Study of five districts in Bethlehem provides detailed analysis together.

District officials made a formal declaration of the impasse on Nov. 21. almost a year after talks began. The declaration is required under state law before a mediator can be appointed to assist in contract talks. The state's Public Employment Relations Board chooses the mediator.

"The move to declare impasse was decided after numerous unsuccessful attempts to negotiate a new agreement," said Guilderland Board of Education President Colleen O'Connell. The district and representatives from the Guilderland Teachers' Association have met more than 20 times since December 2010. The last contract talks between district officials and teachers took place in early November. "Our intention has always been to work out a deal that's fair to the district, taxpayers and the teachers, said Maceo Dubose, the President of the Guilderland Teachers' Association. "That's what we're looking for, and hopefully a mediator can help us to do that."

By GREG FRY fryg@spotlightnews.com

Consumers are ready to open their wallets for the holiday season, but there are warnings for those looking for creative ways to pay for gifts. This year, the return of an old favorite - lavaway. has drawn plenty of attention. Since October, « retailer Wal-Mart has offered layaway for toys and electronics. Customers were required to pay at least 10 percent of the purchase price as a down payment. Many other major retailers, such as Sears and Toys R Us, are offering their own programs. While the popular big box stores have drawn some consumers in with the return of layaways for certain items, it hasn't meant much for small businesses.

"We just don't have the ability to do it," said Layaway Page 15

Bethlehem police arrested a teen on drug charges after three Bethlehem Central High School students apparently overdosed at the school and were hospitalized.

Ashanti J. McCormick, 16, of Delaware Avenue, Delmar, is accused of selling methadone to the three students. Police said at approximately 1:20 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 22, the Bethlehem police school resource officer at the high school was contacted because two students in the health office appeared to be under the influence of drugs and possibly overdosing. A third student was located in a classroom, police said. All three were taken to Albany Medical Center.

Police said an investigation led them to McCormick, who was arrested Wed. Nov. 23. He was charged with the felonies of criminal sale of a controlled substance in or near school grounds and criminal sale of a controlled substance in the fourth degree, as well as the misdemeanor of endangering the welfare of a child. He was arraigned in Bethlehem Town Court and remanded to the Albany County jail in lieu of $20,000 bail, and scheduled to reappear in Town Court on Tuesday, Dec. 6.

McCormick was one of five teens arrested during the shortened holiday week. Police said one Bethlehem student was arrested for possession of methadone and three others were charged with possession of marijuana. Police were also able to identify four-students who purchased methadone and contacted their families.

Methadone is an opioid most commonly used to treat patients withdrawing from an opiate dependency, such as a heroin addiction.

"This is another example of the partnership between our school resource officer and the high school staff,' said Bethlehem Police Lieutenant Thomas Heffernan. "We'll continue to work closely with the district to find ways to spread the word and get information out."

High School Principal Charles Abba sent a letter home to parents on Wednesday making mention of "an increase of inappropriate behavior" at the school, including increased discipline referrals for disrespectful behavior and incidents of graffiti in the boys bathrooms. Abba specifically mentioned the possession and use of marijuana and controlled substances.

In his letter, Abba stated, "the disrespectful behavior and vandalism harms our educational environment and will not be tolerated. As for the increased drug activity, it is unacceptable, unhealthy, illegal, and it must stop.'

District Superintendent Michael Tebbano issued a statement Monday, Nov. 28, regarding the increase in inappropriate behavior at the high school.

"While it is the policy of the Bethlehem Central School District that students caught in possession of, using and/ or selling any type of controlled substance will be held accountable by the district and to the fullest extent of the law, those students are afforded the right of due process and it would be premature to comment on any individual incident at this time," said Tebbano.

Juvenile offender program expanding

County to offer help in Bethlehem. Guilderland

By GREG FRY fryg@spotlightnews.com

An Albany County program designed to help juvenile offenders is expanding from the city of Albany to its suburbs.

Since 2006, the Albany County. Probation Department has operated the Juvenile Community Accountability Board in Albany. Through the program, three or four volunteers meet with juvenile offenders and their parents to try and keep them from getting into more trouble with the law. State regulations allow for the juvenile to be involved with the program for up to four months.

"One of the things we try to do with kids coming through for the first or second time is work with them to prevent them from going further into the system, said Lisa Mahar, a senior probation officer for the county who also coordinates the program for youth.

When an offender under the age of 16 is charged, the Probation Department receives the information on their case. Mahar said that's when they determine if a child is right for the JCAB program.

"They discuss what happened that caused them to be charged, who they think they affected, and then they come up with a plan," said Mahar. Going through the JCAB program is usually an alternative to other punishment like incarceration, and is oftentimes a youth's last opportunity to reverse his or her course before entering the justice system.

Outside of Albany, the program has been a success so far in Watervliet. Mahar tells the story of a teen who committed to community service hours in that city and was offered a job at the same site following the end of the service. The boy was also connected to a boxing program in Cohoes and is training for an amateur fight in February.

The next step for Mahar is to get the program going in Bethlehem and Guilderland.

"There is a need there," said Mahar. "The numbers aren't as high as in Albany, but-we wanted the other areas to have the advantage of being able to utilize this program."

In 2010, Mahar said the Probation training as part of the Department saw an 84 percent success rate among young people who participated in the program.

"Where we see the most successes withthe kids are when they have that strong family support network, and the ones that get what we're trying to do as well," said Mahar. "They come to the meeting, they are .open to the meeting and the process, and they feel that they've gotten. something out of it.'

Right now, Mahar is attempting to recruit volunteers who would be able to attend meetings in Bethlehem and Guilderland. The biggest hurdle to clear is finding people who are committed to helping their community in some way.

"The minimum qualifications are that you have to be 18 years of age," said Mahar. "Because we are a county agency; we ask that yoù live, work or have a vested interest in the county."

Volunteers must participate in a one-day program. The number of volunteers that meet with a juvenile offender is limited in order to keep the interaction between the child and volunteers more personal Mahar said she matches up experienced volunteers. with those who are just joining the program.

Meetings with juvenile offenders and form relationships outside of Albany are. with community already scheduled at organizations, as many Bethlehem Town Hall of the participants in the and the Guilderland program are often asked Public Library. # Don't let study be the end

Living in a civilized society means, in part, that if your house goes up in flames a squad of firefighters will show up to douse the blaze.

That's a fact most of us thankfully don't have to think about much, but it's one of the many amazing and complicated facts we take for granted every day.

In the Town of Bethlehem, fire departments over the past 13 months have worked with a private company on a study of, fire service in the town, and how it could be done better and cheaper. The results were recently released.

We hope residents will use this report as an opportunity to better acquaint themselves with what they're paying for. Greg Fry has a full story on the findings on page 1 of this edition.

The conclusions are not that surprising. Manitou Inc. figures the town's residents are getting good, responsible fire service for their tax dollars, and makes some sensible suggestions for improvements.

First of all, we must applaud the town's fire districts for conducting this study. "Shared services" and finding "efficiencies" have been the chief buzzwords of municipal government for the past couple of years, but all too often these end up being mere talking points.

Which brings us to our second point. We would implore our fire services to take action on the recommendations of this report. Don't let these pages collect dust on a shelf (the Town of Bethlehem already has a small library of such work), even if that means making some sweeping changes.

The report mentions the possibility of consolidating the town's five fire districts down to two and eventually one large entity, a pretty big change. John Lutz, chairman of the interdistrict collaborative planning task force, told us it's important for fire departments to maintain their identities. We'd submit it's more important the residents of this town receive the best fire protection possible, especially if it can be provided at a savings. Let's not let an aversion to change get in the way of progress.

Also mentioned in the study is an underlying problem you don't need a consultant to figure out. Volunteer fire departments here in Bethlehem and elsewhere are dealing with a crisis of membership that is quickly becoming endemic.

This is likely to become even worse if current trends continue. Young people are quitting Bethlehem, the remaining population is growing older and families are being forced to work harder to make ends meet, meaning volunteers will increasingly be unable to leave work to answer calls (the study shows while nearly all firefighters are employed, far fewer respond from work — we're told Town Hall tends to empty out when some departments receive a fire call, by the way).

So while we'd certainly encourage our readers to examine this report and, moreover, to attend tonight's public meeting on the matter at the BC High School, we'd also suggest the best way to improve fire services in town may very well be with your own time or means. For more information on how you can volunteer for area fire or EMS services, visit www.joinemsfire.org.

X-Mas means family memories

By Maggie Whelan

I think differently at Christmas. I forget what I have learned. I forget that I am not responsible for other people's happiness. I want to make dreams come true. I am proud to say that I have toned down my shopping remarkably in recent years. But, memories of Christmas in the past remind me of the extreme lengths to which I would go to make someone's holiday the best ever.

In 1974, Colleen was 3. When asked what she wanted from Santa she announced, "I want a black doll." Surprised, but pleased, I patted myself on the back. I was raising an open and accepting child. It wasn't easy to find a black doll in the early 1970s. I guess no matter what color skin you had, if you were a little girl at that time, you played with a doll with white skin. After some searching, I was able to locate a very adorable black baby doll. Along with it Colleen got a cradle, high chair, bottles and a complete layette. I couldn't wait for Christmas morning to see her face when she opened her gifts. She didn't disappoint me and was thrilled with her new baby and all the accessories that came with it. Later that night as I watched her cradling her doll, I said, "So, did Santa bring you what you wanted?"

"Yes," she smiled, pretending to feed the baby with the bottle of disappearing milk.

"A black baby," I said beaming.

"Yes," she answered. "Black hair."

My children never cease to humble me in many ways. I assured myself that I still had reason to be proud of my parenting as when she opened the baby with the black skin (and black hair), she didn't hesitate to love it.

Jimmy requested a Noah's ark. Again this was a gift you could find easily today but not when I needed it. I searched tirelessly with no success and had to settle on a book about Noah's ark. Jimmy never complained as he also got the Batman alarm clock that he asked for in his letter to Santa.

Years later, when Jim (no longer called Jimmy) came home from college for the holidays, we were out Christmas shopping together. I said to him, "Do you remember asking for a Noah's ark for Christmas when you were little?"

"I did?" he said. "I don't remember that at all."

"Yes, it was terrible. I searched and searched and couldn't find one. I had to settle on a book instead."

Teasing me he said, "Oh, yes I remember now. I was devastated that year. I wanted a Noah's ark so bad and all I got was a lousy book."

Immediately the wheels in my brain began to turn and a plan was hatched. That year I easily found a Noah's ark set. I wrapped it up with Jim's name on it and put a big sign on it that said, "Fell off Santa's sleigh Dec. 24, 1977." I put it toward the back of the tree and waited until he had opened all his gifts. Then, I handed it to him with a big smile. He read the note, looked so confused, and said "What the heck?" As he realized what I had done, his face lit up with a smile and he laughed saying, "This is the best present I ever got."

Once, my husband Jim and I were visiting friends. Displayed in their home was a lovely ceramic knick-knack of two little girls sitting on a bench. One of the girls was white, the other black. The little black girl was playing with a white doll and the little white girl was playing with a black doll. I don't know if it was the story of Colleen and her black doll or that we had adopted children who were African American but Jim fell in love with it and the message it conveyed.

I put that in the back of my mind and hoped to find one for him for Christmas. I talked with our friends and found out where they had purchased it. The shop was all out but agreed to order it. It was much more that I would normally spend but I knew Jim would be thrilled. Christmas came and the excitement grew in me as I was finally going to be able to give Jim the gift. He opened it and his response was not what I expected. He said something like, "That's nice," or "I like that."

I was disappointed but tried not to dwell on it. Months later, while watching television together, Jim pointed over to the shelf where that special gift sat and said, "That's beautiful. Where'd we get it?"

I guess it's not just my children who humble me. When I told Jim I had given it to him for Christmas, he turned bright red. It was a good color to be at holiday time and I thoroughly enjoyed his apologies over and over again. The little girls still have a special place in our home and once in a while I remind Jim where we got them.

In challenging economic times

Comfort matters more than ever The growing importance of energy efficiency at # home, in New York and beyond

Life on a budget doesn't have to require sacrificing your comfort, especially when you need it most.

These days, more of life happens at home. We live in the era of the staycation, a time when more Americans see pizza and a movie on DVD as a big Saturday night. It isn't hard to see why. People are concerned about their personal balance sheets. For many, paying off a credit card is more enticing than paying for a vacation.

Trends like these translate to more time spent around the house, and according to an ongoing government study, that seems to be exactly what people throughout the U.S. are doing. Since the beginning of the economic recession in 2007, the U.S. Department of Labor's annual American Time Use Surveys have shown a steady increase in many activities that are likely to take place at home. Americans continue to spend less time working and shopping and more time watching television, relaxing, eating and taking care of personal needs.

Another recent study conducted by economists at the University of San Diego reported that parents at all income levels are spending more time with their children. Since the mid-1990s, both mothers and fathers have been devoting much more of their time to parenting, sharing family dinners, helping with homework or playing games. The bulk of these activities also take place at home.

More time at home can be comfortable and breezy—if you live in San Diego, where it's 75° year-round. In New York State though, time around the house can mean dealing with discomfort. For New Yorkers living in older buildings, the winter months can bring cold drafts and major heating bills, and summer can be uncomfortably muggy, taxing the capacity of air conditioning units and driving up electric bills. Fortunately, that problem is now easier to solve.

Programs from the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA) make it easier. energy-efficient and comfortable. Most New Yorkers qualify for free or reducedcost comprehensive home energy assessments, low-interest loans and cashback incentives for energy efficiency upgrades, all made available through NYSERDA. For low-income households, NYSERDA offers additional programs that are especially helpful. Qualifying households can access grants or free energy efficiency services and upgrades.

For Anna Napoleon, NYSERDA's Assisted Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® program was the linchpin that allowed her to put an end to 50 years of discomfort in her Newark, NY home. Anna, a retiree, enjoys living simply. "My home is my castle," she says. "I don't care for travel."

Like many seniors, Anna has a fixed income. For decades, she put up with freezing cold winters in her 1850s-era home because she couldn't afford the cost of new insulation and heating equipment upgrades. Rather than absorb the cash expense, she withstood the cold and paid high utility bills. For a person who spends the bulk of her time at home, it was an uncomfortable situation that affected her quality of life.

When Anna's aging furnace started acting up, she called a BPI-accredited Home Performance with ENERGY STAR contractor. Technicians performed a no-cost comprehensive home energy assessment on Anna's home and identified the root cause of her discomfort and high utility bills. Not only was her furnace inefficient and outdated, but Anna's walls lacked insulation and her windows and doors were poorly sealed, allowing drafts to leak in.

The contractor suggested a comprehensive solution to Anna's energy efficiency problems, including a new high-efficiency furnace and hot water heater, insulation in the walls and basement and air sealing to reduce drafts. Because Anna's income level qualified her to participate in NYSERDA's ENERGY STAR program, she received grants worth $5,000 and a special lowinterest loan. She could finally afford to make changes to her home that would allow her to feel comfortable and stop spending too much money on her utility bills. "When I first saw what they were offering me, I didn't truly believe it," Anna says.

Today, the drafts in Anna's home are gone—the improvements cut air leakage by 61 percent. Anna no longer pays for heat that escapes through poorly insulated walls, leaky windows and drafty doors. "It's quite a difference," she says. "My gas and electric bills have really gone down. I'm on the budget plan, and right now I'm $218 in my favor. That's never happened before."

Anna is also happy to report that her monthly loan payments are affordable and well worth the modest expense. But for her, cost savings are only part of the benefit of her improved home. She now feels comfortable at home year-round. "I love to bake," she says. "Now I could just live in my kitchen, it's so warm."

Susan Konstanty also understands how challenging it can be to balance comfort wants and budget needs. Susan and her family live in Gasport, NY, a small town about 20 miles from Niagara Falls, where winters can be especially fierce. When Susan and her husband decided she would stay at home during her children's important developmental years, the cold was even more difficult to bear. Setting her thermostat to 68° pushed her monthly bills through the roof, and, even so, Susan and her children still felt uncomfortably cold.

Susan reached out to NYSERDA's EmPower New York<sup>SM</sup> program, which offers no-cost energy efficiency services to low-income New Yorkers. EmPower paired her with a contractor who assessed her home and recommended insulation, air sealing to reduce drafts and high-efficiency lighting. Because the EmPower New York program also focuses on teaching residents about energy efficiency, Susan learned how her family's daily routines were affecting her monthly utility bills. Her contractor showed Susan that she could cut her energy use. and save money by using cold water for laundry and taking other measures that would not affect her family's comfort.

"Without EmPower, our fuel and electricity bills would definitely be much higher," Susan says. "Knowledge truly is power, and the insight I gained has improved my family's lives."

Comfort might not be as immediately impressive as a new kitchen or a remodeled bathroom, but it does make a tremendous impact on our daily lives. We all have to live in our homes—perhaps now more than ever. It only makes sense that it's much harder to enjoy time spent under your roof if you're too cold or too hot. That's the best part about NYSERDA's Assisted Home Performance with ENERGY STAR and EmPower New York programs. They make it affordable and easy for New Yorkers to stay comfortable and save money. So whether that big Saturday night in with a pizza and movie takes place during August or February, you can savor every bit of it.

That was one of the key underlying messages from members of the 20/20 Implementation Committee, which has come up with suggestions of how the town can better manage its finances in the future.

At the Nov. 22 meeting of the Town Board, members of the committee gave an overview of what they found during months of analysis. Perhaps the clearest message was that the town has no multi-year financial plan that projects major issues coming down the road.

"This is a very critical item." said committee member James Blendell. We have a budget that s annual. We really do not know what it's going to be * in future years, what our expenditures are going to be, what our income is going to be. In talking to the comptroller, we're in for some serious problems in the next two or three years.'

Committee members said that the creation of a plan would help board members decide on levels of taxation, capital investments and the amount of money that should be placed into reserves. The recommendation was that the town use guidelines set by the state Comptroller's Office and that the yearly plan should encompass projections for the next five years.

"We believe the plans should be provided to the Town Board during the budget process and it should cover the budget year, plus four additional years," said committee member John Hudacs.

As for reserve levels, the committee recommended that the board consider establishing a formal policy on the maintenance of fund balances, although no specifics were given as to what that policy should be moving forward.

Supervisor Sam Messina, who is entering his last month in that office, said he wanted it on the record that he supports the recommendations of the committee and urges the new board to move forward with the suggestions. Other board members' also expressed interest in seeing the report followed up on.

"I fully support moving forward with a multi-year financial plan and capital plan, looking at our fund balance policy," said board member Kyle Kotary, who · Potter raised questions called it worthwhile to get an "appropriate and consistent policy" on the planning-related issues

"We seem to be right now in the position of responding to specific individual items, requests, crises as they emerge without knowing what's down the road six months. nine months or five years,' said Joann Dawson.

The hard part may be taking action on the recommendations. During the presentation to the board, committee members made mention of a 10-year capital plan put forward in 2009 by the town's Department of Public Works. No action has been taken by the board to adopt that plan.

Ideas' as basic as improvements in the collection of taxes are also included in the report. One point was that the town should continue to move toward online tax collections when possible. Board members were also advised of potential loopholes that allow for businesses that enter the town to avoid paying their appropriate share of taxes in their first year due to already-existing contracts with the business that used to be in their location. Town Attorney James about the legality of recommendations such as the potential for passing off collection to another entity such as Albany County. Even though a detailed legal analysis was not done. committee members told Potter that they believe the recommendations are possible based on feedback received from department heads and town employees.

The Spotlight

While much of the report cast an eye to the future, the committee did find that the town is in good shape to address accountability regarding transactions. That accountability, according to committee members, starts in the comptroller's office.

"It is well managed," said Blendell. "Our comptroller does a very good job. The comptroller has control of all the expenditures, all the purchasing and all the investments. You don't get anything purchased in this town without going through the comptroller."

The board took no official action regarding the report and did not indicate when it may be revisited.

State could play big role in storm cleanup

Town banking on $1 million loan for infrastructure repairs

By GREG FRY fryg@spotlightnews.com

The final cost of cleaning up the damage from Tropical Storms Irene and Lee still isn't known, but Bethlehem officials are getting a better idea of what the scope of work is and where they can turn to for help.

The town recently applied for a $1 million loan distributed through the State Environmental Facilities Corporation's Hurricane Emergency Loan Program, or HELP. The money is specifically designed for municipal infrastructure projects such as damage to water treatment facilities and critical pump stations.

"The funds will go towards repairing water systems," said EFC Director Matt Driscoll during a recent meeting of Governor Andrew Cuomo's cabinet.

A total of $25 million in HELP loans are available to municipalities statewide. More than half of the money was earmarked as of Nov. 16.

Despite being a much-needed shot in the arm for Bethlehem, the money would have to be paid back to the state. and two options would be available...The town could use money from the Federal Emergency Management Agency to pay back the state. Right now, it's unclear when the town may receive FEMA funding for infrastructure projects. Town officials first met with FEMA representatives in October and continue to complete reviews of damaged areas throughout Bethlehem.

The second option would be for the town to pay the money back as part of a long-term loan.

Bethlehem Supervisor Sam Messina said the town hasn't seen the state money yet, but he stressed how important the money will be to defray costs.

"If we don't get that," said Messina, "we'll have to bond this."

With hopes the state money is the way, town officials have already decided where the funds will be used. Messina Spotlight file photos said the state loan would fund improvements to the town's water system on Wolf Hill Road and major repairs to the Dinmore Road Wastewater is work that needs to be done along the Onesquethaw Creek in South Bethlehem. That include damage to the Onesquethaw Bridge and the need to address significant erosion along the creek.

Treatment Plant. Equally important, according to Messina,

Messina said that the costs of these projects will exceed $3.5 million, with cumulative costs exceeding $4.6 million. The town is banking on FEMA to cover 75 percent of the costs and on the state to cover 12.5 percent, with the rest of the repairs funded by the town.

So far, Messina said the town has spent about $1.1 million on projects and manpower costs related to the storms, including outside contractors and engineers.

Bethlehem Public Works Commissioner Erik Deyoe has said he plans to update the Town Board in December on the costs of Irene and Lee damage.

"From an engineer perspective, we've got a lot of stuff in the works that's in the process of design," said Deyoe.

In addition to the municipal.funds, Gov. Cuomo recently announced that $3 million would be made available for businesses in some of the hardest hit areas in the state. Another $5 million was dedicated for furnace repairs and replacements in 34 counties, including Albany County.

"We've been communicating a lot to our staff, our residents and businesses about opportunities," said Messina. "There must be 50 or 75 emails and postings on the town's website that we've made."

Donations needed for Operation Adopt a Soldier

Holidays are busiest time for organization

By MARCY VELTE veltem@spotlightnews.com

For the many soldiers who are unable to spend time with their families this holiday season, a package from home can be a godsend, even if it's from a stranger.

For the ninth year in a row, the Operation Adopt a Soldier program in Saratoga County is asking for special holiday donations to help service members enjoy the comforts of home while stationed overseas.

"This time of the year, the community support is wonderful and everyone remembers our troops,' said organization Cochairwoman Terri Perry. "It's great."

Perry and co-chairman Cliff Seguin Jr. formed two operations separately in 2003 when their sons were deployed. When one found out what the other was doing, they joined forces later that year.

"They're both home now and out of the service we still have admiration for the troops and it's an honor to just keep doing what we do," said Perry. "It's a priority that's in our hearts.

Although the project takes donations for care packages all year long. the amount of donations jumps dramatically during the holiday season. This year on a day in mid-November; 182 shoebox-sized care packages were donated and object-based. After by a local elementary the donated items are school and ladies church * packaged - usually by group. A 1 97.45 essentials like toiletries, facility in Gansevoort snacks, stationary and reading material, the group asks for special donations like holiday candy, decorations, cookies, hot cocoa and even fake Christmas trees.

"Really, anything to Perry." boost morale and let them know we appreciate them." said Perry.

Each year the group. sets aside $1,000 to buy as many Christmas trees as possible with all of the trimmings. Other trees are donated. They are then sent to a commanding officer to set up for a whole. base to enjoy. The same goes for any Hanukkah decorations that are donated.

"Once in a while someone will donate Hanukkah stuff, but we don't get a lot of it." said "Perry. "I think it would be nice to get more, since there's probably a lot more Jewish soldiers out there than we think about." · ·

The program operates off applied grants and donations, both monetary groups of volunteers Besides care package at the organization's they are shipped to the Department of Defense in New York City, which then sees to it the packages get to specific bases and soldiers.

"We never know exact addresses," explained

The cost of shipping packages downstate totals anywhere from $1,500 to $7,000 each month. Perry believes the organization. spends nearly $60,000 on shipping annually, reaching about 2,000 service members. Most packages are then sent on to bases in Iraq and Afghanistan, which the government pays for.

New this year to the organization's website is a place for service members to provide their information to have care packages sent to them. So far the service has been popular.

Perry said the organization has about 500 soldiers on its list to send packages to for the holidays and one to four are signing up on the website each day. Recently a group of 140 soldiers stationed in Afghanistan added their names to the list.

Sometimes soldiers request specific objects and the organization does their best to accommodate their needs, like last year when a soldier asked for a popup tent. This year one service member asked for new combat boots.

"We have a Facebook page, so we put the special requests on the page hoping people will see it and help out," said Perry.

She said each year the service members are extremely appreciative and they have books filled with letters of appreciation.

"They can't believe they got a package from a complete stranger. They're grateful and it's heartwarming," she said. operationadoptasoldier. the holidays. org.

Melissa Steen, proprietor of I Love Books in Delmar. "We are just too small, and we don't have the space to do layaways."

Since many small businesses don't have the manpower to run such a program, the holidays could shape up to be a battle of major chains versus mom and pop.

"We've been stressing the importance to the public about supporting their local business," said Jennifer Kilcoyne, the president of the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce. "I think people in general in Bethlehem are of that mindset, but I'm not sure how it impacts the holiday season.

Trends indicate that when consumers get around to shopping, they will be looking to buy now and not worry later. A poll released Tuesday, Nov. 22, by the Siena Research Institute in Loudonville showed that 83 percent of shoppers surveyed plan to pay for gifts as they buy them this holiday season, while only 12 percent are interested in using credit cards for holiday purchases.

The principle of layaway has drawn the attention of advocacy groups and even federal lawmakers in recent months.

The Better Business Bureau has issued warnings for consumers to consider key questions before buying items on layaway. The BBB advises consumers to know how much time they have to pay off the item, how much they must make as a down payment, when payments must be made, what penalties may be levied if payments are missed and what happens if the item goes on sale after the item has been put on layaway.

Consumers are also cautioned to research third party websites that may handle layaway purchases for stores and businesses that can't manage the delayed payments on their own.

> In November, U.S. Senator Charles Schumer wrote to leaders of two national retail associations, urging them to clearly identify layaway plans for shoppers, along with service fees and potential penalties.

"These programs typically require a down payment of 10 to 20 percent together with an upfront service charge – generally five dollars," Schumer said in the letter. "Customers pay the balance over time, and pick up the item when the balance is paid in full. In many cases, stores are charging hefty cancellation fees if a customer changes his or her mind, and do not refund the service fee."

For Steen, this holiday season will likely be similar to last year. She doesn't believe consumers are swayed by the idea of layaway.

"People are going to do what people are going to do," said Steen. "Layaway is not new. A lot of stores had it, and just stopped doing it."

Locally owned stores stock a different kind of toy

Old-fashioned items popular at independent shops

By JOHN PURCELL purcellj@spotlightnews.com

What's moving off the shelves of locally-owned specialty toy stores probably didn't appear in any Black Friday ads.

Most people know what's inside a big-box toy store, but local toy stores can offer a different take on playtime. As high-tech toys become more prevalent and popular, specialty toy stores can prove nostalgic for parents and intriguing for children.

Many Capital District specialty toy stores stray from battery-operated toys. Also, toys tend to require, interaction from children instead of the toy entertaining the child. From old-fashioned toys to * brain-teasing games, odds are there is something unique at a local toy store." Kevin Murphy, store manager for The Toy Maker in Stuyvesant Plaza Maker in Stuyvesant Plaza, said there are two different terms is the Fun Time Section of the section of the 全一位的100 branches to the toy industry - mass-market and specialty - and he said the two don't compete with each other.

"We have a lot of old fashioned toys. ... It is things you won't see advertised on Saturday morning TV," said Murphy. We tend to please the parents because they see things they haven't seen since they were little kids"

Some of the older style -toys offered at The Toy Maker-include jack-in-theboxes and wooden puzzles.

Tractor, which is one of the few battery-operated toys. The tractor moves by pushing down on the smokestack and the various animals in the wagon make noise.

Outside of the batterypowered realm, Muprhy said a popular item is Perplexus, a threedimensional maze game involving a small marble inside a sphere. Players select one of the tracks to take and use gravity to complete the maze through flipping, tilting and twisting.

"Kids love to play and they will realize the play value of these toys .... There is a lot of repeat play value with our toys,' Murphy said.

Linda Ambrosino, owner of G. Willikers Distinctive

Scotland

Toys on Broadway in Saratoga Springs, said her store's toys also have replay value.

"We are a specialty store and we kind of do what we consider the old classics and the new classics, the stuff I think is going to be around for a long time," said Ambrosino. "Stuff we feel is not only going to be played with on Christmas morning, but in April and May."

This shopping season, G Willikers is selling a lot of games, a popular one being "Spot It!" which is a matching game with a twist. The pictures on the two cards are different sizes.

"Sometimes the younger kids are a little bit better than the older ones," Ambrosino said.

She said G. Willikers allows people to get back to "the basics" with toys and entertainment.

"I think that technology is important and valuable. but I think sometimes sitting across the table and being face to face with somebody brings a whole other level into the whole family," she said.

Spot It! is also a hot selling item at Ta-Da in Stuvvesant Plaza, said Store Manager Michael Richman. Unlike some other specialty toy stores. Ta-Da focuses on kids 6 years old and up. "We are really a novelty store because we carry things for all ages right on through the adult to the grown up," said Richman. "The things we try to seek out are different and unusual items you are not going to see anywhere." Another popular game Ta-Da sells is called "Jishaku," which is Japanese for magnet. The game is geared towards players 12 years old and up and it uses polished hematite magnets for playing pieces.

The common variation on the game has two players trying to get rid of all their magnets first, but when placing a magnet on the board you don't want any others to attract and connect. The north and 'south poles aren't marked on the pieces.

The Parent Teacher Store located on Troy- * Latham focuses on educational toys, said Store Manager Andrea Neal. No electronics are carried in the store, but customers come in looking for niche products, she said.

"The buyer tries to get stuff you can't get ... at big box stores," said Neal.

Lisa Rex, store manger for New York Toy & Hobby at Clifton Park Center, said focusing on the shopping experience is important.

"It is a very interactive store. We want kids to come in and make a mess," said Rex. "We are just trying to keep up with the big boxes but we are trying to keep it a real shopping experience when you come in."

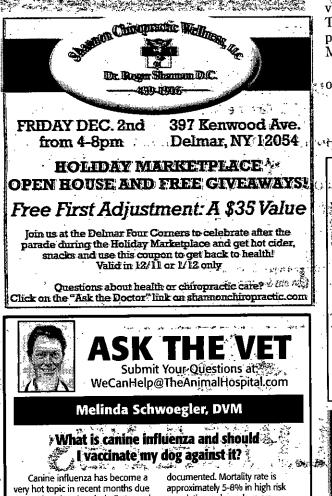

Rex said the store doesn't carry batteryoperated or electronic toys. Some of the popular brands such as LEGO can be found amongst classics like a Barrel of Monkeys. She added the store also focuses on trying to get green toys.

"We are very nostalgic, but we are very hip in having the newest and hottest toys," she said.

All of the store managers and owners said the holiday shopping season has started off good. Having Chanukah celebrated later than usual also condenses some of the frantic holiday shopping, said Murphy.

"It is always said people find a way to make Schenectady Road in Christmashappen... Santa has to come," said Murphy.

The cough, although frequently self-limiting, can linger for weeks. Just as in the human flu, there may be thick nasal discharge, lack of appetite and lethargy. A very minor percentage of dogs will require supportive care hospitalization to help them through periods of high fever, lethargy and pneumonia. As with any preventative, the pro to con ratio needs to be assessed when deciding whether to vaccinate a dog against canine influenza. Keep in mind that most cases of canine influenza will pass in approximately a week and most cases do not require hospitalization. There is no "one size fits all" protocol regarding canine influzena vaccination. We recommend vaccinating high risk patients such as most show, track and shelter dogs as these dogs are in high density situations where the virus thrives. At this time we do not recommend incorporating the canine influenza vaccination as part of the routine series, even for those dogs that frequent boarding facilities or dog parks.

Capital District holiday tradition marks 15th year

By MARCY VELTE veltem@spotlightnews.com

Do you still believe in the magic of the holiday season?

This year, sponsors of the annual Hannaford Capital Lights in the Park display in Albany hope visitors will continue to "believe in the wonders of the holidays." In addition to the many colorful lights that can be seen throughout Washington Park, Hannaford will host a special poetry competition for children to celebrate the event's 15th year.

"Even though [the light display] is a tradition in the Capital Region, we really wanted to do something to renew interest," said Molly Tarleton, a spokeswoman for Hannaford Supermarkets. "This year's theme is 'believe,' so we thought it would be nice to engage kids with writing something original."

The contest is for children throughout the Capital District ages 8 to 15. Each poem must contain the word "believe" and engage readers to give something back to their community. The winner will receive six passes to the 2012 light show display, a $150 Hannaford gift card for their family and a $150 Hannaford gift card for educational supplies for their school.

"The poem will then be read at next year's lighting event and we'd like to get it published," said Tarleton.

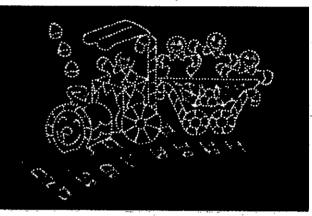

The deadline to submit entries is Jan. 31, 2012. For every poem received, Hannaford will donate $1 to the Albany Police Athletic League, which provides juvenile crime prevention programs to local youths. All proceeds from the lights display also benefit the children of the Albany PAL programs.

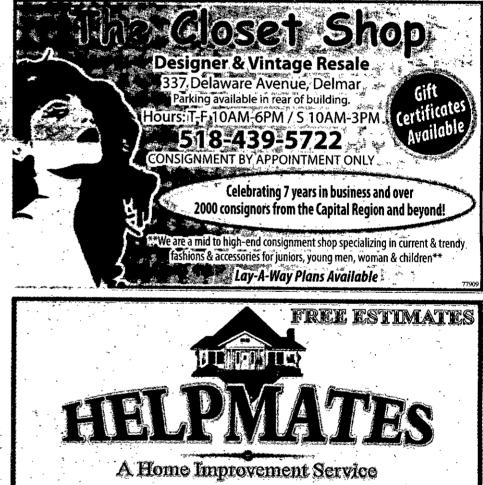

"For 15 years, the bright lights in the park have helped raise funds for the outstanding programming provided by Albany PAL for local children," said Hannaford Supermarkets Vice President of Retail Operations Rudy DiPietro, in a written statement. "Hannaford strongly supports PAL's programs which foster positive social and academic development of today's youth and help build stronger neighborhoods." <sup>c</sup> A l b a n y P A L spokeswoman Sherry Rose said 25 percent of the displays are new each year. Because of the "believe" theme, a "Once Upon a Time" fairy tale section has been added this year, as well as a "Polar Express" area.

Downtown Saratoga Springs is known for its charm-quaint shops, unique eateries, picturesque sidewalks. And when the holidays roll around, the Broadway strip is transformed into an elaborately. decorated festive corridor.

"Downtown is really famous for that because that's why people come here," said Susan Farnsworth of the slots of attention," said Barker. Downtown Business Association and the Victorian Streetwalk.

This year, the Victorian Streetwalk is celebrating its 25th anniversary with a silver theme, so many businesses made sure to design their window displays with that in mind.

"It adds so much to the festivities to have beautiful windows," said Farnsworth.

Lifestyles at 436 Broadway offers "great fashion, great fun, great service" and an elegant evening wear window display this season.

"It's all about holiday elegance.... Our mannequins will be in sparkling gray bubble bottom dresses with beautiful collars. I would say it's all about the bling, all about the silver long before snow is on anyone's bangles, bobble and sparkle, said Stacy Goodman, manager.

Woven throughout the dresses,iewelry and sparkly accessories will be "austere" deer and trees in frosty whites and silvers.

At Impressions of Saratoga, the window displays revolve year-round and are the store's best form of advertising.

avid Girard figures that if he had to stay one age for the rest of his life, he'd choose somewhere between 6 and 10 years old.

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN

dominj@spotlightnews.com,

After all, what kind of cares do you have then? You hang out with your friends, you run around, you play cowboys and Indians.

"That's definitely where it's at," Girard said.

That, he thinks, might help explain the timeless appeal of "Peter Pan," the story of a boy who refuses to grow up. It's been more than 100 years since Peter Pan first showed up in a novel, and his tale's been told on countless stages around the world since then. Last year, Russell Sage College put on "Peter Pan" in the school's Little Theater. It was such a hit that organizers of the school's Theater Institute decided to put on a bigger production as their inaugural show, with Girard in one of the leading roles.

"Peter Pan: The Musical" stays pretty faithful to the traditional version, with the most notable twist being that Sage's version takes place entirely in a nursery. It's up to the audience to decide if the story is all a figment of someone's imagination or if it's real, director Michael Musial said.

Musial had no doubt the story was fiction when he was first introduced to it, and he was enchanted by it. People either love or hate Peter Pan, he said; put him squarely in the "love" camp.

"There's something about not growing up," he said. "That and the flying."

The flying in this case is done by Sara Curtis, a Sage junior who plays the title role. Seeing a female cast as Peter Pan might prompt a double take, but Curtis said it's actually common for the role to be filled by a woman. Given Peter's eternal youth, the voice parts are typically written for a female, she said.

Like Musial, Curtis grew up as a huge fan of "Peter Pan," watching the Mary Martin version countless times. She first got involved in theater in high school as a way to "break out of my shell" and found she loved performing for people. That led her to Sage, where she is majoring in musical theater. When she heard "Peter Pan" was going to be performed, she hoped to land a part as Wendy or anyone else in the cast, although "Peter was my ultimate goal," she said.

With that goal accomplished, Curtis said she's been having the time of her life putting the show together.

"It's just so fun," she said. "I get to fly and that's amazing."

Girard is similarly excited about his part – or parts, as it were. Girard is both Captain Hook and George Darling, whose children befriend Peter Pan. Playing the dual roles is fun in and of itself, but Girard particularly delights in playing the villainous Captain Hook.

"What isn't neat about it?" he asked with a laugh. "I get to terrorize little kids."

Girard, a Sage graduate, appeared often with the New York State Theater Institute, a state-financed professional theater group. NYSTI folded last year amid allegations of financial mismanagement, and Sage's Theater Institute was created to continue NYSTI's educational mission. To that end, there are study guides, in-school presentations and teacher workshops related

While the mission is serious, Girard, Musial and Curtis all said anyone who comes out to the show can expect a good time.

"It's really magical," Girard said. "It's very fantastical." "It's beautiful to look at," Musial added. "It's just a nice production."

The curtain rises at 2 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 3, at the Schacht Fine Arts Center on the Russell Sage campus. Additional shows are Dec. 4 and 11, again at 2 p.m., and Friday and Saturday, Dec. 9 and 10, at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10 for adults and $8 for seniors and Sage students. Call

All aboard for holiday cheer

The Canadian Pacific Holiday Train came whistling down the tracks on Sunday, Nov. 27, and stopped at the ALCO Heritage Museum to a large crowd eagerly awaiting festivities. This is the 13th year the Holiday Train has hit the rails with lights shining, but it's the first stop at ALCO's museum in Schenectady. Also, there is a modified boxcar that literally sets the stage for music performers. The train headed north to Saratoga Springs when it departed Schenectady.

Right: Jake gave a donation to the Salvation ARMY before heading home. Canned goods were collected to help support local food banks. Canadian Pacific also donated $1,000 to the Schenectady Salvation Army.

Eighteen Capital District educators returned on Monday, Nov. 14, from a 10-day trip to China where they talked to students and toured schools.

Representatives from Tech Valley High School (TVHS), Capital Region BOCES, Questar III Boces, Schalmont, Schoarie, Catskill and Cobleskill-Richmondville schools made up the delegation that flew to the Far East in search of "partnerships that will broaden the horizons of area'students," according to information from TVHS.

Schalmont School Board President Sandra Beloncik said though the trip's purpose was to share information and gain insight into China's educational practices. She felt U.S. educators shared valuable insight with their Chinese counterparts, too.

"I think we have great practices. We're really going into the 21st century ahead of them and I think our trip was more to help them in learning about some of the things that we do," said Beloncik.

Among those American educational values shared was hands-on and collaborative learning and teaching.

We showed them hands-on rather than just teachers standing at the head of the class," said Beloncik. "Integrate subjects. ... So if you're going to have a science project have math and history in it."

There was much about the Chinese education system that was surprising, enlightening and very different from things back home, said Beloncik.

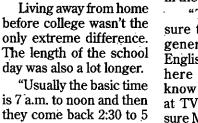

For example, at the TVHS sister school Tianjin High School No.41, a large chunk of they come back 2:30 to 5 or 6 p.m. Then they have dinner and work another two hours on homework," said Beloncik. "Something like that really impresses you."

Class sizes were much . larger than American students would be used to, said Beloncik, who

"To me that's just not manageable," said Beloncik.

The Chinese approach to foreign language was also quite different than the way most American schools teach languages, with students taking English classes starting in elementary school.

"We visited six schools. .. All of the students have to learn English, it's mandatory," said Beloncik. "We went into a 3-year-old class who were learning English."

Beloncik said that emphasis on foreign language is shared back in the states.

"They're making sure their children, this generation, is learning English," she said. "Over here in this country, I know at Schalmont and at TVHS, we're making sure Mandarin Chinese is being taught because we know that's an important language.'

Erin Lasky, a social studies teacher at Colonie Central High School, was also part of the education contingent. On the South Colonie School District website, Lasky offered her Central High School and TVHS played the role of host to a delegation of 32 students and four educators from Tianjin High School No. 41 in China.

The trip wasn't all work and no play. Beloncik said the chances to sightsee were eye opening.

"We went into the city of Beijing, with 27 million people, and driving around it was 10 times worse than traffic in New York City. All the bicycles and buses were packed," said Beloncik. "We did see the Great Wall of China and other sites. It was a phenomenal learning lesson, too."

The 18-member delegation was planning to reunite on Monday, Nov. 28, to "debrief," said Beloncik.

BC Shakespeare play approaches

An annual Bethlehem tradition is in the final stages, of preparation as the high school's Shakespearean company prepares to stage the 23rd annual Shakespeare production, running this year from Dec. 9 - 11 and Dec. 16 – 18.

The students chose Romeo and Juliet this summer," said James C. Yeara, drama and English teacher at Bethlehem Central High School, and director of the play. "In addition to the wellknown ill fated romance, this play features much action in the form of both stage combat as well as some dance. There is also classic lighthearted mirth to relieve the sadness of the tragedy. You will walk away with much to consider as is usual with a Shakespearean play."

"This is my fourth .

year working on the Shakespeare play," said Aliza Abolafia, a senior and the student director of this year's show. "It's given me a lot of insight into Shakespeare's works, and being the student director is a fun challenge.'

40 students make up this year's cast and tech crew. Casting took place in September, and rehearsals began shortly thereafter.

Romeo and Juliet is a romantic tragedy written early in the career of playwright William Shakespeare. It is about the famous "star cross'd lovers" of two enemy families who when they meet, forbidden love ensues. It was among Shakespeare's most popular stories of young love.

"It's a bitter sweet and poignant play, one that the community can embrace and enjoy," Yeara said. "I think everyone will be blown away by the energy and the passion that the students bring to the performance. Romeo and Juliet is not to be missed. It'll be a great night out for everyone." Romeo and Juliet will be performed Friday through Sunday, Dec. 9-11, and Dec. 16-18 in the auditorium at Bethlehem Central High School, 700 Delaware Ave, Delmar. Friday shows are at 7 p.m.; Saturday shows are at 1 and 7 p.m. and Sunday shows are at 2 p.m. Admission costs $10 for adults, $6 for students, senior citizens and military personnel. Mitchell earned his FAA Private Pilot License for glider planes earlier this month at Saratoga County Airport. He trained for three years before taking the exam.

This wasn't the first time Mitchell had stepped into the cockpit, though. "I started flying when I was in medical school back in Scotland and I have always been quite enthusiastic about flying," said Mitchell. "It was a childhood dream that I would be a pilot."

Mitchell grew up in Britain the years before - the United States since and during World War II. He was 12 years old during the Battle of Britain, the air campaign waged by the German Air Force against the United Kingdom during the summer and autumn of 1940. The battle also marked the first major campaign fought exclusively by air forces.

"That was a very important part of my life experience as a child," Mitchell said of the Battle of Britain. "The adventure, excitement ... probably a lot of kids my age then wanted to be fighter pilots and save the country."

World War II concluded before he was old enough to join the air force, but he did serve as a cadet in the British Royal Air Force for five years and flew de Havilland Tiger Moth biplanes with the Aberdeen University Air Squadrón.

Mitchell has lived in 1955 and currently lives in the City of Schenectady. He also graduated from medical school before moving to the states. He now works at Saratoga Hospital in the psychiatrić clinic part time. He said he finds his work similar to flying, because both have elements of the unknown.

Gliders don't have an engine, so they use updrafts called thermálsto keep the plane flying through the air. Airliner pilots don't welcome turbulence, he said, but some turbulence is a good thing for glider pilots. An ideal soaring day would be a couple of days after a cold front passed when there are "lots of floppy" cumulus clouds.

Keeping the ground in sight is also a good idea too, he said.

"There is a particular emphasis on staying within reach of fields of possible landing places Saratoga Soaring Association members congratulate Dr. Robert Mitchell on earning his FAA Private Pilot (Glider) License on Friday, Nov. 4, at the Saratoga County Airport. From left. since there is no engine and the plane has to come down some time,' he said. "Decisions that you make are extremely important so it is really an exercise in judgment and planning ahead and at all times being fully aware of vour situation."

Mitchell's FAA exam was a three-part test involving a written exam, oral exam and flying demonstration, which had an in-flight emergency imposed by the examiner unknown to Mitchell.

substance. Goldman was remanded to the Albany County Correctional Facility on $20,000 bail.

Police charged Phillip Harewood, 22, of Monroe, with unlawful possession of marijuana. Harewood was a passenger in the car.

• Bethlehem police have charged a Staten Island man with DWI and criminal possession of stolen property following a Nov. 21 traffic stop.

Police said Ricardo Efrain Rodriguez, 31, of Staten Island, was traveling southbound on Route 9W at a high rate of speed.

Police said Rodriguez went through a red light at the intersection of Route 9W and Corning

Hill Road and also crossed the road's double yellow line.

Rodriguez was stopped without incident. Police discovered that the Port Authority Police Department in Jersey City, N.J., was also looking for Rodriguez.

He allegedly admitted that he rented the car in September and planned on returning it, but never did due to financial problems. Rodriguez told officers he worked at CSX and was living out of his car.

Rodriguez also allegedly admitted that he had four or five beers before police stopped him.

Flying (From Page 27)

Saratoga Soaring Association member Jim Morzillo, jammed the air brake on, making it unusable for regulating speed during the final landing approach.

Describing his draw to flight was a little hard for Mitchell, but he said fellow fliers know the feeling.

"I just have a passion for flying, I would say it is a passion more than just a hobby," he said. "Other people who have the flying bug know what I am talking about. It is a kind of a passion that some people have. Everybody dreams flying dreams but to actually be able to do it and be up there is a wonderful experience."

Last Saturday, he also flew his 24-year-old grandson Shane Mitchell, which he said was his third passenger.

"There may be other experiences like flying, but for me it is the best experience," he said.

Reaching a Milestone

"What we're trying to do is more cooperation so that we can ultimately get to a situation where the service that you get across the town is entirely consistent," said Lutz. "The average is OK, but we really need to strive to be better than just the middlê of the pack."

Details of the study indicate that if consolidation is a possibility, the five districts could be combined into two, with the creation of a town-wide district a possibility within 10 years of that consolidation. The report also states that a "considerable amount of the benefits of consolidation can be achieved through greater cooperation leading to a functional integration of operations."

Lutz stressed that it is important for departments to keep their identity while also working together in a more collaborative fashion.

"I don't think there's a need to necessarily consolidate the districts into one district, at least in the short term," said Lutz.

The hope is that the results will give departments a framework to use as they plan for the next 10 years and try to reduce costs.

Over that time, the town is expected to see tremendous growth with a number of development projects moving forward, such as the Vista Technology Park and the mixed-use Wemple Corners project, to name a few. While fire coverage issues are taken into consideration during development talks, the report online at www.townofbethlehem. does indicate that existing. district boundaries "bear little relation to modern development patterns, and in some cases inhibit management and delivery

2 of fire services."

Right now, departments consistently provide mutual aid in many areas of the town, such as at the Price Chopper Plaza on Route 85 in Slingerlands. As they continue to collaborate, Lutz said it is important for everyone to be on the same page.

"For example, if a firefighter from Selkirk ends up having to help out on a crew from Elsmere, that firefighter should know where Elsmere's tools are on each one of its pieces of equipment," said Lutz.

The report also takes nonresidents into consideration. Lutz said it is important to remember that thousands of people are moving through the town every hour, including on the Thruway.

"Our ability to be responsive to their needs is something that. we have to continue to grow and prepare for," said Lutz.

Finding enough firefighters is a problem plaguing many departments across the nation, as many volunteers are struggling to find the time between work and family to serve with local departments. One issue raised in the report is that many of the volunteer firefighters in Bethlehem are town employees. A recommendation in the report is for a better utilization of those employees, as well as all volunteers, with consideration given to their full-time jobs.

Manitou, Inc., a Peekskillbased firm, conducted the study at a cost of more than $54,000, which was split between the fire districts.

The full report can be found org and at www.elsmerefire. com. A public presentation of the findings will be given Nov. 30 at 6 p.m. at the Bethlehem Central High School auditorium.

we're able to work out a deal." Both sides credit tough economic times as the main reason for the stalled talks. District officials attribute the declaration to a mix of increasing costs and declining revenues.

"Like every other district, we have a genuine revenue problem," said Guilderland Superintendent Marie Wiles. "We have flat or declining state aid, and with the new property tax levy limit legislation, we have a new ceiling on how much revenue we can generate from our community through taxes."

According to the district's -website, about three-quarters. of the district's yearly budget is used for salaries and benefits. Dubose declined to talk about the individual sticking points

We recognize the economic times and as an association, we're willing to look at some short-term sacrifices but not long term hardships," said Dubose.

There's been no indication of how long it may take both sides to reach a new contract with the help of a mediator. In his 10 years in the district, Dubose said he cannot remember a time when both sides haven't been able to sit down at the table and work out a contract. However, he is confident that it won't take another 20 meetings to do so.

"I mean, it's unusual, but given the economic times that we're in right now, this is where we are," said Dubose.

The Bethlehem Pop Warner Pee Wee division team won the Capital District Super Bowl Nov. 19 at Albany's Bleecker Stadium. It was Bethlehem's first Pee Wee division championship in 15 years. Submitted photo might be a good omen. I'm especially intrigued by what freshmen Evan Hymes and Brandon Walters bring to the table for the Saints.

Speaking of intriguing basketball players, Gerardo Suero could be the second great find for University at Albany coach Will Brown - the first being Jamar Wilson. Suero scored 23 points in 23 minutes on a bum ankle in the Great Danes' 81-62 victory over Farleigh Dickinson Sunday. Suero could be the difference between a good season and a great season on Washington Avenue Extension.

Did the Union College hockey team really beat Michigan 6-3 in Ann Arbor Sunday? Wow. I knew the Dutchmen would be good again this year, but beating a traditional Midwestern power in its barn is very impressive.

My early call on the Capital District High School Hockey League Division I hierarchy goes as follows: 1. Saratoga; 2a. Shenendehowa; 2b. Bethlehem; 4. LaSalle; 5. Shaker/Colonie; 6. Christian Brothers Academy. The order is subject to change, especially numbers four through six. The top three should remain the same.

I'll also give you my early call on the Suburban Council boys and girls basketball contenders in the North Division: Shenendehowa and Shaker. That's it on both sides.

On the South side of the league, Bethlehem, Colonie and Guilderland will likely battle each other in boys basketball. In girls basketball, drop Guilderland from that list and keep Bethlehem and Colonie. The Guilderland girls team may improve over last year, but Bethlehem and Colonie are the clear frontrunners.

What brought teams from the University of North Carolina, Purdue and Arizona State to the Capital District? Last weekend's Journeymen/ ASICS Northeast Collegiate Duals wrestling tournáment at Hudson Valley Community College. And that represented only one fifth of the list of bigtime teams that competed. Frank Popolizio continues to do more to raise the Capital District's sports image than any other individual I know.

I don't know how long it will take to sort out the American Hockey League's Northeast Division, but I think the Albany Devils will be the one to sink towards the bottom of the standings. The Devils have scored 51 goals in 20 games - the fourth lowest total in the Eastern Conference, and the third lowest total for any conference team that has played 20 or more games. As good as the goaltending has been at times, you still need to score more than 2.5 goals a game to win consistently at the pro level.

Finally, a word to all of those Buffalo Bills fans who thought their team was a shoo-in for the NFL playoffs after a 3-0 start: your team is just not that good. As for all of the New York Jets fans out there, your team is not that good either.

That takes care of all of the thoughts I had bottled up for two weeks. For more observations on the sports world, be sure to visit my-spotlightnews.com blog page, Sports Scraps 2.0.

made several saves in the third period and received help from his defense. which prevented the Jets from getting to the front of the net.

"I think they did a great job of shutting down the middle of the ice," said Shaker/Colonie coach Steve Hudak. "We couldn't get any dirty goals [in front]." े 👎

Bethlehem's offense also came through with a pair of insurance goals. Cameron Shepardson wristed one shot home with 9:38 left in the third period, and John Gosstola added an empty net goal with 9.1 seconds left.

"Hockey is a game of momentum, and you've got to stay focused and in control. And I think we were in control for the most part," said Rodrigue.

Cooley finished with 28 saves, while Shaker/ Colonie netminders Zach Dignum and Kodi Riddell combined to stop 25 shots.

Both coaches said the weekend tournament gives them an idea of what their teams will have to work on before the start of the Capital District High School Hockey League season. For Bethlehem, it's working on technique, while Shaker/ Colonie seeks to get more production from its offense.

"We need to work on taking care of the puck in the defensive zone,' said Rodrigue. "We need to work on stick-to-stick period," said Rodrigue. passing. Everything needs to be hard. We need to play hard, work hard and pass the puck hard."

"I think we're going to have to score five to six goals a game in order to win," said Hudak. "I think we have the capability to do it. We just have to play to our capability."

Bethlehem had something to prove to Mam'aroneck when the two squads met in Friday's opening round of the Shaker/ Colonie Thanksgiving Tournament. The Eagles lost to Mamaroneck 12-1 at the same tournament one year ago, and they hadn't forgotten about it since.

"It meant a lot to these guys," said Rodrigue. "We had 12 reasons to beat them this year because they beat us 12-1 last year."

Bethlehem grabbed a 2-0 lead at the start of the second period with two goals in 10 seconds. First, Sam Vincent tallied on the power play off a feed from Nicholas Parente 55 seconds into the frame. Then off Cameron Shepardson's face-off win, Chris Caswell passed the puck ahead to Andrew Carroll, who flicked a shot past Mamaroneck goaltener Bret Poniros to give Bethlehem a two-goal cushion.

We knew it was important to come out focused in the second Rodrigue.

We had such a good first period, and we didn't want to get out-worked."

The Eagles' power play struck again at 6:16 of the second period. This time, Vincent passed the puck on to John Gosstola, and Gosstola finished it with a goal to make the score 3-0.

We wanted to keep the pressure on them, said Rodrigue. "We had great special teams play all night."

Mamaroneck started applying some offensive pressure late in the second period and turned its play up a notch in the third period, but Bethlehem freshman goaltender Zach Sanchez was up to the task. Sanchez made several key saves, and carried the shutout past the midpoint of the third period before the Tigers got late goals from Chris-Leblanc and Nick Spano to make it close.

"They started playing more physical, and they tried to ring our bell a little bit," said Rodrigue. "But our guys stayed focused and played our game, and that's the most important thing."

Sanchez finished with 26 saves in his varsity debut for Bethlehem.

"I wanted to put him in a big game situation early in the season, and he played phenomenally," said extra work his players put said Guilderland coach Ron

Osinski. "But otherwise we struggled with our offense, which put a strain on our defense."

Bethlehem lost a lot of its low post presence with the graduation of forwards Scott Clas and Ryan Stempsey, but Irons said his guards are ready to carry the load this season. We're a different type of team," said Irons. "We're guard heavy, but we're more skilled in terms of the different things they can do. They can drive to the basket, and they can shoot from the perimeter." Irons also said the should help them as they enter the throes of the Suburban Council season.

"Since the end of last season, they've been in the weight room three times a week, and they played on the same AAU team in the summer," said Irons. "I think they're motivated by the success of last season."

in during the off-season the experience his players gained last season to help Guilderland become a contender in the South Division.

Bethlehem beats host team to win Shaker tourney

By ROB JONAS ionasr@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem hockey team used another goalscoring flurry to win the Shaker/Colonie Thanksgiving Tournament title.

The Eagles (2-0-0) scored three times in a span of 3:34 in the second period on their way to beating Shaker/ Colonie 5-2 in Saturday's championship game at the Albany County Hockey Facility.

Bethlehem's three-goal spurt was similar in nature to the one that helped it knock off Section I power Mamaroneck 3-2 in Friday's opening round game. The Eagles struck three times in a 6:16 time span to grab a 3-0 lead before the Tigers rallied in the third period took Shaker/Colonie (0-1-1) to score first before Bethlehem's offense got going. Mike Mineau tallied on a power play 3:22 into the second period to put the home team ahead 1-0 before goals by Austin Scro and Andrew Carroll 44 seconds apart gave Bethlehem a 2-1 advantage.

This time, though, it Eagles Page 35

'We didn't play well in the first period," said Bethlehem coach Andre Rodrigue. "We took a long time to get our legs under us ... and I think it took Shaker/Colonie scoring first to really get us going.

Kevin Egan tied the game at 2 for Shaker/ Colonie later in the second period with a shot through traffic that beat Bethlehem goaltender Kevin Cooley inside the left post, but Joey Verstandig stuffed home a pass from Sam Vincent a short time later to put the Eagles ahead 3-2.

Once Bethlehem regained the lead, it never let Shaker/Colonie get back in the game. Cooley

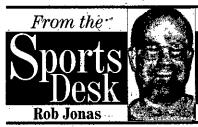

Colonie Thanksgiving Tournament at the Albany County Hockey Facility. Rob Jonas/Spotlight

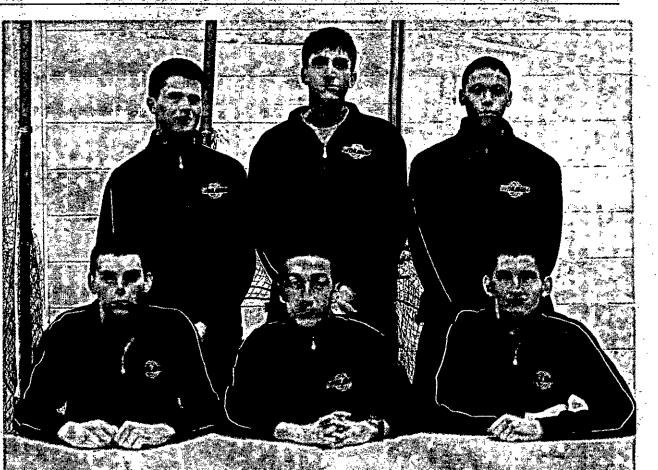

To paraphrase Chuck D of Public Enemy, I've got so much sports on my mind. Therefore, I offer up the following thoughts in rapid fire fashion:

I feel bad for the Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake football team following its 27-20 loss to Maine-Endwell in the Class A state final last weekend, but I don't feel sorry for the Spartans. They exceeded expectations in reaching their third state final in four years.

The best area high school team this fall was the Schalmont girls soccer team. A 23-0-0 record, its first state title (for the team and the school), back-to-back 4-0 victories in the state tournament against arguably two of the top four teams in the state (Bronxville and Greece Odyssev) and it outscored all of its opponents 123-7. That's a special group.

BH-BL's girls volleyball team was only slightly less dominant in its sport than the Schalmont girls soccer team. The Spartans tied a school record with 29 victories and won their fourth state title – their first since 2005.

Meanwhile, something special is brewing in Niskayuna with the high school girls swim team. The Silver Warriors finished second to Clarence in the individual team standings and helped Section II take the overall team title at the state meet Nov. 19 in Buffalo. And with two-time 100-yard freestyle champion Kina Zhou coming back next year for her senior season, Niskayuna will be in great shape for 2012.

Last year, the Shaker boys cross country team won the state and Federation titles, but it lost to Fayetteville-Manlius at the Nike Team Regionals. This year, the Blue Bison lost to F-M at the state meet before beating the Syracuse school at the Nike Team Regionals. Might that bode well for Shaker when it goes to Portland, Ore., this weekend for the national meet?

When the weight of high expectations is lifted, sometimes good things can happen. The Siena men's basketball team wasn't expected to do well this year, but a respectable 2-3 start with only eight healthy players available for coach Mitch Buonaguro to use

BC, Guilderland set their sights on division title

By ROB JONAS jonasr@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem boys basketball team is aiming for another Suburban Council South Division title.

Guilderland is one of five teams aiming to knock Bethlehem from the top of the division standings. Who wins out will depend on how well they can survive a tough league schedule.

"I don't think there is a slouch in the group this year," said Bethlehem coach A.G. Irons. "Everyone has their strengths, and hopefully our strengths are a little stronger than theirs." 1 3.

Both Bethlehem and Guilderland return several key players from their 2010-11 rosters. The Eagles have guards Nate Kane and Shane Natale, while the Dutchmen welcome back forward Taylor Dubose and guards Cameron Dobbs and Mike Doynow.

"Our main goal is to take it one step at a time, but overall I think we're a big contender for winning the Suburban Council," said Dobbs. Dobbs is arguably the most exciting returning player in the South Division. As a junior, Dobbs averaged nearly 20 points per game in leading Guilderland's offense last year.

"Cameron really was the scorer last year, and Mike [Doynow] when he came in off the bench really helped out with his hustle," □ South Page 35
