Middle school cast to perform 'Beauty and the Beast'

Students at Bethlehem Middle School want you to "Be Our Guest."

A cast of record size will put on a production of "Beauty and the Beast" at Bethlehem Middle School in four shows at the start of February.

The Disney film turned popular Broadway play will be brought to life on the stage of the school's auditorium by a cast of 84, plus a whole host of parents and students working behind the scenes. They've been rehearsing for months.

The troupe will perform a junior version of the play, which packs in all the highlights of the Broadway production but should be more enjoyable for audiences with small children, said Director Katie Daly.

"All the popular songs are still in the show, but the running time is about 90 minutes instead of two hours," she said.

The hallmark of the Broadway production will remain intact, with elaborate and creative costumes made possible through the hard work of parents and crew. Even members of the chorus will don unique garb to become period villagers and cheese graters, and leads Shelsea Cato (Belle) and Tiarnan Barrett (The Beast) will, of course, have their own special costumes.

Middle school students have performed a musical annually for well over three decades (last year's play was "The Music Man"), and Daly and Co-director Lynda Conway have teamed up to direct the past five. This is by far their largest cast. This was possible in part by splitting up the chorus into two groups, one for the castle and

Bethlehem to re-examine what it pays for trade memberships

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Town Board tackled its yearly organizational tasks Wednesday, Jan. 12, making the dozens of votes needed to officially staff town offices and set policies.

Though most of the items were unremarkable, the Town Board did table a motion on authorizing the payment of thousands of dollars in membership dues to various trade and professional organizations. Several board members said the town should reexamine what it gets out of the dozens of memberships it pays for town employees.

"I have some concerns about the value we get, including with the Association of Towns," said Councilman Kyle Kotary. "Although it's not a lot of money, it adds up and it's symbolic."

The board did approve spending $1,650 in dues for membership in that organization, with Councilman Mark Hennessey casting a dissenting vote. He later said the possibility of a property tax cap being passed is something the town should seriously consider now, and the dues

Police: Burglary leads to crash, hospital

Schenectady man arrested

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem police have arrested a man they say plowed into two vehicles early on Tuesday, Jan. 11, as he fled the scene of a burglary, hospitalizing himself and another driver.

Anthony R. Young, 38, of McClellan Street in Schenectady, is facing a number of charges. He's in Albany Medical Center being treated for a head injury and was arraigned at the hospital. Nearly a week later, police said he's still there.

Police allege Young was in the process of burglarizing a home on Mason Road in Delmar when the homeowner returned at 6:28 in the morning. Finding Young hiding in a closet, the homeowner called 911, police said. He fled the scene and responding patrol cars in a 2003 Hyundai, reaching speeds estimated at up to 80 mph down Kenwood Avenue, police said.

Young struck a vehicle near Delmar Place, and then came to a stop at the Four Corners when he hit another vehicle, police said. The driver of that vehicle was also transported to Albany Medical Center to be treated for injuries to his hip and shoulder area.

The Four Corners was closed for some time, delaying morning commutes.

Town expands plastic recycling

Recycling options in the Town of Bethlehem are increasing with a change to the town's mandatory recycling law requiring waste collectors to recycle more types of plastic containers.

The law had previously only required the collection of No. 1 and 2 bottles — though many waste haulers voluntarily collected others — but now nearly all plastic items will be taken. Area recycling facilities have advanced to the point all are taking a greater range of plastics, so the new rule shouldn't present anyone hardship, said town Recycling Coordinator Dan Rain.

"The change has been a long time coming," he said. "It's going to take a lot more of the recyclable plastics out of the waste stream."

The change will take effect immediately at the town's Rupert Road Transfer Station, where many residents drop off their trash. Plastic recyclables account for 12 percent of the nation's waste stream, but since they're light, they can take up a lot of space in landfills.

Rupert Road processes 120 tons of trash per month and 25 tons of recyclables, on average, said Rain.

The change in law will be applied to waste haulers in mid-March.

The transfer station and haulers will now accept butter and yogurt containers, drinking cups, prescription medicine bottles and plastic lids and bottles caps.

Polystyrene or Styrofoam containers are still excluded, as are small items like plastic straws or utensils, as they cannot be handled easily at recycling centers. Many packing materials like Styrofoam or bubble wrap can be taken to local shipping stores like Ship Copy & More for recycling.

Rain added plastic store bags and films, like cereal bags, sandwich bags, plastic wrap, etc., can be recycled at large retail or chain stores, which are required to have a plastic bag recycling program.

Bethlehem Town Board OKs Verizon television service

Full FiOS service to begin rolling out in coming months

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem is the latest community to approve Verizon FiOS television, opening the door for the company to hopefully start providing service later this quarter.

The Town Board on Wednesday, Jan. 12, unanimously approved a franchising agreement with Verizon that closely resembles the existing terms with cable provider Time Warner which, until now, has been the only option for residents to receive television besides satellite and broadcast.

A public hearing was held before the vote and a steady procession of residents braved the snowy weather to voice their support of the plan, most of them saying competition will be welcomed.

"I know competition makes businesses better, it's as simple as that," said Richard Schaefer, owner of local business Ship Copy & More.

Others described themselves as satisfied customers of Verizon's phone and Internet FiOS service, which is provided by a fiber optic cable, and said they could not wait to ditch Time Warner's television.

"You should have put a sign-up table in the back, it would have saved you a lot of time," said resident Bob Baker.

Several residents said Time Warner had already offered discounts on their bills following the news of the impending agreement with the town. Councilman Kyle Kotary related a story of having a promotional offer rescinded when the cable provider learned FiOS was not available at his home.

Verizon still has to get approval from the state, said Sam Caldwell, director of state government affairs for Verizon, but if that process goes smoothly service will begin rolling out in the near future. Caldwell declined to say which neighborhoods would be getting service first, but said if residents call Verizon they can be given an estimate.

"When we plan to be in a given neighborhood is information we deem to be competitively sensitive," Caldwell said.

Verizon has laid fiber optic cable to cover about 65 percent of homes in the town, according to the company. Its application sets a schedule to continue building that network out, with 100 percent coverage in five years.

That coverage does not and will not extend to less densely populated areas, though. Areas with fewer than 20 homes per mile of road will not be included in the build out, which is the same agreement the town has with Time Warner's cable coverage.

Ed Kleinke, of the Albany County Farm Bureau, protested this arrangement. He noted agriculture is becoming a more tech-savvy

Vista developers seek tax-exempt bonds

ShopRite and other retailers confirmed, high-tech tenant hinted at

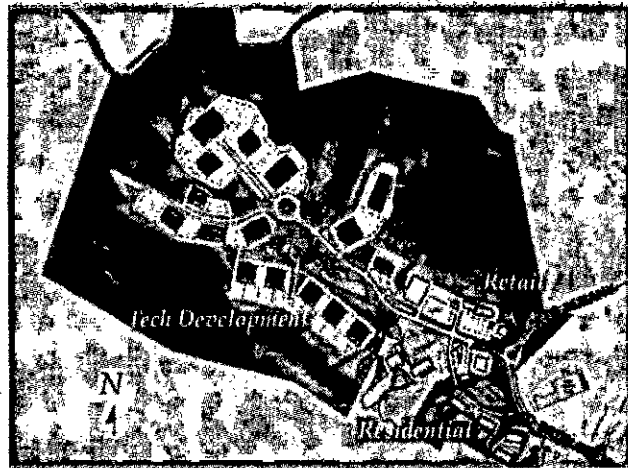

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

Stakeholders in the Vista Technology Campus are hoping the Bethlehem Industrial Development Agency will issue $5.7 million in tax-exempt bonds to fund the building of Vista Boulevard, the long road into the massive Slingerlands project.

In a special meeting of that public benefit entity, IDA board members granted conceptual approval to the plan, which would see the town creating special taxing districts in the park to have tenants pay off the loans.

Columbia Development's Joe Nicolla said this unusual plan is necessary to get Vista moving ahead. He said many tenants are ready to sign leases, but it's hard to get commitments without any infrastructure at the site.

"We're under time constraints to get all these people in and we need the road," he said. "You'll see this thing develop very, very quickly if we can get this road in place."

The commercial lending environment has made obtaining the substantial loans from banks difficult, he said. Albany County has said it would pay $1 million to the project, which is factored into the equation.

Nicolla also confirmed several of the retailers who will come to Vista, including a ShopRite grocery store. CVS, SEFCU and Berkshire Bank are also set to locate there, as is an unnamed restaurant "that everybody knows."

Nicolla said it's essential development get under way to attract the campus' first high-tech tenant to a 110,000-square-foot building. He would not mention the company's name, but said it is an "electronics publishing group" that does work with Amazon's Kindle e-reader and Apple's iPad. The company would employ about 600 at the location.

The company also needs to be in that space by Jan. 1 of next year, which sets an aggressive schedule for Columbia and builder BBL Construction. Nicolla said he'd like to start construction in March, which is probably sooner than the complex financing approval schedule could be completed, but he said Columbia would be willing to assume the risk of starting construction early.

Nicolla pointed to many other Tech Valley locations, including the Luther Forest Technology Campus in Malta, as a reason to move Vista ahead as soon as possible. Thirty high-tech companies are expected to come to the area as the result of a GlobalFoundries semiconductor plant being built there, he said, and developers here want a piece of that action.

Town Supervisor

Sam Messina said the proposal would now be forwarded to the town's 2020 planning committee, and if all goes well he would expect the Town Board to take up forming the taxing districts at the end of February. The plan would also need state comptroller approval.

Messina said this deal is exactly what the IDA was created to do.

"I see nothing on the horizon in terms of economics that can benefit our town more than this," said Messina, who sat on the IDA board before taking the supervisor's office. "I haven't seen the IDA with an opportunity to do exactly what the IDA has wanted to do for six years."

Mark Hennessey, who is also on the Bethlehem Town Board, was the only IDA board member to oppose the plan. He cited concerns that the developer did not have tenant commitments in hand and that the IDA or town would be on the hook for the road costs should Vista founder.

Food, family, all part of the journey

By CAROLINE BARRETT
news@spotlightnews.com

The author is the food writer for the Spotlight Newspapers and the mother of three children: Lucy, age 10, Zoe, age 9, and Elliot, age 6.

At the end of 2010, after the holiday was over, the decorations gone, and new toys all safely tucked into bins, I had a moment to pause and think about the year. After spending weeks in a pre-holiday whirlwind – you know the feeling, getting up in the morning and going non-stop until your feet bring you back to the same place and you can close your eyes before doing it all again the next day – there was a little time to stop and think.

I did what I've always done when I want some peace on a Sunday afternoon. Filled up the old teapot, and let it boil till it was nearly screaming. A steaming cup of tea will help any thoughts become clearer. Mug in hand, I settled into our big cozy chair.

This year was a biggie for us. There was a lot of change in my house. It, 2010, started the way many had before it: Paul in and out. He was working in Nebraska, and home on the weekends. The kids and I, we were used to him traveling. It's what we did. Friday night, he'd walk in the door and the children would run to him. We'd love him up for 48 wonderful hours; and come Sunday night, he'd be packing up those starched shirts, holding ties up, looking for matching black socks. Very early Monday morning, he was off again. We'd make our way through the week, missing him but surviving. But this particular job, in Nebraska. It felt so much farther away. The extra flight time took more of our precious hours away. He was in a different time zone, in a wicked cold and snowy place. For all of us, it was bad.

And then the layoff came. It wasn't a total shock. There were rumors and we knew it was a real possibility. When it happened, and he stepped in the door after the last trip, we all held each other close. He was home. Nothing else mattered. Sure, we were scared. The future was uncertain. We did know that it felt so good to be together, all the time. It's the way it was meant to be. That very first week, as we started to sort out the future, we decided. No more traveling. No more missed birthdays, concerts, soccer practices and bedtimes. It's not often that we've felt so sure about a decision.

Once that part was decided, we moved on. A week after he was home for good, we were so used to this new way of life that it was hard to remember ever not having Paul there. It felt so good and so right that I can't believe we survived without him for so long. It was time to think about what we would do. This honeymoon phase was great; we were relaxing and drinking up each other's company. But of course, the future loomed.

We thought about it and then thought some more. And then decided that the time was now. We would take a chance and rather than going to work for another company, and investing all of our creative energy into someone else's ideas, we would invest in our own company.

Paul and I have dreamed of being business owners since the day we met. In fact, we have tried our hands at many things. There was the window-washing business. The firewood delivery service. The furniture painting, graphic design, carpentry and catering. All of them came and went. The one that came and stayed is the one we decided is worth investing in; the one we started when Elliot was born. It started small, just roasting almonds in our oven at home. Our first customer was the Delmar Marketplace. It's been like our fourth baby, slowly growing and taking on its own personality.

This is the thing that has kept Paul at home. That same little baby business, the one that started with one store and a stovetop, now sustains us. Our little side company now occupies all of our time. We go to our commercial kitchen in the morning and when we turn off the ovens and the lights at the end of the day, there is always more to do. Our little side business is now our way of life. We named it Our Daily Eats, and now we sell more than just almonds. We make seven different types of roasted nuts and seeds and four varieties of granola. We sell to small grocery and health food stores in states as far as Oklahoma and from Florida to Maine. Our philosophy is simple: use simple, quality ingredients and make nuts and seeds part of a healthy diet.

There are many days when I sit in awe of my husband. In awe of how he totally, completely, has given everything he has for our company. We are proud of how far we've come, and boy, do we dream big. We've got a long way to go. Every day I wake up, excited to go to work with my husband and business partner. We complement each other well and so far, it's

olive oil	4 cups chicken broth
2 leeks, chopped into 1" pieces	1 Parmesan rind
1 head garlic, separated and peeled	2 handfuls green beans, trimmed and cut into 1" pieces
1/2 bulb fennel, cut into large chunks	1 cup pastina (tiny pasta or orzo)
2 carrots, peeled and diced	1 tablespoon rosemary, chopped
1 14-ounce can cannellini beans	1 teaspoon thyme, chopped
1 28-ounce can crushed tomatoes	sea salt and fresh ground pepper

Serve with cheesy toast: slice thick pieces of sourdough bread, toast and drizzle with a bit of olive oil, then cover each with shredded Parmesan. Place under the broiler, watching carefully, until golden brown. Serve with the soup.

Pulse the leeks, garlic and fennel in a food processor until finely chopped. In a large pot, heat a swirl of olive oil over medium low heat and cook the leek mixture for 5 minutes, stirring. Add the carrots and cannellini and cook for another few minutes. Add the crushed tomatoes, chicken broth and Parmesan rind, cover and simmer for 10-15 minutes. Meanwhile, cook the pasta until al dente in a separate pot. Drain and rinse. Add the green beans to the soup, cook for another 2 minutes (don't go longer because mushy green beans are terrible). Turn off the heat and remove the cheese rind (if you can't find it, that's okay). Stir in the pasta and herbs, season to taste and serve hot. Can be doubled and frozen. Also great in a lunchbox.

worked. Worked very well.

The successes have come hand-in-hand with sacrifice. Everything we spent money on before has been re-evaluated. Vacations are non-existent. Dinners out, a rare treat. The rosemary lamb chops we ate have been replaced with rosemary beans and greens, and the dark, organic coffee I loved is now just whatever is on sale. But you know, it doesn't matter. I don't miss any of it. My husband is here, with his family, happy.

So on any weeknight, we will sit down and eat something like this minestrone soup. It relies on herbs and vegetables for flavor. Cheaper, yes. But also better for you. Plenty of vegetables, low in fat, also high in fiber and protein.

As we sat to eat this, I thought, oh boy, Zoe will never, ever eat this. Too much stuff, too many little chopped things floating around. She surprised me, though. True, she didn't love the green beans. But the carrots, cannellini and all the herbed, rich broth were slurped up. She even asked for another bowl.

So I did have time to think about our year that day. I sipped my piping hot tea and felt sure that we are doing the right thing. It feels very American, this path of sacrifice and following our dream. The future is there too, albeit at times scary. Right now, we aren't sure exactly what our destination will be. But for now, we are on the journey, together.

Ravena man arrested for having sexual relationship with 15-year-old

State police on Tuesday, Jan. 11, arrested Hector Zayas-Colon, 40, of Ravena, for allegedly having a two-year sexual relationship with a 15-year-old female. Zayas-Colon was charged with rape in the third degree, criminal sex act in the third degree, sexual abuse in the third degree and endangering the welfare of a child. He was arraigned in the Town of Coeymans Court and remanded to the Albany County jail on $15,000 bail.

Troopers arrived and found Spaas was traveling west on the Thruway when he drove off the right shoulder in his 2007 Honda Accord and rolled the car over in the snow on the shoulder, said police.

Spaas was found to be intoxicated, according to police, and was arrested for Felony Driving While Intoxicated. Police said Spaas refused to take a chemical test to determine his blood alcohol content.

He was arraigned in the Town of Guilderland Court and remanded to Albany County Jail without bail. He is scheduled to reappear in court on Thursday, Jan. 20, at 5:30 p.m.

Delmar man arrested for DWI

The Bethlehem Police Department on Sunday, Jan. 9, arrested Brian F. Bresnahan, 22, of 14 Hartwood Road, Delmar, and charged him with DWI, failing to keep right and making an improper right turn.

Police pulled over Bresnahan's 1992 Lexus at about 1:45 a.m. after allegedly observing him making a wide right turn onto Wemple Road from Beacon Road and then traveling over the double yellow line.

Bresnahan had the odor of alcohol on his breath and failed field sobriety tests, police said. A breath test at the station allegedly revealed his BAC to be .11 percent. He was released with a court date of Feb. 16 and given a ride home by police.

Other arrests

• Adam L. Weller, 30, of Guilderland was arrested by Colonie police on Sunday, Jan. 9, on charges of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, his first offense, failure to keep right, failure to stay in a single lane and exposure of a person. After allegedly committing several vehicle and traffic violations, Weller was pulled over by police where they reported he had a strong odor of alcohol, slurred speech, glassy eyes and impaired motor coordination. While being interviewed, Weller allegedly urinated in a snow bank. Weller allegedly failed several field sobriety tests and registered positive on a pre-screening device. After being taken to the station and while being processed, police said Weller vomited numerous times in lock up. Weller was allegedly so intoxicated that he was unable to answer the arresting officer's booking questions, according to the report. Police said Weller was unable to provide an adequate breath sample for the data master. Police said they were unable to secure prints and photos because of Weller's level of intoxication.

Matters of Opinion in The Spotlight

If you build it, they will come

You know, we at The Spotlight like to see a balance between towns in the state of New York being downright hostile toward business and alternately throwing billions of dollars at them.

That's why we commend the Bethlehem Industrial Development Agency for considering a unique plan to make the concept of the Vista Technology Campus a tangible, economy-driving reality.

See page 3 for Charles Wiff's full story, but the gist is that the IDA will issue $5.7 million in bonds to fund the building of Vista Boulevard, which will connect the tech campus to Slingerlands and the rest of the world.

The town would then create special taxing districts within the campus, so that the tenants actually pay off the loans. That's right, the tenants — the people using the road to do business within this wonderful town.

Now, the argument can be made, and justly, that if there are no tenants, the IDA will have issued $5.7 million in pointlessness, the debt service of which will still have to be satisfied one way or the other.

But that's a pretty big if.

The fact remains that if you want tenants in Vista, you need that road. If you want that road, you need tenants in Vista. And in this commercial lending environment you're not going to get the road any other way.

Too many entities have too much at stake for this to become a "road to nowhere." The private owner of the land wants this to be successful, as does Columbia Development, who is itching to get tenants into the park, and BBL Construction, eager to start pouring cement.

Though ShopRite, CVS and a couple of banks are being bandied about as potential tenants, Columbia has no signed agreements as of yet.

The hold-up? Lack of infrastructure.

It takes money to make money, and it takes that and time to build a road. An electronics publishing group that does work with Amazon's Kindle e-reader and Apple's iPad, wants to be in by Jan. 1 of next year. The company would employ about 600 at the location, according to Columbia's Joe Nicolla. If that's the case, the town should try like heck to get that road built and that tenant in place.

In a perfect world, the Town of Bethlehem wouldn't have to worry about building this road. But in the real world, when you're dedicated to getting something done, you have to put your money where your mouth is.

And now for something completely different

The King's speech

By MARK GRIMM

The writer is a Guiderland town councilman, professional public speaker and ASTD Trainer of the Year. He wrote "Everyone Can Be A Dynamic Speaker: Yes, I Mean You!"

Ask someone to name the best speech they have ever heard and they will often mention the 1963 presentation in our nation's capital by civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. The speech changed the course of American history. This enormous impact did not happen by chance.

The answer to why the "I Have a Dream" speech changed history fills scores of books and columns (and now blogs). Its effectiveness was certainly due in part to key public speaking principles that were followed, which makes the speech a wonderful learning tool for all orators. Here are some key public speaking attributes of this historic address:

Passion

Dr. King, no doubt, had stomach butterflies as he prepared to address more than two hundred thousand people at the March on Washington. Obviously, he was able to channel that nervousness into positive energy. He was passionate, a passion that chilled the spines of so many who were listening. How many speeches have we sat through where the speaker showed little enthusiasm? After all, why should anyone care about your topic if you are not passionate about it yourself? Though civil rights was, and still is, an extremely complicated issue, he effectively used passion and clarity to convey a simple, straightforward message about his "dream."

Clarity

Simplicity is not a simple task. Speakers often bombard us with too many details. They are so caught up in the details that they miss the big picture and, unfortunately, so does the audience. The clarity presented in King's speech can be outlined in this brief way: Making effective use of symbolism and visuals, he began with a Lincoln reference with the Lincoln Memorial as a backdrop. He made a powerful case in order to define the injustice that existed, citing specific examples of racial wrongs. While he expressed a defiant tone attacking racism, he also saluted his "white brothers" and called once again for nonviolence. His speech was not simply a collection of powerful rhetoric; it included a call for action to "remind America of the fierce urgency of now." That call for action was reinforced by a simple yet powerful phrase, "I have a dream."

Point of View

Relevance

The best speeches are not about the speaker, they are about the audience. Rule Number One in my public speaking book is, "It's Not About You, It's About Them." Talk to an audience about what they care about and their hearing seems to improve dramatically.

Dr. King understood this and the real genius in his speech was in its mass, multi-racial appeal. If the speech was relevant to African Americans alone, it would not have had the same impact. It was, in large part, a patriotic speech, appealing to all Americans to make their country better. It was relevant to all Americans that one day all children would "not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character."

Dr. King's feel for relevance was no accident. He spent a lifetime living his message (with the scars to prove it) and his extraordinary breath of experience was the potent reservoir he tapped into to make his speech relevant to millions of people. He had plenty of "street cred" on the civil rights issue. Not everyone can live such a life, but the truth is each of us has a lifetime of values, experiences and emotions to share. That makes you interesting and important. It can also make you "dynamic" if you follow the same approach the best speakers take.

Takeaway

What's in it for me? Our attention is very much a tangible commodity, so much a commodity advertisers spend tens of billions of dollars to get it. We want to get something out of a speech that has value to us. No one needed notes to explain the significance of King's remarks. His "takeaway" was clear and compelling — "the situation can and will be changed." People just don't look to leaders to define a problem, they expect them to produce a plan that fixes it. Dr. King had a clear goal in mind.

The following year, Congress passed and President Johnson signed the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964. It was legislation once thought to be impossible to establish.

Great speeches are not just about words, they are also about the imagery they invoke. The throngs of people assembled in the name of justice, the Lincoln backdrop, the sense of conviction, determination and righteousness in a man's voice. They all make a speech valuable. They all can make a speech unforgettable.

Passion, clarity, relevance, takeaways — all great speeches have them. Do yours? By the way, the speech was just 16 minutes long. One of the most common speaking mistakes will not surprise you — they often last too long.

BC plans to put a computer in every student's hands

The Bethlehem Central School District's Board of Education will hear on Wednesday, Jan. 19, a long-term initiative to provide a "personal computing device" to every district student grades five through 12.

Administrators said the five-year program would result in "1:1" access to a laptop, smart phone or tablet computer for students. It will be rolled out first to fifth, eighth, ninth and 10th grades.

A district representative said the cost of the program will be discussed on Wednesday.

just to prepare students for it, but to also recognize the extraordinary promise technology holds for their learning today — right now," said Assistant Superintendent of Educational Programs Jody Monroe. "It's time to move both aggressively and thoughtfully in this direction. This five-year plan does that, allowing us to get started right away and build on what we are learning as the initiative grows."

It was not immediately clear if students would be assigned a device to take home or if the computing would be restricted to the classroom. It may vary from grade to grade.

The middle and high schools have nearly 2,900 students enrolled this school year, which covers grades six through 12.

BC administrators visited a New Jersey school that had a "1:1 computing" program in place. They will visit Hudson Falls Central School District later this month and have made a trip to Apple Education in Boston. The devices provided to students will not all be Apples.

Bethlehem sends out corrected tax bills

Around 1,600 Bethlehem property owners will be receiving amended tax bills in the mail after a "clerical error" resulted in a miscalculation of taxes for the North Bethlehem and Slingerlands fire districts.

Supervisor Sam Messina said the mistake caused bills to be off by as much as $300 or $400. Residents should be receiving the new, lower bills soon, if they haven't already.

"A clerical error was made here, and we discovered it and have been talking with the county about that," Messina said. "My conversations with the county indicate that it happens fairly regularly."

He added the town will have extra sets of eyes reviewing the bills to make sure figures are correct. Taxes are due by Jan. 31.

Founder of PostSecret website to bring exhibit to UAlbany

Ever had a secret that you felt you could never tell anyone? But the urge to open up to someone eats you up inside? Fortunately, there is an outlet for that, and no one will ever have to know it is you.

PostSecret was created by Frank Warren as a community art project in 2004, where he asked 3,000 stranger to anonymously send a secret on a postcard. Now that project has reached out nationwide, Warren has received 450,000 postcards that come in at about 1,000 per week, with secrets about sexual taboos, criminal activity and confessions of secret beliefs.

On Jan. 19 through Feb. 11, an exhibit of works from his latest book, PostSecret: Confessions on Life, Death and God will be on display at the University of Albany Performing Arts Center in the Lab Theatre, with a presentation by Warren on PostSecret creator Frank Warren will be at UAlbany on Feb. 8.

Gregory's Barber Shop cuts to fight cancer

Fellows looking to spruce up their look could hardly do better than to frequent Gregory's Barber Shop in Delmar this coming Saturday, Jan. 23, when the shop will participate for the third year running in the Coaches Vs. Cancer fundraiser at the Albany Academies.

From 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., a $20 donation to the national charity event, which benefits the American Cancer Society, buys a haircut or a hot towel shave. The proceeds will be donated during the Coaches Vs. Cancer High School Challenge on Jan. 30 at Albany Academies.

Last year, the shop raised $1,100.

"We'd like to hit $1,500 this year," said owner Greg Zorian. "We're going to have seven barbers and we're going to be open from 4 to 7 ... half the staff from the Clifton Park store comes down and helps us out too."

Zorian said he joined the fundraiser after learning about it from a regular customer.

"I had a customer whose son went to Albany Academies, and she asked if I wanted to make a donation. I just said I can do one better."

My pet likes to chew the snow from between his paws after walks. Are there any dangers associated with this?

Many pets like to eat the snow, which is generally safe as long as the amount is limited and there are no toxins nearby. Ideally, you should avoid letting your pet consume snow. Some pets with long fur in between their toes can develop interdigital ice formation. This is often painful and can lead to limping. These pets can benefit from clipping the fur between the digits shorter in the winter.

One potential danger facing our pets during these winter months is due to the salt used to melt the snow. Walking in heavily salted areas can cause footpads to crack and even form ulcerations. Additionally, if your pet licks the snow mixed with the salt from his or her feet, gastrointestinal irritation can occur. One way to counteract these potential complications is to wash your pet's feet after walking outdoors. Other available options include pet booties, topical wax or simply using pet safe ice melt.

Some of the thick coated dogs and cats choose to spend hours outdoors. Make sure that your pet has access to a sheltered area to escape the wind and the cold. In addition to shelter make sure that the water and food provided for your pet does not freeze. Many pet supply stores sell water heaters that keep your pet's drinking water at a comfortable temperature. It is important not to use heat lamps or heating blankets that are not approved for use in animals. These products can lead to thermal burns.

IBF names Barkman BCE designee

The Institute of Business & Finance (IBF) recently awarded Gary Barkman with the estate planning designation, BCE (Board Certified in Estate Planning). This graduate-level designation is conferred upon candidates who complete a 135-plus hour educational program focusing on trusts, wills, probate, retirement benefits, caring for children, and what should be done after the death of a loved one. Over $50 trillion is expected to pass from one generation to another during the next half century. BCE certification requires mastery of different types of trusts, ownership rules, disinheritance, probate, pay-on-death accounts, insurance, spousal restrictions, special needs, conservatorships, and managing assets.

According to IBF, "There are a large number of estate planning books and courses offered. The BCE program is one of the only courses that covers all aspects of estate planning including what needs to be done after death."

The student must pass three comprehensive exams and a written case study as well as adhere to the BBP Code of Ethics and IBF Standards of Practice as well as fulfill annual continuing education requirements. The BCE program is designed for brokers and advisors who have clients in their 60s or older as well as those who may be providing care to an aging relative.

Drive benefits animal groups

Delmar-based Bark Busters Home Dog Training recently completed the Pause for Paws Pet Supply Drive, a program designed to help the Mohawk and Hudson River Humane Society and the Capital District Humane Association provide support to their rescue animals. Through a coordinated effort with local veterinary clinics and the residents of the Capital Region, Bark Busters collected foods, supplies, treats and toys that were distributed to the MHRHS shelter and to CDHA.

Capitaland Animal Hospital, Central Veterinary Hospital, Normanside Veterinary Clinic and Sand Creek Animal Hospital served as donation sites for residents to drop off the items, which included pet food, dog toys, towels, bedding, paper towels, and redeemable bottles and cans. Nearly 200 pounds of supplies were collected.

"The response to this holiday pet supply drive was wonderful," said Nancy Larabee, marketing and development director at the Mohawk and Hudson River Humane Society. "We received so many items on our wish list. The society is completely dependent upon the generosity of the community to fulfill our mission of saving homeless animals. We receive no funding from local, state or federal government, nor do we receive funding from any national group. We deeply appreciate community members who support our mission and help us care for homeless animals."

Ticketholders from previous years can attest to the quality and value of the series. As always, the ticket prices are a steal. Series tickets are $20 adult/$15 senior citizen and youth; for each concert, they are $8 adult/$5 senior citizen and youth.

The Library also has just learned that it will receive support from the Art$Grant program funded by The Arts Center of the Capital Region through the New York Council on the Arts.

The library is offering business, individual and family sponsorships as it works toward making the series independent of grant funding. All donors receive program acknowledgement. Library to show 'Social Network'

Mark Zuckerberg is the young genius-punk entrepreneur who nurtured Facebook into an international phenomenon and "changed the face of human interaction, perhaps forever."

He could be considered as the father of social networking, although some in his sphere refer to him in far less complimentary terms.

Who is this guy, how did he do what he did and where is he going with it? These questions are addressed in the just-released-to-dvd feature film "The Social Network" starring Jesse Eisenberg as the Harvard undergrad and computer programming genius. It is a superbly crafted chronicle of the founding of Facebook and the battles over ownership that followed the website's unfathomable success. Come and watch it with us. (Rated PG-13, running time 121 minutes)

The film will be shown on the state-of-the-art equipment in the library community room on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 30, at 1:30 p.m. We'll supply some snacks or you can bring your own, and we might all become friends on Facebook after the movie! VPL has a new Facebook page on which you can follow the library news and antics when you "friend" us. Visit it now!

Radon awareness

On January 25 Cornell Cooperative Extension will present a program on Radon Awareness in the library community from 6 - 8 p.m. This is your chance to get the latest radon information from a reliable source. Free radon test kits and educational materials will be available. The program is free, sign up is necessary. Call Cornell at 765-3529.

Friends needed

FOL is looking for members to serve on the executive board. Terms are expiring in March for the following positions: President, Vice President and Secretary. Please consider making a service commitment to VPL in this way. Contact Michele Reilly at 765-3411 for more information.

On display

The library display case resembles a jumping-ball pit, it is so full of colorful stuffed birds from the collection of Jarret Merens. The kids love it. In the hall gallery, prize-winning photographer Alison Swanson is exhibiting her expert photos.

Reading club

Adult Reading Club is in full swing and it is not too late for you to participate. Visit our website at www.voorheesvillelibrary.org to find out how to join.

All library programming is free (unless otherwise noted) and open to the public. Voorheesville Public Library is located at 51 School Road, Voorheesville. For information, call 765-2791 or visit www.voorheesvillelibrary.org.

Having a Ball While Working

Classroom project requested by Mrs. R. on Dec 20, 2010

My Students: Maria Colla said, "I believe every student is a brilliant child. I believe this of every one of my students and want to see their success while being able to channel their no."

My Project: The stability ball chairs that I am asking for will allow my students to move without disrupting those around them while they work. They are able to bounce gently on the ball.

My students need these chair balls to increase their stamina for written work and attention to a task while having the opportunity to "bounce".

Teachers turn to web for funds

BH-BL instructors solicit donations for materials

By ALYSSA JUNG

junga@spotlightnews.com

With school districts strapped for cash as state aid is either diminished or denied, some teachers and schools are looking for other ways to get materials for their classrooms. Eight teachers from the Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake School District have posted "projects" on the website www.donorschoose.org asking for people to contribute a lot or a little to help them improve their students' education.

"It won't offset problems we're having with the budget, but it's certainly nice to have extra things you'd like to do for the children," said Christy Multer, communications specialist for the district. She alerted faculty to the website, featured as one of Oprah's Favorite Things on the "Oprah Winfrey Show."

Kriss Ruby is a special education teacher at Stevens Elementary School and works with second- and third-graders. She posted a project requesting stability ball chairs that she said help with both concentration and strength building.

"A lot of my kids have ADHD or ADD or just have sensory needs. Our occupational therapist recommended using balls for these kids because it gives them input on their body. Instead of just sitting on hard chairs all the time, they can move and bounce around and it's a lot quieter in the classroom because you don't have chair legs scraping back and forth, just the ball," said Ruby.

Ruby is hoping to purchase 12 stability ball chairs, which come in at a total price of $299.79. So far, $15 has been donated, and Ruby is hoping more people will become aware of just how useful these somewhat unconventional classroom "materials" are.

"I used to have one in the room, but it ended up popping a few years ago. I'd let the kids take turns with them and everyone wanted to have a turn so they felt extra special to use it," said Ruby. "It was amazing just their whole demeanor when they were able to use a ball."

Ruby said the balls also help her students with posture and penmanship because they have to sit up straighter.

"If they don't sit with their feet on the floor the ball will roll and they'll fall off," said Ruby. "It helps build core muscles in the stomach and helps with handwriting because they are sitting the right way."

The simple act of light bouncing also helps her students stay focused, she said.

"If they do want to bounce on it a little bit they can. We have to set rule so they're not bouncing around the classroom but it's definitely different for them," said Ruby.

It's a different idea that's getting limited circulation in the area. Ruby said a school in Saratoga Springs piloted it in a general education classroom and a fifth grade class in her building has six stability ball chairs.

"It's just a good way to give kids who already struggle with reading, writing and what not, a different avenue and making it more fun for them," said Ruby.

Fostering respect

Siena and ADL team up to teach students the values of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

ANDREW BEAM
beama@spotlightnews.com

In memory of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the Anti-Defamation League and Siena College partnered up on Friday, Jan. 14, to provide a venue for young people to reflect on the tenets the civil rights leader preached.

The STOP Conference, or Students Together Opposing Prejudice, is a component of the Martin Luther King Jr. Lecture Series put on by Siena College, and involved students from all over the Capital District coming together to explore the different facets of prejudice and how to promote diversity.

This is the college's sixth year holding the conference, and it is the ADL's third year being involved.

Mechanicville High School students Austin Bryant, a senior, and Kabe McClenents, a sophomore, said the activities they took part in that day taught them to think before they speak.

People are more ignorant than they should be," said Bryant. "Everybody has their own difficulties and their own problems. To harp on that and annoy them about it just adds more to their plate, which they really don't deserve."

McClenents referred to "the Golden Rule" and said it is important to think about it when interacting with others.

"Treat others how you would like to be treated and not to disrespect people for how they choose to live," he said.

Bryant said that he used to use the word "gay" quite freely, and not think of the consequences that come with it, but he said now he realizes how much it can hurt and offend people.

"I kind of just used that as lingo," he said. "Of course, it means something else, and it might hurt people."

ADL's A World of Difference Institute Coordinator Kate Jactett was on hand at the conference to help facilitate the day's events. She said the organization prefers to use the word "respect" as opposed to "tolerance" when it comes to dealing with prejudice and diversity.

"Respect is a higher form of appreciation for another person," she said. "Often people might say they tolerate someone. It tends to give a connotation of just putting up with someone, and we try to move beyond just putting up with someone and actually respecting them and understanding where they come from."

The event, geared at middle school and high school students from around the region, was held at Siena to give the young people a chance to experience the environment of a college campus. With universities sometimes serving as the melting pot for various cultures, Jactett said it is important to expose children to different ways of life as early as possible.

"At any age level, it's important to expose students to all kinds of diversity and give them the opportunity to experience diversity in all its forms," she said. "We take a very broad spectrum approach to the concept of diversity. Often when we think of diversity, we think of the visual diversity such as skin color, race and ethnicity, or

Anti-Defamation League Trainer Eric Eisenstein helps students with an activity where they have been given different identities and must reflect on how it would affect their lives.

Andrew Beam/Spotlight

perceived race and ethnicity, but often there might be layers of diversity that are hidden below the surface."

This would include components such as socioeconomic background, religion, sexual orientation, gender identity and gender expression, so opening students up to different situations of diversity would allow them to process these differences and be able to recognize them, said Jactett.

Dr. Peter Ellard, chairman of the Martin Luther King

Jr. Lecture Series at Siena, said the conference lets the college see what high school students are experiencing at their own schools and it helps students understand Siena's sincerity in promoting diversity.

"They get to understand that we're serious about this," he said. "This is a very important issue, and we take their experiences as very important ones."

During the day, students were separated into different classrooms where they participated in workshops.

Eric Eisenstein, a trainer for the ADL, helped facilitate activities that placed students in cultures other than their own.

"We basically have them take an identity that is not their own and discuss with other people in the room how that new identity would affect their lives and how things would be different," he said.

Another activity had students stand up and introduce themselves to one another using a greeting from a different culture and having them come back and reflect on either how it felt to act out the greeting or how it felt to receive it. "We ask how they felt in terms of their comfort when they did that," he said. "Were they uncomfortable? Why were they uncomfortable? What were the differences? And how would they feel if somebody greeted them in a different way and what would have their reactions been?"

As part of the conference, students' artwork was on Considering loan consolidation? Ask yourself these five questions

By ANTHONY LANZILLO
Senior Vice President
KeyBank

To paraphrase the opening of Dickens' classic novel, A Tale of Two Cities, for consumers looking to get a handle on debt by consolidating loans, the time to borrow has never been better, the ability to borrow could not be worse.

According to the Mortgage Bankers Association's Refinancing Index, refinancing applications were at a five-year high in 2009 as consumers looked to leverage historically low rates to consolidate debt. The only problem: based on an early 2009 forecast in The Wall Street Journal by Doug Duncan, chief economist of Fannie Mae, about two-thirds of those applications were denied. People either didn't have enough equity in their house or their credit was not good enough.

So if you're struggling financially, as many people are, and you're scraping pennies together to make ends meet, as many people are, it's easy to see why you might be confused by the mixed signals coming out of today's market—especially when it comes to consolidating debt. The following five questions can help clarify things and help you determine if consolidation is right for you.

1. What is your financial situation?

The first thing to look at when considering loan consolidation is your overall financial picture. Ask yourself the following:

- What is my total income?
- What are my monthly expenses, both fixed and variable?
- How much debt do I have, and who do I owe it to?
- What are the interest rates for my outstanding credit balances?
- Am I behind on payments?
- What is my credit score?

You should be able to pull together all of this information by looking at your pay stubs, bank activity, loan statements, utility bills and loan documents. You can get a copy of your credit report and credit score through one of the major credit rating agencies (Equifax, TransUnion, Experian).

2. Is loan consolidation right for you?

For most people, debt consolidation becomes a viable option only after they find themselves in a financial hole without a lot of options. The question is: why are you in this hole, how deep is it and will consolidating debt work?

Anthony Lanzillo

By reviewing your financial situation and understanding your credit rating you can gain a better understanding of what you need to achieve with your consolidation—lower interest rates, lower monthly payments, stretched out terms—as well as your options, including:

- Refinancing your home
- Home equity loans or lines of credit
- Personal loans
- Debt management/credit counseling

Also, many organizations in your community provide free credit counseling services (you should never pay for credit counseling) and resources, such as churches, banks and community development groups offer programs or can provide you with a list of professionally trained and certified counselors who can help you. A credit counselor will assess your financial situation and provide you with a number of options based upon your goals, income and expenses.

3. Should you work with a loan consolidation firm?

The question here is: do you want to pay someone for what you can do on your own? A loan consolidation firm will do two things: one, work with you to lower your monthly payments and two, negotiate with your creditors on your behalf.

Remember, the debt is yours. Therefore you have the right to negotiate with your creditors directly. Also, as a consumer, you can and should explore your options. In fact, you should exhaust your options. Talk to your bank. Visit a credit union. Consult with credit counselors. The goal is to consolidate your debt at the lowest rate possible over the shortest amount of time possible.

4. Who can you trust to consolidate your loans?

Do your research. Your bank is always a good starting point. If your bank or a credit union is not an option; you can work with a reputable debt consolidation agency. The Better Business Bureau is a good source to help you avoid predatory lenders. You will want to ensure that you fully understand the agency's fee structure and what your payments will be, as well as review your account regularly to monitor for any changes to rates, payment dates, etc. No matter your choice, know what it will cost you over the life of the loan.

5. How does consolidation affect my credit score?

Consolidation will almost certainly affect your credit score, especially if it involves a credit card, home loan or line of credit. How much varies on your financial situation and repayment history. But at this stage, the point isn't to keep your credit rating strong—you can always rebuild it—the point is to survive.

At the end of the day, being in debt is stressful and scary. If you consolidate to make it more manageable, understand that the debt does not go away. It is a short-term fix, and if you want to keep from drowning in it you need to reevaluate your long-term relationship with money and make some changes. Personalized advice from your trusted banker or a credit counselor can help you do it.

Drowning in debt?

Do you have a problem with debt? The following checklist can help you determine if you run the risk of having debt overrun your life.

- Do you have less than $500 in savings?
- Do you spend more than 20 percent of your disposable income on debt (not including your mortgage)?
- Have you ever asked your credit card company to raise your credit limit?
- Are your credit cards near or at their limits?
- Do you use your credit cards to pay for routine household expenses or purchases that you formerly made with cash?

- Are you late making payments?
- Do you miss payments all together?
- Do you make only minimum payments on credit card balances?
- Do you borrow from one account to pay off another account?
- Are you underinsured?
- Are you unaware of your total debt burden?
- Is your paycheck spent before it even arrives?

- Have you considered bankruptcy?

If you're answering yes to these questions, talk to your banker or a credit counselor today. They can assess your financial situation and provide you with a number of options based upon your goals, income and expenses. No one wants to see you in financial trouble, and the earlier you address your issues, the more options you will have and the easier financial recovery will be. It's a tough conversation, but you are not alone, and you can find people—not predators—who are willing to help.

display in the Sarazen Student Union. Many of the pictures featured King, President Barack Obama, as well as the artists' visions of world peace. Ellard said he noticed a lot of connections between environmental conservation and what students believe King would be doing to combat global warming.

"They wrote things like, 'If Martin Luther King Jr. were here today, he would be having sit-ins, marches and speeches to protest the destruction of the environment,'" he said, adding they would be the same tactics used by King to effect change during the Civil Rights era. "The suffering that goes on with the environment, the degradation against the planet and how that affects people, as well as the rest of the planet, that's tied right in with social justice."

The correlation between environmental degradation and civil rights is the reason why Siena has invited Van Jones, former White House environmental advisor, to speak at its spring lecture on April 7, where he will discuss the green economy and green jobs.

"What we're trying to do is connect the dots between issues of the environment, issues of prejudice and issues of social justice, because they're all tied together," said Ellard.

Newest addition to Guilderland's eateries is Sage Bistro

By CHARLES WIFF

The doldrums of winter always have many trying to escape cabin fever this time of year, but for penny-conscious consumers, a nice evening out is often out of the question.

But it may be possible come Guilderland Restaurant Week, which is fast approaching. Scheduled from Monday, Jan. 24, to Saturday, Jan. 29, participating restaurants will offer menus consisting of an appetizer, entree and dessert for $20.11.

It's organized by the Guilderland Chamber of Commerce and now is in its fourth year. It's proven so popular during that time that it's now a biannual program.

"We started doing it twice a year because the restaurants wanted it," said Chamber President Kathy Burbank.

A lot of the restaurants that participate in the "Taste of Guilderland" week are fairly high-class, making a three-course meal for a Jackson an undeniable bargain. Though the menu

"We start getting calls as soon as an ad or press release goes out."

Kathy Burbank on the popularity of Restaurant Week is still being finalized, Restaurant Week generally has 15 participating eateries. And they are sure to see business by joining in, said Burbank.

"We start getting calls as soon as an ad or press release goes out," she said.

Some people call from as far away as Clifton Park or Saratoga looking for information, she said. The easiest way to find out about the week, including menus for the restaurants, is to visit www.tasteofguilderland.com.

The Chamber so far anticipates participation from BFS Mediterranean, Mezza Notte Ristorante, Peaches Café, Tesoro Italian restaurant, Athos Greek restaurant, Township Tavern in Altamont, Barcelona Spanish restaurant and Provence French restaurant.

A new addition will be Sage Bistro. Owner Joe Soliman cut the ribbon on his Star Plaza restaurant Tuesday, Jan. 11, after two months in business, and he said he's looking forward to the promotion.

"It's a way to let the public know that we're here," he said. "I'm just waiting for the word to get out. We're going to do great business."

Soliman has Un-Hui-Filomeno in the kitchen, who is the former chef at Avenue A in Albany. Sage offers lunch and dinner menus of a wide range of fare inspired by Mediterranean and Korean cuisine.

Soliman has already experienced success locally as the owner of the Hidden Cafe in Delaware Plaza, which offered Mediterranean food. He said he's sold that location despite it doing good business because he wanted a new challenge.

"It was time for a change," he said.

Burbank said she's delighted to have Sage as a new Chamber member, especially since her offices share a wall with the bistro, giving her an easy lunch spot.

"The smell is killing me," she joked.

one for the town, with the two combining for a finale of singers that will spill off the stage and into the aisles.

This years, 65 students are in the crew, another large number. Besides managing costumes, makeup and props, kids will be running the auditorium's lights.

Organizing any production is a logistical trial, but that's especially true with such a large cast, said Conway.

"It's a challenge working with 84 students," she said. "The kids are really hard workers, though. They gave up a lot of time, starting at the end of October."

Daly echoed those thoughts. They've run rehearsals four times a week after school since casting was completed and while not every student has to be present for every minute, each has put in an enormous amount of effort, she said.

"They're very engaged, and they've lived up to our expectations," she said.

"Beauty and the Beast" will be performed four times, on Feb. 1, 3, 4 and 5 at 7 p.m. A snow date is scheduled for Sunday, Feb. 6, at 2 p.m.

Tickets for "Beauty and the Beast" will be on sale at the middle school box office (332 Kenwood Ave., Delmar) on Wednesday, Jan. 19, from 5:45 to 7:15 p.m. and on Saturday, Jan. 22, and Sunday, Jan. 30, from noon to 3 p.m. Students will also be able to purchase tickets in the cafeteria during lunchtime on Jan. 25, 26, 28, and on Feb. 1.

The ticket price is $5 for students and seniors and $8 for adults.

Tickets may also be purchased on show nights, but for the past several years, performances have been known to sell out.

could be a way to "trim the sails." He also questioned whether the Association of Towns membership is a good investment.

"We have a variety of expenses in front of us," he said. "We've got to start doing more with less."

The board also voted to send John Flanigan as the town's representative to the annual meeting of the Association of Towns, but the former president of that group will make the trip at his own expense.

There were more than $13,000 in dues included in the 2011 budget, not including the approved Association of Towns fee, and they stretched over nearly every town department. Some were for as little as $15 (to the Albany-Schenectady County Assessors Association) while others went into the hundreds ($405 in dues to the American Public Works Association).

Some Town Board members and members of the public wondered if providing such dues is a good use of taxpayers' money.

professional lives, no one pays our membership fees for us," said Councilwoman Joann Dawson. "This is exactly what our residents are going through, they're looking at their budgets."

She noted some employees belong to state, local and county branches of the same associations, and it might be worth studying which one brings in the most value.

Supervisor Sam Messina voted to table the item, but he also voiced his support for the list. He said membership dues were already cut back during the budgeting process. Some have already been paid this year, also.

"There's money in our budget for these proposed expenditures," he said.

Beyond the issue of membership dues, there were few, if any, surprises in the organizational agenda.

Top town staff will remain unchanged:

Josh Cansler will serve as commissioner of public works; Suzanne Traylor will serve as comptroller; Michael Morelli will serve as director of economic development and planning; and Susan Leath will serve as town historian.

Kate Powers was appointed to another seven-year term on the Planning Board and Anthony Umina was appointed to another five-year term on the Zoning Board of Appeals. Daniel Coffey was reappointed at chairman of the ZBA, and George Leveille was reappointed as the chairman of the Planning Board. Both of those appointments are for one year.

Ryan Donovan was appointed to his second term as a town justice. The rest of the town's elected officials are in the middle of their terms.

Town Board meetings will continue on at 6 p.m. on the second and fourth Wednesdays of the month, though there was a brief discussion about moving it later. Official Town Hall hours were set for between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

The Spotlight was designated the town's paper of record.

CHILL OUT at the Frost Faire

People are invited to bring their snow tubes to ride on the "big hill" at Saratoga National Park during Frost Faire.

Family friendly event takes place at Saratoga National Historic Park

The Frost Faire at Saratoga National Park will feature cannon firings at 10 and 11 a.m., noon and 1, 2 and 3 p.m.

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
domin@spotlightnews.com

When Clark Dalzell got out of the Navy and was considering a career, he thought back to the summers he spent working at Saratoga National Historic Park. Dalzell had always enjoyed his time at the park, so he decided to become a ranger.

Dalzell spent 38 years at the park, eventually becoming the trails director. His enthusiasm for his work never waned. In fact, even though he retired this year, he's coming back Saturday, Jan. 22, for the annual Frost Faire to reprise his always-popular scavenger hunt. Playing the part of a park ranger, Dalzell will help kids find candy and other hidden treats.

"It's kind of funny," he said. "I came in as a park ranger and now I'm imitating one."

The Frost Faire hasn't been part of the park as long as Dalzell has; it's entering only its 16th year. But its roots stretch back much further than that. Popular in the 1700s, Frost Faires gave people a chance to escape cabin fever by socializing and sharing food and drinks with friends.

In that spirit, the Frost Faire, which kicks off at 10:30 a.m., will offer cookies, cheese and cocoa around a bonfire all day. There will also be sledding, provided there's enough snow. Kids and adults are invited to bring snow tubes (no sleds or toboggans) to use on the park's big hill.

"Kids have a ball," Dalzell said. "They take about 100 trips down an hour."

Even if there isn't enough snow for sledding, visitors can enjoy horse-drawn carriage rides and games such as ice bowling, a giant soldier puzzle and bottle fishing.

Ice bowling is pretty much what it sounds like, according to Ranger Bill Valosin: you try to knock down pins set up on the ice. The giant soldier puzzle, meanwhile, is geared toward young kids, with easy-to-handle pieces.

"It's laid out on a big board, and the soldier is basically about 6 feet high," Valosin said. "It's a pretty good size."

For the bottle fishing, several empty glass soda bottles will be spread out on the ground. Using a washer attached by a string to a dowel, players have to try to hook the bottles and get them to stand upright.

"It is harder than you would imagine," Valosin said. "It's frustrating, challenging and a lot of fun."

Some of the day's offerings mix fun with education. There will be contra dancing and a Colonial handwriting demonstration, and a children's craft room will feature decorative tin piercing and copper embossing.

At 10 and 11 a.m., noon and 1, 2 and 3 p.m., there will be cannon firing demonstrations. Musket firing demonstrations will be held at 10:30 and 11:30 a.m. and 12:30, 1:30 and 2:30 p.m.

Dalzell's scavenger hunt typically gets under way around noon, when he gathers kids together for a question-and-answer session about deer, birds and other wildlife. Once he has their attention, he lets them know about the hidden treasures.

"We stash stuff down on the horse trail," he said.

Watching the kids search for the prizes always makes him feel good.

"It's nice to see them getting away from the TV and the Gameboys," he said.

The Frost Faire runs from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 22, at Saratoga National Historical Park, routes 4 and 32 in Stillwater. It is sponsored by the Town of Stillwater and Saratoga National Historical Park. For more information, call 664-9821, ext. 224, or visit www.nps.gov/sara.

Horse-drawn carriage rides are one of the activities offered at Frost Faire.

Clark Dalzell, who has worked at the park for 38 years, will lead his popular scavenger hunt at the Frost Faire. Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

"They, I think, are being denied a technology that's being provided to the vast majority of our community," he said.

Later in the evening, the Town Board passed a resolution vowing to seek out grants for expanding broadband access in rural areas. Caldwell said Verizon has an agreement with DirecTV to, in some cases, bundle satellite television with Internet and voice service running in on copper wiring. It would also offer homeowners not in the coverage area the option to pay for extending service there, but that's usually an expensive proposition.

Verizon said it would extend fiber optic cable 150 feet from the street for new customers in the coverage area.

Verizon provided to the town as part of its application a copy of its television channel guide and rate chart for the Syracuse area. Service there starts at $12.99 per month for local channels, $64.99 for 104 HD channels plus the local selections, with additional options for more channels, movie packages and the like. Plans for contractual and month-to-month service would be available.

Those prices don't include any franchising fees that would be paid to the town. Bethlehem collects a 5 percent fee assessed to Time Warner bills, and it will do the same from Verizon customers. The town doesn't expect this will add considerable new revenue, though, since the two companies would be drawing from the same pool of customers.

Caldwell said Verizon would endeavor to provide as much local programming as possible.

"So long as there's no exclusivity agreement, I would expect any content that's being carried by the incumbent [Time Warner] would be carried by Verizon as well," he said. "If we're not providing it, we're not going to be a very compelling option."

Crash

"Luckily it was at that time of the morning," Bethlehem police Lt. Thomas Heffernan said. "A half hour from then you start getting people walking to the high school, people out jogging...as bad as the accident was, we're lucky it wasn't worse."

Young was charged with two felonies: burglary in the second degree and reckless endangerment in the first degree, as well as criminal mischief in the fourth degree, petit larceny, unlawfully fleeing a police officer in the third degree, DWI and numerous traffic violations.

Heffernan said police pulled Young from the vehicle after the collision and he exhibited signs of intoxication, including having the odor of alcohol on him. A beer can could be seen lying outside of his crumpled car.

Heffernan said more charges may follow as the police continue an investigation. A complete search of the car has not been conducted for stolen property, he said.

"It's hard to tell with the damage to the vehicle," Heffernan said. "We're not able to get into the vehicle because all the doors are jammed, so we've secured it."

Historical Association presents Pound Award

At the December program of the New Scotland Historical Association (NSHA), Margaret "Peg" Dorgan was presented with the Arthur Pound Award for outstanding service in the promotion and preservation of the History of the Town of New Scotland.

Charter Member Martha Slingerland, presented the award to Dorgan, who moved to this area in 1968 to begin teaching music. Over the years she raised a family and later returned to teaching, retiring in 1997.

Dorgan is passionate about history and the NSHA, and encourages its growth by urging people to attend programs and become involved in the association. She began as a trustee in 1997 and has assisted with the Sentinel, the newsletter published by the NSHA. She has held many positions, including vice president, and worked on the book "New Scotland Township;" helped with the fourth grade programs and initiated the Oral History Project.

She has held the position of president since 2007, and is spearheading NSHA's book, "Memories of the Town of New Scotland Before 1970," which the association hopes to have available for purchase in May. She lends her musical abilities to programs by leading patriotic songs to open NSHA meetings, and also organizing musical programs, such as the December "An Old Fashioned Christmas Party."

The Arthur Pound Award is presented from time to time to recognize individuals who have helped promote and preserve the history of New Scotland in an extraordinary way. Arthur Pound moved to the Town of

New Scotland in 1922 with his wife and children for the summer. He was so captivated by the hills of the Helderbergs and their surroundings that he settled here for the remainder of his life. He wrote of people and places in the Town of New Scotland as if they were his family. He had a wide range of interests, which were expressed in the 18 books he wrote, innumerable magazine articles, and his book of poems. His interest in New York found expression in four books on American colonial history and biography.

His "Johnson of the Mohawks," written in 1930, is still valued by historians for his insight into the man and his times. He was appointed in 1940 to the post of New York State Historian and director of the New York State Archives of History, a position he held until 1944.

HELP FOR HOMEOWNERS IN FORECLOSURE NEW YORK STATE LAW REQUIRES THAT WE SEND YOU THIS NOTICE ABOUT THE FORECLOSURE PROCESS. PLEASE READ IT CAREFULLY. SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT YOU ARE IN DANGER OF LOSING YOUR HOME. IF YOU FAIL TO RESPOND TO THE SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT IN THIS FORECLOSURE ACTION, YOU MAY LOSE YOUR HOME. PLEASE READ THE SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT CAREFULLY. YOU SHOULD IMMEDIATELY CONTACT AN ATTORNEY OR YOUR LOCAL LEGAL AID OFFICE TO OBTAIN ADVICE ON HOW TO PROTECT YOURSELF. SOURCES OF INFORMATION AND ASSISTANCE The state encourages you to become informed about your options in foreclosure. In addition to seeking assistance from an attorney or legal aid office, there are government agencies and non-profit organizations that you may contact for information about possible options, including trying to work with your lender during this process. To locate an entity near you, you may call the toll-free helpline maintained by the New York State Banking Department at 1-877-BANK-NYS (1-877-226-5697) or visit the department's website at WWW.BANKING.STATE.NY.US. FORECLOSURE RESCUE SCAMS Be careful of people who approach you with offers to "save" your home. There are individuals who watch for notices of foreclosure actions in order to unfairly profit from a homeowner's distress. You should be extremely careful about any such promises and any suggestions that you pay them a fee or sign over your deed. State law requires anyone offering such services for profit to enter into a contract which fully describes the services they will perform and fees they will charge, and which prohibits them from taking any money from you until they have completed all such promised services. § 1303 NOTICE NOTICE YOU ARE IN DANGER OF LOSING YOUR HOME If you do not respond to this summons and complaint by serving a copy of the answer on the attorney for the mortgage company who filed this foreclosure proceeding against you and filing the answer with the court, a default judgment may be entered and you can lose your home. Speak to an attorney or go to the court where your case is pending for further information on how to answer the summons and protect your property. Sending a payment to your mortgage company will not stop this foreclosure action. YOU MUST RESPOND BY SERVING A COPY OF THE ANSWER ON THE ATTORNEY FOR THE PLAINTIFF (MORTGAGE COMPANY) AND FILING THE ANSWER WITH THE COURT. DATED: December 13, 2010 Steven J. Baum, P.C. Attorney(s) For Plaintiff(s) 220 Northpark Parkway Suite G Amherst, NY 14228 The law firm of Steven J. Lady Indians win fifth straight game

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk girls basketball team is on a roll.

The Lady Indians (7-2 league, 8-2 overall) defeated Albany Academy 58-32 last Friday to increase their Colonial Council winning streak to five games.

R-C-S took control early, as it built a 23-7 lead in the first quarter. Haley Richter and Jaquilla Ponder combined to score 13 of the Lady Indians' 23 points in their period.

Ponder finished with 15 points to lead a balanced R-C-S attack. Kayla Hotaling contributed 14 points, and Richter added 11 points.

J'Vanay Santos netted 17 points for Albany Academy (2-7, 3-7).

The win helped R-C-S keep pace with Holy Names and Cohoes in the race for the Colonial Council lead. Holy Names and Cohoes are tied for first place with 8-1 league records, and they are the two teams that beat the Lady Indians this season.

R-C-S traveled to Rotterdam Tuesday to face Schalmont. The Lady Indians' next home game is Friday against Colonial Council newcomer Ichabod Crane.

Elsewhere in Colonial Council girls' basketball action last Friday, Voorheesville (5-3, 5-4) suffered a 47-44 home loss to Mechanicville.

The Blackbirds used a 12-1 third-quarter run to turn a 28-20 halftime deficit into a 32-29 lead, but the Red Raiders rallied in the fourth quarter to pull out the three-point win.

Tess Baker had 10 points for Mechanicville, while Abby Maiello and Danielle Manupella each contributed nine points. Jennifer Cillis led Voorheesville with 15 points, and Sarah Madden chipped in 12 points.

After hosting Cohoes Tuesday, the Blackbirds welcome Watervliet to Voorheesville Friday.

In the Suburban Council, Bethlehem (6-2, 8-2) maintained its share of first place in the South Division standings with a 49-34 victory at Gunderland last Friday.

The Lady Eagles jumped out to a 13-2 lead after the first quarter, but they needed a 20-10 fourth quarter to put the Lady Dutch (1-7, 1-9) away.

Bridget Murphy scored 16 points, while Emily Kirby and McDonald's All-American nominee Jaci Oskam each added 15 points for Bethlehem, which is tied for first with Colonie. Crista Benton and Kelly Van Epps each had six points for Gunderland.

Bethlehem hosts North Division-leading Shenendehowa Friday, while Gunderland plays Niskayuna.

In boys basketball action last weekend, Bethlehem (7-1, 7-3) bounced back from its first Suburban Council loss of the season by beating Gunderland 77-55 in Delmar.

After being limited to a season-low 48 points in a loss to Columbia last Tuesday, the Eagles responded by scoring 60 points over the first three quarters and building a 30-point lead against Gunderland (3-5, 4-6). The Dutchmen scored 25 points in the fourth quarter, but by then it was too late.

Forward Scott Clas led Bethlehem with 29 points in a dominating performance in the low post. Cameron Dobbs netted 12 points for Gunderland.

Both local Suburban Council teams hit the road Friday as Bethlehem meets Shen in Clifton Park and Gunderland visits Niskayuna.

Voorheesville (1-6, 2-9) had an active weekend. Following a 60-49 loss at Mechanicville last Friday, the Blackbirds split non-league games against Berne-Knox-Westerlo and Cornwall.

Voorheesville defeated B-K-W 62-32 Saturday behind Kyle Russell's 14 points, but Cornwall defeated the Blackbirds 72-41 Sunday. Logan Hotaling scored 10 points for Voorheesville against Cornwall.

won't have to deal with in his push to return to the state tournament. If Lyman can reach the finals in a weight class that featured three other wrestlers that placed at last year's state tournament, he seems poised to get back to the Times Union Center this season.

Back to Shen, though. The Plainsmen have a big Suburban Council match Thursday against Columbia, which is ranked 12th. If they can get past the Blue Devils, there is nothing standing in their way from entering the state tournament as the top-ranked squad in New York.

Looks like the University at Albany men's basketball team is now living down to its preseason coaches' poll prediction. The Great Danes have lost their last four America East games to slip to a tie for seventh place in the standings.

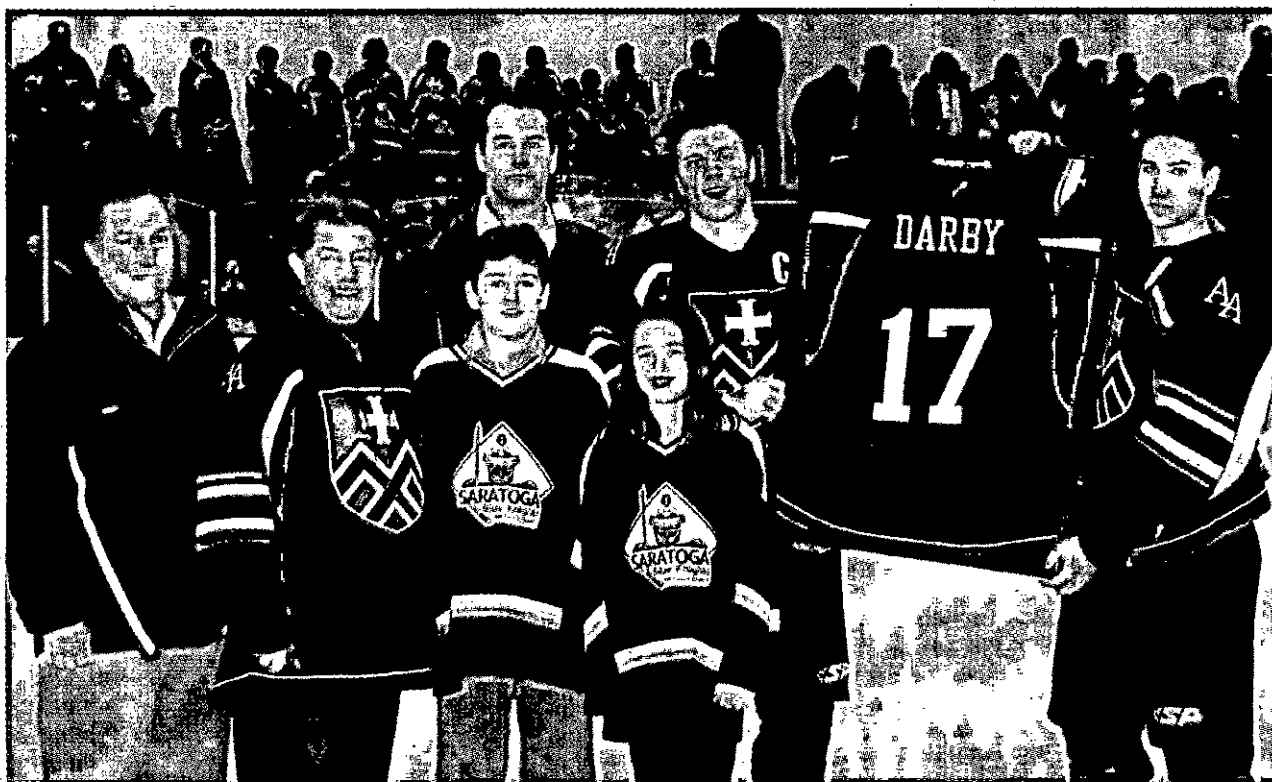

UAlbany's biggest problem has been holding leads. Case in point: last Friday's 70-67 loss to Boston University. The Great Danes led by double digits in the second half, but they couldn't finish the Terriers off and wound up falling.

At least, Siena is still showing some signs of life in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference with last weekend's 66-59 victory over Marist. Clarence Jackson scored 19 points in his first game back from a high ankle sprain that kept him sidelined for nearly a month. If this is the Clarence Jackson that shows up the rest of the season, the Saints have a chance to move up the MAAC standings.

Still, it's hard to see either Siena or UAlbany making the NCAA Tournament this season. If they both fall short, it will be the first time in six years that we haven't had a representative in the NCAA Tournament. Wouldn't that be odd?

Craig Darby, standing behind his children Kyle and Cristina, accepts his retired jersey prior to Saturday's Albany Academy home hockey game. Darby still holds the school record for career points (302).

"The NHL window was closed, and [playing in Europe] was more about seeing other countries that I'd normally never get to see and playing hockey," said Darby.

"I think he would have played hockey for a couple more years in Europe, but Kyle was entering middle school and we didn't want to keep moving every couple of years," said Carey Darby, Craig's wife.

Darby began his pro career in 1993 with the Montreal Canadiens' AHL affiliate in Fredericton, New Brunswick. After a successful AHL campaign, Darby got his first call-up to the NHL in 1994.

Soon after that, though, the bouncing around began. Darby was traded to the New York Islanders. Then, he signed with Philadelphia in 1996 before returning to the Montreal organization in 1999.

"It's not the easiest [life]," said Darby. "Your ultimate goal is to play in the NHL, and you'll do whatever it takes - even if you have to bounce around different teams to get a job."

Darby had his longest stint in the NHL with the Canadiens at the turn of the millenium. He played 154 games in the 1999-2000 and 2000-01 seasons, amassing 19 goals and 26 assists.

Darby found himself bouncing around again following the 2000-01 season. He spent the 2002-03 season mostly with Montreal's AHL affiliate. Then he joined the New Jersey Devils organization in 2003, where he found himself suiting-up for his old hometown as a member of the Albany River Rats. After a second stint with Philadelphia's organization in 2004-05, Darby latched on to AHL teams in Springfield and Winnipeg before going to Europe in 2006.

All the while, Darby had his wife and children in tow.

"They came everywhere with me," said Darby. "There was one year in the 15 years that they didn't come with me, and I said that it would never happen again."

"It was hard because we moved around every two years," said Carey. "I had two children, and it was tough because we moved to places where I had no family. But he was following his dream."

Darby's two-year European tour included stops in Holland and Austria. And wherever he went, his teammates asked him about what it was like to be in the NHL.

"There were a lot of people who saw my stats and asked me about it," said Darby. "They asked if they needed to get faster and stronger."

Now, Darby can impart his experience on a new generation of hockey players while remaining in place. And he can also go to Albany Academy hockey games and see his jersey on the wall - one of only two numbers that Academy has retired.

"That's why I'm so excited about this [honor]. This doesn't happen every day," said Darby.

back against Saratoga last Saturday, but the Blue Streaks (6-1-0, 10-2-0) wasted little time in getting the upper hand. Mike Layman scored twice in the first period, and goaltender Tyler Ellor made 23 saves on 24 Bethlehem shots to lead Saratoga to the win.

"Going up to Saratoga, I felt comfortable," said Rodrigue. "Even though they were ranked [fifth] in the state, I felt we could give them a game, and we did. The 5-1 score was not indicative of how closely it was played."

Devin Smith contributed a pair of second-period goals, and Jamie Bartoszek added another to help the Blue Streaks. Steven Sanchez tallied for Bethlehem in the second period, but that was all Ellor allowed.

"We played well, we played hard and we never gave up," said Rodrigue. "If we didn't come out and play hard in the third period, they could have easily put two or three more goals in."

Despite the two losses, Rodrigue remained optimistic about his team's chances to win the hotly-contested CDHSHL title.

"We're still in excellent position," said Rodrigue. "I'd rather lose to those teams in the regular season than lose to them in the playoffs. I have confidence we will bounce back."

Bethlehem returns to action Friday when it visits Queensbury. The Eagles' next home game is Jan. 25 against South Glens Falls/Hudson Falls at the Bethlehem Area YMCA.

Guilderville handles Albany in dual meet

The Guilderland-Voorheesville boys swim team eased past Albany 96-71 in last Thursday's dual meet at Albany.

Kyunduk Rho led Guilderville with victories in the 200-meter individual medley and the 100-meter freestyle. Rho swam a winning time of 2:15.57 in the 200 IM and a first-place time of 54.79 seconds in the 100 freestyle.

Michael Schaffer (200 freestyle), David Fengshi (100 butterfly) and Chris Zanotta (500 freestyle) also won individual events for Guilderville.

Academy honors Darby

Former NHLer has his uniform retired

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Craig Darby never thought he would see the day where a hockey team would retire his jersey number.

The Colonie native saw that day happen Saturday when Albany Academy retired his No. 17 jersey prior to the Cadets' home game against Canterbury School.

"It was definitely not something I planned on doing, but it's something I'll never forget," said Darby.

Albany Academy honored Darby not only for what he did during his career at the private school — a school-record 302 career points and a state title in 1991 — but also for what he did after he graduated. He played two seasons at Providence College before embarking on a 15-year professional career that included stops in the National Hockey League, American Hockey League and Europe.

During the short ceremony, Darby thanked the school and his coach, Dave Rider, as well as his parents for supporting him throughout his formative years as a hockey player.

"They made some huge sacrifices," Darby said of his parents. "The commitment of having children playing hockey is a full family commitment, both financially and in terms of time."

Darby knows that commitment very well. Today, he's coaching his son Kyle's Saratoga Blue Knights bantam division team, and his daughter Cristina plays.

It wasn't long ago that Darby was lacing up his skates, though. He bounced around Europe for several years after it became apparent to him that the NHL was no longer within his reach, and he retired only two

Lyman takes second place

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk wrestler Andy Lyman finished second in the 125-pound division at last weekend's Eastern States Classic in Sullivan County.

Lyman reached the finals, where he met Shenendehowa's Max Miller. Each wrestler scored a one-point escape during regulation time to force overtime, where Miller earned a second escape to pick up a 2-1 win.

Lyman — who was the No. 1 seed — won his first four matches by decision, including a 7-3 semifinal victory over LaSalle's Brendan Goldup.

Eagles falter in league

Bethlehem loses to top two contenders in CDHSHL

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem's stay in the Capital District High School Hockey League penthouse ended last weekend.

The Eagles (6-2-0 league, 7-4-1 overall) lost to Shaker/Colonie 5-2 Friday and Saratoga Springs 5-1 Saturday to slip into a three-way tie for second place with Saratoga and Shenendehowa with eight standings points. The Jets gained sole possession of first place with 10 standings points.

"Both games, we played relatively well, especially the Shaker/Colonie game," said Bethlehem coach Andre Rodrigue. "We just couldn't capitalize on our opportunities."

Friday's game turned in the final five minutes of the first period. After Bethlehem took a 1-0 lead on Ben Grace's goal, Shaker/Colonie (5-2-0) scored four times in a two-minute time span to take a 4-1 lead.

"The thing I didn't want happening in the first period unfortunately happened," said Rodrigue. "They jumped out with four goals in a short period of time, and being down 4-1 after one period... I don't care who you are. That's a long hill to climb."

Nick Dennis got the first Jets' goal with 4:10 left in the period. Seven seconds later, Chris Cusack scored to give Shaker/Colonie a 2-1 lead. Sean Leach and Andrew Sarafino added goals late in the first period.

"I didn't think we were going to be up three goals in that game," said Shaker/Colonie coach Steve Hudak. "I thought it would be a close game."

Bethlehem tried getting back in the game in the second period. The Eagles got an unassisted goal from Kevin Sheridan to cut the deficit to 4-2, but Leach struck for his second goal of the game with 4:18 left in the period to put the Jets ahead 5-2.

Shaker/Colonie goaltender Stephen Reilly did the rest, as he shut down a Bethlehem team that had scored 28 goals in its first six CDHSHL contests.

"Bethlehem's top line is very good, and our goalie did a good job of handling their flurries," said Hudak.

Patrick Miron made 20 saves in goal for Bethlehem.

The Eagles hoped to bounce

Winney turns in virtuoso performance for Scotia

Rex Ryan was relieved that his New York Jets defeated New England 28-21 in Sunday's AFC playoff game. He didn't want to stick his own foot in his mouth. Yeah, I went there. OK, moving on...

In the same week that former Glens Falls High School star Jimmer Fredette scored 47 points for BYU in a victory over Utah, Scotia-Glenville's Terrell Winney put on a Fredette-esque performance in last Friday's 74-43 Foothills Council victory over Hudson Falls.

Winney was seemingly unstoppable in the first half, as he drained five three-pointers as part of a 21-point performance. It didn't matter if there was a Hudson Falls defender in his face, either. Winney's shots fell true.

When Winney's three-pointers stopped falling in the third quarter, he got creative as he drove to the basket and picked up a couple of layups. When he left midway through the fourth quarter, Winney had 31 points — only three points less than what Hudson Falls managed up to that point.

It's not as if this was the first time Winney had a big game for Scotia-Glenville. The senior guard is averaging a Section II-best 24.5 points per game in helping the Tartans move into first place in the Foothills Council entering this week's action. He's scored more than 20 points in nine of his team's first 10 games, including a 31-point performance against Schalmont in a non-league game Dec. 18. And he's been especially good from behind the three-point arc, as he's drained 36 threes — an average of more than three per game.

From the Sports Desk

Scotia-Glenville's success may be centered around Winney's shooting, but the Tartans are not a one-man show. Junior forward Casey Norton is averaging 11.3 points per game and is demonstrating a knack for hitting outside shots (23 three-pointers). Junior forward Chris Zanta (8.8 points per game) has also been a steady contributor, and junior guard Matt Renko does a good job of running the point.

Still, the Tartans will go as far as Winney takes them. And the way he's playing, Winney should take them deep into the Section II Class A playoffs.

Let's not forget the Scotia-Glenville girls basketball team. The Lady Tartans are undefeated after 11 games and have rarely been challenged. Their closest margin of victory within the Foothills Council is eight points (a 49-41 victory over Johnstown Jan. 4).

Much of the Lady Tartans' success can be traced to the trio of sophomore guard Cassie Broadhead (16.7 points per game), junior guard Sarah Janson (11.6 ppg) and senior center Danielle Conley (11.3 ppg). But coach Regan Burns' defensive system — one that has been influenced by the one she used to play in while helping Voorheesville to three consecutive state tournament appearances in the 1990s — has been equally helpful in Scotia-Glenville's surge to the top.

If the Scotia-Glenville boys team can't bring-home a Sectional title, perhaps the Scotia-Glenville girls team will.

The Shenendehowa wrestling team continues to impress this season.

The state's No. 1-ranked large school squad placed second to Longwood (N.J.) at last weekend's Eastern States Classic in Sullivan County, thanks to a group of six wrestlers that placed in their weight classes.

The Plainsmen's highlight also turned out to be Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's highlight as Max Miller battled Andy Lyman in the 125-pound finals. Each wrestler scored a one-point escape in regulation time before Miller pulled out a 2-1 overtime victory over Lyman to give Shen its only champion in the tournament.

What makes this Ravena's highlight is that Lyman — who was seeded No. 1 in the star-studded weight class — performed well against Miller, a wrestler he
