Next chance for comment at upcoming Town Board meeting

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

A plan to make changes to governmental structure in the Town of Bethlehem got a cold reception at an early public discussion of a report issued by the citizen-led 20/20 Implementation Committee.

Of equal note, there were only a handful of residents in the audience. They were outnumbered by past and current town officials, members of the 20/20 Committee itself and members of the Albany County chapter of the League of Women Voters, who moderated the Tuesday, May 24, meeting.

In a recently released report, the 20/20 modernization subcommittee has suggested extending the town supervisor's term from two years to four and making the positions of the receiver of taxes, highway superintendent and town clerk, appointed instead of elected. These changes would require voter approval in November, and town leaders are now considering whether to put them on the ballot.

On Tuesday, several members of the public

Hearing set for proposals, including cell tower rules

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

There will be a public hearing June 22 on a slew of proposed changes to the Town of Bethlehem's zoning code.

At least one of the provisions has already drawn interest. The proposed changes include altering the town's telecommunications facility regulations (for cell phone towers) to set a priority list of areas a tower can be located.

The new code would require applicants to try to site, in order of preference, on existing cell towers or structures, power and transmission towers, industrial land, agricultural land, commercial land and lastly on residential land.

The code currently requires collocation of antennas on existing structures.

Town Planner Jeffrey Lipnicky said these changes are intended to keep towers out of residential neighborhoods, where they could be eyesores.

"An applicant would have to show he made a good faith attempt to locate his facility in one of the higher categories," he said.

Councilman Mark Hennessey, at a Wednesday, May 25, Town Board meeting, cast a dissenting vote against sending the changes to a public hearing, saying he's already heard comments about the changes and would like those discussed first.

"I already know how the public

RCS reduces tax levy hike

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District will again be asking voters to approve a $42.5 million school budget, but the Board of Education has decided to reduce the tax levy increase by spending another $100,000 out of reserves to lower the tax levy hike to 2.5 percent.

That figure also reflects another $100,000 the district will not have to spend on health insurance after numbers recently came back lower than expected. Voters on May 17 rejected a budget carrying a 3.4 percent tax levy increase by a margin of 1,039 votes to 959 votes.

Superintendent Daniel Teplesky said he expects voters will support this spending plan and added the new budget received the unanimous support of the school board, while the original budget was adopted in a split vote.

"It is my hope after listening to the taxpayers ... that we've listened to their concerns and that the budget that we've put forward will be approved," Teplesky said.

The re-vote is scheduled for June 21, with a public hearing slated for June 13.

If the budget is rejected again the district would have to adopt a contingency budget. The defeated budget is already within the contingency parameters, according to the district.

If this budget is adopted, it would leave the district with about $800,000 in its undesignated fund balance. Teplesky said that's well below where the district would like to be but expressed hope the coming year's budget will offer some breathing room to turn the numbers around.

Rail Trail to open

The Albany County Rail Trail will be opened (at least a portion of it will) come this weekend.

The ribbon is being cut on the trail this Thursday, but the Mohawk Hudson Land Conservancy and Friends of the Rail Trail are hoping the public will attend a celebration on Saturday, June 4, to commemorate the opening. Saturday is also Trails Day.

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., there will be refreshments, information and activities at the Adams Street crossing of the Rail Trail. Parking is available on Adams Street at the municipal lot, near the Spotlight Newspapers offices.

The MHLC, Town of Bethlehem and Albany County are partnering to open a 1.9-mile stretch of the trail running from the Fireman's Park in Slingerlands to the Veteran's Park on Delaware Avenue in Delmar.

"We are thrilled that this portion of the Albany County Rail Trail is open to the public," said Jill Knapp, Executive Director of the Mohawk Hudson Land Conservancy. "We hope many people from the area will use this wonderful resource and become increasingly aware of land protection opportunities in the Capital Region."

The trail is mostly unimproved, meaning use will be restricted to foot traffic and mountain bikes. The trail will be open from dawn to dusk. The MHLC has expressed hopes to open other sections of the 8-mile county-owned corridor.

For more information about the grand opening, visit www.mohawkhudson.org.

G'land students, teachers honored with Star awards

The Guilderland Central School District is pleased to announce that two Guilderland High School seniors, Ved Tanavade and Emma Sarachan, as well as their teachers, Colleen Petroff and Mitch Hahn, were recently honored with 2011 GE STAR Awards.

The GE STAR Awards competition is open to children of eligible GE employees and retirees worldwide. Recipients, chosen through a selective application process, are awarded a one-time award in one of two categories to defray first-year higher education expenses. The first category is for those attending a four-year college/university; the second is for those attending a two-year community college/vocational-technical school. Student winners also select a teacher from their current secondary school to recognize and to guide the use of an award to the school.

Tanavade and Sarachan will each receive a financial award to be used during their first year of study at Columbia University. Petroff, who was designated by Tanavade, and Hahn, who was designated by Sarachan, will each receive a $500 award on behalf of GHS.

Petroff has been a science teacher with the district since 1997 and Hahn has been an English teacher with the district since 2002.

"On behalf of Guilderland High School, I would like to congratulate Ved Tanavade and Ms. Colleen Petroff on their award," said Mike Piscitelli, instructional administrator for high school science and mathematics. "This award recognizes outstanding academic achievement and community service and Ved is most deserving of this recognition. Ved's selection of Ms. Petroff demonstrates the impact that her instruction has had on his high school experience and we would like to commend her on this recognition."

"Emma and Mitch both bring a dedication to their work that is outstanding. It's wonderful to see their efforts result in a recognition of this kind, and especially rewarding when a student has the opportunity to celebrate a particular teacher's impact on her learning," added Instructional Administrator for English, Reading and Social Studies Patricia Hansbury-Zuendt.

Kotary secures Dem endorsement

Councilman Hennessey will not seek reelection

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Democratic Party has endorsed Councilman Kyle Kotary for town supervisor.

The party met Tuesday, May 24, to make its endorsements for the 2011 election. The previous week, Kotary won the favor of the Republican Party, meaning that he would appear in the top two positions on the ballot unless another candidate can force and win a primary.

"I think it bodes well for our campaign as we move forward, and I think it speaks to, one, what I've done so far as a Town Board member and working across party lines...as well as the message I'm running on,"

Kotary said.

Supervisor Sam Messina also interviewed with both parties. He recently said it's too early to say what direction he will take when the petitioning period opens in early June. As an Independence Party member Messina could only wage an opportunity to ballot drive to open the line and have voters write his name in on the primary.

The town's third-party committees have yet to make endorsements. Both candidates for supervisor are interviewing with all of them.

The Democratic Party also endorsed Councilwoman Joann Dawson and Jeffrey Kuhn for Town Board (Councilman Mark Hennessey is not seeking reelection), Town Clerk Nanci Moquin to return to her office and Councilman Mark Jordan for town justice.

Hennessey said he will be looking to advance an issue of interest to him: preserving open space.

"I want to spend some time putting together an organization that might focus solely on that issue in our town," he said. "I want to take my time and talent and treasure and try to dedicate myself to that task."

WE WON!

Yes, of course I realize that because I refused to clutter the roadways with signs and wasn't able to attend the debate I garnered a mere 546 votes. To all those who voted for me I want to say "Thank you!" and let you know your vote wasn't in vain. Right now New York State is trying to dismantle the ludicrous tenure system I so vehemently attacked on my Website, so we're very clearly not alone in believing the public education system needs to be massively reformed. To that end I'm going to keep the site operative and invite you all to ask questions, make recommendations, and keep the momentum and discourse moving forward. I would especially love to hear from the wonderful teachers at BC and elsewhere and will withhold your names at your request. What do you really require to do your jobs the way you want to? What obstacles can we remove? What tools can we provide? How can we help you help our kids? Please tell us. You now know that at least 546 people care.

Delmar eatery goes meat-free

New owners of Java Jazz want to open a Loving Hut vegan restaurant

By CHARLES WIFF
wiff@spotlightnews.com

A week after it closed, an open door at Java Jazz Cafe still managed to draw in several would-be customers on a muggy May afternoon.

Though they were turned away disappointed, the new owners hope it won't be long before a door is officially opened again at the Delmar eatery. Carolyn and Tim Woodard are hoping to continue what made Java Jazz successful with a new twist you'll be hard pressed to find elsewhere in the Capital District: a vegan menu.

This will be the first foray the Woodards have made into the restaurant world, but it's been a long time coming.

"The reason for having the restaurant wasn't for money," Carolyn said. "This is my passion. I've had this goal for 10, 15 years."

The Woodards hope to make the restaurant a Loving Hut, which is a chain of vegan restaurants with locations nationwide (the nearest to Delmar is in Manhattan). They may open under a different name, however, and change over once the franchising process is cleared by the state.

Java Jazz closed its doors last week after four years in business. Owner Cathy Callan had conducted a search to find a business that would aim to keep the same sort of community-oriented spirit that Java Jazz had.

"It was very important to find someone with values similar to mine, and Carolyn has those values," Callan said.

She made the decision to close for personal reasons, including wanting to be able to spend more time with her daughter, who lives in California. Java Jazz donated its leftover food to the Samaritan Shelters in Glenmont.

Carolyn Woodard said she would like to continue many of the Java Jazz traditions, including hanging the work of local artists and having local musical acts visit. She also plans to use as many of the same local vendors as possible and even plans to offer a few of Java Jazz's vegetarian favorites, like gazpacho and the Nirvana wrap.

For Carolyn Woodard, eating vegan meshes with her Buddhist background and spiritual beliefs, but she also knows there are health benefits, too. Tim Woodard is diabetic and says eating vegan is great for his body and can also be quite tasty. They're aiming for a menu that's inclusive, however.

"Vegetarians, vegans, that kind of population was not my goal," Carolyn Woodard said.

Visitors to the new eatery shouldn't expect to end up munching on a bowl of roots and lettuce. Woodard is adapting dishes like sloppy joes (made with vegetable protein) macaroni salad, veggie meatball wraps and veggie chili soup, just to name a few.

Tim Woodard said he thinks the Bethlehem community will be open to the new restaurant, especially when they see how good eating well can be.

"There's a pretty good vegetarian and vegan community here," he said, adding that "it just seems like a cozy, little community."

Besides carrying over several dishes, the new owners will do their best to maintain Java Jazz's casual atmosphere and will still offer a variety of teas and coffees (from Spill'n the Beans in Grafton Hills).

An opening date hasn't been set yet.

The Woodards own two area stores: Treasure Ayeland, a toystore in Colonie Center, and Ye Olde Gift Shoppe in the Wilton Mall.

Search for waterfowl at Five Rivers

A program on the natural history of ducks and geese will be conducted at the NYSDEC Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, 56

Game Farm Road, Delmar on Saturday, June 11 at 2:00 p.m.

At this indoor/outdoor study, Center naturalists will provide an introductory briefing on common waterfowl, then lead participants along gentle Center trails to take a gander at geese and ducks foraging in the ponds and grasses.

In addition to raising upland game birds, from 1933 to 1970 the Delmar facility also dabbled in waterfowl propagation. In fact, the mallard was quite unheard of in the eastern flyway until Five River's waterfowl program got underway.

The program is open to the public free of charge. Call 475-0291 for more information.

Two rollover accidents

The Selkirk Fire Department was dispatched to a personal injury rollover crash Monday, May 23, at the intersection of River Road at Glenmont Road. Albany County Paramedics treated the injured driver and Bethlehem Volunteer Ambulance Service transported him to Albany Medical center, with non-life threatening injuries. The other driver was not injured. Bethlehem Police are investigating the cause of the crash, charges pending.

Man, 70, charged with DWI, leaving scene of accident

Bethlehem police on Friday, May 20, arrested Miguel Angel Martinez, 70, of 16 Grove Street, Delmar, and charged him with DWI, leaving the scene of an accident and driving on the sidewalk.

Police said a call was received at about 10:25 p.m. regarding an orange Chevrolet Camaro driving onto the sidewalk and hitting a decorative lamppost on Delaware Avenue. Police located the vehicle at 16 Grove St. and observed Martinez getting out of the vehicle, according to arrest reports, and he allegedly had the odor of alcohol on his breath and showed other signs of intoxication.

Martinez was placed under arrest after failing sobriety tests and a breathalyzer test showed his BAC to be 0.16 percent, police said. He is scheduled to appear in court on Tuesday, June 21.

Other arrests

Bethlehem police on Saturday, May 21, arrested Ashley B. Pitts, 25, of 1374 Regal Ave., Schenectady, and charged her with DWI, unlawful possession of marijuana and a number of vehicle and traffic law infractions.

Pitts was pulled over after she passed another traffic stop "failing to exercise due care" (which is a traffic violation) while traveling westbound on Delaware Avenue at about 1:04 a.m., police said. Her 1999 Oldsmobile Alero was pulled over on Kenwood Avenue and police said she had the odor of alcohol on her breath.

Pitts allegedly told police she was coming from an Albany bar and that her last drink was at 11:45 p.m. She allegedly failed sobriety tests and was placed under arrest. A breathalyzer test showed her BAC to be 0.11 percent, police said. During an inventory of her car, police allegedly found a glass pipe with marijuana residue in it. Pitts was scheduled to appear in court on Tuesday, June 21.

The Selkirk Fire Department was dispatched to a rollover crash on the New York State Thruway between exits 22 and 23 on Thursday, May 26. Upon arrival, fire fighters found a car a ways off the road, rolled over in a ditch, with the male driver trapped and unconscious. The Jaws of Life were used to free the driver. Bethlehem Volunteer Ambulance transported him to Albany Medical Center, where his condition is unknown. State Police continue to investigate the cause of the crash.

"Upon arrival, our first unit reported flames coming from the front of the structure," said Westmere Assistant Chief David Szary. "Our first crew made its initial attack and the flames were quickly knocked down." Additional support was provided by the North Bethlehem Fire Department, the Western Turnpike Rescue Squad and Guilderland EMS. The cause and origin of the fire is under investigation.

How to take the next step

BC grads return for a panel discussion with high schoolers

By CHARLES WIFF
wiff@spotlightnews.com

If you could go back to your high school self and deliver a message, what would it be?

Odds are most of us would have some sagely advice, even after just a few years. That was the idea behind a recent forum at the Bethlehem Central High School entitled "Life After BC" and organized by Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited. Nine BC graduates, mostly recently returning to town from college, held a panel discussion to talk to high schoolers about life in college and the application process Tuesday, May 24.

Questions covered a wide range of topics but there was one overarching theme from all the college students: don't stress out.

"You don't really have to know what you're doing at the beginning of freshman year," advised Sarah Rabinow, a student at the College of St. Rose.

That can be an important message. The last few years of high school usually feature mounting pressure on teens to bolster their academic and extracurricular resumes, write application essays, narrow in on a possible career path and select a few schools out of a pool of thousands. It's no easy task, but as noted by Chris McGinn, a SUNY Geneseo student, the competitive atmosphere of the college search dissolves come freshman year.

"Once you're at the school, you're all in the same place and no one cares," he said.

BC High School junior Doris Frasca said she appreciated the candidness of the panelists. After wading through a sea of marketing materials it was A panel of nine recent BC graduates returned to Bethlehem Central High School to participate in a discussion on "Life After BC." They advised current high schoolers about life in college and the application process, and told the audience to follow their dreams and not stress about the challenge of picking a school.

"You don't really have to know what you're doing at the beginning of freshman year."

— Sarah Rabinow, a student at the College of St. Rose nice to hear some honest opinions, she said.

"A lot of the time on college tours you don't really get that," she said.

BOU's Karen Kissinger said the event came together nicely, and she would love to see it become an annual forum.

"I think it went really well. I think the kids got some ideas about putting the process of senior year in perspective...I think we as parents forget how stressful it is," she said.

Kissinger added she'd like to see a more diverse panel next time around, perhaps including graduates who chose to enter the workforce or join the military.

This year's panel did include a student who decided to take a gap year. Lincoln Frasca, who will be attending the University of Vermont in the fall, said it was a good decision for him and advised students to make decisions they're comfortable with, not just what is expected of them.

"It's important to find what you're passionate about," he said. "This is about you."

Hudson Valley Community College student Raeann Kitchen told students the best way to shop for a college isn't online or in a catalog.

"Visit as much as possible," she said. "See how the atmosphere is. You can tell a lot by being there a whole day."

The other panelists were Packy Carroll, Hobart William Smith College; Dan Krzkowski, University at Albany; Julie Landrigan, Central College (Pella, Iowa); Lauren Manning, Connecticut College; and Colleen O'Conner, Duke University.

Students who would be interested in joining a panel next year, or anyone interested in getting involved with Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited, can contact Kissinger at kkmk@nycap.rr.com.

Comptroller: Bethlehem finances in good shape

Despite a lot of doom and gloom forecasting—or alternatively, because of it—the Town of Bethlehem finished off 2010 and is into 2011 in better fiscal shape than anticipated.

So says town Comptroller Suzanne Traylor, who on Wednesday, May 25, brought an update to the Town Board that showed the town ended 2010 with revenues about $1.7 million ahead of expenditures. That's considerably better than the adopted budget, which assumed the town would have to dip into savings. Instead, it will be growing them.

The reasons are tied to a number of things, including a dry summer (which meant the water fund took in more fees) an easy winter early on (less expenses for the highway department) and conservative budgeting, said Traylor.

The numbers for 2011 are also positive. Through April, the town is running within budget and is now receiving a greater share of Albany County sales tax than expected, thanks to population growth shown in the 2010 Census. Sales tax is a big part of the town's revenue stream and is a perennial cause for concern because it can be tough to predict.

The town will be receiving over $100,000 more in sales tax for the first quarter than budgeted.

"I think we're in good shape. I think we were fiscally conservative in this 2011 budget," Traylor said.

She cautioned that there are challenges ahead for the town, including the increasingly likely adoption of a 2 percent state property tax cap while pension and healthcare costs continue to climb. Importantly, the town also has a number of issues that demand potentially expensive solutions.

"The Town Board is going to have to make some tough decisions in the future when you decide what infrastructure projects you'll support," Traylor said.

Matters of Opinion in The Spotlight

Put more bite in Buster

Buster's Law needs more teeth, and you can help it along.

The first-ever New York State Animal Advocacy Day on June 1, starting at 9:30 a.m. in the Well of the Legislative Office Building in Albany, is an opportunity for animal rights supporters to lobby state legislators to strengthen the animal cruelty law.

Sponsored by State Assemblyman James Tedisco and State Sen. Greg Ball, this event flows from a history of actions by animal rights activists, beginning with a 1999 campaign that resulted in passage of the landmark Buster's Law. Based on the incident involving a cat named Buster that was set on fire by a neighbor, the law created the felony category of "aggravated cruelty to animals," punishable by up to two years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

We have, on this editorial page, been critical of those who value animal life over human, pointing out that many times fundraising efforts on the behalf of abuse animals eclipse those intended for sick children and seniors. That does not mean we devalue animal life or do not understand the connection that exists between animal cruelty and human violence.

A study done by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and Northeastern University in the late 1990s showed that animal abusers are five times more likely to commit violent crimes against people and four times more likely to commit property crimes than are individuals without a history of animal abuse.

More recently, Saratoga District Attorney Jim Murphy fought for a one-year prison sentence for the man convicted of crushing a puppy to death behind a couch. We at The Spotlight are hopeful that this sentence will deter that individual from further acts of violence, but the proposals designed to strengthen Buster's law will go beyond prison terms. Tedisco and Ball propose a mandated psychological evaluation and treatment of anyone convicted of an animal abuse crime, restricting convicted animal abusers from owning pets and the creation of a statewide registry for animal abusers.

You may be thinking there are more important things to worry about on a state level right now — the economy, a tax cap, marriage equality — but we encourage you to think about this: The teen who abused and then burned Buster the cat to death eight years later pulled a 12-year-old, mentally disabled girl into the Vale Cemetery and try to rape her. (He was stopped, arrested and is now serving a 12-year sentence for aggravated sexual abuse.)

For this reason, we think our legislators can handle this along with the myriad other issues our state faces.

I am a survivor. I was 45 when my story began, a year and a half ago. Playing soccer was a normal Wednesday night activity for me, but there was nothing normal about the soccer game of October 14, 2009. As the initial minutes of play passed, I collapsed to the ground, my heart going into cardiac arrest. I have no memory of this but have been fortunate to meet a number of the people who were the links in the chain of survival that saved my life.

Julia and Meredith, my opponents — who didn't hold that against me — started CPR immediately. This is the key component to "Stayin' Alive," as the EMS system is activated and the interminable wait for the paramedics to arrive follows. These amazing women stepped up to the plate without hesitation. They shared with me their thoughts of seeing my wedding ring and wondering about my family, if I had children, what it might be like for them if I didn't make it. Effective bystander CPR double or triples a victim's chance of survival. Few people who have had cardiac arrest survive if CPR is not initiated. In communities that have a high rate of people who have learned and use bystander CPR, survival rates outstrip other communities.

The paramedics are the next link in the chain of survival. I was in the Town of Colonie, which has a great EMS team, when I had my arrest. They have been modifying the way they approach the resuscitation of people in cardiac arrest, increasing the survival rate from 4 percent in 2005 to 22 percent in 2009. I was the recipient of the new hypothermia cooling protocols that were started that year, allowing more complete cognitive recovery. I've met Robbie MacCue, one of the paramedics on the team that night. His dedication to promoting the highest standards of care gives insight into why the EMS team in Colonie deserves the accolades they receive.

All of this good fortune happened before I got to Albany Medical Center where they started the process of cooling my body in earnest. The cooling process had been initiated at the hospital in January that year.

Point of view

My body was cooled for 24 hours to minimize detrimental effects to my brain, then slowly warmed to normal body temperature. The physicians, nurses and staff worked around the clock to monitor my condition, caring for me, and my family, as they watched the process unfold. Finally, after 10 days in the hospital, I was able to go home to continue my recovery.

When something like this happens, the recovery process is a journey, both physically and mentally. Physically, time passes, you get stronger, less tired and go back to more of your former activities. You mourn what you can't do and let it go. Mentally, you practice remembering, you find compensatory strategies such as spell check, a calculator, a pen and paper; you ask people for help, you explain that you have these memory problems, please be patient; you accept your limitations while striving for the "old you." I am forever indebted to my family and friends for getting me through this time period. They helped with meals, made sure I rested, lent an ear and drove me to appointments, soccer and dance.

But, the real questions are, what do you do with all of the emotion that accompanies such a life-altering event? Why am I alive? Why were all the people who cared for me the year after my arrest there? How do you thank someone for a life?

One of the first things that I agreed to do was speak at the Albany Medical Center Celebration of Life in March of 2010. The cardiac arrest survivors from 2009 were invited to celebrate the success of the first year of the therapeutic hypothermia program. It was here that I met another survivor, Kelly Crupi. She was 40, had her cardiac arrest a week after I did and had similar questions and a desire to give back.

It was comforting to meet someone who had been through the same experiences and compare notes. Our first mission was to form a support group in the Albany area for cardiac arrest survivors and their families. To appreciate the loftiness of this goal, you need to know that we each had what we called "fuzzy brain" but decided that between the two of us, we had one working brain and overcame that obstacle.

In July, Kelly and I formed the Sudden Cardiac Arrest Support Group. Our first goal: to provide support to survivors and their families. Our monthly meetings are the first Wednesday of each month in the cardiology conference center at Albany Medical Center where we talk about our experiences, share what is going on in our lives and problems that we may encounter. You can contact our support group through scasg.albany@gmail.com.

Our second goal was to promote community awareness of cardiac issues, including promotion of CPR and research as this played a role in our survival and return to normal lives. The American Heart Association has played an integral role in helping us accomplish this. In September we formed a team, The Beat Goes On, which participated in the Capital Region Heart Walk, raising both awareness and funds.

As a group, we've been promoting CPR within the community. We've been to high schools and the American Heart Association's New York State Lobby Day to tell our stories. We want people to know how important it is to know CPR, because it's frequently family or friends who need CPR. Everyone should know CPR and teaching CPR in high schools would ensure that students can practice this life-saving skill. Please call or write your state legislator and ask them to make CPR instruction a requirement for all New York high school students.

I encourage everyone reading this to learn CPR and then to take it one step further and bring someone along to learn CPR with you. June 1 – 7 is National CPR Week, so there's no better time. Colonie EMS is providing free CPR training throughout the day on June 1st at the Crossings in Colonie. For more information visit <http://colonie.wnyt.com/news/events/colonie-ems-hold-cpr-training/64404>. You can always find a class and more information by visiting www.heart.org/cpr. It's a gift that you may give a loved one.

Rail trail dream becomes reality Gas drilling a risky business

Editor, The Spotlight:

Saturday, June 4, marks the arrival of a day many Albany County residents have long dreamed of—and dozens of us have worked hard to see accomplished—the grand opening of the first phase of the Albany County Rail Trail!

I hope everyone will join us from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m. on the trail near Hudson Avenue and Adams Street (near the municipal lot, and the Spotlight office) to celebrate this momentous occasion. There will be free ice cream and other refreshments; rail trail information; maps; photos and rail corridor history; and activities for all ages including a “story walk,” juggling, tree ID, and more. Pedestrians and their leashed dogs are welcome!

A little background about why I feel the trail opening is so significant: I’ve lived near the rail corridor for the past decade, and my two children (ages 10 and 6) have grown up with the promise of a rail trail in their back yard. In 2008, about thirty people joined me in establishing the Friends of the Rail Trail (FORT), a committee of the Mohawk Hudson Land Conservancy (MHLC). FORT’s formation was a synthesis of the efforts of several groups and individuals that had strongly advocated for the trail’s development over the previous decade.

After Albany County’s successful purchase in late 2009 of the 9-mile rail corridor, and following an unsuccessful search for federal funding to develop the entire trail at one time, an agreement was formed between the County, the Town of Bethlehem, and MHLC to partner in opening an approximately 2-mile section of the rail trail.

This section, which extends from Firefighter’s Park in Slingerlands (near the Tollgate) to Veteran’s Memorial Park in Delmar (near Stewarts), was selected because it required the least amount of work and had the safest existing conditions.

Last month over 50 volunteers from FORT and MHLC cleared litter and brush from the first phase of the trail, and the Town of Bethlehem Highway Department has put in an incredible effort in recent weeks grading, mowing, installing culverts and fixing drainage, working on the Adams Street crossing, and more to prepare this 2-mile section for pedestrians. Bicycles will be allowed as soon as some required safety additions can be accomplished, such as installing railings in a couple areas with steep slopes next to the trail.

This phase is only the first step—but a significant one—in the goal to develop the entire Albany County Rail Trail from the City of Bethlehem, to the Town of New Scotland and the Village of Voorheesville.

I’d like to wholeheartedly thank everyone who has helped the first phase of the rail trail turn from dream to reality, and who plans to continue this effort with the rest of the trail.

For more information about the grand opening event, please visit www.MohawkHudson.org.

Editor, The Spotlight:

Is gas drilling risky business?

Absolutely, and there is the potential to contaminate the drinking water of state residents. The natural gas industry is lobbying hard in Albany, to gain access to the bubbles of natural gas in the layer of Marcellus shale, under upstate New York.

Hydrofracking is a drilling technique where a high-pressure mix of chemicals, water and sand is pumped deep under-ground to break up rocks and free the trapped gas. The process requires millions of gallons of water for each well and about a third of the water is returned to the surface contaminated with chemicals, brine salts and low level radioactivity.

If you would like to know more about the potential effects of hydrofracking on New York State, join Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace at a showing of the film “Gasland” at the Bethlehem Public Library on Thursday, June 2, at 6:30 pm.

Tom Pritchard, a local anti-fracking activist and co-chairman of CREF (Capital Region Energy Forum), will lead a discussion following the film. Information on the film showing: 466-1192. Join us!

Honoring dad with silence, hugs

by ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

Fathers do not like being referred to as beached whales. I'm sharing this information since Father's Day is just a few weeks away and you may be trying to write a special poem for your dad. Don't include any beached whale references, unless you and your dad once served together on a rescue team that returned one of those large mammals to the ocean.

I wish someone had given me this advice before I had flippantly mentioned to my father that he had sort of resembled a beached whale after he had fallen on the bathroom floor and was unable to get up. Let's just say he took offense at my comment.

For the record, I did not find anything funny about my father's falling. Nor do I find anything funny about beached whales. Both are serious situations. All I can say is that sometimes people say things without thinking.

In my defense, my father did not suffer any injuries during this particular fall. Also, it is not as if I had been hovering over him making bad jokes while he was defenseless. Several days had passed before I uttered my thoughtless comment. By that point my dad had long since left the bathroom and I was almost close enough for him to smack me.

I clearly remember the evening Dad fell.

It was around 8:30 and my brother called me. He was out of town on a business trip.

"I just got off the phone with dad," Steven told me, "and he sounded kind of odd."

"He has a cold," I told my brother.

"Well, I asked Dad if he was OK and he said, 'I'll send you an email.'"

"What a funny guy. I guess he didn't feel like talking."

"He said he was going to call you."

And while I was saying, "But I just spoke to him a half hour ago," there was Dad beeping in on call-waiting, and when I didn't switch over quick enough, my cell phone starting ringing.

And I thought to myself: Uh-oh, this can't be good.

"Jeff and I are on our way," I told my dad after he explained that he had fallen.

Once we got in the car I called my dad back to make sure he wasn't injured. He said he wasn't hurt, but didn't want to try to get up by himself and risk injury.

"I was talking to your brother," he told me.

"Yeah, I know, he called me and said you were acting funny."

"I didn't want to worry him. He's in Las Vegas"

"Well, acting weird did worry him. He said you told him you were going to write him an email."

Mika Brzezinski and Jerry Shrager.

"Well, was I supposed to tell him I was on the floor?"

And I thought to myself: Yeah, that's exactly what you should have done. When you've fallen on the bathroom floor and are lucky enough to have a phone in the bathroom and are able to reach the phone and your son calls, you should tell him what's going on. Then instead of Steven and I having a 10-minute conversation about how weird you are, he would have just told me what had happened and Jeff and I would have already been on our way to help you.

But what I said was, "Are you sure you don't need an ambulance?"

He said, "Yeah. I'm OK. What's up with my granddaughter Rachel?"

"Rachel is at home doing school work."

"Oh yeah? I'll give her a call."

And I thought to myself: I'd rather keep you on the line talking so I know you're OK and I'd also rather let Rachel finish her homework undistracted.

But what I said was, "Sure, give Rachel a call."

See, other than the beached whale comment, I'm generally a very obedient, respectful child. Same goes for my brother and sister. When dad wants something, we all try to make it happen. Lately he's wanted hugs from celebrities.

As my brother said recently, "Some people collect stamps, our father collects anchorwomen." Well, he collects hugs from anchorwomen.

My sister invited dad to an event in Saratoga where he met (and got a hug from and got his photograph taken with) Mika Brzezinski, co-host of MSNBC's weekday morning program, "Morning Joe." And at the end of April he was at a fundraiser with my brother where he met (and got a hug from and got his photograph taken with) Benita Zahn, co-anchor on WNYT-NewsChannel 13.

Now what are the odds that I can get Dad to cross paths with Katie Couric in the next two weeks?

I'm not too worried. I know a columnist for The Spotlight who loves her dad very much and will be at the ready to provide not only a bunch of hugs, but Father's Day dinner, too.

Your Opinion in The Spotlight

Thank you, Bethlehem, for your support

Editor, The Spotlight:

This is an open letter to the residents of Bethlehem:

It has been a privilege to make your muffins and coffee, serve you lunch or an afternoon smoothie, to talk with you about children, gardens, philosophy, good films and especially food, and to be part of the daily life of our community.

My four years as the owner of Java Jazz Cafe have given me a whole new respect for those brave souls who venture into the world of small business. I am inspired by the tenacity, dedication and hard work required on a daily basis to run an independent business in a world where Big Box and Chain Store are common household terms.

I believe that small businesses are the soul of any community - they contribute back to the local economy, provide jobs and services, give us all a sense of place and connection, but most importantly, they are our neighbors.

We live in an age when small business is becoming an endangered species. Top of mind advertizing is a tool available only to those companies and corporations able to afford it. I was always amazed when new customers would come in and tell us they never knew we were there, right around the corner from the house they'd lived in for years. We could never market as aggressively as the national chains just a few blocks up Delaware Avenue.

I am happy that the space that was Java Jazz Cafe will continue in the tradition of a local business with owner Carolyn W. Carolyn will make the space her own, but her heart is clearly in keeping the communal atmosphere of the place that our customers loved and tell me they miss most. Please stop in to welcome her to Delmar, and to try her delicious food. And, please continue to make a point to support all of your local businesses.

I know I will - and I expect to see many of you out and about this summer, enjoying all the gifts our community has to offer.

I found a baby bird that has fallen out of a tree in my backyard, what should I do?

Now that we are in the middle of spring, there are many recent hatchlings and new-born wildlife around us. People often wonder what actions to take if they discover a bird nest or a rabbit burrow with unattended young. They often think that these babies are abandoned and try to take them in. Unfortunately, these young animals are very fragile and may not survive even in experienced hands. Even if they do survive, it is often very difficult to reintroduce them into the wild because they missed a critical part of their development. Most of these individuals become increasingly trustful of humans which may put them in harm's way when they are released. Only veterinarians and licensed rehabilitators are legally allowed to care for and treat wildlife.

Sometimes, it may appear that these young animals are weak and abandoned. However, they are often wobbly and unsteady because they are just learning to walk and fly. Oftentimes, they are not abandoned at all. Their parents may be nearby or are away gathering food. The best thing to do if you find a baby bird outside a nest is to place it back into its nearby nest if you can find it. If you do find a nest that fell out of a tree, it is best to place it safely back into the tree. It is a common misconception that human contact will deter the mother from caring for the young if they were returned to her.

If you find an animal that you believe is injured, please contact your veterinarian or a local wildlife rehabilitator before you take any action. If treatment is necessary and they can be released back into the wild, you may be asked to release them where you found them.

about Albany's Pearl Street!) has recently been released from Stonegate. (I am reading it now on my Kindle.) The story is loaded with Albany characters and locations such as the Miss Albany Diner. This promises to be an interesting evening. For more information about the author go to www.vincentzandri.com.

Talk to center on women in baseball

Tim Wiles, director of research for The Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, will be at the Guilderland Public Library on Saturday, June 4, at 2 p.m., to give a presentation called "Skirting the Game: Women in Baseball, from Jane Austen to 2011."

The Baseball Hall of Fame's website features this Harper's Weekly quote from 1865: "There is no nobler or manlier game than base-ball." Countering this sentiment, the Hall's website states, "That is truly not the case. Women have long contributed to baseball as spectators, players, umpires, and owners. From the earliest days, women have fought the negative mindset about their participation in the sport and today continue to look for ways to be a part of our National Pastime."

Entering the contemporary popular consciousness with the 1992 release of "A League of Their Own" about a female pro baseball team in World War II (best quote: "There's no crying in baseball!"), women's baseball has a long and storied history, and dates to at least the 1860s. Mr. Wiles will chronicle this story, providing both an informative and highly entertaining program.

This program is free and open to the public.

movie of the series involves one of the more delightfully dysfunctional animated superhero families you're ever likely to see. Think "The Flintstones" meets "Superman," throw in some wonderfully on-target voice-over castings, and you have 115 minutes of incredible fun. The kids come through and help their parents quell the evil doings of a hero wannabe; Samuel L. Jackson nearly steals the show with his gently snarky asides. Like all good kid-targeting animated movies, there's enough situational humor for even the most jaded adult.

This show is sponsored by our friends at Quiznos Subs in the 20 Mall. Their mascot is supposed to be here, so this is going to a lot of fun.

Built on collaboration

The Albany Academy unveiled a new-and-improved playground on May 20

beama@spotlightnews.com

When the rain clouds finally dispersed, it took all of a few seconds for elementary school kids at The Albany Academy to flock to its newly unveiled playground.

It took a year of planning, researching and constructing the new playground before it was presented on Friday, May 20, but Alydaar Rangwala was proud of the collaborative effort it took for the project to become a reality. He is president of the student council at the school and said the project was a donation from the senior class.

"We had meetings over the summer to discuss the upcoming summer and plans for activities that we want to run for students," Rangwala said. "And one of the ideas that came up is we do a lot of work for the community and a lot of great volunteer work outside the school, but we haven't done a project for our own in-school community in a while. So we decided on a beautification project."

It was soon brought to their attention that the third grade classes drafted up a proposal requesting the building of a new playground. Students Nicholas Graziano and Nicholas Almonte were two of the kids who were involved in drafting the proposal. They said a new one was needed because the old playground presented a few dangers.

"There were a lot of problems," Graziano said, adding that a lot of kids were being stung by bees because of nests made in the equipment.

"Some kids are allergic to bees, and there were lots of bees," said Almonte. "And the wood chips were harder."

Graziano continued to say that the old woodchips would blow in their faces and get in the eyes of some of the kids as well. But there is also the aesthetic factor, as Almonte said the old playground had no color to it as it was made out of wood. This also led to a lot of the kids getting splinters.

"The school was surrounding it," Graziano said, adding that it was harder to throw a ball around or play soccer. "So there's grass here, which means we can also play in the grass."

At the time the proposals were drafted, the students were being taught about writing persuasive paragraphs, prompting them to write a letter convincing the school to help build a new playground. Almonte said the letter was so good that they sent it to Head of School Dr. Douglas North, who agreed to build a new playground.

"We split into teams," said Almonte of the writing process. "We would have one team that would write what we want in the new playground and the other would write what was wrong with the old playground."

North was impressed by the children's effort. He said the best way to find out there is something wrong is to hear it from the people that are directly affected. While there have been complaints about the playground in the past, North said this proposal brought the issue to the forefront.

The collaboration between the senior class and the elementary kids pleased North.

"I think that kind of connection doesn't often happen in education because the lower schools have a separate school, the middle school is somewhere else and the lower school is here," he said. "That connection between the old and the young - you can tell these younger kids look up to them tremendously. And of course the older kids are just filled with joy, also."

Rangwala said he was very impressed by the proposal. So to start the process, they began going over the pricing, the design and safety measures for the playground. He said the seniors also made sure to involve the lower class to make sure they felt a connection to the project.

The seniors then went to various donors and alumni associations, such as the Swyer Foundation, to help in paying for building the playground, which was a $50,000 project. There was also a Yankee Candle sale used as a fundraiser for the senior project. Rangwala said the kids also held a run and asked parents to come, watch and donate money to the playground. He said this helped in having the kids contributing something to the project.

"I think it's great. It's a student initiative and a student-led project," Rangwala said. "The lower school started it, and we came in as big brothers and said, 'We can help with this.'"

And what does the younger class think of the new playground?

"It's way better than the last one," Graziano said.

Programs slated at Five Rivers

Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, 56 Game Farm Road, Delmar, has several upcoming programs planned.

• A program on the natural history of beaver will be held on Friday, June 10, at 7 p.m. During this outdoor foray, Five Rivers staff will lead a tour of prime beaver habitat, searching for tell-tale signs of seasonal activity such as freshly chewed tree stumps, gnawed sticks, and new dam and lodge building.

The program is open to the public free of charge. Participants are urged to dress for outdoor activity. In the event of severe weather, this program may be canceled.

• A teacher workshop on the award-winning curriculum-enhancement program Project WILD Aquatic will be held on Saturday, June 11, from 9 a.m. to noon.

At this hands-on workshop, center staff will lead a participatory training in Project WILD Aquatic, an initiative which integrates aquatic wildlife themes into the core reading, writing and arithmetic disciplines. Participants will receive a free Project WILD Aquatic curriculum guide full of stimulating activities for students in grades K-12.

The workshop is open to teachers and youth leaders free of charge.

Call Five Rivers at 475-0291 by Wednesday, June 8, to register for the workshop.

• A program on the natural history of ducks and geese will be held on Saturday, June 11, at 2 p.m.

At this indoor/outdoor study, Center naturalists will provide a briefing on common waterfowl, then lead participants along gentle center trails to take a gander at geese and ducks foraging in the ponds and grasses.

In addition to raising upland game birds, from 1933 to 1970 the Delmar facility dabbled in waterfowl propagation. In fact, the mallard was quite unheard of in the eastern flyway until Five River's waterfowl program got under way.

The program, which is in celebration of the birthday of America's most popular drake, Donald Duck (1934), is open to the public free of charge. In the event of inclement weather, this program may be canceled.

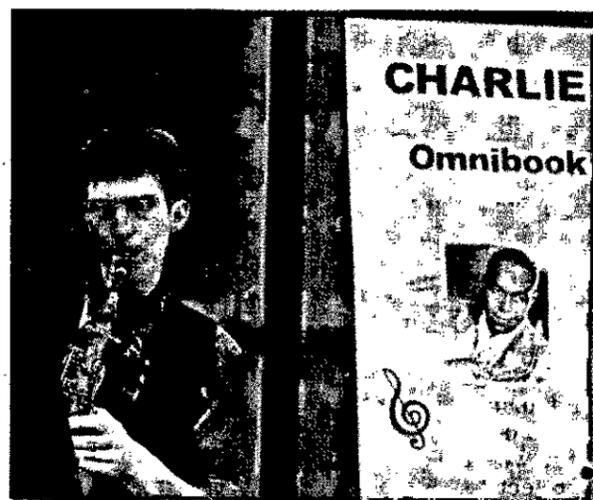

• A hands-on workshop on nature photography will be held on Saturday, June 4, at 10 a.m.

This indoor/outdoor program, geared for the novice digital photographer, will begin with a presentation on camera settings that will help you get the most out of your landscapes, wildlife shots and close ups. Weather permitting, afterward, center staff will lead an outdoor practice session, using the settings we have just learned. Participants are encouraged to bring their own cameras, storage media and extra batteries.

This program is open to the public free of charge, but space is limited. Please call the Center at 475-0291 by Wednesday, June 1, to register or for more information.

Five Rivers Environmental Education Center is a designated New York State Watchable Wildlife site, where wildlife viewing opportunities abound. Learn more by visiting "Watchable Wildlife" at www.dec.ny.gov.

New for this year is a food court area of picnic tables that patrons will be able to use to enjoy snacks and live music. The season opener will also feature llamas from Wunsapana Farms in Altamont, face painting and plenty of hot food and beverages.

Attendees are encouraged to bring their own bags and mugs.

All of the vendors at the farmers market come from within 35 miles of Delmar, making the market a truly local experience. Since opening in 2009, the market has increased in popularity, with some Saturdays last season drawing as many as 1,500 shoppers. Organizers estimate the market has kept almost $500,000 in the local economy and evened helped new businesses prosper.

When the weather gets cold, the market will move indoors for November and December.

For more information, including a vendor list, visit www.delmarmarket.org.

Clockwise from top: Strawberries and locally grown herbs and vegetables are always a big hit at the market. The Four Corners Luncheonette maintains a stand at the Delmar Farmers Market. Occasionally, patrons can see some special animal guests at the market. The season opener on June 4 will feature llamas from Wunsapana Farms in Altamont.

★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★ BETHLEHEM MEMORIAL DAY PARADE ★ ☆ ★ ☆ ★

The 80th Annual Bethlehem Memorial Day Parade drew over 1,000 marchers and many more watchers who lined the streets of Delmar Monday, May 30. The parade wound through the streets of the hamlet, passing through the Four Corners and ending at Bethlehem's Veterans Memorial Park, where there was a brief ceremony. The over $3,000 in proceeds from the parade were turned over to Grand Marshal Joe Bruno (a Vietnam veteran and owner of Joe's Barber Shop on Delaware Avenue) to be put towards veterans efforts.

Entertainment in the Spotlight

Balloon sculptors and street performers are a staple at the Kid's Arts Festival, held this year on June 4. Kids can also paint murals with Stephan Bourgeois and make pipe cleaner figures with local sculptor Steve Kowalski.

It's Electric!

Electricity Arts & Entertainment District to hold 17th annual Kid's Arts Festival

There will be something for everyone at the 17th annual Kid's Arts Festival on Saturday, June 4, from noon to 4 p.m. on Schenectady's Jay Street Mall and the area surrounding City Hall. The event will be held rain or shine, with the rain location inside Schenectady City Hall.

Targeted to preschool and young school-age children, the festival features professional entertainers, youth performers and free arts activities sponsored by community agencies.

"The Kid's Art Festival is always fun – for both the kids and for the organizers," said Karen Johnson, who has served as one of the one of the festival's organizers for all of its 17-year history.

Originally targeted to create a sense of fun, excitement and safety for families in downtown Schenectady, the festival continues to engage young people and their creative spirits "without commercialism," said Johnson. "They get to see great professional entertainers and young performing artists as well as enjoy arts activities provided by many community agencies and professional artists."

The Zucchini Brothers will be this year's special guests. Originally from Saratoga Springs, the Zucchini Brothers are renowned for their concerts in schools, theaters and festivals throughout the country, as well as their internationally syndicated weekly radio show, "The Zucchini Brothers, Live!"

Local artists will offer creative activities for kids as well. Stephan Bourgeois will make a kid's mural, Tony Iadicicco and Elyse Vacherot will entertain children with "Kids Mark-IT ART," and Steve Kowalski, a local sculptor, will work on pipe cleaner figures.

Two stages, one set up by Schenectady City Hall and one on Jay Street, will feature the following performers:

City Hall Stage

- Noon: The Central Park International Magnet School Jazz and Rock Bands led by Music teacher Rob Aronstein.

- 12:45 p.m.: The Puppet People performing Puppet Potpourri
- 1:15 p.m.: Stephen Gratto, Circus Star
- 2:00 p.m.: The Puppet People (City Hall)
- 2:30 p.m.: The Zucchini Brothers
- 3:15 p.m.: Stephen Gratto

State and Jay Stage

- Noon: Mike Purcell, MC, DJ, Keyboard, Songs & Dances
- Fun with Music & Dance

Also appearing

- The Indo Youth Group, Chinese Ribbon Dance and
- Steel Pretty Steel Drummers

On the street, kids can expect to see Tip the Clown, and Pip Squeaks who will make balloon figures, Gary Van Slyke appears as the historic musician with penny whistle, and Stephen Gratto and sons will be on stilts.

Other activities include GE volunteers making slime; the Price Chopper Hopper and Plant a Seed activity; Native American Crafts by the Keepers of the Circle; Tattoo Blue doing temporary tattoos; The Schenectady Day Nursery designing journals; the Public Library with Butterfly Crafts; and the Tang Museum with Spectacular Spectacles.

Young participants also will see the City of Schenectady's giant Recyclution Truck and learn about recycling and the City's Smoke House provided by the Fire Department to talk about fire prevention. The Schenectady County Sheriff will be there to make ID for children.

Funding for the Kid's Arts Festival is from Schenectady County and the support of private donors. The Kid's Art Festival is an endeavor of the ElectricCity Arts District of Schenectady, an organization of members whose mission is to bring compelling arts and entertainment to downtown Schenectady.

In the Middle by Denie Whalen

In the middle of the last inning one out, full count
a game-winning home run or a grounder to first base and game-ending double play

the irrepressible urge to show up

In the middle of a breath unpredictable in its coming yet we take it for granted

In the middle of the greening unfolding like the next breath

In the middle of everything the mud, slime and radiant tangle

where we create a life

What a great poem for summer! First the baseball analogy, then the references to the greening, the breath, the primordial ooze, and the double meaning at the end. The author wrote this poem after a prompt: I'm in the middle... You just never know when a wonderful poem will come from a simple idea.

□ Ideas

said they don't want to lose any of their voting power, including resident Kim Vining.

"To take that away from the voters, I think you're going to find a lot of people quite frankly insulted by that," she said.

Others expressed concern that appointments could open the door to political cronyism and wondered exactly what oversight would be built into the process.

Ken Hahn, who served as receiver of taxes in Bethlehem for many years, said he is philosophically against the changes and would make it his goal to make sure the three positions remain elected.

"Thank God that the law requires a vote. ... All over the world people are dying for freedom, and people here are trying to take it away," he said.

But committee members said that's not the goal of the changes. The 20/20 Committee's John Clarkson said this plan is not a criticism of any current office holders, but rather a proposal to bring the three elected positions in line with at least nine other town departments that have appointed heads, many of which are bigger than those with elected bosses. Having those three people be elected is an antiquated practice, he argued.

"The reason, really quite simply, is history," he said. "Those were the only jobs in town, basically, in 1900."

The report also suggests an all-appointed staff could mean opportunities for efficiencies and consolidation, though no specific savings have been identified.

Being elected gives the department head great autonomy, said 20/20's Susan Hager. That could conceivably hinder or scuttle consolidation and efficiency efforts should standoffish people end up in office.

"You can suggest, but you can't create, a plan and make it happen unless there's consensus on all sides," she said of the current system.

She added that most people don't realize what relatively limited power the supervisor has right now, having the authority to make only one direct appointment: his or her confidential secretary.

The committee envisions the supervisor bringing nominations for department heads to be vetted and approved by the full Town Board, much as in the federal government.

"We feel they don't have enough power to do what they need to do," Hager said of the Town Board, running off a list of problems including crumbling infrastructure and the need to attract business. "We think we need to empower our elected officials to be able to move more quickly to solve problems."

Extending the supervisor's term is a concept that has received at least tacit approval from former supervisors, but again there were members of the public who said the change is a challenge to the democratic process.

Some residents said they like being able to toss out their leaders if need be, and even change up the majority of the board (the supervisor and two councilpersons) every two years. Stretching the supervisor's term would mean that option would be available every four years.

"One of the nice things we have now is staggered town council positions. ... That's an extremely important function," said resident Jared King.

King added he doesn't think more power should be placed in the supervisor's office.

"He's not really a mayor, and I don't think I'd like to see him in that light," he said.

The 20/20 Committee and proponents of the change argued two years isn't enough time to do the increasingly complex job and tackle issues.

There will be a similar public meeting at the June 8 meeting of the Town Board. The board convenes at 6 p.m. at Town Hall, and the plan is to leave plenty of time for public comment at that meeting.

□ Code

feels about this," he said. "We already have received comments ... and those weren't incorporated."

Hennessey referenced a letter from Zoning Board of Appeals member David DeCancio urging that the code require towers to be at least 1,500 feet away from a school (cell antennas on the town's water tower are now closer to the BC Middle School than this) but this was not included in the update because local governments don't have the power to restrict cell towers because of health concerns.

"It's our opinion that the federal government has preempted this field," Lipnicky said.

Other members of the Town Board said sending the changes to a public hearing is the right action because it will let more opinions be gathered before any changes are made.

Cell tower placement recently became a hot topic after two companies sparred for the approval to build a tower in western Delmar. ESCO Towers was granted approval in February to build a 132-foot cell tower on farmland off Van Dyke Road.

It's normal for the zoning code to be overhauled every few years as town planners run into inconsistencies or new situations in the course of business. The last time the zoning code was updated was in October of 2008.

A list of the proposed zoning amendments can be found on the town's website.

Honoring those who served

Boy Scout Troop 75 of Delmar placed over 500 American flags on the graves of U.S. military veterans in Our Lady Help of Christian Cemetery in Glenmont for Memorial Day. The Troop performs this service every year to honor those men and women who served our country, risked their own safety and sometimes lost their lives. Scoutmaster Rick Ryther said, "This is a great opportunity for our boys to learn about the sacrifices that so many were willing to make in order to protect this great nation. It helps them to understand that there is more to life than just our own selfish desires, and that we must all pitch in to protect the things we hold dear." The flags will remain on the graves until Flag Day, June 14. More information on the troop can be found at www.delmartroop75.org.

two months."

While Radcliff was the unsung hero, Treanor was the star of the game. The United States under-19 national team midfielder had a huge game on two fronts. She led Niskayuna's offense with five goals and three assists, and she won approximately two-thirds of the 31 draw controls in the game including the critical one following her game-winning goal. The Silver Warriors maintained possession in Guilderland's half of the field to kill off the final 2:42 of the game.

Both teams will lose some key players to graduation before next season. Radcliff, defender Amanda Welge and attackers Caleigh O'Brien and Alyssa Treanor are leaving Niskayuna, while Guilderland says good-bye to defender Jess Marini and attacker Erin Mossop, who scored five goals in the championship game.

But overall, expect Guilderland and Niskayuna to challenge each other for the Sectional title next season. And expect a shootout when it happens.

• The Section II baseball playoffs once again proved that no top seed is safe.

Last Thursday's quarterfinal round was particularly cruel as the

No. 1 seeds in Class AA (Christian Brothers Academy) and Class A (Queensbury) were eliminated. No. 8 Saratoga pulled out a 5-4 victory over CBA in Colonie, while No. 9 Scotia-Glenville earned Foothills Council bragging rights over Queensbury by beating the Spartans 7-6.

No one should be surprised by Saratoga's win over CBA, if you remember what the Blue Streaks did last year when they reached the Class AA finals after finishing third in the Suburban Council North Division standings. This year, Saratoga finished fourth in a highly-competitive North Division but the Blue Streaks had several key players back from last year's team that knew how to respond in a high-pressure playoff game.

Scotia-Glenville had the law of averages going for it in its Class A quarterfinal game against Queensbury. One of the most widely known sports clichés is that it is hard to beat a team three times in a season, and the Spartans learned that when the Tartans jumped out to a 6-2 lead and held on for the victory.

CBA and Queensbury shouldn't feel too bad about losing in the quarterfinal round, though. Both teams had fine seasons and won their respective league titles. They just fell short at a bad time.

At the wire

Bethlehem's Jeremy Shuman, orange jersey, nips Saratoga's Eric Hankinson for second place in their heat of the 100-meter dash at last Thursday's Section II Class A boys track and field championship meet at Guilderland High School. would not get another chance to tie the game. Treanor won the ensuing draw control, and the Silver Warriors successfully kept the ball in Guilderland's half of the field for the remaining time.

"We worked on that all week," said Melito. "We'd set the clock and practice different situations, and practice paid off."

"For us to hold on to the ball that long is incredible," said Treanor.

Niskayuna got the early jump on Guilderland. Treanor scored 2:34 into the first half and then assisted on Emily Ryan's goal 15 seconds later to put the Silver Warriors ahead 2-0.

Guilderland found Radcliff's weakness shortly thereafter - coming around from behind the goal and shooting the ball. Cietek and Morgan Hardt both pulled off the move during a 3-0 Lady Dutch run that put Guilderland ahead by a goal.

Treanor scored to tie the game at 3 and had a chance to put Niskayuna ahead by a goal a short time later, but Madsen stopped Treanor's free-position shot. That save - coupled with a pair of Erin Mossop goals - sparked another 3-0 Guilderland run that gave the Lady Dutch a 6-3 advantage.

Niskayuna closed the gap to 7-6 by halftime and gained the lead again with two quick goals to start the second half. Ryan led the charge with two goals, while Treanor contributed a goal and an assist during the 5-1 Silver Warrior spurt.

The game settled into a pattern where Guilderland would tie the score, only to see Niskayuna re-take the lead. The pattern finally changed midway through the second half when Radcliff stopped Shelby Iapocce's free-position shot, and Caleigh O'Brien scored at the other end to give the Silver Warriors a 12-10 advantage.

Niskayuna's lead wavered between one and two goals until Mossop tied the game at 13 for Guilderland with 7:49 left. Two minutes later, Iapocce weaved her way through the Niskayuna defense and shot the ball past Radcliff to give the Lady Dutch a 14-13 lead.

Ritchie Assini answered for Niskayuna by taking a pass from Kelly Schlansker and stuffing the ball past Madsen with 5:01 left. The score remained tied at 14 until Treanor made her move through the Guilderland defense and scored.

Assini contributed four goals, and Ryan added a hat trick for Niskayuna, which advances to Wednesday's Class A regional semifinal against the Section IX champion at UAlbany.

Mossop tallied five times, Iapocce chipped in with three goals and Kelly Camardo added a pair of goals for Guilderland, which saw its 80-game Section II winning streak end.

"We never talked about the win streak," said Chatnik. "We wanted to win the championship just like Niskayuna or anyone else. We just didn't come out on the winning end this time."

Cambridge nips Voorheesville

The Voorheesville baseball team's season ended last Thursday with a 2-1 loss to Cambridge in the Section II Class CC quarterfinals.

The seventh-seeded Indians (9-10) scored the go-ahead run in the top of the fifth inning, and pitcher Todd Hunt limited the second-seeded Blackbirds to one hit.

Hunt helped his own cause with a pair of singles, while Nick Diotte added a double for Cambridge.

Voorheesville finishes with a 14-5 record.

Nisky wins battle of champions

Mossop scores five goals for Guilderland

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Kayla Treanor didn't look at the clock. She only looked at the goal.

Then, she unleashed a shot that gave her Niskayuna Silver Warriors the Section II Class A girls lacrosse title.

Treanor scored the go-ahead goal with 2:42 left in regulation to help Niskayuna defeat Guilderland 15-14 in last Wednesday's championship game at the University at Albany.

"I didn't even realize that there was that much time left," said Treanor, who finished with five goals and three assists. "I just felt that I had to go, and I just wanted to finish my shot."

The game between the four-time defending Class A (Guilderland) and Class B champions (Niskayuna) lived up to the hype that preceded it. There were four lead changes and eight ties, and neither team led by more than three goals.

"It was a great game to watch," said Guilderland coach Gary Chatnik. "Both teams answered each other."

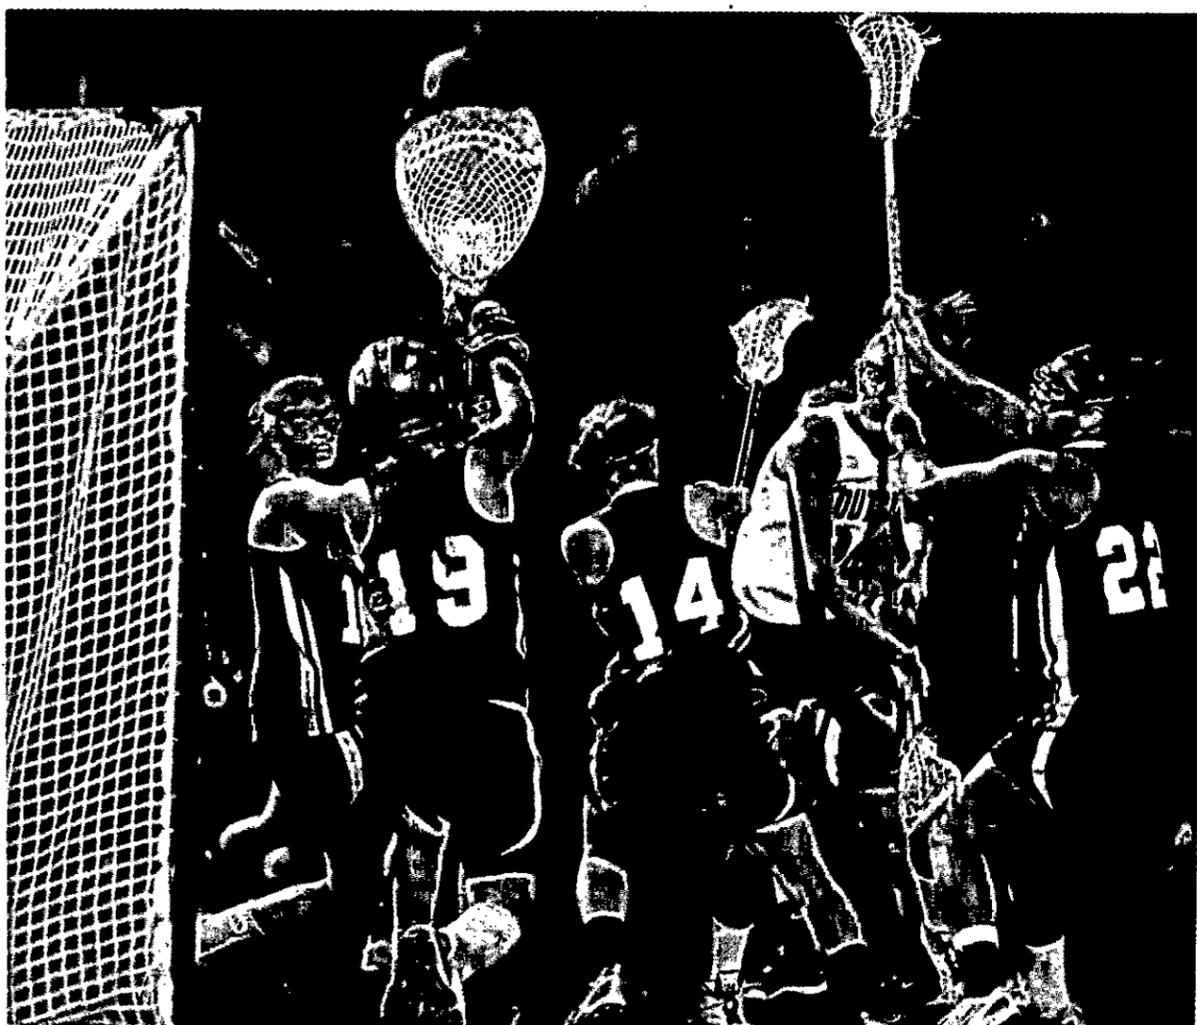

The moment that shifted the momentum in Niskayuna's favor happened a short time prior to Treanor's game-winning goal. With the score tied at 14, Guilderland's Kendall Cietek was awarded an 8-meter free position shot, but Niskayuna goaltender Austen Radcliff made the save - her 15th of the game.

"Austen played phenomenal," Niskayuna coach Pete Melito said of Radcliff. "She's a player who has grown so much over the last two months."

The Silver Warriors (15-4) cleared the ball off Radcliff's save and got it to the other end of the field, where Treanor charged in and shot the ball over Guilderland goalie Jess Madsen's shoulder.

Niskayuna then made sure Guilderland (18-2)

Shaker claims Class A title

Duguid leads Bethlehem boys at meet

Shaker easily handled the competition at last Thursday's Section II Class A boys track and field meet at Guilderland.

The Blue Bison scored 154 points to win the team title. Shenendehowa was second with 97 points, and Saratoga Springs finished third with 55 points.

Bethlehem was the top area team in the Class A field with 29 points, good for sixth place. Guilderland placed 14th with 10 points.

Drew Duguid led Bethlehem with a second-place finish in the high jump. Duguid cleared the bar at 5 feet, 10 inches in fewer attempts than five other high jumpers to earn runner-up honors.

Schenectady's Keilan McMillan-Moss won the high jump by clearing 6 feet, 3 inches.

Bethlehem received eight more points by finishing second in the 1,600-meter relay with a time of 3:24.65, one-hundredth of a second ahead of third-place Shaker. Colonie won the event with a time of 3:24.20.

Guilderland's Nico Turek finished third in the 800 with a time of 1:58.83, 0.03 seconds behind Shen's Kevin Hulbert.

• Anyone who missed last Wednesday's Section II Class A girls lacrosse championship game between Niskayuna and Guilderland probably didn't understand the significance of the match-up.

It's very rare when a four-time champion in one class level faces a four-time champion from a different class in a title game in any sport. But when it happens and the game lives up to the hype, it's a special moment.

As expected, the game was a see-saw affair with plenty of offense and some key saves by both goaltenders. And as expected, it came down to the final three minutes.

The only thing that wasn't expected was the outcome; as Niskayuna pulled out a 15-14 victory over Guilderland for the Class A title.

Top-seeded Guilderland came into the game having won the last four Class A titles and possessing an 80-game winning streak within Section II. And though No. 3 Niskayuna - the four-time Class B champion - had the firepower to match Guilderland, there were plenty of people who expected the Lady Dutch to claim their fifth consecutive Sectional championship.

Niskayuna had a secret weapon, though - senior goaltender Austen Radcliff. In a game that featured four lead changes and eight ties, Radcliff came up with the biggest save of the night when she stopped Kendall Cietek's 8-meter free position shot (the girls lacrosse equivalent of a penalty kick in soccer) and started a break the other way for the Silver Warriors - one that ended with Kayla Treanor's game winning goal with 2:42 left in regulation.

"Austen played phenomenal," Niskayuna coach Pete Melito said of Radcliff, who finished with 15 saves. "She's a player who has grown so much over the last
