a new nursing home.

The budget drawn up and ultimately passed by the legislature seems much easier to swallow than the previous version of the 2011 plan proposed by the county executive, but before the vote, some legislators were wondering if the lawmakers' proposal will work anywhere but on paper.

Breslin in October released his executive budget for the coming year, which called for a 20 percent reduction of the county workforce on top of a 15 percent increase in the tax levy and a plan to sell the county nursing home.

But the legislature's Audit and Finance Committee recently came up with a plan that restores many of those cuts — including keeping the nursing home — and raises taxes by just 5 percent. The disparity between the two caused no small amount of friction between county leaders.

Morse, D-Cohoes, chairman of the Audit and Finance Committee, said the legislature was able to identify many revenue items that were not in the executive budget, as well as retool some programs to realize savings.

"I think our budget is really a sound budget, it's a budget the legislature should be proud of," he said in an interview before the vote. "We spent many months going through the budget, we spent much of our time trying to have budget management and the county executive's people respond to our questions and requests."

But days before the vote, Breslin was quick to take issue with many elements of the plan.

"I have serious concerns regarding the budget course the Audit and Finance Committee has taken. The committee's proposed changes to the executive 2011 budget significantly overestimate revenues and savings and will not sustain critical County operations," he wrote in a letter to Morse.

Time for an American Girl tea party

It's time for our popular annual American Girl Tea Party!

It's a special time for tea and crumpets with your American Girl doll and your mom or grandmom, grown-up sister or aunt! Registration is required. The program is for kindergarteners and older on Monday, Dec. 27, from 3 pm - 4:30 pm.

If you are older than 4, you are invited to drop in on Saturday, December 11, between 10 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. to work on holiday projects. We have craft supplies and instructions and teen helpers to assist you. Make something to bring home.

On Dec. 16 at 6:30 p.m., we'll be "On Our Way to the Gingerbread House" with Miss Amy at Family Evening Storytime. Stories are designed for pre-school through grade 2 and registration is requested.

Gail Brown and Duke are having a Paws for Reading session on Sunday, December 19 between 1 - 3 p.m. Duke, a certified therapy dog, loves to hear stories read by young people in grade 1 - 5 who may need encouragement with their reading. Make an appointment by calling 765-2791.

Voorheesville Public Library

The Giving Tree is up through December 13. If you haven't brought your gift over yet, time is getting short. The gifts will be packed up and delivered to Parsons Child and Family Center.

Readers in grades 4-5 will talk about The Cats of Roxville Station by Jean Craighead George on Friday, December 10 @ 7:00 p.m.

Visit the library website at www.voorheesvillelibrary.org and submit your holiday events for posting on our community calendar.

Welcome to the Gingerbread Public Library

The Guilderland Public Library has been transformed for the holiday season into the Gingerbread Public Library! From special events, such as the Gingerbread Storytime on December 11 and the Annual Holiday Concert on December 19, to the decorations throughout the Library, it's ginger and sugar (and free gingerbread men to our younger patrons) to celebrate the holidays. Here are just a few Gingerbread Public Library free activities coming up.

Gingerbread Storytime

Kindergarteners to Second Graders and their parents or caregivers are invited to come to the Gingerbread Public Library on Saturday, December 11, at 11 am, for a special Gingerbread Storytime!

Children will make a small, non-edible gingerbread house to take home. Gingerbread is a yummy part of many stories, such as Hansel and Gretel. We'll be reading and viewing some classics and some new, funny favorites, too.

Please register for this Storytime by calling 456-2400 x 9.

Holiday Concert

The singing group Suburban Sounds will hold their free, Annual Holiday Concert at the Library on Sunday, December 19, at 2 pm.

This concert has become a favorite refuge from the weekend-before-Christmas holiday hustle and bustle. Come and enjoy traditional carols - you might be asked to sing along - and newer selections that are gaining increasing popularity. This is a fun, relaxed concert for families. (Wearing of holiday apparel is encouraged!)

Help us help you

Please give to the Gingerbread Public Library's "Annual Giving Tree."

You rely on the Guilderland Public Library's vast collection of books, music, online services, free programs, and cultural events.

And now we ask: Can we rely upon you to donate to our Giving Tree? You'll help underwrite the many programs not supported by tax dollars that make the Guilderland Public Library the cultural center of our community.

Your Giving Tree gift supports events such as the Notable Author Speakers Series, the Annual Summer Reading Club, Literary Garden Events, Family Fun Days, and so many more.

Estate Planning for Personal Property

By FRAN O'ROURKE,
Senior Vice President,
Key Private Bank

When we think of estate planning, we tend to think of the basics: wills, power of attorney and trusts. We think of our assets—real estate, bank accounts, stocks, bonds, life insurance. And we think of guardianship issues, executors and lawyers. What we don't think about, or oftentimes overlook and undervalue, is our personal property...our "stuff."

But the truth is, in today's economy, in which wealth has declined for many people, the fine art on your walls; vintage car in your garage; gold, silver and stones in your jewelry box; and even the family heirlooms collecting dust in your attic can account for a considerable portion of your net worth.

The question is, do your estate planning documents reflect this? If they do not, you may be exposing your estate to the unexpected.

Valuing your personal property

To understand the value of your personal property you need to inventory and appraise it. The inventory needs to be very detailed and should document proof of ownership and authenticity.

Fran O'Rourke

As far as the appraisal, your wealth advisor should be able to refer you to a qualified appraiser. However, Leslie Hindman, president of Leslie Hindman Auctioneers, notes that you will also want to ask potential appraisers the following questions.

- How many appraisals have you performed and for whom?

- What has been the size of the estates you have appraised?

- Have your appraisals held up under IRS scrutiny?

According to Hindman, a qualified appraiser by definition of the IRS is an appraiser who is active in the market everyday. But she is quick to point out that a quality appraiser is someone who has experience with "stuff" and the expertise to see a property beyond the components of the appraisal required by law.

As the old saying goes, your property is only as valuable as the price someone is willing to pay for it. So it's important to work with an appraiser who is experienced and can provide you with an appraisal that most accurately reflects your property's fair market value (FMV).

Estate planning for personal property

Personal property is a special asset class. To plan effectively, you need to ask yourself: what is the ultimate disposition?

Basically, there are two things you can do with your fine art, antiques and other valuable collectibles:

1. Gift them to family
2. Gift them to charity

There are special considerations for each. If you are going to gift your personal property to family, it is important to have open conversations about the value of the items—both monetarily and emotionally. Take the time to account for the personal desires of each family member. For example, your daughter with modern tastes might not desire your cherished Louis XIV chair. So what she ultimately decides to do with it might upset other family members—and even you.

If you are going to gift your property to a charity, there are varying laws for how the arrangement and tax benefit is structured. So you need to determine how the charity is going to use the property. If they turn around and sell it, that may not provide the best tax outcome for you. However, if the charity uses it to fulfill their mission, such as an art museum exhibiting a painting, then you will maximize the tax benefit of the gift.

These are important details. They need to be accounted for in your planning, and your advisor should be able to help guide you through the process.

Selling your personal property

Whether you're looking for liquidity in your portfolio, conducting a bargain sale for tax considerations or selling inherited personal property, you will likely end up at the doorstep of an auction house.

Auction houses provide a full range of services to buyers and sellers. They generally have strong working relationships with bankers, attorneys, museums, galleries, collectors and fiduciaries around the world. They typically have a high level of expertise as well, which allows them to effectively appraise and market property according to current trends.

Hindman emphasizes that technology, as it has in other markets, has changed the auction industry. Today's auctions are held live and online. People now bid from all over the world in real-time. The art and jewelry markets in particular have become very global. So being connected and active in the market is as important now as it has ever been.

Auction house fees are usually negotiable and commission based. If an item goes unsold in an auction it will either go back to auction or will be returned to the owner.

Don't go it alone

Serious collectors know the market, but the majority of collectors don't have the expertise or experience to manage their personal property. It really does require a specialized approach. That's why it is important to work with an advisor who has experience in estate and charitable planning. Not only will a trusted advisor be able to steer you toward reputable appraisers and auctioneers, they will be able to help you avoid unnecessary taxes, fees and legal issues while allowing you to realize the full value of your personal property.

About the author: Fran O'Rourke is a senior vice president and market manager for Key Private Bank in the Capital Region. She has more than 20 years' experience in the financial services industry and may be reached at 518-257-9703 or Frances_O'Rourke@keybank.com.

What do I need to know about my personal property?

According to some industry experts, including Michael Mendelsohn, founder of the Bridge Group, personal property will account for up to 15 percent of all wealth that will be transferred over the next 50 years. Given that most people do not properly assess the value of their personal property—often undervaluing it—here are a few things that should be taken into consideration when thinking about your collectibles.

- Frequently, personal property doesn't get appraised until someone dies or it is needed for insurance reasons. However, taking an inventory and having an appraisal conducted should be an important part of the estate planning process.

- Most people who collect fine art, antiques and other items often underestimate how much those items appreciate in value over time. If you have a collection or valuable personal property, you should have it appraised at least every five years.

- You might not even know if what you have is valuable. But that shouldn't stop you from calling an auction house. Auction houses are happy to talk to people and look at things, free of charge, to assess value.

- Be sure to keep on record any and all background information for all pieces. You will need proof of sale, the property's history and proof of authenticity. You should also keep your appraisal report with your other estate planning documents.

- Fair market value (FMV) is the price someone is willing to pay for a possession without any compulsion to either buy or sell.

- Retail replacement value is what something needs to be insured for in case of loss.

- If you gift personal property to a charity, ensuring that it will be used to support the organization's purpose may entitle you to a charitable income tax deduction equal to the FMV.

- Instead of making an outright gift to a charity, you can sell personal property to a charity at less than FMV, known as a bargain sale. This allows you to take a deduction between the sales price and the property's FMV.

- You can transfer personal property to loved ones during your life and qualify for the annual gift tax exclusion.

BHS students stage 'Merchant'

Performance marks 22nd consecutive year school has brought the Bard's work to life

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

The young thespians of Bethlehem High School will once again this winter bring the work of Shakespeare to life on their auditorium stage, this time tackling a difficult, controversial and much lauded play.

A cast of 27, along with dozens of other students working behind the scenes, will stage "The Merchant of Venice" in eight showings over the course of two weeks. This will be the 22nd consecutive year a theater group has performed a Shakespeare play. Last year, a cast of 32 put on "As You Like It."

Likewise, this will be Director James Yeara's 21st Shakespearean production at BHS. Every June, he presents students with a list of Shakespeare plays to choose from for their production the coming year, and he said "Merchant" is frequently near the top of the list.

"The Merchant of Venice" is a well-known Shakespeare comedy taking place in the city of its name. It focuses on Shylock, a Jewish moneylender and two young nobles named Bassanio and Antonio, the latter of whom serves as guarantor for the latter on a loan from Shylock that is needed to court Portia, the play's female lead.

Yeara has chosen to stage the play in Venice, 1931, a time of great strife for Italy, during the carnival season. The illusion is benefited by backdrops created by the school's art students.

The play in modernity is considered controversial by some given Shylock's role, and scholars still argue Shakespeare's intent today. Some believe the events of the play to be an antisemitic barb, while others believe the poor treatment Shylock is eventually subjected to is an argument for tolerance.

Indeed, Yeara said some of his colleagues have outright refused to see the play (while others have been asking him to do it for years). Students, however, routinely support the work in the annual play election, and Yeara said he's confident in their ability to view it with a critical eye.

"Thankfully I have a cast and crew who are smart and honest enough to create 'Merchant of Venice' on stage, and teacher support from the art director and lighting designer to assist in letting student talents shine on stage. If there's one thing more than falling in love Bethlehem students understand, it's the hate that hides in people," he said.

The cast and crew has been rehearsing relentlessly in past weeks in preparation of staging the play. In November, they had the opportunity to travel to New York to see Al Pacino in a production of the play. That trip was supported in part by the Bethlehem Shakespeare Support Group.

The run of "Merchant of Venice" starts on Friday, Dec. 10, and will be performed at 7 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays until Dec. 18. There will be 1 p.m. shows on Saturday, Dec. 11 and Friday, Dec. 17, and 2 p.m. showings on Sunday, Dec. 12 and 19. All shows are in the high school auditorium.

Tickets may be reserved online at www.theatrewithoutanet.org or by calling 439-2991. Past performances have been known to sell out.

Volunteers from the Upstate Train Associates construct an elaborate 19-by-27 foot display of running O Gauge model trains every year at the Schenectady Museum & Suits-Bueche Planetarium. This year, the trains begin running Saturday, Dec. 11.

All aboard! Next stop — Schenectady Museum

Popular model train exhibit returns, as well as a few 'favorite things'

In what has become a holiday staple in the Capital District, visitors come each year to the Schenectady Museum & Suits-Bueche Planetarium to see the model trains run. Volunteers from the Upstate Train Associates construct an elaborate 19-by-27 foot display of running O Gauge model trains. These are the trains most people know and love as the Lionel trains. This year, the trains begin running Saturday, Dec. 11.

"This display is one of the most popular events we host at the Museum each year," said Schenectady Museum Director of Public Programs & Education, Ilene Frank. "It's wonderful to see grandparents bring their grandchildren, and then tour them around the museum and point out objects to them, such as some of the first televisions and radios, and be able to share memories of what it was like when these technologies were brand new."

In addition to several model trains that run continuously, visitors can see a host of other items that have been added to the display over the years. These include an amusement park with Santa riding a roller coaster and a pair of children ice skating on a pond, a farm scene with horses and cows, and much more. The trains that load and unload their cargo of barrels, lumber, and other objects always delight visitors.

And there's even a small working Thomas the Trains display, for those children who know and love the Thomas the Train character.

The model trains will run from noon-3 p.m. on the following dates and times: Dec. 11 and 12, Dec. 18 and 19, Dec. 26-30, Jan. 2, Jan. 8 and 9, and Jan. 15-17. Additionally, the trains will run from noon-2 p.m. on Dec. 31.

Those who prefer to cast a more skyward gaze for their means of transportation can have an astronomical adventure with a planetarium show.

Celebrate the season with Tis the Season, a special holiday-themed planetarium show. The show runs at 2 p.m. Tuesdays through Sundays through Jan. 2. Light up the cold winter with this bright holiday show that traces the history and development of holiday customs and cultural celebrations. This show includes a live presentation about the winter night sky.

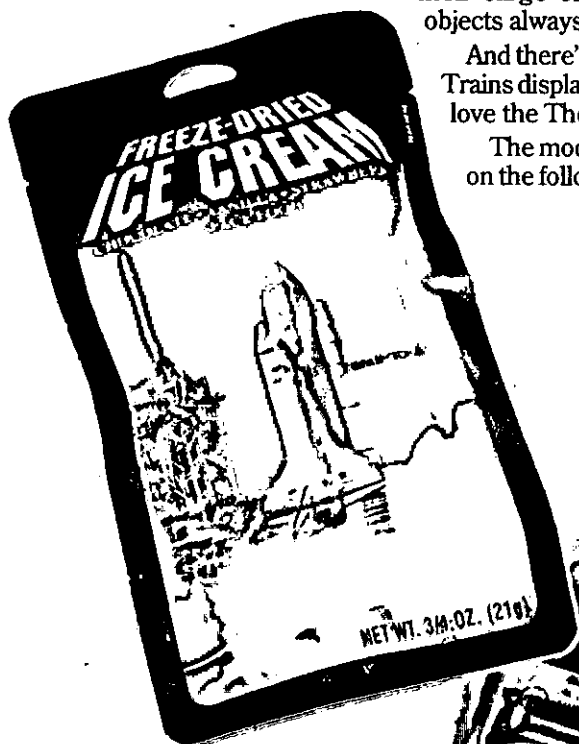

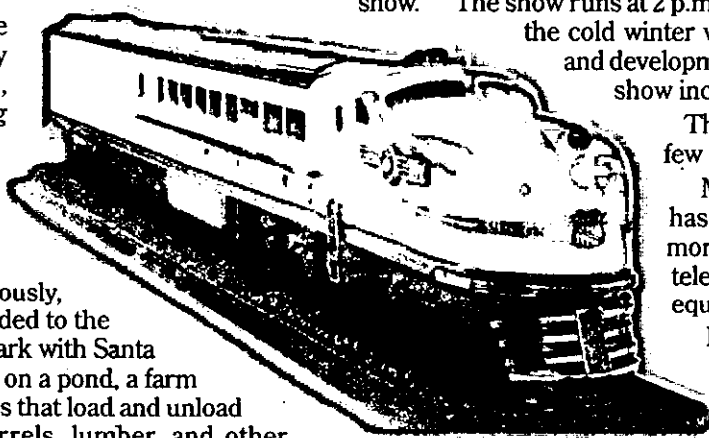

This year, the Schenectady Museum will be sharing a few of its staffers' favorite things with visitors.

Most visitors don't know that the Schenectady Museum has a storage area below its exhibit floor that includes more than 25,000 artifacts, including appliances, radios, televisions, industrial products, inventions, and laboratory equipment.

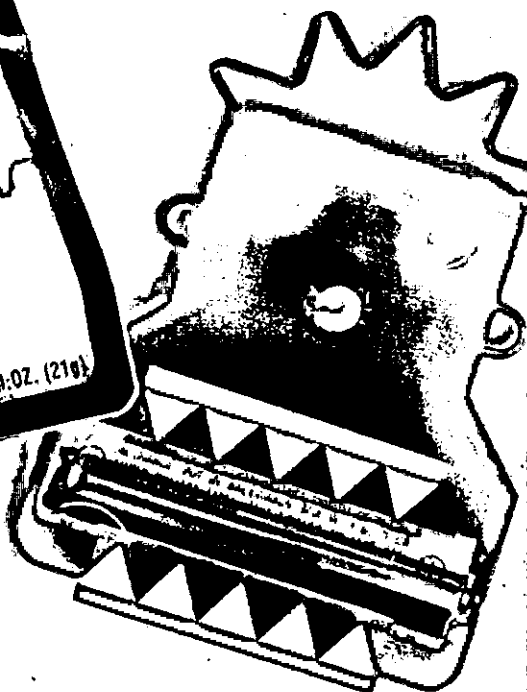

For this new exhibit, "Our Favorite Things," Schenectady Museum staff, trustees and volunteers selected artifacts from the museum's permanent collection that hold special meaning or significance to them. Each artifact in the museum's collection has a story to tell. These stories can be combined to tell the story of how science and technology inventions have helped shape the development of Schenectady and Tech Valley over the past 125 years.

For information on any of these exhibits, call 382-7890 or visit www.SchenectadyMuseum.org.

Astronaut ice cream and Battery Eater are among the museum staff's "Our Favorite Things" exhibit. The staff selected items from 25,000 artifacts in storage.

Illumination after Rembrandt's The Holy Family by L. Sonia Miller

What is there in the light of Amsterdam? Its channels cross the darkened oils, clarifying the Immaculate and the wrinkled hands of age, exposing the disorder of daily life: the Holy Family, Dutch carpenter, his wife and child, simple tools, an unmade bed, garlic hanging from a hook, washing the moment with a sweet shellac. The canvas cannot sustain the scene without the light as I recall once at noon, light pried through lowered blinds and ribbons of gold wrapped your young face at rest as you lay bereft, shadowed by your sorrows.

What we see is a beautiful reflection of a painting with emphasis on the light. What we hear is a tender concern for a family member, and a reminder that, yes, our family is holy as well.

L. Sonia Miller has been a teacher of literature, creative writing and ESL for more than 25 years. Publication credits include:

The New York Times, Aries and The South Boston Literary Review.

said Pistole, adding that it is a "two prong approach" to combat a terrorist attack.

Due to the terrorist threats coming from al-Qaeda and high threat levels coming from Europe, Pistole said TSA decided to roll out the new procedures and technology. He said it is important for passengers to feel safe in knowing that everyone on the flight has been thoroughly screened.

Children 12 and under will not have to go through the extensive pat downs that others have to and that they will be administered a "less invasive pat down," according to Pistole.

"We try to be sensitive to both children and, of course, the parents," said Pistole said during a conference call. "So in recognition of that, we try and use risk based intelligence that say children have not been used in terrorist attacks, but we have heard teenagers have been used. So if there's something they [children] alarm on, we have to resolve that, but it will not be as thorough as with the adults."

While many feel their privacy is being violated by these AIT machines, Pistole maintains that when a passenger goes through the scanner their image appears so a TSA agent can review it, and then deleted so the next image can appear.

"We're not talking about photos here," he said, "we're talking about a blurred image looking for anomalies and for an object that could take down an air craft. A privacy filter is applied to all images."

One passenger at the Albany airport, Sophie Delano, 85, from Schaticoke had just arrived from visiting her daughters in Georgia, said she had no problem with going through the security checkpoints, adding that she didn't have to experience one of the pat downs.

She said, however, that she wasn't sure if it was right that TSA has implemented these new pat downs, but said they should only be done for one purpose.

"Just for safety's sake I think it's all right," she said.

"I just don't see the necessity of it. I don't have a problem with them seeing stuff, I just don't want them touching me."

— David Karain, airline passenger

David Karain, on the other hand, said he would not be happy if he had to go through one of the pat downs, but said he would have no problem with going through one of the full body scanners.

Karain, who is originally from the Capital District but now resides in Washington D.C., said he doesn't understand the reason for the pat downs.

"I just don't see the necessity of it," he said before boarding a flight to Baltimore. "I don't have a problem with them seeing stuff, I just don't want them touching me."

After screening over 35 million people across the nation, Pistole said they have only received 2,000 complaints.

As passengers have complained about these new procedures, Davis said it isn't easy for the TSA agents performing these pat downs either.

"I haven't personally talked with any of them personally, but they're not excessively comfortable giving people a pat down," she said. "But they're performing them for a very critical reason."

Mary E. Caruso

DELMAR — Mary E. (LaVine) Caruso passed away on Friday, November 26, 2010 due to complications caused by Alzheimer's Disease, with her loving husband, Joseph, at her side.

Mary was born September 9, 1920 in Potsdam, NY and was a graduate of Potsdam College. She taught school in various school systems and later in life became the director of the Tri-Village Nursery School.

In addition to her husband, Joseph of 66 years, Mary is survived by three sons, Peter (Donna) of Dover-Foxcroft, Maine; Paul (Patricia) of New Salem and Stephen (Nancy) of Altamont; three grandchildren, Laura, Joseph and Andrew; and four great grandchildren. The family would like to thank Colleen, Jodi, Harriet, Craig and Sr. Mary Frederick for the love and great care they provided to Mary during her illness.

A Memorial Mass will be celebrated 10:00 am Friday at St. Thomas the Apostle Church, 35 Adams Pl., Delmar. All are invited to celebrate Mary's life at that time. Entombment will be in St. Agnes Cemetery, Menands followed by a reception at Normanside Country Club, 150 Salisbury Rd., Delmar.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Tri-Village Nursery School, 428 Kenwood Ave., Delmar, NY 12054 or St. Thomas the Apostle Church, 35 Adams Pl., Delmar, NY 12054

Chemicals

chemical resistant suits, gloves, goggles and breathing respirators with filters.

Beebe said police haven't established a definite reason Sanchez allegedly had the materials, but did say they could collectively be used in bombmaking. He described them as outside the realm of common household products.

Associate Professor Paul Toscano, chair of the University at Albany Chemistry Department, upon examining the above list said, "These aren't kitchen sink chemicals, the ones I've seen. The only one that's moderately common is propane...the other things, they aren't particularly common."

Toscano said a use for having those chemicals in one place didn't spring to mind, but he did say several were dangerous and unfit for storage in a residential setting.

Sanchez allegedly ignored several orders to evacuate the building when police arrived on Tuesday and tried to push past officers into the storage area. He allegedly resisted when police tried to put him in handcuffs.

Sanchez is a graduate student in the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute's Computer Science Department. An RPI spokesperson said the school has been asked by police to assist in the investigation, but deferred all questions to Bethlehem police.

The company DrawerSteak Technologies LLC lists Sanchez's apartment as its mailing address. Its Web site says the company offers "embedded systems, high performance computing, machine vision, reverse engineering, security and cryptography" as areas of expertise.

Jason Sanchez's brother, Keenan Sanchez, was badly burned in an explosion at the family's Adams Place home last December. Firefighters allowed the fire to consume the house, due to the possibility chemicals were involved.

A lengthy investigation into that incident followed, with police being assisted by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and samples taken from the scene were analyzed. No charges have been filed, though.

The investigation into the fire has been stalled for some time. Police said Keenan Sanchez's mother has refused to speak to police or let them interview her son.

Beebe said police haven't made any connections between last week's discovery and the fire.

"That's not to say this might not create some new leads," he added.

Sanchez was arraigned in Bethlehem Town Court and remanded to the Albany County jail on $15,000 bail, which he later posted. His court appearance was scheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 21.

Christmas Season Celebrations

The First United Methodist Church of Voorheesville, 68 Maple Ave., will be holding the following Christmas season celebrations. For information, call 765-2895, e-mail fumcv@verison.net, or go online to www.fumcv.org.

• On Dec. 12 at 3 p.m., the church will present its Christmas Pageant. Come and enjoy the "touch" of humor and the traditional, ending with a caroling and a potluck supper.

• On Dec. 19 at 7 p.m. the Community Christmas Festival will be held. All are welcome to enjoy the music and become a part of the seasonal spirit.

• Dec. 24 will feature Christmas Eve candlelight services, with a child-focused service at 5 p.m., and traditional services at 7 and 9 p.m.

G'land grad to study abroad

Joshua Wronski, son of Catherine and Edward Wronski of Slingerlands, is spending the fall 2010 semester studying abroad in Durban, South Africa, through a program run by Saint Michael's College. Wronski was a student at Social & Political Transformation.

Wronski, a senior political science major at Saint Michael's, a liberal arts, residential Catholic college located in Burlington, Vt., one of the top 10 college towns in America, graduated from Guilderland High School before coming to Saint Michael's.

G'land library hosts author talk

Local veterinarian Dr. John "Jack" Brennan will speak at a Local Notable Author Event at the Guilderland Public Library on Friday, Dec. 17 at 7 p.m.

Brennan will discuss his book about his years in the animal hospital he founded near Albany. He will speak about his experiences as a vet and as a recently published author.

Copies of "This Vet Has Tales" will be available for sale after the program. The Guilderland Public Library is located at 2228 Western Ave., Guilderland. Call 456-2400, ext. 12, for more information, or visit the library's website at www.guilpl.org.

Casagrande named NYSUT general counsel

Richard E. Casagrande of Guilderland has been named general counsel to New York State United Teachers. Casagrande initially joined NYSUT in 1975 as an associate counsel, later moving on to establish and build the New York State Public Employees Federation's in-house legal department in 1984. He returned to NYSUT in 2004 as an associate general counsel. Casagrande replaces James R. Sandner, who retired on Nov. 26.

Casagrande holds a law degree from Albany Law School of Union University and an undergraduate degree in American history from Colgate University.

Old Songs presents holiday concert

"Nowell Sing We Clear - A Mid-Winter Pageant of Carols" will be held Saturday, Dec. 11, at 3 p.m. at St. John's Lutheran Church, 142 Maple Ave., Altamont. Tickets cost $20 per adult and $5 for children 12 and under. For information and tickets, call 765-2815.

Concerns

past and present county employees enroll in a Medicare Advantage program for healthcare. Breslin's plan had proposed a hike in employee contributions to healthcare.

"Some people are going to feel the pain a little more than others...but the majority of people are going to see a better benefit, and the county is going to see savings upward of $3 million," Morse said.

But the key difference between the two plans is the nursing home. The Audit and Finance Committee wants to keep running the facility instead of selling it — which would eliminate many of the layoffs Breslin proposed — and banks on a large intergovernmental aid transfer to make that plan feasible.

Breslin, on the other hand, said it's doubtful that aid money would ever come.

"This is unrealistic. We have received no indication from the state that Albany County will see any of this funding in 2011, particularly as the state grapples with its own looming budget deficit," Breslin said.

The legislature similarly sparred with Breslin last year over the nursing home and ended up passing a budget keeping it open, but not all legislators were happy with this year's plan — or rather, plans.

Legislator Richard Mendick, R-Selkirk, said in an interview with The Spotlight prior to the vote that he'd like to see a consensus on where the executive and the Legislature stand.

"The problem with the budget is you now have two conflicting sources of information, and they seem to be quite a distance apart," he said.

Mendick, who sits on the Audit and Finance Committee, also wondered if the new proposal might be too optimistic.

"It makes it difficult for me to accept the changes the majority have come up with, because they are hoping everything breaks our way...that may be a little too much wishful thinking," he said.

Mendick was among the 36 legislators to vote in favor of Morse's plan.

factory, or the entire Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk School District. The RCS high school is located across the road from the Lafarge plant.

But the DOH will be launching another phase of study narrowing in on the potential effects of the plant's emissions, which includes mercury, and also focusing on areas where contamination could be the highest. The Lafarge cement plant is one of the most substantial emitters of mercury in the state.

According to the report, "Although available health risk assessments suggest that air emissions from the cement plant are not likely to increase the risk for adverse health effects, they are an incomplete basis for drawing conclusions about the risk from cement plant air emissions."

Lafarge Ravena Plant Environmental Manager John Reagan said the company is still studying the report. He added the plant operates well within state and federal guidelines, and the company has reduced many emissions since taking over the facility.

"Protecting the environment and enhancing the quality of life in Ravena are issues that we've been focused on for years, and is why we're focused on making significant improvements to our plant," Reagan said.

A study out of Harvard University that includes the Ravena area is also due to be released in coming months, said Kunz, and it's one CASE has high hopes for. Researchers gathered blood samples and other data straight from residents for the study.

"It's taken [the DOH] so long to do this: I hope the next phase will be productive, but we're also very interested with seeing what happens with the folks at Harvard," Kunz said.

The Department of Health will be hosting a public meeting on its study on Thursday, Dec. 9, at 7 p.m. in the RCS High School Auditorium. DOH staff will summarize the report and take comments.

Additionally, comments may be submitted in writing to ceheduc@health.state.ny.us or faxed to 402-7539. A copy of the report is available at www.nyhealth.gov/environmental/investigations/lafarge. The comment period is open through Feb. 15, 2011, at which time a final report will be compiled taking into consideration public comments.

In another significant development for the Lafarge cement plant, the Department of Environmental Conservation recently accepted the company's draft environmental impact statement for its modernization project, opening up a 90-day public comment period on the document.

Lafarge is aiming to undertake a massive construction project at the facility that will fundamentally change the way it makes concrete. The upgrade is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $400 million and would replace the current "wet" kiln with a dry process that promises to save energy and reduce many emissions. The company has been working on the required environmental impact statement for some time.

"It's a big step in the permitting process. Its a big milestone," Reagan said.

If the approval process goes well, Lafarge hopes to start construction at the end of 2011 and finish up in 2014.

Kunz said CASE is still studying the substantial document, but is generally in favor of the modernization. They just want to make sure what's built is the best option out there, because it's going to be a long-term fixture in the community, she added.

"Anything that's going to reduce the toxins coming out of the cement plant is a step in the right direction," Kunz said.

An informal public information session on the environmental impact statement will be held Wednesday, Dec. 8, at RCS High School at 6 p.m. A formal public hearing will be held Jan. 21. The DEIS document can be viewed at lafargeravenafacts.com.

GBC girls teams sweep Burnt Hills

The Guilderland Basketball Club junior and biddy division teams swept Burnt Hills in last weekend's Capital District Youth Basketball League games at Guilderland Elementary School.

The junior A team rallied from a 21-15 halftime deficit to edge Burnt Hills 35-33. Zibby Eckhardt led the way for the Attack with 11 points and nine rebounds. Cait Corbett contributed six points and five boards, while Julia Smith and Talia Segal each added five points.

The junior A team was coming off a busy Thanksgiving weekend in which it played three games at the Holy Names Junior Tournament and a league contest against Averill Park.

Guilderland won its first two games of the Holy Names Junior Tournament against St. Pius and Burnt Hills before losing to Albany 20-18 in the final game. The Attack then traveled to Averill Park, where they lost to the Junior Warriors 37-33.

The junior B team earned its second win of the season last weekend by beating Burnt Hills 55-13.

Madison Harrigan led a balanced Guilderland offense with 13 points. Lilya Warner contributed 11 points, while Krista Forbes and Kayla Herbst each added eight points.

The biddy A team dominated in all facets of the game to defeat Burnt Hills 50-11 last Saturday. The Cyclones forced numerous Burnt Hills turnovers and pulled down several rebounds as they pulled away for the victory.

Olivia Baumann scored 24 points and added 10 rebounds for Guilderland. Clare Thompson contributed 12 points and four steals, while Maddie Dunson and Kyra Palumbo combined for 15 rebounds. Alexa Lia and Samantha Stuto each added five steals.

The biddy B team coasted to a 40-2 victory over Burnt Hills behind Emily Burns' 12 points. Caitlyn Gagan and Margan Kieley each scored six points for Guilderland.

The third- and fourth-grade team suffered a 20-10 loss to Holy Names last weekend.

Talia Thomas and Caroline Sherwin scored six points apiece for Guilderland. Jennifer Bartlett led the Little Lady Dutch's defensive effort with three blocked shots, four steals and four rebounds.

The GBC girls teams play Mohonasen Saturday.

Eagles

heavily this season.

"We're not looking to win games 7-2 like last year," said Rodrigue. "We're looking to hold other teams down and do what we need to do on offense to win."

Bethlehem is also looking at competing for the Division I (large school) championship after spending the last several seasons in Division II. So instead of facing smaller schools such as Glens Falls and Queensbury, the Eagles have to go through the likes of Shenendehowa, Shaker/Colonie and Saratoga Springs to win a Sectional title.

"Being a Division II team last year, you played Saratoga and Shen, but you focused on your division," said Rodrigue. "This year, we're bumped up [to Division I], but there is no reason to think that we won't fit in and challenge for the Sectional title."

The Eagles get their first home game of the season Wednesday when they host Burnt Hills/Ballston Spa at the Bethlehem Area YMCA. They then host Glens Falls Saturday.

"We're looking only at the next game on the schedule," said Rodrigue. "For us, that's a Burnt Hills team that we're very familiar with."

South

Dolan (senior forward), A.J. Generali (senior guard), Mike McLeer (senior guard), Shane Natale (junior guard), Jordan Sperber (senior guard), Ryan Stempsey (senior forward)

Outlook: The Eagles return most of their starting lineup from last year, which will give them an advantage both in terms of experience and size, as both Clas and Stempsey are taller than 6 feet, 3 inches – the average height of a Suburban Council forward.

"Looking around and watching some of the summer leagues, I'd say there is some height out there [around the league], but not with the numbers we have," said Irons.

The experience factor will be another key for Bethlehem, but Irons said that the young talent their opponents possess will balance that out.

"There's a lot of talented players still floating around this league," said Irons.

Colonie Garnet Raiders

Head coach: Doug Kilmer

Returning players: Mark Papuzza (junior guard), Zeian Polanco (senior guard), Mike Zielinski (senior forward)

Newcomer: Godfrey Freeman (sophomore guard)

Outlook: For the first time in his coaching history at Colonie, Kilmer doesn't have a returning starter to build his team around.

"This is the youngest team we've ever had," said Kilmer. "They're very hard working, and they're very energetic."

Kilmer said he plans on harnessing his young players' energy by turning them into a run-and-gun team.

"We'll have to extend the floor [with a full-court press]," said Kilmer. "We're smaller and quicker this year. We won't be a throw-it-in-the-middle team anymore. We don't have a big guy to do that with."

Columbia Blue Devils

Head coach: Jim Obermayer

Returning players: Tyler Hart (junior guard), Christian Brown (senior guard), Daniel Jaromin (senior forward), Lucas Dillenbeck (senior forward), Kelly Davis (senior forward), Corey Gibson (senior guard/forward)

Outlook: Gibson, Davis and Hart form

the core of a veteran Columbia squad hoping to move up the South Division standings.

"We do have some experience," said Obermayer. "We're going to have to count on their leadership to help us."

There isn't a great deal of difference in size between Columbia's forwards and guards. Most of the guards are about 6 feet tall, while many of the forwards are 6-2.

"We have a lot of interchangeable parts, and one of our biggest assets is that they are all athletic," said Obermayer.

Guilford Dutchmen

Head coach: Ron Osinski

Returning players: Brendan Doak (senior guard), Justin Horne (senior guard), Jordan Weeden (senior forward), Chris Yankowski (senior forward)

Newcomer: Cameron Dobbs (junior guard)

Outlook: The Dutchmen are looking to rebound from a middle-of-the-pack finish last year with a team made up mostly of juniors.

"I call it kind of a work in progress," said Osinski. "We're young in experience, and we're working on some things as the season goes on."

Dobbs is emerging as one of Guilford's chief offensive weapons. Dobbs scored 33 points during last weekend's Saratoga Tip-off Tournament.

"Coming into the season, he's always been a scorer," said Osinski. "We're hoping to get more balance [on offense] from some other players."

Mohonasen Mighty Warriors

Head coach: Ken Dagostino

Returning players: Killian Tallman (junior guard), Quinton Brown (senior guard), Ben Dalton (senior guard), Josh Schaninger (senior forward), Billy Manikas (junior guard), Jeffrey Kruzinski (senior guard), Garrett Sisson (senior forward)

Outlook: The Mighty Warriors were the kings of close losses last year. Many of their defeats were by single digits.

"I think our total [point] differential was three points," said Dagostino. "There were seven or eight games where we had a double digit lead at halftime and then blew it."

With a veteran-laden lineup this year, Dagostino said he hopes his team will turn those close losses into victories in 2010-11.

team placed second to Fayetteville-Manlius again at the Nike Team Nationals in Portland, Ore. Meanwhile, Shaker's boys team finished 13th – well back from national champion Arcadia, Cal. Fayetteville-Manlius – which placed third behind Shaker and Warwick Valley at the state meet – was the runner-up in the boys race.

Saratoga's and Shaker's results reflected the value of experience when competing at the national level. Saratoga limited itself to a pair of invitationals during the regular season since there was a sense that the Blue Streaks would make another trip to the west coast, and coaches Art and Linda Kranick wanted to keep their girls' legs fresh for the final push in November and December.

By contrast, Shaker maintained its usual busy fall schedule of invitational races and kept running through the state and Federation meets, winning both. But by the time the Blue Bison got to the Nike Team New York Regional and the national meets, they found themselves struggling to handle the competition – Fayetteville-Manlius in particular. F-M, which passed on running in the Federation meet, defeated Shaker in the New York regional and then put forth a strong effort at nationals.

You can't fault Shaker coach Ed Springstead, though. He's the kind of coach who wants to give his kids every opportunity to run. And there were more opportunities for the Blue Bison this year than ever before. Unfortunately, his runners were worn down just enough for other teams to pass Shaker in the final two meets.

Both Saratoga and Shaker should be in good shape to make return trips to Portland next year. Saratoga has three of its top five runners coming back, while Shaker should have four of its top five intact.

• The results are in from the first of the Albany Devils' four "home games" in Atlantic City. The Devils defeated Adirondack 4-2 Sunday in front of more than 5,000 people at the Convention Center. That's probably about 1,000 more people than would have likely gone to the Times Union Center on a Sunday to see two of the bottom three teams in the AHL's East Division play each other.

It will be interesting to see what the crowds will be like for Albany's other three games in Atlantic City. If the attendance is anything close to what Sunday's crowd was like and if the crowds at the Times Union Center remain thin, who's to say that the Devils don't take a serious look at relocating to southern New Jersey. And who's to say that anyone around here will care?

• Finally, the answer to last week's trivia question ("What city has celebrated a championship in Major League Baseball, the NFL, the NBA and the NHL in the last 25 years?") is Chicago. Only one person got it right, but then again only one person actually answered the question. Come on, gang. Drop me a line at joniasr@spotlightnews.com.

Fast start helps Lady Eagles

The Bethlehem girls basketball team jumped out to a 25-11 halftime lead and cruised to a 50-33 victory over Schenectady in Sunday's Lady Falcon Tournament championship game in Albany.

Emily Kirby scored 14 points, and tournament most valuable player Jaci Oskam contributed 13 points for the Lady Eagles (2-0). Oskam made nine of her 12 free throws, and Kirby sank four of her five shots from the foul line.

Bridget Murphy added 12 points for Bethlehem, half of which came from behind the three-point line.

The Lady Eagles advanced to the tournament finals by beating Albany 56-37 Saturday. Oskam had 23 points, while Kirby contributed 16 points in the victory.

Bethlehem began its Suburban Council season Tuesday by hosting Averill Park in a South Division game.

Eagles earn first win

BC hockey team bounces back from 0-1-1 start

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

It would have been easy for the Bethlehem hockey team to feel depressed after losing its season opener 12-1 to Mamaroneck Nov. 26 at the Shaker/Colonie Tournament.

But instead, the Eagles have played inspired hockey. They tied Mahopac 3-3 in the Nov. 27 tournament finale and then came from behind to defeat Christian Brothers Academy 4-2 in last Friday's Capital District High School Hockey League opener at the Albany County Hockey Facility in Colonie.

"We've improved immensely over the last seven days," said Bethlehem coach Andre Rodrigue. "We had a hard time getting out of the gate off the Thanksgiving holiday against Mamaroneck, but we came back well the next day to tie Mahopac."

There was some question as to what type of team Rodrigue would have this year. After all, Bethlehem graduated its top four scorers, its top defenseman and its starting goaltender from last year's Section II Division II runner-up team.

"Those are big holes to fill, especially with goaltending," said Rodrigue. "But we have our whole second line back from last year. And we have Pat Miron, who was Alex Cooper's backup, starting in goal this year."

Bethlehem's No. 2 forward line -- featuring John Gosstola and Sam Vincent -- is now its No. 1 line, and it acted that way in last Friday's league opener against CBA. Gosstola scored twice to lead the Eagles' comeback from a 2-0 deficit. Junior defenseman Nick Parente contributed the go-ahead goal late in the second period.

"That was a great win for us," said Rodrigue. "This year, any league team you face once is worth two [standings] points. CBA was a two-point game, and it was huge for our guys to get those two points."

Parente anchors a defensive unit that Rodrigue said will be leaned on.

South field is crowded

Bethlehem, Guilderland among teams looking to take division championship

By ROB JONAS

The Suburban Council boys basketball landscape has changed dramatically since February.

Many of last season's top players have moved on to college, leaving many of the league's coaches scrambling to fill holes in their line-ups. And in some cases, coaches are having to build new starting line-ups from scratch.

All of this is leading to what many coaches are calling a wide-open race for the North and South division titles.

"I think there are a lot of teams in the mix this year," said Shenendehowa coach Tony Dzikas, whose Plainsmen are seeking their fourth consecutive North Division crown. "I think Bethlehem is going to be big and strong. I think Shaker is going to have some good size, and they'll be tough. [Mike] McElroy is going to be big for Saratoga this year. Mohonasen has a lot of players back, too."

"Guilderland is going to be good, and Bethlehem is going to be good ... but there will be a lot of parity this year," said Mohonasen coach Ken Dagostino.

Here is a closer look at the Suburban Council South Division race:

South Division Averill Park Warriors Head coach: Dave Pugliese

Returning players: Ryan Macari (senior guard), Kyle Radzmyski (senior forward), Nick Hess (junior guard)

Outlook: The Warriors must find new scoring sources after the graduation of twin brothers Matt and Mark Joe, along with the other three starters they had last year.

"We're going to play a lot different," said Pugliese. "We're going to share the ball more and get more touches. I don't know who our leading scorer will be night in and night out, but I'm excited about the possibilities that we have."

As a result of having only three players with varsity experience, Pugliese said Averill Park will go through some growing pains this season.

"I would think that Bethlehem, Columbia and Mohonasen are the favorites," said Pugliese.

Bethlehem Eagles Head coach: A.G. Irons

Returning players: Scott Clas (senior forward), Bryan

Danes looked great against Saints in rivalry

Question for Brett Favre: What is it going to take to get you to retire? You're my age, and I don't want to play sports anymore. Just stop now before you are permanently injured. OK, moving on...

• Saturday's 88-82 overtime victory showed how far the University at Albany men's basketball team has come and how far Siena College has to go.

With its trio of Logan Aronhalt (24 points), Tim Ambrose (27 points) and Mike Black (16 points), UAlbany has three legitimate scorers on the floor at one time. That's something that the Great Danes lacked since the 2006-07 season -- the second of UAlbany's two consecutive trips to the NCAA Tournament.

Aronhalt has been making his mark this season, averaging 20 points per game. But with all due respect to Aronhalt, it's Black that has made the difference for the Great Danes. When the sophomore guard was sidelined with an injury, UAlbany won one of its first five games. Since Black's return, the Great Danes have won three of their last four games and could have been 4-0 had they held on against Detroit one week earlier in the first game of the Legends Classic Tournament -- a game they lost 82-80 in double overtime.

Meanwhile, Siena is still searching for an identity after seven games. Senior center Ryan Rossiter has been playing very well, averaging a double-double every game. But senior guard Clarence Jackson has shot the ball erratically, and neither O.D. Anosike nor Kyle Downey have played consistently well. Freshmen Rakeem Brookins and Trenity Burdine have shown promise, though, and their development could help the Saints turn things around once the MAAC season begins in earnest.

Bottom line: UAlbany looks more like a NCAA Tournament-caliber team than Siena at the moment. We'll have to see what both teams do in league play, but I like the Great Danes' chances in an America East conference where several teams are in the process of rebuilding. The Saints have some work to do if they have any hopes of contending in the MAAC.

• Saturday's game was the final scheduled meeting between UAlbany and Siena, though both schools are looking to extend the rivalry.

The sticking point, as always, is the fact that UAlbany can't get a true home game in the series. That's because its home, SEFCU Arena (less than 5,000 seats), is much smaller than Siena's home, the Times Union Center (more than 14,000 seats). And with nearly 11,000 people attending the rivalry game every year, it would be hard to justify playing the game every other year in a place that holds less than half of that amount.

Frankly, there is a way to give UAlbany something close to a true home game: Create a secondary court at the Times Union Center for the Great Danes. It doesn't have to be a second floor with UAlbany's purple-and-gold color scheme -- just add some floor tiles with the UAlbany logo on it to put in place of Siena's logo when the Great Danes are the home team. Do that and make more tickets available to UAlbany students and alumni, and the Great Danes get a home game against Siena.

(Side note: The added bonus is that UAlbany would be able to host bigger non-conference games at the Times Union Center. For instance, how about a game against Duke that didn't involve the Great Danes having to travel to Cameron Indoor Stadium and get harassed by the Cameron Crazies? No? Duke won't go for it? Oh well.)

If the Times Union Center can't accommodate that concept, UAlbany should bite the bullet and continue the series with Siena -- especially since the Great Danes are back on even terms with the Saints on the court.
