No surprise, but it still hurts

Schools once again face sizable state aid reduction

By CHARLES WIFF

wiffc@spotlightnews.com

Schools locally and across the state are digesting figures in Gov. Andrew Cuomo's executive budget, released Tuesday, Feb. 1, and most are reluctantly drafting plans to dismiss employees in the coming year.

Cuomo's proposal calls for a $1.5 billion, or 7.3 percent, reduction in state aid to school districts (bringing such aid to a $19.4 billion item, or 29 percent of the state budget). If his figures are adopted by the Legislature — and there is at least tacit support for his proposal from many lawmakers — it will be the third year running schools have seen aid fall.

Since the culling would be weighted by need, suburban schools here in the Capital District would all see more than a 7.3 percent reduction. In the Bethlehem Central School District, aid would decrease by about $2.7 million, or around 10 percent. That's close to what administrators expected.

"It was probably wise for us to prepare a worst case scenario," said Superintendent Michael Tebbano of the district's ongoing budget discussions. "We're going to be losing more personnel."

At a budget forum in late January, Tebbano said the district could stand to cut 20 teachers

Planting an idea

Kids at Bethlehem Children's School plant seeds in pots made of recycled materials as an example of sustainable living. The school held a kick off party to officially launch the construction of a greenhouse made out of recycled bottles and other recycled materials. With the support of General Electric employees, local businesses and community groups, BCS students will collect 1,800 two-liter bottles to construct the building. Ground breaking will begin in the spring.

Messina to run again

Supervisor announces plans to seek second term

Bethlehem Supervisor Sam Messina announced on Thursday, Feb. 3, he will seek a second term as supervisor.

It's a significantly earlier declaration than when Messina announced his intent to run in late April of 2009, after the Democratic Party didn't endorse him for another term as a councilman.

Now, Messina said he's comfortable announcing at this early date because he's proud of what's been accomplished in his first 13 months in office, and also because he's cognizant of the need for more time to fulfill his agenda.

"I'm in the job now, I think I have a good sense about what needs to be done," he said. "I like what we're doing, I think we're making good strides and headway on important issues."

In a letter the supervisor began circulating Thursday evening, he

Walgreens dropped from old CVS project

Trustco Bank branch planned for Town Squire Plaza

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

A developer has slightly altered its plans for a property at the corner of Delaware and Elsmere avenues now that a Walgreens Pharmacy has withdrawn.

Patroon Development will instead aim to construct a similar structure to solely house medical practices. Community Care Physicians, which currently inhabits one structure on the property now, would take the first floor.

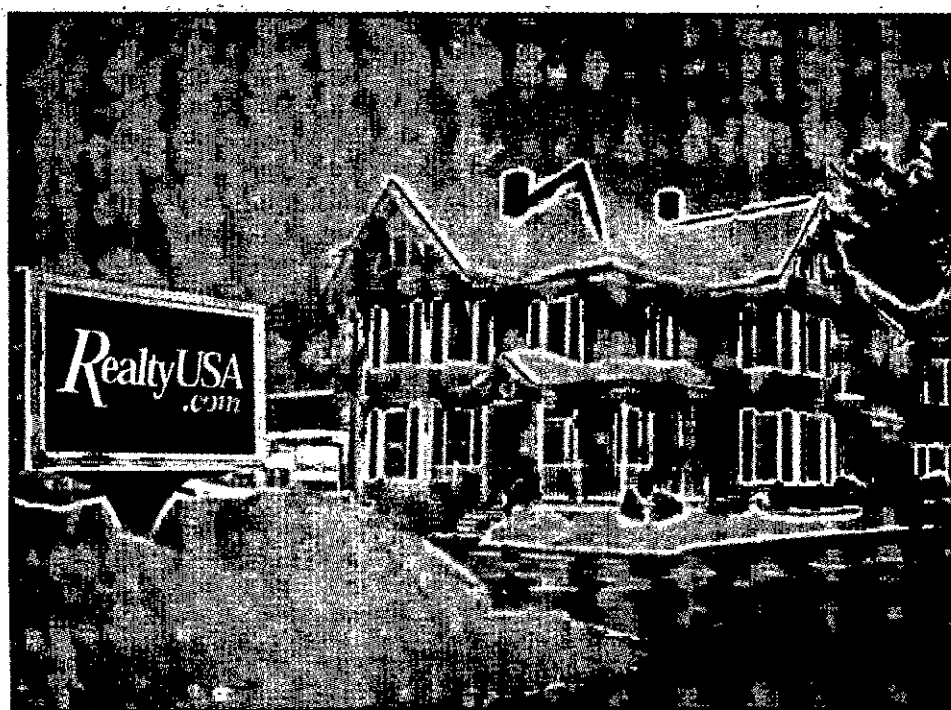

Peter Lynch, attorney for Patroon, said a "change of plans" compelled Walgreens to withdraw, and declined to discuss what other medical practices might move into the second floor.

This property at the corner of Delaware and Elsmere avenues has been vacant since CVS Pharmacy moved across the street. It is often cited as the case study for empty storefronts on Delaware and among the worst examples of blight in the town.

RealtyUSA, Breathing Room partner to raise awareness of heart disease

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

Despite a growing campaign for a healthier society, many often forget that heart disease remains the No. 1 killer of Americans, and stroke the No. 3 cause. Every year the American Heart Association tries to bring this fact to the forefront with a Go Red for Women campaign, which this year fell on Friday, Feb. 4.

Two local businesses are going beyond changing their garb, though, and are partnering to hopefully effect a greater change on the community. RealtyUSA on Delaware Avenue and The Breathing Room at the Four Corners have been working to increase awareness about the American Heart Association's goals and to raise money for that organization. Both businesses are lighting up their Delmar locations red between Go Red Day and Valentine's Day.

At the Breathing Room, which offers Yoga, meditation and energy healing classes, a week of classes focusing on heart health has been scheduled. Donations for the AHA will be collected, or a portion of the proceeds from the sessions will be contributed. The Breathing Room has gone red in the past and participated in an AHA walk.

"We're always trying to participate the best that we can. A lot of it is raising awareness," said owner Mikko Cook. "Every year we kind of build upon what it is."

The classes have been advertised by RealtyUSA's Virginia O'Brien, who has distributed door hang tags around the community that not only include the class times, but seven heart healthy tips promoted by the AHA.

O'Brien is a recent addition to the RealtyUSA team, and as a longtime Bethlehem resident she wanted to support a local cause.

"I really wanted to start becoming more involved in my community," she said. "It's also about supporting your local businesses and doing things that involve yourself in your community in really positive ways."

Other members of the RealtyUSA team (Kathy Cooley, Cynthia Sobiecki and Sandra Tutshen) also helped with the campaign.

Breathing Room classes focused on the seven heart healthy tips, including a new workshop aimed at calming anxieties to quit smoking. The Breathing Room's schedule can be found at theroomtobreathe.com.

Cook and O'Brien are hoping their desire to Go Red will rub off on others, who will support the AHA or take a greater interest in their own health.

"It's just very relevant to everybody's life," said O'Brien. "Home is where the healthy heart is, and we want people to be sustainable in different ways."

Other area buildings lighting up red include the SEFCU, CDPHP and First Niagara buildings in the Patroon Creek Corporate Park in Albany.

Vista gains first site plan approval

Vista Blvd. and one office building to be first round of construction

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

The first of many site plan applications for the Vista Technology Campus has been inked by the Bethlehem Planning Board.

The approval, unanimously issued on Tuesday, Feb. 1, clears the way for developers to start building Vista Boulevard and erect a 40,000-square-foot office building at the end of that road, about ¾ of a mile from Route 85.

The Planning Board will be taking another look at plans for that first structure before a building permit is issued, though. There were some concerns about the design for Vista's inaugural structure being too plain.

"Even though this building is ¾ of a mile off the road, it is the first building," Planning Board member John Smolinsky said. "It's the first building tenants are going to see when they come to the park...this is what they're going to see when you show them the site, so it's important that it's not typical."

Joe Nicolla of Columbia Development said the first tenant (still unnamed)

Vista developers are proposing the tech park's first building look like the BBL Construction headquarters on Washington Avenue Extension. It would be about ¾ of a mile from Route 85, at the end of Vista Boulevard. Some on the town Planning Board have questioned the simple design of the building.

Charles Wiff/Spotlight

wouldn't sign on to a more expensive structure. Plus, he argued, the mere existence of Vista's first building will be proof enough to tenants that the campus is the place to be.

He also noted there are several dozen other buildings on the park's plans, and many of those closer to the road will see more interesting architecture.

"As we come back down, we know there's going to be a lot more articulation of the buildings," Nicolla said.

Nicolla also emphasized to the Planning Board, as he has to other town entities, that speed is of the essence when it comes to Vista development.

"We have to get this first phase done," he said. "If we can get these first couple people, they're going to fall right in."

Planning Board members did have questions about the project's buildout schedule and what sort of benefits the town might see in tax revenue, and when, Nicolla said if things go well, as much as 500,000 square feet of space could be built in three year's time.

Columbia and its partners are seeking a unique funding structure to fuel construction of the nearly $7 million Vista Boulevard, which will also serve as the project's artery for water, sewer and electricity. The Bethlehem Industrial Development Agency has been asked to help by issuing tax exempt bonds to the builders, a plan that could see more development this month. The bonds would be paid back by park tenants.

Schools draw down on snow days

2011 has thus far been one to remember when it comes to snowfall. January's snowfall totals approached record levels and storms continue to rake the northeast, snarling traffic, delaying travel and, of course, keeping kids home from school.

Including last Wednesday, when a storm packed an early-morning wallop but petered out by noon, most Capital District schools have canceled class three times this school year, which covers all the budgeted cancellations for some.

"We have officially used three snow days, which is a record for Bethlehem," said Michael Tebbano, superintendent of the Bethlehem Central School District. "Right now we're OK. If we need one more snow day kids will have to come to school on March 11."

That's scheduled as a superintendent's planning day, when staff would show up to work but pupils would stay home.

But failing other options, schools will have to cut in to spring break should more cancellations be necessary.

That's less of a concern at Guilderland Central School District, where administrators built four snow days into the schedule.

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk schools are in the same basket as BC, said Superintendent Daniel Teplesky. The district had figured for three snow days, which it had used as of Wednesday, but also has a planning day in March.

An optimistic Teplesky is far from concerned, though.

"I don't believe that we're going to use another snow day," he said. "There's no snow in my forecast."

How do I dump thee? Let me count the ways

By WILLIAM R. DEVOE
devoew@spotlightnews.com

In the interest of full disclosure, I should tell you that this column first appeared in The Spotlight in February, 2007. America's No. 1 resource for parenting and family humor (this column, natch) will return with fresh and exciting material on Feb. 23.

Valentine's Day.

For some it's a celebration of the feelings they share with those they hold dear; for some it's a celebration of another lonely night, eating Thin Mints and watching "Lost" in your pajamas.

For many, however, whether you are in the earliest stages of the most innocent puppy-love or the most mundane stages of married life, or even if you're wiping Thin Mints off your stomach while wondering if you'll ever get a date, Valentine's Day is a celebration of that most beautiful of human conditions – schadenfreude.

That's right; Valentine's Day is the holiday for delighting in other people's romantic misfortune. Every sitcom on television the week of Feb. 14 will have a storyline concerning some loveless loser. Charlie Brown will continue to wait by his mailbox for a valentine from the Little Red-Headed Girl. Everyone on the "Gilmore Girls" will break up, whether they are dating or not. In fact, characters from other networks will break up with the "Gilmore Girls."

And we will love it. Because we've all been there. Everyone, regardless of where his or her love life is now, has experienced a little heartbreak – or maybe a lot. And we all – excepting certain members of the Montague and Capulet families – have lived through it. After getting dumped for the first time – or the first dozen times – and surviving, hearing other people's stories of getting dumped becomes a sort of bonding experience, like playing basketball or watching the "Gilmore Girls" together.

Commentary:

Pop Culture

Only when you listen to other people's stories about getting dumped, is there that element of, "Wow. At least I didn't get dumped like he did." A small sense of satisfaction that, although you may have been through the worst break-up in recorded history, at least you're not that guy.

So let me indulge you.

I have been dumped by more women than I've actually dated. I say this because about six months ago, I think I was dumped in the checkout line of the local supermarket by a complete stranger. We were standing in the express lane – 10 items or less – waiting to be rung out. The gentleman in front of us had approximately 36 items and was trying to write a check on a napkin. He kept telling the cashier that, "As long as this has the routing and account numbers on it, you have to take it." The cashier, expectedly, held the position that a Dunkin' Donuts napkin is not legal tender.

I waited patiently. The woman behind me was anything but. After a few minutes, she turned to me and said, "This isn't working out." She then gathered her groceries and went to the self checkout. I was shocked. Things had been going so well.

In retrospect, aside from the loving marriage I am in now (Hi, Honey), that may have been the best relationship I've ever had.

The first time you get dumped sets the stage for future dumpings. My first time was in one of the happiest places in upstate New York – Story Town (now known to you theme park sell-outs as Six Flags Great Escape or something like that). I was on a sixth-grade field trip to the amusement park with about 60 other kids and was sitting on the Steamin' Demon next to my then-girlfriend Tricia.

Tricia was beautiful. She had braces, glasses and a pony-tail that stuck-out of one side of her head. She was way out of my league.

Tricia and I had been dating for five days when we got on that rollercoaster for our first ride. Little did I know, it would be our second-to-last. As we approached the crest of the first hill, getting ready to take the long plunge down into a flurry of loops and barrel-rolls, Tricia turned to me and said, "Bob, I want to go out with someone else. I only said I'd go out with you because I felt sorry for you."

The blood left my face and hands. I was finding it hard to breathe. I didn't know what to make of this. First of all, my name is Bill. Secondly, what had gone wrong in those past five days that I let this beautiful young woman get away from me? I mean, in between classes and lunch periods, we must have spent at least a good 40 minutes together.

Before I could make heads or tails of it, we shot down the other side of the hill and into a loop-de-loop. Everyone started screaming and whooping, and I, having started crying at this point, could only manage a feeble "heeacch." Tricia did not scream; whoop or cry. She merely looked annoyed at having to sit next to me for the rest of the ride.

The only consolation I had in this whole mess was that the ride on the Steamin' Demon was mercifully short – 30 seconds, tops. After that, I could bolt from that rolling metal love-crusher and leave Tricia in my wake.

But no. When the ride came to a stop, the rest of the kids in my class made such a fuss about going around again that the operator just waved us through without letting anyone on or off. Joy.

I'd like to tell you that I didn't use the next 30 seconds to beg Tricia not to break up with me, that I didn't beg her while we were upside-down, spinning in place, or crushed against the foam pads of the restraining bar of that horrible machine, but I can't honestly do it.

There is a lesson to be learned from that situation, and it's not for the dumped, it's for the person doing the dumping: There is a time and a place for everything. There are good and bad places to dump someone, so choose wisely.

Bad places: a wake; during a game of Twister; the edge of the Grand Canyon.

Good places: nowhere.

You'd figure that after the rollercoaster that was – literally – my first experience in getting dumped, things would have gotten better. And though they have, they got worse before they did so.

About six Halloweens ago, I was in a relationship with a girl I'd had a crush on for a number of years before we started dating. I fell for her hard, and I felt like I was on the top of the world when we finally started going out.

That Halloween, my friends and I – all in our mid-20s, mind you – decided to dress as retired superheroes. We had a grey-haired Incredible Hulk, a smoking and pot-bellied Superman, and I was the retired Flash, complete with cane and fanny pack.

Things hadn't been going too well between me and my girlfriend as of late, but I thought that by donning the mask and tights of a superhero, I could make them better. It always works in the funny papers.

We went out. We had more than our fair share of food and drink. We retired to our apartment, where I fell asleep (read: passed out) with my Flash costume on. The next morning I awoke to the words that some stranger would say to me in the express lane years later: "Bill, this isn't working out."

After years of being dumped, and without the confines of a roller coaster to stifle me, I attempted to reconcile this breakup rationally and maturely, while dressed as the Flash.

Me: "What? Let's talk this over."

Her: "No Bill, I've given this a lot of thought."

Me: "But...but I'm the Flash."

Her: "No you're not. You're just wearing a red set of thermal underwear. Now you're going to have to leave."

I didn't take that Flash costume off for three days.

A couple of years later, I met my future wife. Our first Halloween together, she dressed up as the most attractive Spiderman I'd ever seen. I opted for Dr. Octopus instead of the Flash. Four Halloweens later, we're married and expecting our second child. I plan to stay married to her until I'm dead. Apparently, so does my wife, because she says I'm killing her.

The point is this: If you've been dumped, take solace in the fact that it's happened to everyone, and that one day you'll be able to laugh about it. Rest assured that by the time they roll the credits on that sitcom, the loveless loser will have found a date, the Gilmore Girls will go on Gilmore-ing, and that, before long, you or someone you know will find love again. (Charlie Brown will probably never get that letter from the Little Red-Headed Girl, but we don't care about him – he's not very motivated and he has a grotesquely large head.)

Happy Valentine's Day.

Schoharie man charged with raping New Scotland teen

State police on Wednesday, Feb. 2, arrested Cory Beninati, 22, of Schoharie, on charges of rape in the third degree, a felony, and endangering the welfare of a child.

Cory Beninati

Police said Beninati had sexual intercourse with a 15-year-old female in the Town of New Scotland. He was arraigned in the Town of New Scotland Court and posted bail.

Other arrests

The Bethlehem Police Department arrested Eric J. Taylor, 45, of 54 Alden Court, Delmar, and charged him with criminal possession of a controlled substance in the seventh degree, a misdemeanor, on Saturday, Jan. 29.

Police allegedly observed a vehicle with a headlight out driven by Michael C. Lawyer, 35, of 29 Oakwood Road, Glenmont, on Krunkill Road in Slingerlands at about 3:25 a.m. After a traffic stop police found Lawyer to have a suspended license and took him into custody, according to police.

Taylor, his passenger, was checked for weapons and asked to remove a hard object in his left pocket. When he removed it, he also removed a small baggie containing 0.38 grams of cocaine, police said.

Lawyer was given a court date of Feb. 15, and Taylor a court date of Feb. 16.

State police on Sunday, Jan. 30, arrested Kyle B. Anthony, 30, of Glenmont, and charged him with DWI, speeding and unlawful possession of marijuana. The arrest occurred at about 12:50 a.m. on I-787 in the Village of Menands.

State police on Tuesday, Feb. 1, arrested Christopher J. Caslin, 20, of Albany, and charged him with DWI. The arrest occurred at about 1:54 a.m. on State Campus Road in the Town of Guilderland.

Police investigating larceny, attempted burglary

The Bethlehem Police Department is investigating an apparent larceny at the Beverwyck Nursing Home in Slingerlands. The brother of a woman who recently passed away told police three pieces of the resident's jewelry were missing from her apartment when he went to pick up furniture there. The woman's daughter confirmed she had seen the jewelry in the room after her mother's death.

The value of the jewelry was put at $18,000.

The Bethlehem Police Department is also investigating an apparent burglary attempt that occurred at a Glenmont home on Tuesday, Feb. 1, or Wednesday, Feb. 2. The homeowner reported a car parked in the garage had been ransacked, though there was apparently no missing property.

SUV rams trooper

State Police were investigating a personal injury rollover accident on the Thruway near Exit 25 when a SUV ran into the back of one of the trooper's car. The SUV was entering the Thruway at the time of the crash. Three people were injured in the rollover crash, and were transported to an area hospital. There were no injuries in the second crash.

Police warn of long distance scams

State police are advising people to be aware of two recurring scams, both of which involve a scammer impersonating an acquaintance.

In the first, which is often targeted at elderly individuals, a person purporting to be the target's grandson or granddaughter will call (often extracting the actual relative's name from the target by faking a bad connection) and then saying they are in trouble or have been in an accident, requesting money be sent by Western Union.

In a similar variation that is carried out by email, scammers that have gained control of a person's email account will send messages to that person's contacts saying they are out of the country on vacation and had their travelers

Matters of Opinion in The Spotlight

Get ready for change

If Global Foundries lives up to its promises, it will fundamentally change the landscape of the Capital District forever.

That statement may seem like a no-brainer, but we at The Spotlight don't think the area planners, politicians and residents have earnestly and honestly acknowledged what impact GloFo's success could have on the area.

On page 11, you'll see Alyssa Jung's story on Mike Relyea, president of Luther Forest Technology Campus, giving an update on the tech park's expansion and construction progress, specifically related to the GlobalFoundries semiconductor chip plant, at the Capital Area Technology Association's monthly meeting last month.

Relyea, as you would expect, quelled concerns that construction in the park is halted or hindered. Infrastructure piece, which is LFTC's role, is complete, he says, but there are still redundant systems that need to be built, like water and gas.

Overall, GlobalFoundries' progress is on schedule, he said, if not a bit ahead of schedule for the tentative date to go online: the fourth quarter of 2012.

What's more interesting is what Relyea briefly said about another, not-so-technical industry in the area: daycare.

"Because [GlobalFoundries] is a 24/7 facility, the need for daycare in the town of Malta or within a 15 minute drive of the fab at 4 a.m., that doesn't exist today but it will probably exist a year from now," he said. "What's the traffic flow? Foot counts? All this stuff is going on quite regularly and we're trying constantly to analyze it and [identify] the needs."

Relyea isn't the only person that needs to analyze this possibility. GloFo is less than two years from operating. How many daycare providers have sat down with their families and discussed having to go to work a few hours earlier than they do now? How many sandwich shop owners and employees throughout the area have thought about it?

How many Malta residents have taken a look at Route 9 during the evening drive home and thought to themselves: "After GloFo arrives, this road may be just as busy at three o'clock in the morning as it is at eight o'clock at night?" And how many Capital District residents have made that same consideration of the Northway or 87?

We often hear our elected officials trumpet the ancillary effects that GloFo will have on business: more people filling gas tanks and stomachs, a shot in the arm for projects like the Vista Tech park in Bethlehem. But we in the Capital District have failed, as a large community, to consider that this development will alter the way we live our lives.

That is not a statement made to condemn or promote GlobalFoundries, it is merely a statement of fact. The Capital District — certainly Saratoga County — you knew, and know today, will not be the same one you will know after fourth quarter of 2012.

New Over-Expenditure bill would keep New York out of debt

By JIM TEDISCO

The writer is a Republican Assemblyman representing parts of Schenectady and Saratoga Counties.

Talk about shop till you drop... Black Friday shoppers have nothing on the taxpayer-funded spending splurges by some rogue state agencies.

Now that Governor Cuomo has unveiled his budget proposal for the state fiscal year beginning April 1, the race is on for some state agencies and political leaders to not only deficit spend, but also quietly spend surplus taxpayer money before a new budget is passed.

They're going shopping with your money, not necessarily because they have been authorized to by the Governor and Legislature or because the purchases are necessary, but at times solely because they may have extra cash in their coffers.

Oftentimes, a state agency will have a small amount of money left over at the end of the year and unilaterally go on a last minute spending binge.

Pretty soon this impulse spending adds up to big dollars. This irresponsible spending is even more concerning given New York's crushing budget deficit which is projected to be up to $10 billion.

We've all heard the stories of needless, wasteful government expenditures: hammers and toilet seats that cost governments hundreds of dollars, and funding $400,000 "Ghost Ship" commissions that have outlived their missions, just to name a few.

Nowhere has the wild over-spending been more outrageous than in the recent revelations that the former Democratic majority in the Senate spent at least $10 million over budget on posh office space while larding-up on staffing and political appointees.

Meanwhile, as the State

Assemblyman
Jim Tedisco

"discretionary" raises at the end of the year.

University of New York at Albany faces deep budget cuts, job losses and potential tuition hikes, the university handed out $1.2 million in so-called should be commended, not penalized. Unfortunately, what's developed in state government is a culture of spend first and ask the question of need later. No wonder New York is as Governor Cuomo put it, "functionally bankrupt."

In response to the wild spending sprees by state Senate Democrats and others, I am introducing the O.U.T. (Over-Expenditure/Under-Expenditure/Transfer-Notification) of Debt Act to prevent future taxpayer malfeasance.

For New York's government it should be O.U.T. with end-of-the-year spending binges. Too many agencies attempt to empty their coffers at the end of the year to justify their budgets. This is when deficits are created and expanded.

My legislation would require that all leftover funds are allocated to the general fund to pay down debt or reduce the tax burden on our citizens. If state agencies fail to comply, the Comptroller would be mandated to cancel any unapproved over-expenditures/under-expenditures or transfers.

A rogue state agency doesn't need to waste taxpayer money on padding the payroll with political patronage or buying tens of thousands of extra paper clips just because there's still cash in their account.

If it's important enough to spend tax dollars at the last minute then it's important enough to get authorization from the elected officials that actually pass the budget.

This is the taxpayers' money and should be returned to help pay off state debt and reduce property taxes.

This bill won't erase New York's deficit on its own, but it will provide the kind of spending transparency the state needs to help get out of debt and save taxpayers from getting fleeced by end-of-year spending sprees.

Point of View

These two examples could be the tip of the iceberg.

The $136.5 billion New York State budget is really an amalgamation of hundreds if not thousands of smaller state agency budgets. Consider this: there are more than 70 state agencies, 64 colleges in the State University of New York system and 20 City University of New York campuses.

This is on top of the scores of public authorities that have little oversight by the legislature or executive branch. Each of these entities can be divided into smaller agencies, bureaus and departments each with their own little budget.

That's a lot of hands in the proverbial taxpayer cookie jar.

Oftentimes state agencies fear that if they come in under-budget they'll face steep cuts in funding for the following year. So instead of returning taxpayer dollars these agencies go on a shopping spree.

State agencies that are fiscally responsible and spend only what they have been authorized to spend and not a penny more

Your Opinion in The Spotlight

Wrestling team should consider name change

Editor, The Spotlight:

The headline, "Murderers Row is a sight to see," on the sports page of the Jan. 26 edition caught my eye. The name was referenced many times in the column. It referred to the Shenendehowa wrestling team and the Shen Invitational finals.

I have a concern that such a shocking name be chosen by a sports team and, further, be left unquestioned by a school and its coaches in this enlightened day and age. Other teams as we know have refined or changed their names as attention to respect or inappropriateness was brought to light. Such a fine sport as wrestling, or any other sport, should not be given such a violent name. My son and grandson both were wrestlers and I have always had a high regard for such a sport where individual fortitude, strength and mental agility is fostered.

The wrestler is 'out there' on his own, testing himself unlike any other sport. Our youth do not need encouragement in unsportsmanlike, or worse, criminal behavior or rhetoric. I write in the hope that my concern might be the seed for discussion and that another name be found that would more accurately and respectfully reflect Shenendehowa's fine wrestling team.

Dorothy S. Richards
Delmar

Editor, The Spotlight:

Given all the rhetoric and attention to the inappropriate comments that have been and are being made in many arenas of life, I think that columnist Rob Jonas used poor taste in headlining his remarks about the wrestling matches with "Murderers Row is a sight to see" (Jan. 26).

A 12-year-old girl was expelled from school after putting together a 62-person "Kill List." The last thing we need to do is to glorify our passion for sports (wrestling in this case) by referring to the events as "Murderers' Row."

I'm sure it's not meant in the way it sounds or appears but the need to be more elevating and less aggressive in both oral and written presentations is needed.

Perhaps our media reporters could be more creative and less dramatic by referring to events in a less deadly way!

Town considers making Normanside bid

Country club closes down after failing to find buyer, will be auctioned

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

The Normanside Country Club won't be opening its doors next season, though the current management — and some in town government — hopes it can remain a golf course.

Long facing financial burdens, the club and its property will be sold at auction this month. The club had tried to find a buyer to take over and keep the Delmar property a golf course, but the future is unclear now, said President of the Normanside Country Club Board of Governors, Dan Byrnes.

"We're hopeful that that group will operate the premises as a golf course... but it certainly could be someone looking to put houses up there," he said.

The property would have to be rezoned if housing development was to occur there. The course is situated just south of the Normanskill in Delmar.

The Town of Bethlehem is considering entering its own bid for the property, though. Other area municipalities, including Colonie and Guilderland, operate large golf courses. Bethlehem already operates Colonial Acres, a 9-hole, par-3 course, without a banquet facility like Normanside.

Supervisor Sam Messina said he'd hope to see a private buyer emerge for the club, but now there's a discussion ongoing about buying the roughly 270-acre property.

"This was a tax source and also a major recreational source in our town," Messina said. "The fact that it closed down is not good news for our community."

The Bethlehem Town Board convened a special, closed-doors meeting on Monday, Feb. 7, to discuss real estate prospects. Under the laws governing such executive sessions, the board does not need to disclose details of the meeting, and officials declined to discuss the nature of the session. It was called on Friday afternoon, however, shortly after news broke that Normanside was shutting down.

Town leadership has often said finances are becoming increasingly tight. The 2011 budget process saw the Town Board sparring over employee raises and spending plans, and that body is still deliberating what professional organizations to belong to, a matter amounting to less than $15,000.

It's unclear what Normanside could cost the town, but given the location and facilities, it would likely be a seven-figure deal. The difference between budget worries and a Normanside bid, said Councilman Kyle Kotary, is that such a purchase could be an investment opportunity.

"If we can turn a $20,000-plus profit at Colonial Acres, there's no reason why we could not — potentially — do the same at Normanside," he said. "I'm going to take a look at the numbers...and I'm going to say, especially now, does this make sense to us?"

During the peak season, Normanside usually employed around 60 people, Byrnes said, and contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars in local property and sales taxes. At last count, the club had about 240 members.

The Bank of America will accept bids for the property's mortgage through Feb. 23.

Normanside had for months been trying to boost membership with deep discounts. It also revamped its dining room last year, outsourcing operations to Panza's of Saratoga Springs. The dining room had its last service in late January.

Byrnes said he still has hopes the Normanside property will remain a golf course or club, but country clubs everywhere have been struggling in the economic downturn. The club was unable to find a buyer who was willing to continue operations.

"The club had been working since October with the bank to find a new owner of the property," Byrnes said. "We worked really hard."

Library uses donations to buy memorial books

Recent monetary donations to the library have been used to purchase materials in memory of Margaret Black Mirabelli and Elizabeth Deily, and in honor of Bernadette Setzer.

The Bittersweet Book Club's donation in memory of Margaret Mirabelli purchased approximately four dozen books for children, including "Amelia Bedelia's First Apple Pie," "Bedtime in the Jungle," "Curious Little Witch," "Frankie Stein Starts School," "Goodnight Little Monster," "Hibernation Station," and "Pirate's Guide to First Grade."

Several donors to the Deily memorial also purchased more than two dozen children's books, including "Bedtime for Bear," "Curious George Goes to a Movie," "Olivia and the Snow Day," "Ponyella" and "Up and Down."

Frederic Siegel and Paula Fredericks made donations for the purchase of recorded books in honor of Bernadette Setzer's 90th birthday.

Other gift opportunities

Donations can be used to purchase materials in several formats (books, audiobooks, DVDs). They can also be used to purchase furnishings; our outdoor chess table was purchased with a gift in memory of a chess lover.

The Bass Recorded

Books Collection is another ongoing gift opportunity in memory of Edith and Edward Bass. A gift in memory of longtime patron and travel buff Al Russell helps support the library's ongoing series of travel programs. Donations to the library honor the wishes of the donors as much as possible.

If you would like to honor or memorialize a friend or family member with a gift, contact library director Nancy Pieri at 439-9314.

How cold is too cold for my dog to be outside and do I have to worry about salt melt?

In the winter, dogs should always have access to a warm and enclosed shelter that contains warm bedding and fresh water. They should never be left tied up unattended. Cold tolerance depends a lot on breed, body size, age and past experience with acclimating to the cold. For example, a young adult German Shepherd in good body condition that has been an outdoor dog his whole life will tolerate the cold better than an aged, thin Maltese who has mostly lived indoors. Be especially vigilant when there are deep dips in temperature during an otherwise average temperature winter (ie the swings in to the single digits and below zero). These dips can hurt even the most cold acclimated dog as they are unexpected by the body. Wind chill is also worrisome as the speed of the wind will make a normal winter temperature feel dangerously cold. In general, use caution and common sense when leaving your pet outside for extended periods of time, and do not leave them outside if there is any question about safety. Bring your pet inside if you notice these signs of hypothermia: lethargy, change in attitude, shivering, weakness or change in color of extremities.

Winter weather also brings about salt melt. While most of these are now made magnesium, which is safer than the traditional calcium and sodium based products, they can still be irritating to skin surfaces and cause irritation when ingested. We always advise wiping down your pet's paws with a wet towel after they have been outside. This will prevent prolonged skin contact with and ingestion of the materials. Look for ice melt products labeled safe for animals, available at most stores.

Get a thrill by reading librarians' selections

Thriller heroes are confident and fearless; they never refuse a challenge. They are driven by loyalty to family, country and compatriots. They will go anywhere, do anything, make any sacrifice, break laws and break heads to punish evil, defend the innocent and make the world safer. The drama and excitement and the fast-paced plots draw you in, but what keeps you riveted and makes you a series fan are the characters.

Hollywood actor/director Stephen J. Cannell created one of my favorite characters in LAPD detective Shane Scully who works with his boss/wife Alexis. Cannell himself, who died last October, was a familiar face to TV viewers and a talented writer of more than 20 top-notch thrillers.

Another favorite author is James Lee Burke whose books are full of colorful characters. Around the time that writing legend John D. MacDonald died, I discovered Burke and his Louisiana sheriff Dave Robicheaux. I wrote to Burke complimenting him on his book Black Cherry Blues, and equating Robicheaux with MacDonald's well-loved beach bum Travis McGee. I haven't missed a Burke book since.

Nelson DeMille grabbed me with his first book, The Charm School, which began with an American kid driving his Trans Am through the Russian countryside. The storyline went on to suggest that there were still POW/MIAs alive in Russia long after the Vietnam war.

War vets, ex-CIA, FBI and Secret Service agents, all make popular heroes: Robert Crais created two memorable characters in Elvis Cole, ex-Army Ranger and Joe Pike, ex-Marine /LAPD. Jack Reacher, ex-Army MP Special Investigator, is a modern knight errant from Lee Child; Bob Lee Swagger, retired Marine sniper, a creation of Stephen Hunter.

Women also get called upon to perform. A good one is Charlie Fox (ex-Special Forces) who appears as a bodyguard in several Zoe Sharp novels. I also like Cody McFadyen's FBI agent Smoky Barrett and Amelia Sachs, who does the legwork for the amazing paraplegic Lincoln Rhyme in the very popular Jeffery Deaver series.

These authors and others with their protagonists, are in the Best Thriller and More Best Thriller books lists compiled by our reference librarians. Lists can be picked up from the display in the main reading room through February. For more information, most authors can be accessed by typing www.\(authorname\).com.com) to get to their website.

Hoooo's that?

Joseph Gutman, of Brookman Avenue in Delmar, had a surprise when he was cleaning the snow off the roof of his home on Tuesday, Feb. 1. Apparently undisturbed by the falling snow was an owl perched on a light post underneath the overhang of his roof. Carol-Lisa Gutman, Joseph's wife, said she doesn't think the owl is injured. Joseph said he has seen the owl move and thinks since it is a nocturnal animal that it is just sleeping during the day. The owl, which Joseph named "Hooter," appears to be content on his residential perch. To watch an interview with the Gutmans, visit www.spotlightnews.com.

ATTENTION ALL RECIPIENTS OF DE PUY DEFECTIVE HIP IMPLANTS

Don't rely on the company who gave you a potentially defective hip implant to advise you on your legal rights!

DePuy Orthopaedics, a division of Johnson & Johnson, has issued a worldwide recall of its ASR™ Acetabular System for Total Hip Replacement, after determining that these hip implants may fail at an alarming rate. The "metal-on-metal" composition of these implants can release particles into the patient, potentially causing serious and painful reactions — sometimes requiring complete revision surgery.

Reportedly, Johnson & Johnson has been seeking medical releases from recipients so that their claims adjusters can speak with you directly and possibly take down statements without your having counsel present — an unwise action for any recipient to do.

Having a defective hip implant in your body clearly demands having your own lawyer. You must be very cautious with dealing with the manufacturer or its representative without proper legal representation.

If you have a DePuy ASR™ product, please call us immediately, as there are time limits for filing a claim. You might already have problems with the implant about which you are unaware, so please contact us — and certainly do not forfeit your legal rights without talking to us.

Couple wants Niskayuna to OK fowl play

Proposal would add 'micro-farming,' poultry permits to town code

By JOHN PURCELL
purcellj@spotlightnews.com

"One couple is hoping to persuade Niskayuna official to accept their proposed changes to the town code and allow chickens in areas zoned residential.

"We went to court for the chickens, and they found the town code wasn't clear about it," said Brenda Helm. "I thought it was a good opportunity to make it clear ... and to make sure it is protected."

On Jan. 3 the Town Court ruled John Helm, Brenda's husband, to be in violation of sections 220-4 and 220-10D of the town code and ordered the Helms to remove their chickens from the property. The Helms are appealing the decision, and Brenda Helm, with the help of her attorney, Jennifer Storm, drafted changes to chapters 81, 142, and 220 of the town code that would allow poultry and fowl along with micro-farming, within R3 Residential Districts.

The first step is establishing fowl and poultry permits, which is addressed in the draft's addition of Article V to chapter 81, which would require fowl and poultry for micro-farms to be registered. There would be a $50 permit

Brenda Helm recently visited her chickens, which were court ordered to be removed from her Niskayuna property, but her pet rooster, Sid, has been at the Quarter-Acre Animal Rescue longer. Once the rooster started crowing in the morning, she moved him to the rescue.

Submitted photos

application fee and a $5 registration fee per bird. The permit would need to be renewed every five years.

Brenda Helm said she is aware of the noise issues that come with keeping roosters and had previously removed a rooster from her property to the Quarter-Acre Rescue Ranch in Johnsonville, which is also where the chickens are now. To address the rooster issue, she added to the noise portion of the code, chapter 142, that roosters and other crowing birds and poultry are not allowed in R3 Residential Districts.

Recently Brenda Helm visited her chickens and rooster at the rescue and she said her rooster, Sid, was happy to have his "girls" back with him, though she isn't as happy about the setup.

petition for micro-farming as two separate matters.

"People have rights, and they need to be preserved so this doesn't happen again," she said.

In her draft of the town code's definition of a farm, she added the exclusion of micro-farms from the definition. She also added definitions for fowl, poultry and micro-farming to the code. The new farm type would only allow for personal gardens and keeping of permitted animals for the production of food for use of residents of a single-dwelling home. Animal housing and structures would need to confirm to the newly added section addressing such regulations.

"We were talking with people in the community, and more people are stopping by here, and there was a lot of anger, and I don't want it to be about anger, I want it to be about education," she said.

To help with the education aspect, Patricia Foreman sent Helm copies of her book "City Chicks," so she could donate them to local schools, libraries and town officials. The book discusses how to keep chickens responsibly in towns and cities to help with gardening, composting and food production.

Helm has also been engaging the community by passing around a petition for residents to sign in support of the proposed amendments and changes to the town code, which she plans to complete around the end of May. All of the signatures will be attached with the proposed amendments when submitted to the Town Board.

Town Attorney Peter Scagnelli said if the Helms wanted to put forward an amendment to the town's R3 Resident District to allow for chickens to be held on a property that the change could be a long process.

"They are not filing a paper and in a couple of days and get an answer," said Scagnelli. "They would have to make a formal request to the Town Board that such a change be made to the zoning ordinance."

In the meantime, Helm said she is encouraging residents to continue writing Town Board officials in support of her cause. Also, a Facebook page has been created under the name "Niskayuna Chickens" to offer updates on the process.

Schenectady County celebrates the past

Colonial Festival focuses on regional history

By JOHN PURCELL
purcellj@spotlightnews.com

People are typically heavily influenced by modern technology in their life, but residents can revisit their roots during the Schenectady Colonial Festival.

"It is a little educational, it is a lot of fun and it gives people an appreciation for what a treasure we have here in Schenectady," said Maureen Gebert, director of the Schenectady Heritage Area.

Through Sunday, Feb. 13, the City of Schenectady will host several events highlighting the early history of the area. One of the main events is artist Len Tantillo, known for his illustrations of historic sites throughout the Hudson and Mohawk Valleys,

— Maureen Gebert, director of the Schenectady Heritage Area giving a presentation at the First Reformed Church in Schenectady.

"[Tantillo] is very detailed and he does a tremendous amount of research so he has every detail correct," said Gebert. "Over the past couple of years he has done a lot more in Schenectady than he did before."

The picture in Schenectady's City Hall is also by him, she noted, and he also has done a picture of what stockade would have looked like before The Schenectady Massacre. Also, the festival is always held around the dates of the massacre in 1690, she said, to celebrate how the community rebuilt themselves.

During another event with Tantillo at the Glen Sanders Mansion on Tuesday, Feb. 8, starting at 4 p.m. there will be a chance to meet him and see a planned showing of his work. Also, findings from the Schenectady County Community College archaeology program will be shown at the dinner.

"They were able to do this, because they got a grant in 2009 to rent some ground penetrating radar to see what is going on down there," said Gebert about the college's program. "Most of the stuff in Schenectady is untouched ... it is just the way it is. We discover more and more and it is in its original form."

The annual dinner is held on the anniversary of the massacre and there will be a colonial themed dinner start with a social hour at 6 p.m. at the mansion.

Over time, said Gebert, the festival has grown from original celebrations with a small group of individuals dressing up in colonial outfits, but through community outreach the event has grown to a lengthy affair.

"It was a core group many years ago that wanted to do it and a lot of people dressed in Colonial garb," she said. "It is really a community event ... they get all excited and want to do more next year."

Combination tickets for the conversation with Tantillo and the Colonial Festival Dinner on Feb. 8 start at $60. There are also opportunities for individual and corporate sponsorship for the conversation and dinner tables. Separate tickets are $20 for the pre-dinner event and $50 for the dinner. Proceeds will support the annual exchange program of the Schenectady/Nijkerk Council.

To make a reservation for either or both of the events at Glen Sanders Mansion call Laura Lee Linder at 882-6866. For more information on the festival and a complete list of events visit www.schenectadycounty.com and click on the "special events" button to find the link.

The festival is organized through a coordination between the Schenectady Heritage Area, the Schenectady/Nijkerk Council, Community Archaeology Program of SCCC, Schenectady County Historical Society, the Stockade Association and the First Reformed Church of Schenectady and several community organizations planning activities.

Since what most of us know of South Africa is based only on what we have read and that which we have seen on television news, this program should be informative as well as entertaining. Lois Dillon will share her slides from a recent trip to that country. The public is invited to join us as we spend a pleasant afternoon learning what a beautiful and interesting country South Africa is.

A's always, refreshments will be served.

Relyea says Capital Region is at a crossroads

By ALYSSA JUNG
junga@spotlightnews.com

Mike Relyea, president of Luther Forest Technology Campus, gave an update on the tech park's expansion and construction progress, specifically related to the GlobalFoundries semiconductor chip plant being built, at the Capital Area Technology Association's monthly meeting in January.

"Looking at where we were last year to where we are today, we've seen a huge influx of companies coming into the area and we're trying to understand what they're going to be doing and how they're going to be doing it, relating to GlobalFoundries, our region and our growth potential," said Relyea.

"They're hiring more than 100 people a month. They come in, get transported around the world, get trained and come back here."

Relyea said the Capital Region is at a crossroads, which makes it conducive to being "headquarter central" for various types of companies, which in turn helps grow the region.

"What happens is you connect to Boston, Montreal, down to Fishkill or New York City, Buffalo or Cleveland... we're seeing people move their headquarters or at least significant operations from California or Texas and around the world, here into the region and establishing a presence so they can grow the business here and start to expand their opportunities," said Relyea.

Relyea said the entire LFTC and the impending GloFo operation are "transformational" projects because they aren't just bringing finished materials to the area, they're producing raw materials that can be used in different applications.

"What GlobalFoundries is building, making semiconductor chips, they're making the brains that go in every single thing that you use that's electronic... anything that uses a chip has potential for being part of this area," said Relyea. "It creates a hub, and that's a transformational project and that's why the state has such an interest in what I'm doing these days because the transformation of this area will be a long-served transformation."

Relyea said contrary to reports that construction or the ability to move forward with the projects is halted or hindered, the situation is quite the opposite. The infrastructure piece, which is LFTC's role, is complete, said Relyea. There are still redundant systems that need to be built, like water and gas, but those types of systems need backups for a facility of this size, he said.

"I'm really proud that

"Now we know a ton of businesses are going to locate there, because that's just the nature of the beast that it will happen that way."

the whole LFTC is a park; we're trying to bring 8,000 jobs, diversify and bring in companies that are not semiconductor related, like some solar or alternative energy companies," said Relyea. "We're looking at those companies who want to come here and who want to expand but we're not quite on top of them yet; we've targeted a few and had conversations. We're positioning ourselves to be ready to move when that happens because some of these companies use the same suppliers that will serve GlobalFoundries."

Relyea said LFTC is ready to build "any project" it can attract and that he personally works every day marketing the park, working with Empire State Development, government and Saratoga County.

"Government has a big interest in our park because it supplied the money for all the infrastructure we want to make sure to maximize that infrastructure," said Relyea.

He said he can't speak for GlobalFoundries' progress, but from what he's seen and heard, it's on schedule, if not a bit ahead of schedule for the tentative date to go online, the fourth quarter of 2012.

"They're hiring more than 100 people a month. They come in, get transported around the world, get trained and come back here," said Relyea.

Relyea also said some secondary businesses are beginning to emerge related to the park, like day care centers, expanding office space for GlobalFoundries, coffee shops, etc.

"Because it's a 24/7 facility, the need for daycare in the town of Malta or within a 15 minute drive of the fab at 4 a.m., that doesn't exist today but it will probably exist a year from now," said Relyea. "What's the traffic flow? Foot counts? All this stuff is going on quite regularly and we're trying constantly to analyze it and [identify] the needs."

Relyea said he expects expansion and new businesses to arrive as time goes on.

"We built our park without knowing GlobalFoundries was going to come. Now we know a ton of businesses are going to locate there, because that's just the nature of the beast that it will happen that way. And if it doesn't, it's completely uncharacteristic of the industry," said Relyea. "I'd be shocked because we're making sure we're putting together a package people want when looking at the area."

Making a difference half a world away

Mother and daughter to travel to Uganda on humanitarian mission

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

The February break is nearly upon us, and many families will take the week away from school as an opportunity to flee the snowbound northeast for a few days.

That's the plan for Theresa and Sara Weinman, but instead of kicking back on the beach the mother/daughter duo will on Feb. 12 board an airplane bound for Africa with a medical and humanitarian outreach team to spend 15 days without running water or electricity in a small Ugandan village.

For Theresa Weinman, this will be her second trip to the Village of Ddegeya, an agrarian community of about 3,500 in the south of the country. Her 16-year-old daughter Sara will be traveling there for the first time, though, as part of a team from the non-profit group Engeye.

Despite the serious mission and the risks inherent to traveling in Africa, Theresa said she has absolute confidence in her daughter's spot on the team.

"I think she earned her spot on the trip," Theresa said. "She's worked so hard...she did everything we asked of her."

Sara Weinman has demonstrated her commitment to the cause not only by raising money for her trip (members of the team must pay their own way) but by starting the Engeye Teen Connection group, a small but dedicated contingent of youths that have been working for about two years to raise money to help out the Village of Ddegeya.

Sara became interested in Engeye in much the same way as her mother did, when the family hosted a young burn victim from Uganda in their Bethlehem home. The BC High student and the ETC group have since raised over $1,000 for the cause, and Sara will be mapping out a way to spend that on her trip to the country.

She envisions creating a micro financing program for the women of Ddegeya, perhaps teaching them a skill, like craft making, and setting them up with supplies so they can sell their wares locally or in the U.S., bringing some much needed money into their households.

Most of the women in Uganda don't have an opportunity to make an income. By making it a micro-

Sara and her mother, Theresa, will be traveling to Uganda later this month to spend two weeks volunteering there providing medical and educational aid to a remote village. loan program, ETC would in time receive the money back, enabling them to put that money back to work for other Ugandans, too.

"Not only would they be able to support themselves and their family, but they would be able to send their kids to school," added Sara.

Still, Sara said she realizes her understanding of the situation in Ddegeya may change once she gets on the ground.

"I'm going to ask the villagers themselves what they in their opinion need the most, and then use the proceeds for that," she said.

Besides helping out in Engeye's clinic in the village — the only opportunity the residents there have to access medical care — the team will visit the 21 young scholars whose education is supported by donors here in the U.S. Sara will also be working at a program run by Union College fellows for children whose parents cannot afford even the few dollars for a public school uniform, barring them from an education.

She'll bring games, puzzles and educational materials donated locally to the program.

Sara Weinman said she hopes her trip will also help her find more ways to get local youth involved in the cause. ETC has about 10 dedicated volunteers who work to organize fundraisers. For example, last year the group ran a successful "Cafe Night" at the Journey United Church of Christ that featured local youth talent.

She said she's been preparing for the trip by talking with other members of the organization who've made it before.

"One of my main goals is pretty much to survive through it," she said. "I don't really know what to expect. I'm a little nervous but I'm also excited."

For more information on Engeye and ETC or to make a contribution, visit engeye.org or engeyescholars.org.

Local sailor has a 'Hallmark moment'

Takes part in Hallmark Hall of Fame movie 'Lost Valentine'

By ALYSSA JUNG
junga@spotlightnews.com

Thomas Prusinowski served in the U.S. Navy for 28 years, but the recently retired Saratoga Springs man also spent two days pretending to be a sailor this October. He was one of 12 Navy members chosen to be in the Hallmark Hall of Fame movie "Lost Valentine," which debuted on CBS Sunday, Jan. 30, and starred Jennifer Love Hewitt and Betty White.

"I was very blessed to pretty much be standing next to Betty White all day long. She's a fantastic person, very kind and generous," said Prusinowski. "She did an amazing job, cried very believable and hard every time."

Prusinowski and his fellow sailors traveled from King Bay Naval Base in Georgia to Atlanta for shooting. They were put up in a hotel, had one day of rehearsal and then spent 16 hours shooting their scene.

"They wanted to shoot from every different angle; top, bottom, left, side, right, up and down," said Prusinowski. "We worked with the production company and did everything they wanted us to do. They were all very happy with us."

"Lost Valentine" is about a woman (White) whose husband goes off to war, and is shot down. For the next 65 years, she goes back to the same train station platform she dropped him off at to see if he will come home. After enlisting the help of a local reporter (Hewitt), the remains of her husband are found and the Navy brings them back for a proper military burial.

Prusinowski said the acting he did in the movie was a role familiar to him, as it truly did mirror true life.

"We brought in the American and Navy flags, went to the casket and brought it up to Betty White, who bent down, kissed the casket and flag and hugged it," said Prusinowski. "Earlier in my Navy career I was on the funeral detail for veterans when they passed away, I'd be asked to attend the funeral, carry the casket, fold the flag."

Even portions of the movie he wasn't involved in were reminiscent of his Navy life.

"I'll always remember after I got married and left on deployment, I remember seeing my wife on the pier by herself waving goodbye and it's a very difficult time for a Navy guy when you have to leave your family and friends for six months at a time," said Prusinowski.

The sailors wore actual Navy uniforms for filming and Prusinowski said at first, everyone just thought the group of men clad in pristine white "costumes" were extras.

"They didn't know we were real true American Navy sailors, and they finally saw that, they were really excited to have us there and opened their arms to welcome us and thank us for everything we do," said Prusinowski.

While the "Hollywood" experience and meeting famous actors was exciting, Prusinowski said it's what the sailors got to do for their new celebrity friends after shooting wrapped, that was special.

Valentine's Day

So Many Ways to Say I Love You

As a professional event planner, most events I plan are elaborate and involve large numbers of people. So I am a big fan of the ever so intimate Valentine's holiday. No matter your current romantic circumstances, here are some perfect ways to say "I love you":

The surprise getaway—Taking your sweetie away is one of the most amazing ways to spend this romantic holiday. Choose a quaint town and check into a romantic inn or B&B where the ambiance meets you at the door. To ensure you have a magical trip, plan ahead. Sitting around asking each other "What do you want to do?" isn't very romantic. Instead, schedule at least one activity that the two of you can do together and make dinner reservations at a charming restaurant, being sure to ask for the most romantic table they have.

The family—Valentine's Day isn't just for couples. You can involve your kids in planning a wonderful evening that celebrates the love of your family. The holiday theme and colors provide plenty of inspiration for a festive meal. Have the kids help decorate the table and room in the colors of red and pink. Fill your menu with pink and red foods with an eye for a fancy presentation. Shape things like breadsticks or cakes into hearts. Let everyone drink out of wine glasses and eat off of the good china, dim the lights and put candles on the table. And of course make something super chocolate-y and special for dessert. During the meal, take turns telling each person one thing that you love about them. The kids will learn to love the holiday and understand that it's not just about romantic love. Valentine's Day is a day to show everyone you love just how much you do.

The solo date—You might plan on being alone on Valentine's Day. That doesn't mean you have to ignore the occasion. Instead show yourself the love you deserve. Think of all of your favorite foods and drinks, favorite movies, favorite music, favorite activities and treat yourself with a day of all of your favorite things. It's the day to forget about diets and obligations and do what you want when you want. Show yourself the love!

The proposal—Proposing on Valentine's Day is very cliché, but let's face it, women generally like cliché as long as it oozes romance. So go for it! If Valentine's Day is THE day, think carefully about how you can make that moment surprising and special. Plan every detail and make it a moment to remember! The key to an amazing celebration is to get creative, pay attention to the details and personalize everything. If you need help putting it together, enlist the help of a creative friend or family member, or hire a professional event planner who can help.

Create a Valentine's Day or perfect proposal that is a true expression of your love and will be remembered for many years to come.

Artist sees Saratoga 'his' way Sailor

Local artist displays collection of Saratoga-themed paintings

By ALYSSA JUNG
junga@spotlightnews.com

Stu Eichel hails from Knoxville, Tenn., but for about 18 years, he and his wife have been Saratogians enjoying the milder weather.

"We retired here and couldn't stand the weather being so hot out there. Most people move in the other direction," said Eichel.

When he arrived in Saratoga Springs, Eichel began turning the upstate New York landscape, houses and sites he found intriguing, into oil on canvas art.

"I definitely see things the normal guy sees all the time, in a different way. I'm observing and most people can't do anything about it, but I can and it's a wonderful ability to be able to see something that needs recording and put it down," said Eichel.

Now 78, Eichel said he finds simple sights that most people overlook, as beautiful.

"I go for the underbelly stuff like the recycling plan on Weibel. I thought it was interesting; it might be like painting an outhouse for a lot of people, but to me it made an interesting painting," said Eichel.

He also painted an old mill with peeling paint and more famous landmarks like the Batcheller Mansion, Convention Center and Preservation Hall. A collection of more than 30 Saratoga paintings are on display during the month of February at the Saratoga Train Station as part of the Art in Public Places exhibit. He said people might be interested in seeing his paintings because they document Saratoga through the years.

Eichel considers himself a late artist because he didn't become trained until after he'd finished up a career in graphic design. When he retired, he completed the entire fine arts program at the University of Tennessee, taking photography, sculpture and ceramic.

"I didn't know where I would come out and I came out a painter," said Eichel.

It was between photography and painting, he said. While he doesn't create art with a camera, Eichel said he considers himself a photographer with paints.

"Anything I see, I want to put down. I love photography but I had to make a choice between photography and painting," said Eichel. "A skill with paint is a greater accomplishment to me personally."

Most of his paintings vary between two sizes, 24 by 30 inches and 12 by 16 inches. He said he's glad he waited until retirement to pursue art because it allows him to paint what he wants, and only what he wants.

"If I hadn't retired I'd be stuck doing every crappy commission everyone wanted me to do," said

Eichel, who said he paints on the streets and often has people approach him about their homes. "I tell them if they ask that I'll look at their house, but 90 percent of the time I have to say 'sorry, it's just not right for me.'"

Eichel takes his painting seriously and paints until he's happy with what he sees. Sometimes he even goes back to older paintings and makes them better.

"About 10 or 12 years ago I painted the Glove Theater in Gloversville and recently I went back there with the painting done so many years ago (and God hope you'll be a better artist) and I made that painting 100 times better than it was," said Eichel.

The concept of taking something most people might consider ugly, and turning it into something interesting, is his favorite.

"I've had people say it's interesting to see the world through my eyes and that's an achievement right there," said Eichel.

The exhibit "Saratoga My Way" will be at the Saratoga Springs Train Station on Station Lane, at West Avenue through February. To see more of his work, visit www.stueichelart.com.

submarine insignias you wear on your uniforms and presented them to Betty White and Jennifer Love Hewitt and made them honorary female submariners," said Prusinowski. "They really loved that and we wanted to show we cared about them and they were nice enough to allow us to come up there for the movie."

The television premiere of "Lost Valentine" created such a stir that Prusinowski said he's been getting calls and emails from family and friends around the country wanting to see his clip or praising him for his work.

"It was just exciting to hear different things from different people," said Prusinowski. "One of the greatest things was it was an honor to represent the U.S. Navy in a very positive manner ... this is the 60th year for the Hallmark Hall of Fame so it's a big deal and made it even more special."

Watching himself on television was like reliving the October day of filming all over again, he said.

"When I saw myself it was very exciting in the fact that I remembered every second of the day, it was so intense," said

Prusinowski. "I felt a bit of personal pride too."

During his 28 years in the Navy, Prusinowski spent time on cruisers, aircraft carriers and submarines. He said one of his fondest and dramatic memories is being aboard the USS Theodore Roosevelt, the first American warship to leave the shores of America after 9/11.

"We left exactly nine days after 9/11, hurried it up because we weren't supposed to leave until Christmas time. We steamed across over there and once we got on station, we were out to sea for 159s and never saw land," said Prusinowski. "We had our planes in the air bombing Iraq for 18 hours a day, it was very exciting."

Prusinowski said driving a ship was also one of his favorite naval tasks.

"It's most exciting when you drive a $5 billion aircraft carrier and are the single guy in charge of taking care of that ship and everyone on board," said Prusinowski.

He's retired from the Navy, but still finds himself involved with the lifestyle through his new job working for Oto Melara, a corporation that is preparing to build a production line for guns and ammunition at the Watervliet Arsenal.

and a number of other staff and still fall well short of closing a $5 million gap.

Similarly, Guilderland Central School District Superintendent Marie Wiles expects to be putting a seriously reduced spending plan to the school board in coming weeks. There, the proposed aid cut is $2.1 million, or about 9 percent, which when coupled with increased expenses (salaries and benefits) makes for a $4.2 million gap on an $82 million budget.

"We anticipated something pretty close to this," Wiles said. "There is no way to make up that difference without reducing our employee base...we can't get $4.2 million out of materials, supplies and field trips."

Voters in the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk School District rejected the district's budget last May, and the district is now running off a contingency budget. A 14 percent hit to its aid numbers ($2.4 million) does not portend an easier year.

"It's drastic and it's devastating," said Superintendent Daniel Teplesky.

The district is looking to the community for recommendations on what to cut from the program. A survey will be made available on the district web site in coming days.

"We're going to ask some further, in-depth questions and ask individuals to make some determinations on what they believe is more important," Teplesky said.

Mandate relief a common plea

School districts draw their revenues from two sources: state aid and property taxes. If aid falls off then taxes must increase or expenditures must be drawn down — it's a simple budgeting principle.

But a cry that's increasingly being heard from schools is that it's difficult to cut costs under a blanket of about 220 state mandates that require schools to meet various criteria, sometimes at great expense to benefit a small number of students.

"There are so many areas of out spending plan over which we have no control," said Wiles. "Every year additional rules and requirements are piled on without the resources to pay for them...it's really all quite unpalatable."

Tebbano estimated unfunded mandates account for 20 percent of BC's $90 million budget.

The tax cap cometh?

Mandates are a hot topic when considering another recent educational development: the passing of tax cap legislation in the state Senate.

The Senate passed a plan by a wide margin on Monday, Jan. 31. It would limit schools' tax levy growth to 2 percent per year, or to the rate of inflation, whichever is lower. Downstate Democrats were the only contingent of lawmakers to oppose the bill.

Under the law, the annual school budget vote would be replaced by a vote on the tax levy. If it is defeated twice, the district would be forced to assume no increase in its levy. Also, a supermajority vote of 60 percent would be required to pass any hike above 2 percent.

Administrators argue the law is an unfair one unless they're given greater control over their budgets, and some said they'd sign on if that happens.

"I fully support the concept," Tebbano said of the tax cap. "If they could reduce those [mandates] just by half, then we'll be in a better position to say a 2 percent tax cap is a wonderful thing."

Cuomo has formed a council to study state mandates.

Wiles noted a tax cap could be particularly onerous for smaller districts without 8-figure budgets, where even small changes could shift the tax burden significantly.

"It's a very blunt instrument," she said. "2 percent on our levy is different than a school district that is very tiny."

Cuomo introduces competition

Though Cuomo's plan slashes aid, it also includes a proposal to make available $500 million in competitive grants to school districts, divided equally between Performance Improvement Awards and School District Management Efficiency Awards.

There's still not much clarity on the criteria for these grants, but in the suburban areas of the Capital District superintendents generally said their districts might only qualify for efficiency rewards.

"Our graduation rate is high, we are a school that is not in any danger of failing because our scores are wonderful," Tebbano said.

A merit-based rewards system is one that is gaining footing in the American education system, albeit with some detractors. President Barack Obama has been a notable proponent for such a change, and as such has been pushing the Race to the Top Fund.

Ultimately, schools here that are facing similar challenges will be engaging their communities in similar ways, with public budget workshops and surveys. ## Local company to show off reclaimed pieces at Home Show

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
dominj@spotlightnews.com

After years of owning a shop on Lark Street where he sold one-of-a-kind furnishings, Fred Shapiro wanted to expand. In a big way.

He didn't want just another shop. He wanted something exciting, something dramatic. So Shapiro moved his business into a warehouse in North Albany, and Silver Fox Salvage was born.

In the beginning, Shapiro filled some of the extra space in the building with a weekend flea market. Vendors would sell spices, teas, children's books and crafts.

These days, though, Silver Fox Salvage commands the whole building, creating and selling its calling card, architectural salvage. Shapiro and his staff use reclaimed stained glass, doors, windows, trim and more to create unique home furnishings for people in the Capital District and beyond. They'll show off their wares at the Northeast Home Show, which will be held on Friday to Sunday, Feb. 11 to 13, at the Empire State Plaza and Times Union Center.

Camille Gibeau, who runs Silver Fox Salvage with Shapiro, came on board when he placed an ad on craigslist looking for someone to paint some of his reclaimed pieces. Gibeau, who has a background in nonprofits, had hoped to start some kind of business that reused items that were otherwise going to be thrown away. She joked that she and Shapiro share a partnership "born out of salvage love."

Gibeau remembers the days when the Lark Street shop was "bursting at the seams." Shapiro always had a keen eye for "various oddities," she said. They used to take his truck around to area junkyards, looking for items that might make good furnishings.

These days, they're more likely to show up at auctions than dumps. They also score a lot of finds at old buildings. Shapiro spent a recent afternoon working at a church in Gloversville, reclaiming bead boards and "beautiful trim."

Another source for materials is the people who patronize Silver Fox. "Our customers have become our pickers and our friends," Gibeau said.

Once the raw materials are in hand, Silver Fox delights in building items to order. Gibeau said her favorite aspect of the job is walking through the warehouse with someone, taking notes on what they like, and then turning that into a unique piece. One recent customer, for example, had an extra wide garage and wanted some kind of divider for it. She liked mirrors, she liked bead boards. The finished divider featured both of those, along with a trunk, a space for shoes and some other stuff.

"We made it all come together for her," Gibeau said. "It's very gratifying."

Also gratifying is knowing that Silver Fox is helping to keep things out of landfills, Gibeau said, especially given recent reports of just how much garbage has accumulated at the Albany landfill.

That aspect is one of the key reasons people come to Silver Fox, as is the fact they're getting one-of-a-kind pieces, Gibeau said. Dinosaur Barbecue in Troy was a recent customer, buying two chandeliers from the business, which also helped decorate the eatery's Manhattan location.

Gibeau said there's an additional draw to Silver Fox: It's fun. She and Shapiro share the warehouse not only with about a dozen co-workers, but with a cat and a dog who are customer favorites. People are free to touch items as well as admire them, and Gibeau said all ages are welcome.

"It's a place a 16-year-old boy could bring his 60-year-old aunt," she said.

At the home show booth, people can get an idea of what Silver Fox does and dream up designs for their own custom pieces. Other attractions include nearly 500 exhibits and more than three dozen seminars, encompassing everything from solar energy to kitchen and bath renovations. Frank Fontana, host of HGTV's "Design on a Dime," will host three seminars.

Show hours are Friday, 4 to 9 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $8 for adults; children under 14 are free when accompanied by a paid adult. For more information, visit www.greatnortheasthideshow.com.

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

CVS

It's been over a year since the town was approached with plans to build on the property.

The new plans also move the building closer to Delaware Avenue, eliminating a row of parking between that thoroughfare and the structure. The sidewalk and property would be separated by a fence. There would be no car entry by Delaware Avenue — Elsmere Avenue and Booth Road would have entrances.

Though the developer already has in hand a number of variances from the town's Zoning Board of Appeals, it will have to go back for new ones. There has been a slight change in the number of parking spots, for example, and the project still has fewer than the required amount.

Planning Board members also spoke about the design of the building itself. The site is in a commercial hamlet zone, which carries certain restrictions. Member Nicholas Behuniak said he'd like to see a more interesting design.

"I think that façade is really far too plain for what you have there, both for your building and that area," he said.

The project site includes the former CVS Pharmacy, which built a new building across the street. It's still vacant and is often cited as the case study for empty storefronts on Delaware and among the worst examples of blight in the town.

The developer would level the old CVS building, as well as the current home of Community Care Physicians next door. Doctors there would be able to continue practicing through the construction process.

In other Planning Board business:

Initial plans were presented for a Trustco Bank branch in Town Squire Plaza in Glenmont. The branch would be located in part of the former Hollywood Video building and would feature a drive thru.

Planning Board members expressed concerns about the plan's traffic flow pattern and the application was tabled.

An environmental review was completed for the Hague Boulevard Apartments project, a development of 53 apartment units located off of Route 9W in Selkirk. It's an important step in the approval process but the developer still must gain site plan approval from the board.

Run

identified development of the Vista Technology Park, improving the town's infrastructure and advancing the town's 20/20 plan as top priorities in a second term.

Messina said he would seek endorsements from all political parties, including the Republican and Democratic parties. A member of the Independence Party, Messina appeared on the Republican and Conservative lines in 2009. Parties generally announce their candidates in April or May.

Messina and then-Supervisor Jack Cunningham battled over the Working Families Party line in the last election, taking legal challenges over the primary nearly up to the general election date. That election was a close win for Messina, with the result coming only after a tally of absentee ballots.

Cunningham has since taken up the job of commissioner of the Colonie Department of Public Works.

Milestones

Marie 'Mickey' Andriano

DELMAR - On Thursday, February 3, 2011, the world lost a truly amazing woman, her children lost an incredible mother, her grandchildren lost their wonderful

"Nanny," and her nieces and nephews lost their fun loving "Aunt Mickey." Marie "Mickey" Andriano passed away with her loving family by her side after a long battle with cancer.

It was a difficult battle with many hurdles along the way, it may have broken her physically but it did not break her faith or her deep love for her family. She was a strong, beautiful woman, a true hero to all who knew her. She lost the love of her life, Frank, in 1972, when he was 40 years old. She worked numerous jobs to make ends meet and raised her three children by herself. Mickey did an amazing job raising Tom, Michael and Frannie, who were the center of her life. She loved spending time with all of her grandchildren who brought joy and happiness to her. Family and respect meant everything to Mickey. Even through her illness, she always did for others. Whether it was friends or relatives, she was always thinking of the needs of others. She enjoyed bowling, belly dancing, and was an outstanding cook who loved to feed everyone. She was famous for her meatballs and sauce and would say "you don't have to be hungry to eat, just eat." She was the life of the party, always telling jokes and funny stories. She will truly be missed by all who knew her and loved her. She was truly a classy lady. The pain of her loss is overwhelming and the void of her presence can never be replaced, but the love that she gave will live on in our hearts forever and the wonderful memories that she left with us will stay vivid in our minds always.

Mickey is survived by two sons, Thomas Andriano of Schenectady, Michael Andriano (Fern) of Delmar and Frances Markel (Robert) of Feura Bush; a brother, Robert Amabile of Brooklyn; grandchildren, Michelle Saroka (Mark) and Frank T. Andriano, Brianna and Gregory Markel, and Karlie and Cody Haack; a great granddaughter, Marissa Andriano; son-in-law and daughter-in-law, Robert and Mary Haack; and several nieces, nephews and friends. Mickey was predeceased by her parents, John and Celia Amabile; brothers, Pat, George, Tony, John and Peter and sisters, Nellie, Alice and Jean.

The family would like to thank the staff at NYOH in Albany and Latham, Dr. Peter Lamparello, Dr. Christopher Calder whom she credits for saving her life in 2008, St. Peter's staff, her nurse Erin, aide Tiara, Sister Mary Frederick from St Thomas the Apostle Church and Sandy Clyne and Lynn Caldwell who took such wonderful care of her, the many friends and relatives who visited, sent cards, called and sent meals; also, the wonderful staff from Bethlehem Senior Services.

Funeral services will be private and at the convenience of the family. In lieu of flowers, the family has asked that donations be made to Bethlehem Senior Services, 445 Delaware Ave., Delmar, NY 12054 or Community Hospice of Albany, 445 New Karner Rd., Albany, NY 12205

PLEASE READ THE SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT CAREFULLY. YOU SHOULD IMMEDIATELY CONTACT AN ATTORNEY OR YOUR LOCAL LEGAL AID OFFICE TO OBTAIN ADVICE ON HOW TO PROTECT YOURSELF. SOURCES OF INFORMATION AND ASSISTANCE The state encourages you to become informed about your options in foreclosure. In addition to seeking assistance from an attorney or legal aid office, there are government agencies and non-profit organizations that you may contact for information about possible options, including trying to work with your lender during this process. To locate an entity near you, you may call the toll-free helpline maintained by the New York State Banking Department at 1-877-BANK-NYS (1-877-226-5697) or visit the department's website at WWW.BANKING.STATE.NY.US. FORECLOSURE RESCUE SCAMS Be careful of people who approach you with offers to "save" your home. There are individuals who watch for notices of foreclosure actions in order to unfairly profit from a homeowner's distress. You should be extremely careful about any such promises and any suggestions that you pay them a fee or sign over your deed. State law requires anyone offering such services for profit to enter into a contract which fully describes the services they will perform and fees they will charge, and which prohibits them from taking any money from you until they have completed all such promised services. § 1303 NOTICE NOTICE YOU ARE IN DANGER OF LOSING YOUR HOME. If you do not respond to this summons and complaint by serving a copy of the answer on the attorney for the mortgage company who filed this foreclosure proceeding against you and filing the answer with the court, a default judgment may be entered and you can lose your home. Speak to an attorney or go to the court where your case is pending for further information on how to answer the summons and protect your property. Sending a payment to your mortgage company will not

Bethlehem swims past Albany at meet

The Bethlehem boys swim team improved its dual meet record to 6-2 with last Thursday's 88-78 victory over Albany in Delmar.

The Eagles dominated the first seven events before swimming exhibitions the rest of the way, which allowed Albany to catch up on the scoresheet.

Matt Weber led Bethlehem with victories in the 200-meter individual medley and the 100-meter butterfly. Matt Futia (200 freestyle), Gunner Zemerling (50 freestyle), James Starr (diving) and Brian Negri (100 freestyle) also earned first-place points for the Eagles.

In other dual meet action, Shaker pulled ahead early and held on for a 96-87 victory over Guilderville in Voorheesville.

The meet wasn't decided until the 400-meter freestyle, where Shaker took two of the top three places to take 10 of the available 14 points from Guilderville.

Guilderville won the majority of the individual events, with Tim Willox and Reid Zyniecki each finishing first in two events. Willox won the 50 and 100 freestyles, while Zyniecki took first place in the 500 freestyle and the 100 breaststroke.

Kyungduk Rho (50 freestyle) and Michael Schaffer (100 butterfly) also won individual events for Guilderville.

Junior midfielder Kayla Treanor received word last week that she made the national team. That word came after a tryout process that began last summer and concluded last month with games against Rollins College and Jacksonville.

Treanor has quickly developed into one of the top players in New York. Not only was she deadly accurate as a scorer last year (51 goals), but she was extremely effective in the face-off circle, where she won the majority of her draws.

Now, Treanor will get the opportunity to show the world what she can do on the lacrosse field. She and the other 17 players on the US U19 team will go to FIL World Championships Aug. 3-14 in Germany.

Before that, though, Treanor will try to guide Niskayuna to another Section II title this spring.

• Guiderland's Mike Faragon continues to impress the boxing world.

Faragon defeated Shamir Reyes in an eight-round bout last Thursday at the Empire State Plaza Convention Center to raise his professional record to 14-0 with six knockouts. Reyes was no slouch, as he entered the bout with an 18-7-2 record.

Faragon has shown great patience in the ring since becoming a pro. He doesn't send opponent after opponent to the canvas, but he inflicts plenty of damage and can take a punch or two along the way.

The caliber of Faragon's opponents will likely rise as the young fighter (he's only 23) continues to move up the light middleweight ranks. But if he continues to be patient and resilient, there is no telling how far Faragon can go.

• Back to Aaron Rodgers. Everyone is talking about how his 25-for-39, 304-yard, three-touchdown performance in Sunday's 31-25 Super Bowl victory over Pittsburgh could have been even better had his receivers not dropped a few passes along the way.

Personally, I'd rather focus on what Rodgers' performance means to him. It means he no longer has to deal with questions about his mettle in key games. He was knocked down several times by Pittsburgh's fierce pass rush and still got the job done when he needed to complete a pass.

Rodgers may still have to deal with comparisons to his immediate predecessor in Green Bay - Brett Favre.

But those comparisons would be unfair. Favre flung the ball around the field wherever he wanted to without regard for who was defending his receivers, which explained his NFL-record 336 career interceptions. Rodgers flings the ball around, too, but with his quick release and decision-making skills, he doesn't throw interceptions nearly as often as Favre did. It also took Rodgers fewer seasons as a starter (three) to win a Super Bowl as it took Favre (five).

I wish I could say this is the start of something great for Rodgers, but I won't go that far. After all, people have said that about other Super Bowl-winning quarterbacks such as Eli Manning, Joe Namath, Jim McMahon and Mark Rypien, and they only won it once.

Rodgers is a great quarterback, though, and he should continue to be a nightmare for NFL defensive coordinators for years to come.

• Finally, pitchers and catchers are about to report to Spring Training. That's at least one more hopeful sign that spring is on its way.

Bethlehem's Emily Kirby drives for a shot during last Friday's Suburban Council South Division game against Mohonasen in Delmar. Rob Jonas/Spotlight

BC falls out of first place

The Mohonasen boys basketball team pulled ahead of Bethlehem in the Suburban Council South Division standings by beating the Eagles 46-41 last Friday in Rotterdam.

Bethlehem (9-3 league, 9-5 overall) fell behind 24-17 at halftime before rallying in the third quarter. The Eagles pulled within one point of Mohonasen (10-3, 11-4) before the Mighty Warriors ended the game with an 18-point fourth quarter.

Jeffrey Kruzinski scored 13 points, and Garrett Sisson contributed 11 points for Mohonasen, which has won five of its last six games.

Ryan Stempsey netted 16 points, and Jordan Sperber added 13 points for Bethlehem.

The Eagles looked to get back on the winning track Tuesday when it visited Colonie (3-8, 4-9).

The Garnet Raiders entered Tuesday's game off a 59-45 victory over Guilderland last Friday in Colonie.

The game wasn't decided until the fourth quarter, when Colonie outscored Guilderland (5-6, 6-8) 24-11.

Godfrey Freeman led a balanced Colonie attack with 12 points. Zeian Polanco and Jake Samuels each contributed 10 points.

Chris Yankowski scored 13 points for Guilderland, but leading scorer Cameron Dobbs was limited to three points by Colonie's defense.

The loss to Colonie came one night after Guilderland downed Ballston Spa 89-58 in a make-up of a game originally scheduled for early January.

The Dutchmen lit up the scoreboard for 26 points in the second quarter to build a 43-24 halftime lead on the Scotties (1-11, 2-12). Guilderland followed that up with a 22-point third quarter and a 28-point fourth quarter.

Dobbs drained four three-pointers on his way to a career-high 29 points for Guilderland. Brendan Doak had 13 points, while Alex Gaines contributed 12 points.

Aaron Sparks' 17 points paced Ballston Spa.

Guilderland returned to action Tuesday when it hosted Columbia.

Eagles

as she missed four foul shots in a row at one point.

"She missed some shots that she made in the first quarter," said Brosious. "But that's how we've been [in general] all year. We've been streaky."

McClain pulled it together late in the fourth quarter. She drained a pair of free throws and then scored off a steal to turn a 42-38 deficit into an even game again.

Once Murphy made her shot, though, Bethlehem's defense took over, as the Lady Eagles denied Mohonasen on a couple of occasions to seal the victory.

Oskam scored 18 points and pulled down 12 rebounds, while Murphy contributed 11 points for Bethlehem, which remained 1 1/2 games behind first-place Colonie in the South Division standings.

Mallory Kuchis chipped in 12 points to complement McClain's efforts for Mohonasen, which has lost four of its last five games.

"There is a lot of good things going on for us," said Brosious. "I just feel that we have one more step to go."

Bethlehem tried to take a step closer to the South Division lead Tuesday when it hosted Colonie (11-2, 13-2). The Garnet Raiders defeated the Lady Eagles 60-32 when they met Dec. 14.

"We have to play our game," said Bixby. "When we played them the first time, we tried to play Colonie's game and that didn't work out for us. If we go out and play our game, that will work for us."

Mohonasen returned to action Tuesday when it hosted defending Class A champion Averill Park.

Murphy's basket helps Bethlehem beat Mohonasen

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

In a game where seniors dominated, a sophomore came to the Bethlehem girls basketball team's rescue.

Bridget Murphy's layup with less than a minute remaining in regulation helped the Lady Eagles defeat Mohonasen 45-42 in Friday's Suburban Council South Division game in Delmar.

Lea McClain's steal and layup capped a 7-0 Mohonasen run that tied the score at 42. But on Bethlehem's ensuing possession, Murphy took the ball along the baseline and made her shot to put the Lady Eagles (9-3 league, 11-3 overall) ahead to stay.

"That was run exactly as we designed it," said Bethlehem coach Matthew Bixby. "The thing with Bridget is that she's a shooter ... and she's big time. She makes the shots when we need them."

"Somebody let her by, and she made the shot," said Mohonasen coach Paul Brosious.

Mohonasen (6-6, 7-7) looked like it was going to run away with the game after it took a 19-4 lead in the first quarter. McClain had a big hand in that opening spurt, as she scored 12 of her game-high 24 points.

Bethlehem began to recover when Murphy hit a three-point shot with less than five seconds left in the first quarter. That Bethlehem's Bridget Murphy shoots over Mallory Kuchis' outstretched hands during the first half of last Friday's Suburban Council South Division game against Mohonasen.

Rob Jonas/Spotlight

shot sparked a 9-0 Lady Eagle run that trimmed Mohonasen's lead to 19-13.

"I can't repeat everything I was thinking [when Bethlehem was down 19-4], but obviously I was thinking that we had to take it one play at a time," said Bixby. "I knew if we played one play at a time, we could come back."

Mohonasen extended its advantage to 27-18 at halftime, but Bethlehem opened the third quarter on a 15-3 run - capped by a Jaci Oskam three-pointer - to grab its first lead of the game at 33-30.

The key for Bethlehem's comeback was stopping McClain. After the senior guard torched the Lady Eagles' defense for 17 points in the first half, Bethlehem limited her to three points in the third quarter.

"Basically, we changed our defensive sets every two or three minutes to give her something new to look at," said Bixby.

McClain continued to struggle in the fourth quarter. Even free throws - normally, a shot McClain makes - became a problem

Lyman leads Indians

R-C-S quartet wins titles at CC tourney

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk wrestling team had a good day at last Saturday's Section II Class CC tournament in Hudson Falls.

Four Indians won their weight classes to help R-C-S place third in the team standings with 197.5 points. Hudson Falls took the team title with 252 points, and Watervliet was second with 210.5 points.

Light-middleweight Andy Lyman continued his stellar senior season by winning the 125-pound division title with a second-period technical fall against Hudson Falls' Zack Winney. Lyman is bidding for another trip to the state wrestling championships.

Jerome Gladney, A.J. Rue and Devin Clark also won their weight classes for R-C-S. Gladney defeated Hudson Falls' Mike Kelly 8-2 for the 96-pound title, while Rue - a transfer from Saratoga Springs - downed Hudson Falls' Kory Harrington 10-3 for the 135-pound championship. Clark pinned Watervliet's Brad Pierson 46 seconds into the second period of their 215-pound title bout.

Three more Indians - Ryan Scarcella (112 pounds), Freddy Pechette (120) and Jesse Maher (140) - reached the championship round before losing. Alex Soutiere placed fourth in the 285-pound division.

In other Sectional wrestling action, Guiderland's Kevin Bates won the 119-pound title at last Saturday's Class A tournament in Saratoga Springs.

Bates defeated Columbia's Corey Southard 3-0 in the finals to lead the Dutchmen, who finished eighth out of 11 teams with 83 points.

Christian Kernozek reached the 152-pound finals for Guiderland, but he ran into Niskayuna's Alex Espina. Kernozek battled hard but lost 2-0 to Espina, the defending Sectional champion.

Nick Haluska contributed a fourth-place finish in the 140-pound division for Guiderland. Mike Morawski (125 pounds), Jesse Futia (160) and Jimmy McLaughlin (171) placed sixth.

Bethlehem finished ninth in the Class A team standings with 75 points, but the Eagles had some success in the wrestlebacks. Sean Romanski placed third at 125 pounds with a 7-0 victory over Niskayuna's Eric Steele in the consolation finals, while Tristan Canova (96 pounds), Matt Morris (103), Jay Kindlon (112) and Tyler Kessler (130) all finished fourth.

Shenendehowa won the Class A team title with 279 points, while Columbia placed second with 229 points.

At the Class D tournament in Whitehall, Voorheesville placed eighth out of 12 teams with 104 points. Duaneburg claimed the title with 208 points, while Salem finished second with 181 points.

Spencer Glaser led the Blackbirds with a first-place finish in the 140-pound weight class. Glaser edged Berne-Knox-Westerlo's Vince Pasquini 4-3 in the finals.

Quinn Treadgold lost to Duaneburg's Curt Rowley 11-5 in the 130-pound final to finish second for Voorheesville. Don Case finished third in the 285-pound division, and Caleb Cummings placed fourth at 145 pounds.

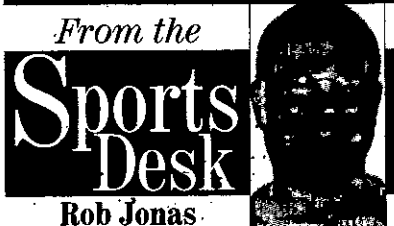

All of the wrestlers who placed in their various classes will compete at this weekend's Section II tournament at the Glens Falls Civic Center.

Rematch takes center stage

The reason why Aaron Rodgers wasn't fitted for a ring the night before the Super Bowl was because he was waiting to be fitted for his championship belt. More on Rodgers later in this column. OK, moving on...

• The Suburban Council girls basketball showdown between Shenendehowa and Shaker is now Thursday's showdown, thanks to the double-barreled snowstorm the region got last Tuesday and Wednesday.

The good thing is that it will undoubtedly be the featured sporting event that evening. Siena College has the night off, as do RPI and Union hockey. The University at Albany men's basketball team is playing Boston University, but not in town. And there isn't another high-profile high school basketball game that night.

Rob Jonas

The only downside to the delay is that the game won't be given the Times Union Center treatment that it richly deserves. The showdown was originally scheduled for last Tuesday at downtown Albany's sports showplace as part of a Coaches vs. Cancer night that was to also feature the Shen and Shaker boys teams, as well as boys and girls games between Colonie and Columbia. Then, Mother Nature stepped in and denied all of those teams the opportunity to play their games that night.

It's a pity because I expect the rematch between Shen and Shaker to be one of the best games of the season. Shen has the edge on the perimeter with the three-point shooting skills of Emily Weber and Mary Kate Cusack, but Shaker is more athletic with MacKenzie Rowland, Adrienne Devine and Lauren Woods. And both teams play excellent defense.

Ultimately, I think Shaker needs this win more than Shen. The Blue Bison are clearly the Plainswomen's top challenger, but they need to prove that they can beat Shen before the Section II Class AA playoffs begin. The confidence Shaker would gain from beating Shen Thursday in Clifton Park would be very valuable should the Blue Bison and Plainswomen meet again in the Sectional final. Shaker needs to know that it can win - not just compete with Shen, as it has done the last four meetings.

Regardless, it should be a great game to watch. Let's just hope the weather cooperates.

• When the Niskayuna girls lacrosse team takes the field this spring, it will be the only one in Section II with a United States under-19 team player on the roster.

□ Stage Page 30

BC hockey back on track

The Bethlehem hockey team picked up a pair of Capital District High School Hockey League wins last weekend.

The Eagles (9-3-1 league, 10-7-1 overall) rallied from a 2-0 deficit to defeat Niskayuna/Schenectady 5-2 Friday and end a 1-6 stretch.

Steven Sanchez and John Gosstola each had a goal and an assist to lead Bethlehem. Kevin Sheridan scored the go-ahead goal less than two minutes into the third period.

The Eagles followed up their win over Niskayuna/Schenectady with a 7-0 victory over Burnt Hills/Ballston Spa Saturday.

Sheridan led the way with two goals and an assist. Gosstola also tallied twice, while Mitch Ramos added three assists. Sanchez contributed a goal and two assists.
