PD study voted down

Board members question cost, benefit, process of super's proposal

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Town Board on Wednesday, June 22, voted against a proposal brought forward by Supervisor Sam Messina to hire a consultant to conduct a review of the town's police department.

The board members — all four of whom voted "Nay" on the proposal, with Messina voting in the affirmative — said Messina's proposal did not address exactly what the consultant would be studying and why.

"It was unclear what the impetus for this was," said Councilwoman Joann Dawson.

In his memo to Town Board members, Messina wrote that "[he] felt that it would be productive to have an independent review of the structure and functions of our Police Department, as related to its mission."

In an interview before the meeting, he said he hoped the consultant would be able to find some opportunities for cost savings in the department. He noted the police department constitutes a considerable portion of the town budget.

"One of the reasons we're looking there is to see if there's

Some near townhome project say construction is ruining area

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

Neighbors of an under-construction Delmar townhome development are saying the project is negatively impacting their way of life and have turned in a petition to the Town of Bethlehem.

The Gables at Delmar development off of Delaware Avenue has been under construction for about three months, and in that time some nearby residents say drifting dust has become pervasive, construction noise wakes them early in the morning and mature trees near their homes have been unnecessarily cleared.

The builder said it will be working to address some of the concerns, but when it comes down to it, living next to a construction project like this is bound to be an inconvenience.

"The best that we can do is just ask for a little patience from people," said Steve Bolduc, owner of Gables developer and builder Keystone Builders. "I know it's uncomfortable for them, but it's an approved process."

Stephen Piorkowski, whose back yard is right against the project site, said he has no issue with

St. Thomas teacher retires after over five decades in the classroom

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

You could say that Barbara O'Brien was lured into the classroom. Over five decades later, she was still there.

As a recent College of St. Rose graduate with her heart set on moving to the big city, O'Brien and her family heard in church that the parish's school needed teachers.

"When I went home, my father said he would help me buy a car if I took this job for one year and not move to New York [City]," she said. "I've been teaching ever since."

That was in 1958. Last week, O'Brien retired after being an educator for more than 50 years straight, 41 of them at St. Thomas the Apostle School in Delmar. During her time in classrooms in Rochester and the Capital District, she's not only seen the business of education change, but has influenced over 1,000 students.

Her former pupils have gone on to various stations, including a state attorney general, a publishing executive and a

RCS budget gets OK from voters

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District budget for coming school year passed on Tuesday, June 21, by a vote of 677 to 533.

The $42.4 million budget is $100,000 less than the one voters turned down in May. It also dips into savings for another $100,000 to bring the tax levy increase down to 2.5 percent from 3.4 percent.

Turnout was considerably lower in the re-vote than for the original budget vote, when about 2,000 votes were cast.

"I would like to thank district voters for their support," said Superintendent Daniel Teplesky in a statement. "Supporting the RCS budget sets a positive tone that will help our school community move forward in the new school year."

Voters also disapproved of the school budget in 2010, but that year the district went straight to a contingency budget instead of holding another vote.

The new budget will leave the district with about $800,000 in its undesignated fund balance.

Unions protest at Owens Corning

Workers say firm will use out-of-area labor; company denies claims

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

Members of local trade unions were outside the Owens Corning factory on Feura Bush Road Thursday, June 23, carrying placards and protesting what they say is the use of out-of-area labor on renovations and upgrades to the plant.

Lee Eck, organizer for District Council No. 9 of the International Union of Painters and Allied Trades, said Owens Corning will soon be using SW&B Construction Company, with offices in Maine and Alabama, for boiler work and for a possible major project to add another production line to the facility.

"They're just giving away a lot of work to out-of-state contractors and out-of-state workers," Eck said.

A spokesperson for Owens Corning confirmed SW&B already is and will be continuing to do work related to the upgrade at the plant. He added that unions protesting SW&B's involvement will also be doing work on the project.

Contracts related to our current plant renovations have been awarded to the firm hiring the union which is conducting the demonstration at our Delmar facility. That firm did not bid on the contract that was awarded to SW&B, which is the subject of its informational picket," Owens Corning's Matt Schroder said.

He could not say what areas SW&B was working on or how many workers the company has at the factory. He did say workers would be coming from within New York, but could not offer more details on that point.

Owens Corning is seeking state money to assist in the plant upgrade, which further irked protesters.

The Bethlehem Town Board on June 22 unanimously approved moving forward a state Community Development Block Grant application on behalf of Owens Corning. The company is looking to expand the Delmar factory to the tune of about $25.5 million, and would be seeking a $516,000 state grant through the program. The town would not be required to put up any of its own money should the application be approved.

The town will facilitate two public hearings on the grant application. The first on July 13 will be to provide information on the block grant program and the second on July 27 will be to solicit public comment.

Bethlehem was the recipient of such a block grant in 2009 to make improvements to the South Albany Sewer District.

Eck said unions feel if taxpayer money is going to be put into the project, then local workers from local companies should be tapped for the job.

"They do not invest in our community, they do not contribute their taxes back into our community," he said of out-of-area workers.

More than a dozen union members were at the plant, representing Boilermakers Local 183, Sheet Metal Workers 236, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers 236, Ironworkers Local 12, the International Union Elevator Constructors No. 35 and others.

Some protestors said they live in Bethlehem.

The addition of a new line to the factory is promised to bring 93 new jobs to the factory, which employs 179. There have been several rounds of layoffs in the past few years. None of the protestors were Owens Corning employees.

Clearly making a difference

Shop looks to help out Habitat for Humanity

By ANDREW BEAM
beama@spotlightnews.com

It's been nearly one year since Clearly Yours opened its doors for business in Newton Plaza, and to celebrate it is going to raise some money for Habitat for Humanity.

On July 14, the store will be donating 10 percent of its anniversary day sales to the not-for-profit organization, along with a drawing for a Vera Bradley gift for customers who spend over $75. Co-owner Heather Stein said she and her sister, Jodi Emmott, did charity work for Habitat for Humanity while they were in high school and look forward to helping again.

"It's a great charity and a great opportunity," Stein said, adding that she grew up in family and a school that taught the importance of charity. "We were brought up with a family that always does charity work. Our parents are extremely involved in the community and they raised us to give back. Even in high school we did charity work all the time. It was part of the morals of the school."

They were tipped off by their neighbors in the plaza at Morningside Galleries, which has been doing fundraising for Habitat for Humanity over the past year. Paul Martterer, co-owner of the store, said they had done charity work by donating some of their surplus construction materials and home decorations that they called "gently used."

He said he mentioned it to Emmott and Stein, who both said they felt it would be a good idea. The idea of doing a plaza-wide event was tossed around, but Martterer said doing that could have been a little too hectic.

"We thought it was very nice of them to step in with their ideas," Martterer said. "I know the people at Habitat really appreciate it."

Morningside Galleries will be celebrating its 28th year in business during the first week of July, which is a change from its original date of July 16. Martterer said he enjoys donating to Habitat for Humanity since he doesn't have the time to donate his own time. He understands the importance of owning a home and tries to do what he can for those who don't have one.

"When I have more time, I figured I'd like to roll my sleeves up and get involved," he said. "Rather than wait, it is an opportunity for us to pitch in for what we think is a really good cause."

During their first year of business, Stein, who bought the business with Emmott immediately after graduating from Grad School at Union College, said they changed the store immensely from the inventory, the layout of sales and the point of sales system.

They have learned just what customers want by listening to suggestions.

"Of course, it's great," said Stein of the store's first year in business. "Both of us love working with customer. We like interacting with people and not sitting at a desk. It's not a typical job people would get right out of grad school."

Animal emergencies are transportable board such as an ironing board or table leaf. Gently secure them with tie down materials to help minimize movement and prevent further injury. Place them in to the car and drive to your veterinarian's office or the Capital District Animal Emergency Clinic. If you are transporting small animals and pocket pets, place them in their carrier and cover it with a blanket.

Make sure you call the veterinary hospital to inform them of your arrival. Once you arrive at the hospital, your pet will be taken into the triage room and assessed. Once they have been stabilized, the veterinarian will come talk to you about your pet's condition and circumstances leading up to the emergency. ## Police Blotter

New Scotland man accused of rape

Delmar couple charged with DWI after dispute in CVS parking lot

A New Scotland man who is accused of raping a 10-year-old girl on Monday, June 20, is a registered sex offender and acquaintance of the girl's family, according to the Albany County Sheriff's Office.

Adam M. Croote, 23, of 383 Rock Hill Road, stands accused of rape and attempted murder after he allegedly brutally assaulted the girl after seeing her off the school bus on Monday afternoon. Police said he agreed to babysit the child on Sunday at an event the family was also at.

After getting her off the bus, police say Croote and the child went into her Berne home and set up a video game. She went to the kitchen for a snack and when she returned, Croote was naked and immediately assaulted her, police said.

"During the course of assault, he began strangling her because the girl was screaming. He tried to snap her neck twice violently," said Albany County Undersheriff Craig Apple.

Croote eventually fled the scene. Apple said the girl fought her attacker throughout the ordeal.

"This is one of the most heinous crimes that I've seen in quite some time," he said. "She's a remarkable child. I think she will recover completely because she has a very strong will."

Croote is a level 2 sex offender (out of three levels) stemming from a Massachusetts conviction for forcible sexual contact. That case did not involve a minor, according to police.

"The family understood that he was on the registry, but Croote had basically baffled them ... he said it was a prank that got out of hand," Apple said.

Croote was due back in court today, but the case will probably go to a grand jury. He was charged with attempted murder in the second degree, rape in the first degree, criminal sexual act in the first degree, sexual abuse in the first degree, strangulation in the second degree, aggravated sexual abuse in the first degree (all felonies), forcible touching and criminal obstruction of breathing.

Apple said if convicted of all the charges, Croote could face more than 25 years in prison.

The girl was treated at Albany Medical Center and released the following morning.

A domestic dispute in the parking lot of CVS on Delaware Avenue in Delmar late on Friday, June 17, ended with a couple going to jail on DWI charges.

Bethlehem police responded to the parking lot just before midnight after getting a call from Amanda Lee O'Leary, 28, of 9 Hanover Drive, Delmar, reporting an incident in which her boyfriend allegedly punched her in the face. When police arrived, she was no longer on the scene, but her boyfriend, Craig A. Danz, 26, of the same address, was.

Danz told officers he and O'Leary had gotten into an argument at a nearby bar and had driven to the CVS in separate cars, he in his 1995 GMC Jimmy. He allegedly told officers he had consumed two or three rum and Cokes and said, "I know I'm screwed. I'm not going to lie to you, sir." He allegedly failed sobriety tests and was placed into custody.

While police were interviewing Danz, O'Leary called, saying she had returned to the scene and was on the other side of the parking lot. She confirmed that she had driven her 1995 Eagle Talon from the bar and allegedly showed signs of intoxication. She failed sobriety tests and was placed into custody, police said.

A witness told police the couple had driven into the parking lot in separate vehicles, gotten out of their cars and started arguing. Danz was allegedly observed punching O'Leary in the face, grabbing her cellphone and throwing it, police said.

Breathalyzer tests showed Danz to have a BAC of 0.19 percent and O'Leary to have a BAC of 0.14 percent, according to arrest reports.

O'Leary was charged with DWI and scheduled to return to court on Aug. 16. She was given a courtesy ride home.

A stay away order of protection was issued to Danz, who was charged with aggravated DWI, harassment in the second degree and criminal mischief in the fourth degree. He was scheduled to appear in court on July 19 and released.

Bethlehem police on Friday, June 17, arrested Colin Daniel Hennessy, 25, of 4603 NY 43, Rensselaer, and charged him with felony aggravated DWI, criminal mischief in the fourth degree, speeding and refusing a breathalyzer test.

Police pulled over Hennessy's 2004 Mazda pickup at about 2:15 a.m. at 250 Delaware Ave., Delmar, after receiving a complaint about an aggressive driver. He allegedly had the odor of alcohol on his breath and told police he had drunk two beers at his girlfriend's house in Delmar and was driving home.

Hennessy refused to do roadside sobriety tests or take a breathalyzer and was placed into custody, police said. At the station, he allegedly kicked a toilet handle and broke the toilet, causing it to not stop flushing.

Hennessy did submit to a breathalyzer test at the station and it allegedly showed his BAC to be 0.23 percent, nearly three times the legal limit. He refused to be fingerprinted, according to arrest reports. A court date was scheduled for July 5.

Other arrests

Bethlehem police on Tuesday, June 14, at about 2:40 a.m., arrested Heidi Sue Maurer, 38, of 69 Slingerland St., Albany, and charged her with DWI-Drugs, criminal possession of a controlled substance in the seventh degree, aggravated unlicensed operation in the third degree and a number of traffic law infractions.

Police pulled over Maurer's 2008 Chevrolet Cobalt after allegedly observing it failing to keep right, with its blinker on and braking randomly while traveling on Route 9W in Glenmont. Maurer did not have her license on her and had trouble producing documents, police said, and was also slow to answer questions and confused.

She allegedly failed sobriety tests but tested negative for the presence of alcohol on a breathalyzer test. A search of her car revealed a homemade pipe containing crack cocaine residue, police said. A license check also found her license to be suspended.

Maurer allegedly refused to submit to a chemical test. She was scheduled to appear in court on July 5 and given a courtesy ride home.

Matters of Opinion in The Spotlight

Overshadowed tax cap law a little lacking

When you are drowning, it is of little comfort to hear someone tell you they will only raise the water level another two feet or the rate of high tide, whichever is lower.

The state recently passed into law a property tax bill that will limit property taxes from being raised more than 2 percent a year, or the inflation rate, whichever is lower.

There is a reason this issue didn't get the standing ovation same-sex marriage did.

First and foremost, the thought that a property tax cap will lead to a decreased tax burden in fundamentally flawed. Any one of our readers, sitting in their kitchens and poring over the month's bills, couldn't fool themselves into thinking that they could save money if only they could spend more of it, albeit a little at a time.

There are also so many loopholes built into the cap that you need a roadmap to find your way out of it.

Here are a few gems, as taken from the Senate press release on the issue:

A school district that does not levy an amount up to the cap in any one year would be allowed to carry over unused tax levy capacity into future years. However, this carryover levy capacity cannot be used to increase its tax levy by more than an additional 1.5 percent above the cap in any single year.

That's right, a school district can carry over its "unused tax levy capacity" to the following year. So, as a taxpayer, as soon as you're done celebrating the fact that your taxes only went up 0.5 percent this year, you can spend the next 12 months with that "unused" 1.5 percent hanging over your head.

In the event a district's actual tax levy exceeds its authorized levy due to clerical or technical errors, the erroneous excess levy must be placed in reserve to offset the levy for the next school year.

So if a clerk puts a comma in the wrong place and a school district mistakenly collects too much in taxes, it gets to keep it — for next year, just like the "unused tax levy capacity."

There are some good things about the bill, however. It allows districts to combine purchasing power on goods or services in the hopes of driving prices down. And for the consolidation and "overpriced administrators" crowd, the law contains the provision for school districts to share a superintendent.

But we at The Spotlight feel the best thing about this tax cap bill is that it sunsets in 2016. Maybe then we can untether it from rent control, take a harder look at mandate relief and get something a little more substantial.

Anti-frackers need energy reality check

By JENNIFER LEVINE

The writer is a resident of Delmar.

Recent letters to The Spotlight reveal a complete disconnect by anti-frackers from the realities of energy consumption and power generation in the U.S. They want to shut down natural gas development in New York and instead demand we rely on renewables as our power source. These folks do not connect the plug on the wall to the power generation source. Here is an energy reality check. According to the Energy Information Administration, the US currently (March 2011) generates 20.6 percent of power from natural gas, 44.7 percent from coal, 20.5 percent nuclear, 8.2 percent hydroelectric and the rest from highly subsidized renewables that also rely on a supplementary fuel source (often natural gas) when it is not sunny or windy outside. And natural gas consumption is expected to increase dramatically as dirtier coal-fired power plants are replaced.

What would folks opposed to drilling prefer to increase... nuclear power? Carbon-producing coal? It will be decades (if ever) before we can rely on renewables as our sole power source. Wishing for increased renewable energy doesn't make it a reality. Natural gas burns cleaner than coal by almost 50 percent and emits far fewer other pollutants into the air. Would it be better to harvest natural gas somewhere else... another state perhaps or even another country? That way, New York loses twice. We miss out on the enormous promise of Marcellus job creation and we pay a premium for importing a resource from out of state (or country) that is right under our feet! Sounds like a great plan!

The New York DEC has been working on hydraulic fracturing and horizontal drilling regulations for three years while a drilling moratorium has been in place. The DEC scientists and experts are best equipped to regulate drilling. Relying on anecdotal cases of well contamination caused by methane migration or worse, biased documentaries, for accurate information and then repeating it as if fact is misleading and wrong. Methane migration occurs naturally around the country.

In fact, cases of methane in tap water and lighting faucets on fire have been reported in Berne and Voorheesville in the Helderberg Escarpment. This is because the Oriskany sandstone there is rich in organic material which produces methane gas. The gas seeps into private water wells, and comes out in the tap. There is no natural gas drilling in the Helderbergs but the gas is there nonetheless.

Opponents to drilling prefer to scare the public and don't want to be confused by the facts and science of drilling. Ignoring statements made by EPA Administrator Lisa Jackson that fracking is safe but instead relying on the very biased documentary Gasland whose director claims that water well contamination is the result of hydraulic fracturing is wrong. While there have been rare cases of surface spills, there has never been a case of fracking fluids used in wells 6,000 to 10,000 feet deep seeping up through thousands of tons of bedrock into water wells drilled at 800 feet or less.

This mischaracterization of the facts does nothing to advance the debate. The new DEC regulations will require a closed-loop system for the fracking flowback water or what opponents call "toxic mystery juices," much of which is being recycled and used in subsequent fracking jobs.

Shutting down fracking and natural gas drilling by calling for a moratorium is the reaction by those who choose to ignore the facts of natural gas power generation and safe drilling. After three years of rule-writing and study the sGEIS will be the most comprehensive drilling regulations on the planet. Further delay is unwise because while we wait, neighboring Marcellus states are building the infrastructure necessary to support development... pipeline, treatment facilities, etc.

New York needs to struggle free from the grip of fear created by misinformation and lies. Under the watchful eye of the DEC, New York has the opportunity to emerge as a leader in safe, clean natural gas development and provide a cheap, home-grown energy resource to its citizens while creating thousands of good, well-paying jobs.

Your Opinion in The Spotlight

Republicans, Independents shouldn't sign for Kotary

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am appalled to see what has happened in Town of Bethlehem politics in the past seven weeks.

In the 53 years I have lived in this town politics have never been as filthy as they are now.

Kyle Kotary received the Republican endorsement for supervisor. There is seriously something wrong there. Then, Kotary got the Democratic and Independence parties' endorsements, leaving Bethlehem voters with one candidate on both of the two major party lines. That smacks of machine politics.

Current Supervisor Sam Messina received only the endorsements of the Conservative and Working Families parties, and ended up withdrawing from the race. This left Kotary the only candidate. Anyone wanting to run against him would have to petition his or her way onto the ballot, requiring grueling work and a substantial financial commitment. (Ed. note: John Clarkson has announced he is circulating petitions to trigger a September primary for the Democratic line. See www.spotlightnews.com or the June 22 print edition for the story.)

I did not agree with everything Sam Messina did or tried to do as supervisor, but he is a good, honest man who has tried to bring open government and fair non-partisan hiring practices to Bethlehem. In 2009, the Democratic Party had refused to endorse him for re-election as councilman because he had failed to vote for a party-backed judge. This year, the Republicans, who had endorsed him in 2009, refused to endorse him as supervisor. Sam has worked hard and deserves better than that. The voters deserve to see more than one candidate on the ballot for supervisor.

Here is what Republican and Independence party members can do: When a party member comes to your door with petitions to get candidates on the ballot, do not sign for Kotary. The Republican petitions have the names of the candidates for all of the town offices on one petition. However, do not worry about the other candidates, they can and will file their own petitions.

This is a way the average citizen can show his or her disgust with what's going on. We can tell the politicians, "We are fed up!"

Then, each of us has four months to think about whose name to write in for supervisor in November (and remember, the paper ballots make write-ins much easier).

Library offers outdoor fun

It's summer in the Northeast—the season to take advantage of every warm and sunny day we can. The library moves outside its walls as well, serving the town and our patrons in various ways.

Our Green is the site this year for the Town's annual flag ceremony and reading of the Declaration of Independence, Monday July 4 at 11am. This gathering is a reminder of the freedoms we hold dear—among them the freedom to read.

"Evenings on the Green," our summer family concert series, features different performers on our outdoor stage every Wednesday in July at 7pm. The Terry Gordon Quintet kicks off the series next Wednesday July 6.

On Friday, July 8, at 7 p.m., we kick off our Summer Reading program with "World of Nature" outside on the Green (indoors if it rains) — a theater-in-the-round family singalong with storyteller George Steele. In August, our lawn is the place to be for outdoor tai chi for kids, Play chess or checkers on the Bethlehem Public Library's outdoor game table; patrons can borrow the pieces from the library.

Stories on the Green, and a family picnic.

"Stories Out and About" for kids in grade 1-6 is our collaboration with the Town at various "Play Factory" locations during the summer.

Help someone learn to read

Help someone else do what you're doing right now: read.

The Guilderland Public Library, in partnership with Literacy New York: Greater Capital Region, is looking for volunteers interested in becoming tutors in ESOL (English for Speakers of Other Languages).

We're particularly interested in recruiting people who would be willing to work as a team with another tutor, to help instruct a small group of adults (three to four people) who want to improve their English.

You need no prior teaching experience — we provide the training to help you work effectively together. Thanks to an Adult Literacy grant from the New York State Library, we'll also cover the $35 materials fee customarily charged for the full training.

When you've completed the program and you're ready to work with adult learners, Literacy New York will be right there to help you with lesson plans, instructional support, and additional training along the way. The Library can offer meeting room space and a wonderful collection of literacy materials to support your efforts.

Your commitment to our "team" is just one or two hours a week — but the results can last a lifetime!

Come to a free orientation session at the Guilderland Public Library on Tuesday, July 5, from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. You'll also attend sessions on July 11, 14, 18 and 25 during the same hours.

To register, call Literacy New York Greater Capital Region at 452-3382.

Consultant: Stopping erosion won't be cheap

Estimate to stabilize park's shoreline comes in at $2.5M

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

The Town of Bethlehem has long known about the issue of erosion on the shore of its Henry Hudson Park in Selkirk, but now it has an estimate of what it would take to fix it: $2.5 million.

That's the conclusion of a consultant hired to study the problem. Ocean and Coastal Consultants was retained to the tune of $33,300 ($24,750 of which was from a state grant) for a six-month study, and on Wednesday, June 22, presented its findings to the Town Board.

The extensive report confirmed what most already knew: A timber bulkhead built in the 19th century and later capped with concrete has degraded, crumbling into the Hudson River and slowly taking more and more of the town park in with it as waves, ice and flooding attack the shore.

The consultants recommended installing a "rock riprap" barrier along almost all of the park's 2,680 feet of river shoreline. This type of barrier is comprised mostly of large rocks and slopes down to the river. In some places, plants would be placed among the rocks that would eventually grow into a vegetative cover.

It was the best solution when looking at cost, effectiveness and longevity, said Ocean and Coastal Consultants' Joseph Marrone.

"We did look at a number of different factors for alternatives, ranked these in terms of importance and gave them weight," he said.

Images of the Henry Hudson Park shoreline were included in a consultant's report on ways to stabilize the Selkirk park's shoreline. A sloping barrier of large rocks was recommended as a long-lasting, cost-effective solution.

Submitted photo

Though a riprap barrier is sturdy and long lasting, one drawback is that it would limit or disallow public access to the shoreline. The large, probably wet rocks would be a hazard to venture out on, said Marrone.

Resident Bill Kelleher, who has long been studying the shoreline and advocating a fix, said that's a major drawback.

"To me, that shoreline is completely useless," he said at the Town Board meeting.

Kelleher said a vertical barrier in a style similar to the original wall installed by the Army Corps of Engineers would be best because it would allow fishing off the shore and other activities. He also questioned the cost of the plan, saying it would be a much more expensive project.

The town is planning to begin construction on a fishing pier later in the summer. Ocean and Coastal Consultants also recommended that work be done at the southern end of the park to establish a formal kayak launch. Many kayakers are already using this area to put in and take out of the river.

The conditions at the park are such that the riverbank is actually falling away underneath portions of a fence erected to keep the public from the increasingly unstable shoreline. This will continue to be a problem, said Marrone, and could eventually create a hazard for children. If nothing is done, he said that over time the town could lose a "significant portion" of the 51-acre park to erosion.

The consultants identified a number of possible funding sources in their report, but Marrone said in these tight times, the town should be realistic when it looks at grant sources.

"There are grants available, but you're going to have competition for those. There is a limited pool of money," he said.

In related news, the Town Board unanimously approved a measure to let the Selkirk Fire District construct a fire boat dock at the park. The department is now using a launch in Coeymans, and this dock would be much closer to its base of operations.

Ithaca College cheers for 86-year-old Gunderland woman receiving her master's

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

When Beryl Macmillen Anderson cast about in the attic of her Gunderland home for her old master's thesis, her friends and family were shocked to see her pull out a nearly complete document.

After studying for four summers at Ithaca College in the 1950s, Anderson wrote her thesis, save for the bibliography, and simply never finished it.

"I thought, 'I'll do this later,' but it never got done," she said. "Other things interfered, like teaching and children and marriage and so forth."

Last month, Anderson, 86, walked across a stage at Ithaca College to thunderous applause to accept her master's degree, 60 years after she started working on it. After pulling that paper out of her attic, she said she received encouragement from family and friends alike to finish it up, even after a 33-year career teaching music in Sullivan County schools.

"One friend said to me, 'You should finish what you start.' And I said, 'Well, I didn't think of it that way,'" Anderson said. "I finally called and it was downhill all the way."

When she contacted Ithaca College, her unique inquiry landed on the desk of Keith Kaiser, an associate dean and the school's Gunderland resident Beryl Macmillen Anderson, 86, walks to receive her master's degree at Ithaca College's commencement this May, a half-century after she began writing her master's thesis.

music education chair. Her call spurred a search for Anderson's academic records, which were located, handwritten, in the school's records vault. In the 1950s, Ithaca College was a different and much smaller school, he explained, located in a few buildings downtown instead of the sweeping hillside campus of today.

Anderson mailed Kaiser her thesis, and he was impressed.

"Her thesis, as far as all of us were concerned, was about 20 years ahead of its time," he said. "It was written in the 1950s, but yet it was talking about topics that in our courses today we're still strongly encouraging our students to think about."

Anderson spun her thesis ideas of creating musical education programs that reach all students into a successful teaching career (she still has one piano student). Back then, one didn't need a master's degree to be a certified teacher, so her undergraduate credentials from Houghton College sufficed.

Kaiser helped Anderson finish up her thesis over this spring, mailing revisions back and forth since Anderson doesn't have a computer. In April, she traveled to Ithaca to defend it.

And on May 21, so many years after she started, Anderson was specially recognized from a class of 1,140 graduates for her achievement, and was met with applause and accolades all around.

Kaiser said Anderson's journey was inspirational for everyone at the school.

"It lifted everybody's spirits," he said. "We just had a wonderful time having her on campus."

Anderson described the entire experience as "exhilarating." She's just now settling back to visiting her grandchildren, quilting and traveling.

Though her whirlwind journey over the past few months has been notable for everyone involved, for Anderson the true story begins much earlier than in Ithaca in 1950. It started in a farmhouse in Knox, at her mother's side, as she practiced the piano.

"If I ever wrote a book, I'd dedicate it to her because that's what got me started," she said. "I've enjoyed every minute of it."

Don Duncan and his bandmates figured it was a time for a change.

Goldrush was a Capital District mainstay, playing rock and roll hits from the '60s and '70s. The thing was, a lot of similar bands had popped up over the years.

So, Duncan and his bandmates tried to decide on a new direction. Maybe add some new songs? How about trying country?

Neither of those was the answer. Instead, the group decided on a big, bold new sound complemented by horns, and The Electric City Horns was born.

"The horns just add that little bit extra," Duncan said. "People really respond to it."

"There's so much you can do with horns," bandmate Bill Shutter said. "A lot of songs we put horns in that never had horns in them. It opens you up to a whole new realm."

The Electric City Horns formed about 10 years ago, and like Goldrush, the group has emerged as an area favorite. The group's calendar is thick with community events, including Clifton Park's summer performing art series on Sunday, July 3.

"We're a bigger band, so we like doing more outside stuff," Duncan said.

Just how big Electric City Horns is has changed over the years. At its peak, there were about 10 members. Today, it's a seven-piece band, with a guitar player, a drummer, a keyboardist, a bass player, a saxophonist and two trumpet players.

Rock and roll is still the band's calling card, but its repertoire includes more eras. Duncan, the lead singer, said a concert can include everything from ZZ Top to Huey Lewis to swing. A few originals are usually thrown in, too.

Duncan said he's not much of a dancer, so when he hears a song that makes him want to dance, he knows it's a good fit for the band. At shows, if people in the crowd aren't dancing, "their foot's going," he said. "You can't help yourself."

Chris Jantson was among the band's fans until he joined a few years ago. A music teacher at Clayton A. Bouton High School in Voorheesville, Jantson has been playing the trumpet since elementary school. He was looking for a local band to join, and noted with a laugh that options for trumpet players aren't quite as plentiful as they are for, say, guitar players. But he learned The Electric City Horns had an opening and quickly got on board.

The youngest in the group at 39, Jantson said the band members' rapport is a big part of their success.

"It's a good group of guys," he said. "When we rehearse, we have a lot of fun. When we play out, we have a lot of fun."

It's a point Duncan echoed, noting that a lot of bands don't make it because of friction among the members.

"You don't have to be the best," he said of being in a successful band. "You have to be good as a group and you have to get along."

Duncan has a long history with Shutter, who played with him in Goldrush for more than two decades. Shutter helped launch The Electric City Horns but had to quit the group for a couple of years due to family and work commitments. When he came back, some of the faces had changed, but the vibe hadn't.

"We found people who clicked," he said.

Shutter said people who come to one of the group's performances can expect "a lot of high-energy music." It's music that has been a hit whether the band has played at restaurants, political parties, car shows or even bar mitzvahs.

Duncan said the one venue the group generally doesn't do is bars. "We can do them, we just choose not to," he said.

The town park circuit has turned into a steady gig over the past few years as more people hear the group and recommend it to others. Duncan credits the band's broad catalog for that.

"We're going to hit something everyone likes," he said.

The Electric City Horns will play at Clifton Common on Sunday, July 3, from 7 to 9 p.m. The group performs at Alive at Five in Albany on Thursday, July 28, from 5 to 8 p.m. and is slated to play at Tawasentha Park in Guilderland on Thursday, Aug. 25, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. For more information, visit www.electriccityhorns.com.

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Milestones

Scanlon, Frueh marry

Nancy Scanlon of East Berne and William Frueh of Delmar were united in marriage on April 30, 2011 at the Mabee Farm in Rotterdam Junction, NY. Reenactors all, the wedding party was attired in Civil War clothing, and many of the guests, also reenactors, wore clothing from their time period.

The groom and his best man, Ray Hauley, played "Fanfare" on fife and drum for the processional. The bride and groom sang two of Bill's original compositions, "Our Song" and "Wedding Song." Their fife and drum friends played "Governor King's March" as the recessional.

The bride's dress was created by Diane Karabin of Pickett's General Store in Perth, NY and her bonnet was decorated by Matron of Honor, Toni Lasher.

The couple enjoyed a weekend honeymoon trip to Old Sturbridge Village.

Study

efficiencies or cost savings," he said. "The police department budget is about $6,183,000, and that's without the telecommunications [dispatchers] and animal control officer."

Messina proposed hiring James E. McCabe of Douglaston, who the supervisor said holds a Ph.D and works in the field of police science. The cost for the report was pegged at $7,000, which would include two days of on-site research at the department and the writing of a report. The money would have come from the "other contractual services" line in the supervisor's office budget, which stands at about $17,000.

But board members wondered what manner of savings a consultant might find. The police department has been the subject of two external and three internal reviews in the past five years, and Councilman Kyle Kotary said a Department of Criminal Justice Services ended up recommending the department add more staff, not cut costs.

"Why do we need this study?" he asked.

After the meeting, Kotary protested that Messina implied he would support this study in his memo to the Town Board and town staff, saying he never indicated approval of the idea.

"I did not like how this $1,000-per-day consultant issue was handled from the start. This was the antithesis of an open, collaborative process and was sneaky and underhanded," Kotary said. "It was another case of pushing forward until you get caught and then ask for permission later. That's not responsible or right."

Messina insisted the report would more than pay for itself, and added that since McCabe would largely be reviewing department records he wouldn't eat up staff resources. Councilman Mark Jordan said he wouldn't support the expenditure without a better idea of what might come out of the consultation, though.

"That's what a lot of people pay in property taxes a year," he said of the estimated cost.

Messina's proposal indicated that Police Chief Louis Corsi would cooperate with the internal review.

Career

a troubleshooter for General Electric who travels all over the world. She's taught students that have ended up at every major military academy in the country.

For O'Brien, a promise of a car and a shortage of teachers brought on by the baby boom generation got her into the job. Her colleagues and the kids kept her there.

"After the first year, I said, 'I really enjoy this,'" she said. "It grew on me."

This year was O'Brien's last at St. Thomas, where she has taught from third to eighth grade (she said teaching middle schoolers has been her favorite assignment). As an elementary school teacher she covered most every subject, but with the older students she focused on English and writing. That's really been her legacy, said Principal Tom Kane, who has been at St. Thomas for 11 years.

"I can't even begin to count the number of students who come back to school, whether they are one year removed from the school or 40 years removed from the school, and recall Mrs. O'Brien and how much they learned from her," he said.

O'Brien has seen a lot of changes in her years in the classroom, including the introduction of computers, the Internet and changes in class sizes. When she first started teaching, it was not unusual to have classes of 60 students in schools all over. Now classes are much smaller and there are more than twice as many faculty at St. Thomas. But she said she's always enjoyed working with them.

"The one thing that has stayed constant at St. Thomas is the uniqueness of the faculty in the sense that we're an extended family," O'Brien said.

She said she's looking forward to reading more advanced books, relaxing on the porch at her Delmar home and spending more time with her children and grandchildren, all of whom still live in the area. O'Brien said she might also do some light traveling.

At St. Thomas, she will long remember through a $750 scholarship to be awarded annually to a St. Thomas seventh-grader moving on to eighth grade who has shown exemplary effort or skill in writing.

Contributions to the scholarship may be sent to St. Thomas the Apostle School, 42 Adams Place, Delmar 12054.

townhomes being built on the 5-acre lot, but he wasn't expecting the level of dust he and his neighbors have experienced since the project started.

"My whole kitchen was covered with dust, all over our floor and tabletops," he said.

Piorkowski and others in his neighborhood described having to choose between vacuuming and cleaning their homes almost constantly or shutting the house up completely to escape the dust. Some do not have air conditioning. A few complained that the dust is causing respiratory issues like persistent coughs.

"When it blows, there are dust clouds," said resident Laura Bowen, who has lived in her home for 12 years. "You can't see through it. You have to shut the windows. I haven't bothered to wash my windows because there's no sense in it."

Bolduc acknowledged that dust is an issue at the site. The soil that's been excavated there is "almost like talcum powder," he said, and it blows about in windy conditions.

"Common sense right now is going to say, don't leave your windows open when this is going on," Bolduc said. "I think that's what they should be doing."

Some residents have said a fence or berm should be erected, but Bolduc argued dust would get over even a high fence. He said Keystone will make better efforts to wet down the site in windy conditions to reduce dust, but this can also turn the ground to mud and hamper work.

Bethlehem Supervisor Sam Messina and other town officials recently met with Bolduc after fielding complaints from residents, and the supervisor said they discussed dust control and the removal of trees.

Several neighbors of the under-construction The Gables at Delmar project at the former site of Verstandig's Florist say the work is creating dust clouds, early-morning noise and knocking down far more trees than they anticipated. Keystone Builders has vowed to address some of the complaints but said others are just the nature of such a project.

Charles Wiff/Spotlight

"We're trying to be as sensitive as we can to the neighbors' concerns," Messina said. "It's a big project and it's going to go on for a while. We emphasized with the developer it's important to keep these communications going."

For Mondonna Yazdi, who has lived in an Adams Place home with her husband, Reza, for about six years, the dust is a nuisance but she said the construction noise also rouses her from bed at about 6:30 a.m. most days, sometimes on Saturdays, too.

"We're still in bed and they start making all sorts of noise," she said. "It's like an earthquake, the whole building starts shaking."

She also complained of construction workers swearing and arguing near her open windows, a stone's throw from the construction site.

The construction permits allow work to start at 7 a.m. and run to 6 p.m. weekday, with work starting at 8 on Saturdays. There's no work allowed on Sundays.

Bolduc said that the dust and noise problems should be considerably reduced once a road is installed, so trucks don't have to drive over the dirt.

The site has been almost entirely cleared out, with dozens of trees felled. Some neighbors saw this as an issue that goes beyond an inconvenience.

"They told us they would try to keep the trees, that has just not happened," said one longtime resident who did not want to be named.

Bolduc said the extensive work needed to install sewers and water service necessitated a lot of trees being taken down. The approved project includes a landscaping plan.

"We haven't taken down anything that we didn't need to take down, which is pretty much everything that was there, unfortunately," Bolduc said.

He added that Keystone is seeking to move one notable maple tree off of the site and plant it elsewhere.

When work at The Gables will be completed is hard to say. Bolduc estimated the road will be paved in the fall, and construction of a model unit is moving along quickly. A full buildout will be dependent on sales, though, and without that model people aren't committing.

"We need to get sales, and then we will continue to move forward," Bolduc said. "People want to see the model, they want to go in to it, touch it, feel it."

The Gables at Delmar

has had a long and storied planning process. First announced in February of 2008, the intent had originally been to build 40 condominiums. Keystone even had the town's approval to build the condos. The site is the former location of Verstandig's Florist.

The plans were changed over to a layout of 27 townhomes in 13 buildings. Keystone (like many other developers) found that the condo market is especially slow now, and was having trouble financing and filling the units.

The site is within walking distance of the Four Corners and nestled against the picturesque streets of Delmar neighborhoods, where many homes are over 100 years old. Though most residents spoken to by The Spotlight said they don't object to the project itself, there have been opponents who feel The Gables represents a clash of New Delmar with Old Delmar.

"I moved to this neighborhood because it was a neighborhood," said Bowen. "I hope they put up trees, a berm and fences to shut it off."

The plans call for a sidewalk to cut through the project to connect Adams Place with Delaware Avenue. The town library and Town Hall are right across the street from The Gables. Bolduc asked that people refrain from cutting through the construction site until that corridor is established.

Serving up success

In the wake of graduating huge class of tennis players in 2010 and amid miserable weather conditions, the 2011 JV tennis season began with much uncertainty. After a very competitive and disappointing loss to Shaker in their third match, the team rallied for an epic 5-4 win over perennial powerhouse Guilderland. In the latter half of the season, the team's success was keyed by the emergence of fantastic doubles play by our upperclassmen. Led by Coach Scott George and captains Ian Dembling, Sam Heller and Josh Wolfson, the team finished the season with a fantastic 9-1 record and an undefeated streak on their home courts. Pictured, l-r, 1st row: Ronald Shi, David Kalmer, Kevin Gu, Matt Jonas, Max Dembling, Coach Scott George; 2nd row: Brian Sa, Jake Sanders, Sam Heller, Satjiv Kaniwar, Jake Herron; 3rd row: Jamie Levine, Ian Dembling, Thomas Li, Josh Wolfson, Ben Sanders.

Big

the type of competition the NBA presents night in and night out. He'll have to move around the top guards in the business and shoot over towering forwards and centers – that's if he chooses to dash through the lane for one of his scoop-shot layups. Even if all he does is shoot three-pointers, there will likely be a pair of hands in his face. NBA coaches are no dummies. They know what Fredette can do.

If Fredette doesn't turn into a NBA All-Star, how long will it be before Sacramento fans – as well as the millions of Jimmer admirers around the country – start complaining about his lack of effectiveness? Anyone remember how much Adam Morrison was revered at Gonzaga before he fizzled out in the NBA? Or how about JJ

Reddick at Duke before he became a role player with the Orlando Magic?

This is not to say that Glens Falls' favorite son is going to suffer a similar fate. However, it's a fact that the NBA is light years more advanced in terms of its level of play than the Mountain West Conference, which Fredette carved up on a regular basis during his BYU career. The learning curve is going to be steep, and it will take every ounce of Fredette's desire to make the leap from being the best college basketball player to merely being one of the best players in the NBA.

The pending NBA lockout won't help Fredette in his quest. As long as the work stoppage is in effect (it's scheduled to start when the current collective bargaining agreement expires Thursday), Fredette won't be able to work with Sacramento's coaching staff and learn the offensive and defensive systems he will be playing in. He won't have a chance to work with his new teammates so he can understand their tendencies and they can understand his tendencies on the court. He will be on his own.

Not that being on his own is a bad thing for Fredette. He's worked tirelessly on his own and with the help of family and friends for years to develop his shooting, dribbling and passing skills, and we've all seen how well that has worked out for him. But as I previously stated, the NBA is a different level of basketball. And he needs to see that on a regular basis before he can make the final adjustments he will need to be successful.

I have no doubt that Jimmer Fredette will be initially a positive face for the Sacramento Kings organization as they try to undo the public relations damage that the threatened move to Anaheim did. But it will be what he does on the court – when he and the rest of the NBA players get back on the court – that will determine Fredette's place in the pro basketball world.

Good luck, Jimmer. You're going to need it.

Welke overthrew third as Mack attempted to steal the base. Andrew Green added an RBI single to put the Mohawks ahead 5-3.

Albany left another runner in scoring position in the bottom of the seventh inning before pushing a run across in the eighth. Palmer hit a one-out double to right field and scored on Drake's single to center field to close the gap to 5-4. Drake then reached second on a passed ball, but he was stranded there.

The Dutchmen had one more chance to tie the game in the ninth inning. Deeds worked a leadoff walk and moved to second on a passed ball. After designated hitter Steve Anderson struck out, outfielder Ryan Van Amburg singled, but Deeds had to stop at third. Amsterdam closer Abram Williams got the next two batters out, though, to preserve the Mohawks' win.

"They did well when pressure was put on them," Davey said of Amsterdam's pitchers, who stranded 12 Albany baserunners. "They made pressure pitches."

Reliever Derrick Brewer earned the victory for Amsterdam with 2-1 innings of shutout ball. Three Mohawk relievers – Brewer, Taylor Stark and Williams – held Albany to four hits over the final 4.1 innings after the Dutchmen tagged starting pitcher Brett Houseal for three runs and nine hits in 4.2 innings.

Reliever Bret Gallihugh was tagged with the loss for Albany after Amsterdam scored the go-ahead run in the seventh inning. Tokunaga worked the first five innings allowing two runs on six hits and striking out five, and Guiderland High School graduate C.J. Sohl tossed 2.2 shutout innings in relief of Gallihugh.

Alexander and Mack each had three hits and two runs scored for Amsterdam. Green, contributed two hits after replacing Josh Nethaway in right field in the sixth inning.

Turgeon had three hits for Albany including a pair of doubles, while Trinkwon, Drake and Bello each contributed two hits.

Albany traveled to Watertown Monday for the first of three consecutive games against the Wizards.

"Hopefully, we can get on a consistent run here," said Davey.

ALBANY-DUTCHMEN SPOTLIGHT-PLAYER OF THE WEEK

Steve Anderson, First Base

(Georgetown University/ Albany, NY)

A freshman at Georgetown University and Albany native, Steve Anderson has represented his hometown in a powerful fashion. In the past week, Anderson belted both Dutchmen home runs on season at their new ballpark, Bellizzi Field. The bulky first basemen highlighted his power after blasting a grand slam over the right field fence in a 13-5 win against the Newark Pilots on Tuesday.

Anderson said he is used to hitting with a wood bat from his time with the South Troy Dodgers who are located in the Troy area. "I played three years with the Dodgers who use wood, so it was just a case of getting used to that type of bat again," Anderson said. "I'm hoping that what's going on now is not just a streak. I'm seeing the ball well right now."

Anderson, who went to Guiderland High School, has seen his fair share of local fan support, including many friends and family. Though he never played at Bellizzi Field until this season, Anderson said he is very familiar with the downtown Albany area.

"My family, girlfriend, friends and former teammates have been coming to the games," Anderson said. "It's really great to be able to play in front of my hometown crowd, especially when I'm hitting the ball at the level I am right now."

Dutch left stranded by Mohawks

Amsterdam scores three times in 7th inning to defeat Albany

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Four straight rainouts didn't dull the Albany Dutchmen's bats.

Unfortunately for the Dutchmen, few of their 13 hits came with runners in scoring position, which led to a 5-4 loss to the Amsterdam Mohawks in Sunday's Perfect Game Collegiate Baseball League game at Bob Bellizzi Field.

Four Amsterdam pitchers worked their way in and out of trouble to end Albany's two-game winning streak and prevent the Dutchmen (4-6) from reaching the .500 mark.

"We couldn't get it done," said infielder Brandon Trinkwon, who had two of Albany's 13 hits. "We came out and swung well. We just need to get hits in clutch situations."

Albany's defense also faltered. Though they were only charged with one error, the Dutchmen had a hard time making plays in the third and seventh innings, which led to all of Amsterdam's runs.

"We left guys in scoring position early, but we still have to play defense well," said Albany manager Nick Davey. "We're still having one inning where we seem to lose our focus defensively. We need to be more consistent."

It was Albany's first game since beating Newark 13-5 last Tuesday at Bellizzi Field. Rain washed away scheduled road trips to Newark last Wednesday and Mohawk Valley last Friday, as well as Saturday's home game against Glens Falls.

Trinkwon got things going for Albany

"I'm a leadoff guy, so when it's in the gap I try to get to third base so that on a fly ball, I can score," said Trinkwon.

Albany manufactured another run in the second inning. Catcher Ryan Welke reached on an error, moved to second on a groundout by first baseman Garren Palmer and got to third on a groundout by third baseman Taylor Drake. Welke then scored on outfielder Paul Bello's single to left field to put Albany ahead 2-0.

Amsterdam (5-7) tied the score in the top of the third inning with only one ball going past the infield. Josh Alexander legged out an infield single, Matt Mack hit the ball into center field for a single and Albany pitcher Chase Tokunaga threw wide of first base to allow Jack Fischer to reach and load the bases. Jude Vidrine drove in one run with a grounder that Palmer knocked down at first base, and Demarcus Henderson's groundout scored Mack to make the score 2-2.

Albany regained the lead in the bottom of the third inning when Deeds drove in Trinkwon with a sacrifice fly to right field. Trinkwon led off with a single and moved to third on shortstop Anthony Turgeon's double to right field.

The Dutchmen threatened to score in the fourth and fifth innings, but they wound up leaving runners in scoring position. That came back to haunt them in the top of the seventh, when Amsterdam posted three runs on three hits and an error. Alexander doubled and scored on Mack's single to tie the game at 3. Mack reached second on a groundout and then scored the go-ahead run when

Fredette faces a big challenge

Saratoga Race Course is going to be celebrating Mardi Gras and St. Patrick's Day during its 40-day meet this summer. What, no Christmas in July celebration? OK, moving on...

• Congratulations to Jimmer Fredette on being picked 10th overall in last Thursday's NBA Draft. Now, the Glens Falls native can sit at home and wait for the NBA and its players association to agree on a new collective bargaining agreement.

When the next NBA season actually starts (my guess - October 2012), Fredette will be taking the court in a Sacramento Kings jersey. Counting Glens Falls High School and BYU, the Kings will be the third team Fredette will be asked to attract fans to.

The Kings have been involved in a public relations nightmare the past three years. As the team's on-court performance has declined, fan support has been dwindling. It reached a point where the Kings' owners, the Maloof brothers, threatened to move the team to Anaheim after the 2010-11 season, but that talk has been put on hold.

Enter Jimmer; the NCAA's leading scorer in 2010-11, winner of multiple national player of the year awards and a folk hero to basketball fans coast to coast. By working a three-team deal with Milwaukee and Charlotte to get Fredette, the Maloofs are hoping that he can charm Sacramento residents into caring passionately about their flailing franchise.

The trouble is, there may be only so much Fredette can do to help the Kings. While he has scored at will at the high school and college levels, he hasn't seen
