Middle schoolers prepare 'Guys and Dolls' for four-night run

By MARCY VELTE veltem@spotlightnews.com

Dancing, dice games and a group of do-good missionaries looking to "Save-A-Soul" will entertain an audience of hundreds at this year's Bethlehem Middle School production of "Guys and Dolls Jr."

Since October, more than 120 student cast members and crew have worked to put the show together with the help of dozens of parent volunteers. Additional students have donated their time to work as ushers and help sell tickets.

"It takes a lot of people to put our productions together and we are thankful for the people who are so generous with their time," said Director Lynda Conway.

Conway has been directing the middle school productions for seven years with the help of Assistant Director Katie Daly. They said they have high expectations of the students who are a part of the musical each year, and generally those are exceeded.

BC says $1.5M worth of work needed, bond vote discussed

By MARCY VELTE veltem@spotlightnews.com

Members of the Bethlehem Central School District Board of Education asked Athletic Director John DeMeo to present the board with an overview of needed equipment and facility upgrades for the Athletic Department at its Jan. 4 meeting, and the wish list is well into the seven figures.

DeMeo was asked to give the presentation after three members of athletics booster clubs asked the board at its Dec. 21 meeting to place a separate referendum on the upcoming school budget ballot to bond the cost of athletics facility upgrades. The group had already met with school principals, community members and athletic directors from neighboring school districts about the plan.

"There's a need," said Charles Glass, a member of the group sharing the bonding idea with the board. "We know we're all in budget constraints. Every municipality, every school board and every resident is feeling the fiscal constraints, so we understand that bringing this up in these times, people might think we're crazy."

The proposed plan calls for a 10-year bond of about $1.5 million.

New leader aims to build town GOP

Di Maggio says solidifying base, outreach keys to party's resurgence

> By MARCY VELTE veltem@spotlightnews.com

Residents of Bethlehem may soon find the local Republican Party unrecognizable from its election seasons of the past.

At least, that's the goal of new

Bethlehem Republican Committee Chairman Fred Di Maggio, who after taking the top spot in December is looking to revitalize the party to prepare for elections in the years ahead and expand the committee's base.

"Mistakes were made in the last election season and I want to rectify that," said Di Maggio. "This community will respond to reasonable, rational positions. We are not hard right." Republicans have generally not fared well in their bids for town office the last few election cycles, and in the recent Bethlehem race the party endorsed Councilman Kyle Kotary, a Democrat, for the position of town supervisor.

According to the new chairman, that was a major mistake that disenfranchised the town's Republicans.

Smolinsky reappointed as deputy supervisor

Clarkson takes $5k pay cut for 2012

By MARCY VELTE veltem@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem Supervisor John Clarkson has appointed John Smolinsky to serve as his deputy supervisor, just as Sam Messina did before him.

"I have come to know John very well over the past two years on the 20/20 (Advisory Committee,)" said Clarkson, explaining he believes the choice will provide continuity with the previous administration.

The appointment was acknowledged by the Town Board during the town's annual organizational meeting Wednesday, Jan. 11. The supervisor appoints the deputy supervisor without the need for a board vote, and the deputy supervisor is to step in when the supervisor cannot fulfill his or her duties, but never is granted a vote on the I know." board.

Clarkson said he believes one of the reasons Smolinsky continues to be an asset to the town is because of his background in land use.

"I want to get to work very quickly on ethics. I believe we have several issues we need to address and I'm not content to have Bethlehem lagging in this issue."

- Supervisor John Clarkson

"That's going to be very important," he said. "And I'm really good at budget and management and those issues, so he very nicely compliments my skill set."

Messina felt Clarkson made the right decision.

"I don't think it's possible that a better choice could be made for deputy supervisor under any administration," he said. "(Smolinsky) knows town government and donates more of his time to this town than anyone

Smolinsky is a member of the town's Planning Board, a fact that some board members were critical of when he was appointed by Messina in 2010. Smolinsky could not be reached for comment.

At the organizational meeting, Clarkson also announced he would be taking a cut in pay "in recognition of the fiscal challenges facing the town" and in solidarity with town employees, many whom will not be receiving a raise this year. The supervisor took a $5,000 pay cut from his $106,890 salary.

"This is something that came up during the debate and that's why I took this action," he said. "I felt it was in nature of a promise."

In accordance with the 2013 budget, the board voted to consolidate the positions of Planning Board attorney and Zoning Board of Appeals attorney into one position. Michael Moore will now take over both roles, at a savings of $16,822 to the town.

According to Clarkson, Guilderland, East Greenbush and Niskayuna have all combined their Planning and Zoning Board of Appeals attorneys, and all spend less than Bethlehem does. In addition, the board voted to reinstate the town's Board of Ethics, appointing three residents who will serve without compensation. The new supervisor has previously stated one of his major goals is to update the town's ethics policy.

"I want to get to work very quickly on ethics," said Clarkson in a previous interview. "I believe we have several issues we need to address and I'm not content to have Bethlehem lagging in this issue."

The supervisor said the state comptroller has put out a model policy that the town may look into following. "I just feel Bethlehem should have the best ethics policy in the state," he said.

Lenhardt named newest Bethlehem Town Board member

Unanimous vote comes after weeks of debate

By MARCY VELTE veltem@spotlightnews.com

At its first meeting of the year, members of the Bethlehem Town Board unanimously voted to appoint former board member George Lenhardt to a vacant seat.

Lenhardt was selected from a group of nine potential candidates who had expressed interest in the position. The board was in need of a new member after Mark Jordan won his bid for Town Justice and left the Town Board at the beginning of the year. The 4-0 vote was made during the board's organizational meeting Wednesday, Jan. 11.

"They were all excellent choices," said Supervisor John Clarkson in an interview the following day. "But there was a consensus among the group concerning (Lenhardt). He has a background with the board and his roots in the community are very deep. It came down to who folks thought would be the best fit."

Lenhardt served on the board from 1994 to 2005 and is a lifelong resident of the town. He was commissioner of the Slingerlands Fire District for 18 years and treasurer for the fire district for more than a year, with one year of planning board experience. He currently chairs the town's Board of Ambulance Commissioners.

"I was shocked," said

"I never expected this to happen and l'm very proud of the board that they could put politics aside for the community's well being."

– George Lenhardt

Lenhardt about receiving the board's call on Wednesday afternoon. "I'm honored and very humbled by this. I'm very happy to see that politics didn't prevail. I never expected this to happen and I'm very proud of the board that they could put politics aside for the community's well being."

The list of potential appointees included Kevin Crawford, John Hudacs, Donna Giliberto, George Lenhardt, Ted Putney, Michael Burgess, Loretta Simon, and Christina Kidera, and Jeremy Martelle, who ran for election to the board last fall.

Former supervisor Jack Cunningham had put his name on the list as well, but he ended his bid before a forum on the appointment held by the League of Women Voters, explaining, "It has become apparent that placing my name into consideration to fill the Town Board vacancy has become an impediment" to solving the town's problems.

Lenhardt will serve for one year, and a special election will be held in November.

The newly appointed board member is currently a registered Independent, but was a member of the Republican Party while previously serving on the board.

Clarkson said he thinks it's good to have diversity on the board. "I think the approach should be non-partisan and if the appointment helps enforce that point, I'm glad."

Lenhardt has stated he will not be seeking reelection in the fall, so the public will have the opportunity to select who they wish to fill the position for the remaining year of the four-year term.

"That was part of the agreement to serve and my word is my bond," he said.

The issue of seeking reelection was a matter of contention among some.

Bethlehem Republican Chairman Fred Di Maggio said making it known that someone who intended to run for reelection would not be chosen for the position "set up artificial barriers to prohibit someone from running."

Both Cunningham and Martelle intend on running for the vacant seat in the special election.

The board thanked all of the candidates for their willingness to participate in the process and held the potential appointees in high regard for their qualified backgrounds.

Clarkson said

some candidates have volunteered their services to the town in the future. With backgrounds in government policy, the supervisor has asked both Crawford and Hudacs to help craft the town's new ethics law and they have agreed. Clarkson would also like to create various citizen's groups in the future, which he envisions several of the candidates will be asked to help form.

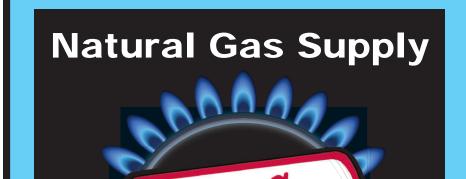

In addition, Lenhardt has volunteered to help with the negotiation of several police and public safety contracts that will need to be agreed on this year, since he has served as the board's representative at previous contract negotiations.

Clarkson said the more help, the better.

"I can only speak for myself, but that may have been an important issue for others on the board when making this decision," he said.

Police said in March of 2010, the father of a 13-year-old female resident of Colonie reported to police that he discovered Facebook messages from Snyder to his daughter that were of an introductory nature and not criminal, yet were suspicious and appeared to be leading to a more serious or criminal incident. Snyder knew the 13-year-old female through his girlfriend's daughter, who was a classmate, according to police reports.

Colonie Police Juvenile Investigator Christopher R. Smith assumed the identity of the 13-year-old female and over the course of the next year and a half, the Facebook conversations with Snyder turned to a sexual nature and Snyder attempted to set up a faceto-face meeting, according to police reports. Snyder said he was a photographer and allegedly tried to get the victim to pose for him, but no meeting took place and there is no indication Snyder met with any other minors, according to police.

Police said Snyder also used the identity "Johnny Cage" on Facebook.

Police are asking anyone who believes Snyder had contact with their child to contact their local police department.

Snyder was arraigned in Colonie Town Justice Court and released under supervision of Albany County Probation until his next scheduled appearance date of Jan. 11.

Stray dog heals from traumatic injury

By ALYSSA JUNG junga@spotlightnews.com

As executive director of the Mohawk Hudson Humane Society, Brad Shear has seen his share of grim sights, but the white pit bull that was brought in missing half a leg just before Christmas was particularly heartbreaking.

"It was pretty disturbing. Obviously he had gone through horrible experiences," said Shear.

A "good Samaritan" brought the stray male dog to the humane society after finding him in the Osborne Road and Sand Creek area. Shear said Everest (the name staff gave the canine to symbolize everything he'd overcome) was missing the bottom half of his front left leg. It looked like a small club and could not be used. "It ended at what would be the elbow. There was a big stump there," said Shear. "You can imagine it must have been extremely painful whatever it was he experienced."

The trouble is, Shear and the veterinarians at the humane society don't know exactly what happened to Everest.

"His leg could have been caught in a trap, he could have been hit by a car, had a run-in with another animal or this could be a cruelty case," said Shear.

The veterinarian had to amputate the injured leg to ward off infection since it was an open wound that was just beginning to heal. Shear said once the vet started operating on the shoulder, he found bone shattered, so they suspect Everest was hit by a car.

"It just went untreated. Our guess is, unfortunately, somebody probably knew this happened and allowed him to stay in this condition without treatment," said Shear.

Everest, a stray pit bull, was brought in to the Mohawk Hudson Humane Society in late December missing half of his front left leg.

On the road to recovery

Despite his traumatic experience, Everest isn't overly aggressive or a problem patient.

"He seems friendly. He can get a little standoffish with people but he's obviously been affected by this," said Shear.

The next step in Everest's recovery is physical and psychological rehabilitation.

'We're not sure how long that's going to take at this point. He's getting checked regularly by a vet," said Shear. "Different animals recover at different paces. ... He definitely needs some rehabilitation physically and behaviorally.'

Shear estimates it will be several weeks until Everest is medically cleared to move from the humane society to a foster home. A family has already been chosen to care for Everest.

Everest's case seems tragic, but Shear said it's not out of the ordinary.

"Unfortunately, we get things like this with some regularly. Every couple weeks we see something pretty serious," said Shear. "It's pretty common for us to see animals that are injured or sick when they come in.'

The Mohawk Hudson Humane Society, founded in 1887, is the Capital District's largest animal protection agency and is located at 3 Oakland Ave. in Menands. The society is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m. For more information about the society or for adoption information, visit www. mohawkhumane.org or call 434-8128.

Beef stew is the perfect winter warm-up

By CAROLINE BARRETT news@spotlightnews.com

"Just write about the beef stew, Mom," Elliot Nothing inspired me. said when I asked him. We sat at the kitchen table together, he with a box of Legos and me with my journal. I was trying to write out this column.

Inspiration for this column, and all of my writing, comes from my family. From what we ate, what we did, who we did it with, it's all catalogued in my brain for future use. There is lots of material and the subject usually comes easily.

Last year, there was plenty to write about. My childhood friend. Elliot eating a salad (a momentous event). Reading to children and because the girl has a lot one of them becoming a vegetarian. I wrote about running in a half marathon and remembering Sept. 11.

I start this year with a blank slate. As the weeks and then days passed until my column was due, the slate remained blank. My usual bank of ideas, one that is often full with the adventures of Elliot digging for treasure in the And moved on. backyard, quiet dinners eaten with my husband and the bickering of my ideas. He's my partner in daughters, is empty. all things and often sees

I asked Lucy if she had any ideas. "I think you should write an entire column about Agnes." she told me. Agnes is our 2-year-old black Lab, and Lucy's true love. Lucy was lying on the floor with Agnes, their heads touching. Together, they looked up and gazed at me. Sure, she's sweet, but a whole column? I didn't think so.

Zoe, she wanted to use the opportunity to have her voice heard. The thing is, when you ask Zoe a question, be prepared to listen. Make tea. Pour a glass of wine. Sit down to say. And in her sure and confident way, she told me what to write. I listened. And listened. Listened some more. When she was finished, I had heard about the playground, girls in her class, her science test, egg sandwiches, the 5th grade musical and a variety of other subjects. I thanked her for her help.

Of course, I asked Paul if he had any great things I miss. He thought about it and then simply said, "The weather." And that was all he said.

Yup, there is the weather. The cold air. The warm air. The rain and consistently, day after day, lack of snow. We like snow. We want snow. Snow is good for skiing and sledding and building snow sculptures in the yard. All the kind of stuff that inspires good stories and food.

I know there are many who bemoan the arrival of a thick blanket of snow. I know, it isn't always joyful. Driving is hard. There's the shoveling thing, too. But if we all live here in this cold place, we might as well have something to play in, right? And no school is going to close just because it's very cold and gray outside. We need snow for that. Snow days make kids happy. Even though they can be a pain for working parents (a huge pain at times) even we must remember the joy of hearing the name of our school read on the radio. Those words meant an entire, free day of loafing, playing in the snow, watching TV and eating junk food. It's a very important part of winter. And if you cannot appreciate snow for its recreational properties, at least take a look out the window after a snowfall. The fresh, white snow on winter branches truly is beautiful.

Friends offered ideas. One talked making homemade pasta with her family. They made a dough from flour, water and salt. Then, they formed orechiette, what the Italians call "little ears." These little pastas were cooked in boiling water and dressed with a simple sauce. Their dinner was made together, with all little hands rolling, cutting and shaping dough. Her kitchen was a terrific mess. Flour covered the counters and bits of dough fell to the ground. It was a Sunday afternoon adventure, one that brought them together and in the end, produced dinner. It doesn't get any better than that.

When I finally sat down to get serious about putting words on paper, the only thing that stuck with me were Elliot's words. The beef stew. That stew we had made a few nights before he suggested writing about it. Obviously, it stuck with him. What more inspiration do I need, really, than a little boy who Bring to a boil, turn down the heat and simmer for 2 hours. Add the carrots and fennel in the last 1/2 hour of cooking.

Meanwhile, heat a swirl of olive oil in a large sauce pan over medium low heat. Add the garlic and cook until soft, careful not to brown. Add the thyme and mushrooms, cook for 2-3 minutes, and turn off the heat. Stir in the spinach, season with pepper (I added plenty of pepper) and set aside. # Matters of Opinion in The Spotlight

Do something, say something

We take the task of being a community resource pretty seriously at The Spotlight.

That's easy to say and would probably fit quite nicely on promotion spot, but to us, making good on that statement is a big deal.

Every week, we turn our eye to the news happening in the communities we cover, and the issues that affect residents there. We don't run wire reports from across the globe or pictures of celebrity baby bumps. Local news is what we do, every day and every week.

That includes running a page of announcements in every edition (you'll find this week's on page 21) and wherever else we're able. The point is, we do everything we possibly can to ensure our readers are not only up to date on the most important news in their localities, but the stories, events and various goings on that might not seem like a big deal to most, but are of great importance to some.

We don't charge for these announcements, but rather take the time and effort to compile them — as well as the cost to print them — as a service we think is of importance to our readers and their communities

We can't be successful in this mission alone, however. That's why we are always grateful when we receive news and announcements from the communities we serve, whether it's a date for a workshop or a pancake breakfast, or an acknowledgement of a young college graduate.

If it's important to you, then it's probably news to us.

We have a symbiotic relationship with our readers, and not just when it comes to the bottom line. We do everything possible to keep abreast of what's going on around town, but our readers help us excel in that goal by pointing out what we might have overlooked, be it a major scandal or a do-gooder who's just too modest to be acknowledged on his or her own.

That's why we'd like to remind everyone your news tips, as well as announcements of events, accomplishments or any other matter of public interest, are welcome at news@spotlightnews. com

The only unfortunate part about this arrangement is we can never run all of the announcements we receive; there's simply not enough room in our papers to contain every single piece of news that's happening around town.

That's where we'd advise our readers to turn to our online event calendar, at spotlightnews.com/events, where you'll be able to advertise your event alongside other local happenings and announcements, for free.

The writer is a resident of Delmar.

I just received my Colorado Mountain Club Pin for having climbed all 54 peaks in that state which are officially listed as 14,000 footers.

What's interesting is that my Colorado number isn't much higher than the one I received for having climbed the 46 high peaks in the Adirondacks back in the mid-'70s. The 46ers now number in the many thousands and there are only a modest number who've done the 14ers; just over 1,400.

As is true in the Adirondacks, some of the Colorado peaks are easily accessible and have nice views and others are much more challenging. As a flat lander, there weren't any Colorado peaks that I considered really easy. Even though I do acclimatize fairly well and quickly to moderate altitudes, I would find myself sucking wind at about 12,500 feet each time. If I staved in the mountains and camped high, I would be much more comfortable by the end of my trip, especially when I could spend a couple of weeks out there.

Regardless of the difficulties and logistics to get there and work around my companions' schedules, it was well worth the effort. Although I don't tend to sew my hiking patches on my pack, I think I will wear the Colorado 14ers pin and do so proudly. I began this journey in the mid-'90s and finally finished in 2010. What follows is the story of my adventure with those peaks.

Tired and happy, on Aug. 26, 2010, at 11:45 a.m., I stood — well, sat — on top of Little Bear, my last official 14er. I was accompanied by my friend Bill Michels, who is from Colorado Springs. All my other friends who've hiked or climbed the 54 high peaks of Colorado opted not to go to Little Bear, either because they thought I was nuts to bother or they'd done the route once and that was enough, thank you very much!

This journey began when my dear friend, Craig Geiselhart, moved to Colorado Springs and sent me a photo of Garden of the Gods. One trip out to visit and I was in love with the area. A few other friends lived in various parts of the state and I began coming out on a regular basis to hike, climb and ski.

Craig passed away in October of 2010 and I was very happy to have been able to call him from the summit of Little Bear to tell him of my success. He was there in spirit all the way with me and still is. He had introduced me to the mountains of upstate New York in the '70s and hiked with me there for several years, 'till he discovered fly fishing, surf casting and sailing and, as I remained the woman of the mountains, he became the man of the sea.

He never lost his enthusiasm for my crazy escapades, however, and as he sailed the world and

I scaled bigger and bigger mountains, we continued to encourage each other's dreams. It was a bitter sweet call, therefore, that I made to him from the top of Little Bear.

Other wonderful friends helped me scale the 54 peaks of Colorado, some of whom I met on those mountains and others I met on my travels to the Pamir, the Caucasus and Alaska. It was on one of my solo attempts in not-so-good weather to get up Mount Columbia, in Colorado's Collegiate Range, that I met Bill Michels. He was going fishing at Bear Lake and we chatted all the way up to my cut off for Columbia. We began to correspond and then hike a few of the easier peaks.

Bill, who is a native of Colorado, had been hunting and fishing his whole life, but hadn't really considered doing hiking as an activity in its own right. Hanging out with me and my climbing friends, however, changed all that. We've paid it forward by introducing him to the joys of mountaineering to the point that he's doing it on his own now, which is so nice to see.

SantaBarbara promoted at RCS

Current 6th grade Principal and district Data and Testing Coordinator Elizabeth SantaBarbara was appointed to the position of director of curriculum and instruction by the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District Board of Education on Wednesday, Jan. 4.

SantaBarbara will fill the vacancy created by the appointment of former Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction Elisabeth Smith as RCS superintendent of schools on Tuesday, Dec. 6

Middle school seventh and eighth grade Principal Pamela Black will take over responsibility for sixth grade students from SantaBarbara. The change will reduce administrative staff by one position and save the district more than $125,400 in this year's budget.

"My primary goal will be to assist with leading the district in moving forward with goals that meet the New York state and Common Core Learning Standards, such as literacy across the curriculum, maintaining a culture of datadriven instruction and ensuring that learning is relevant to students,' said SantaBarbara in a statement. "I will continue to work with administration and staff to build relationships based on trust that put the needs of the district's children first."

SantaBarbara holds a master's degree in education administration from the University at Albany and a bachelor's degree in elementary education a n d mathematics from the College of Saint Rose, where she teaches data and supervision as an adjunct professor. She has been with the RCS Central School District for 33 years and devoted 28 years to student instruction before being promoted to curriculum content specialist of mathematics for grades five through eight in 2004. In 2007, she was appointed middle school principal and data and testing coordinator.

In addition, Santa Barbara served as a middle level New York State mathematics representative for the Association of Mathematics Teachers of New York State from 2008 to 2010. She also is currently on the board of directors for Seniors Teaching and Reaching Students, a notfor-profit that provides intergenerational programming for residents in the towns of Coeymans and Bethlehem.

"Ms. SantaBarbara and I have already begun developing instructional goals for the next three years," said Superintendent Smith. "Her insight, expertise, and decadeslong commitment to the education of RCS students make her a true asset to the district and its learners as we shape the future landscape of RCS instruction."

Your Opinion in The Spotlight

Report unfair to accused

Editor, The Spotlight: I was completely disgusted with your online reporting of the arrest of Bethlehem School Psychologist Maria Mangini, which is with the obvious slant in the reporting and the attempt to make a more sensational story.

I was subjected to on

By quoting Albany County Sheriff Craig Apple's statement, "That's not to say it wasn't there prior," you were clearly trying to make a more salacious story than there was.

Whatever happened to "innocent until proven guilty?'

GUILDERLAND PUBLIC LIBRARY www.guilpl.org

Digital photo group to meet

The next meeting of the Digital Photo Forum will take place at the Guilderland Public Library on Thursday, Jan. 19, at 7 p.m.

Some of you have been coming right from the beginning and know that Art Small was the founder of the group. About two years ago, Art came to the library and asked if we could host a group to share information about digital photography. We had hosted a few instructional programs on the use of digital cameras and thought it would be a good idea to have a place for people to come as they continued to learn. The forum has evolved into a group of some regular participants and others who come and go as their questions arise.

Art informs us that he is moving to a warmer climate. We wish him well - on this sloppy, slippery January day!

Fortunately, long time participant Herb Brown will stay on and convene the group. At the last meeting we discussed some possible future program ideas. Please take a few moments to respond to the short survey at the link below and let us know what you think. There are quite a few of you who have attended an event of one kind or another relating to photography and we'd like to know what you think at this time. Two of the four questions are open-ended, so you can add your own thoughts. http://www. surveymonkey.com/s/ CKPHYSX

We look forward to seeing you or hearing from you!

Every minute of every day, someone needs blood. That blood can only come from a volunteer donor, a person like you who makes the choice to donate. The Red Cross is holding a Blood Drive at the Guilderland Public Library on Friday, Jan. 20, from 1 to 6 p.m. To make an appointment, please call Erin Wascavage at 462-7461, ext. 823.

When you make a blood donation, you join a very select group. Only three out of every 100 people in America donate blood. Please join that generous group and donate at the library on Friday.

students who want to one day be a part of any aspect of a stage production," said Daly. Even crew members, set builders and costume designers go through rigorous training to make sure everything is perfect for opening night.

"This is truly a community event," she continued. "A lot of the elementary students get brought to the show, and they really look forward to participating once they get to the middle school."

Conway said she chose "Guys and Dolls" for this year's production because there is are large number of strong, male voices in the cast. But it seems there weren't quite enough since some females will be taking on the roles of a few of the male characters.

"That just proves the strength of our show," said 8th-grader Elena Kreienberg, who plays nightclub singer Miss Adelaide. "There are a number of girls cast as guys and they can pull it off greatly."

The story takes place in bustling New York City, where the pious Sarah Brown is attempting to recruit sinners to her mission but is having trouble in a city filled with tumultuous nightlife. In the meantime, addicted gamblers like Nathan Detroit and his gang are in need of a place to hold their illegal dice games, and Brown's mission seems like just the right cover for their dealings.

Conway said while the production is a bit shorter than the usual play, the story is basically the same and still contains fan favorite songs like "Luck Be a Lady Tonight" and "Sit Down You're Rocking the Boat."

Eighth-grader Hannah Thien plays lead Sarah Brown. She said she likes portraying such a dynamic character.

"You think you know her, but by the middle of the shows she's a totally different person," she said.

Kreienberg said she can relate to her character because she's quirky and silly at times. "They cast us based on our personalities," she said. "You can see it afterwards. Sometimes I think they know us better than we know ourselves."

The girls said they found the show interesting when reading the script because it's set in the 1950s, long before they were born. They felt the story gave them a different historical point of view, but on the other hand the majority of jokes aren't modern, so sometimes the cast needed them to be explained.

Robert Willard, who plays lead Sky Masterson, said he liked the older references.

"It's nice to do a classic," he said, explaining that most people will already know the story but will be surprised by the middle school's version of the tale.

Pre-sale tickets are available to the public on Wednesday, Jan.18 from 5:45 p.m. to 7:15 p.m. and are also available at 5:30 p.m. on show nights in the middle school lobby. Tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for seniors and students. There are shows on Jan. 31 and Feb. 2, 3 and 4. All shows are at 7 p.m.

Approximately 2,200 tickets are sold for the four-night run each year, so those wishing to attend are recommended to get their tickets as soon as possible. The shows have been known to sell out.

"The shows flow with the arrangement of the songs makes it very fun for the audience and the students have been working very hard," said Daly. "So we encourage everyone to come."

Di Maggio ran unopposed in a special election for the chairmanship on Dec. 14. He succeeds Ralph Ambrosio, who chose not to run for reelection because of work obligations.

Di Maggio said he feels national Republican races are off-putting to the public and are giving party members on the local level a bad name. He thinks most topics being discussed by Republicans in the presidential debates are "not issues that should be involved at a town level."

He is now looking to rebuild the GOP in Bethlehem so Independents or residents without a party affiliation feel more comfortable voting for Republican candidates for local offices.

As for the new administration, Di Maggio would like to see openness to new ideas brought forth from any individual or group. He would also like to see a budget that curtails spending to "reflect the reality of the town's insufficient income," so as to not raise property taxes.

"I believe our police force is the largest per capita of any town in the county," he said. "We all want to be safe, but there has to be a balance."

Di Maggio said contractual obligations are also an issue, explaining department heads should be asked to cut spending through consolidation or leaving vacant positions unfilled.

But his immediate aim is to identify the town's core Republican interested in redeveloping the party, since volunteer numbers have been down in recent years.

"With the economy it's become harder to recruit people. Campaigning owns you. It's really a four-month commitment," he said, explaining how phoning voters, walking petitions, attending meetings and participating in literature drops can wear on a person.

"Unless you've done it before, you have no idea. It's tough and takes a lot of energy," said Di Maggio, who made an unsuccessful run at the Bethlehem Town Board in 2009. Di Maggio feels the GOP can play a vital role in helping to solve the town's problems. "In the end this is about public serve," he said. "The Republican Party is here for one reason and that is to elect Republicans, not to debate society." The first Bethlehem Republican Committee meeting of the year will be held on Saturday, Jan. 21 from 9:30 to 11 a.m. at the American Legion Post. The meeting is open to the public and new members are welcome.

Basketball fans urged to get in the 'Pink Zone'

Siena game to benefit breast cancer group CRAAB!

By ALYSSA JUNG junga@spotlightnews.com

Siena College is "going pink" on Friday, Jan. 20, for the women's basketball team's 12th Pink Zone game to support breast cancer awareness.

"We'd love to have people come out and support this event," said Joan Sheehan, president of CRAAB!, the organization that benefits from the game.

Players will wear custom made pink and white uniforms, pink t-shirts will be distributed to some fans at the door, pink and white pom poms will be given out and all fans are encouraged to wear pink in support.

Coach Gina Castelli started the Pink Zone game 12 years ago when a former science professor at the college, Pat Brown, told her about the organization she was involved in founding: Capital Region Action Against Breast Cancer.

"We had a great turnout at that time. We had at least 1,500 to 2,000 people that came to the game," said Castelli.

That experimental event focused mostly on educating attendees about breast cancer and how CRAAB! could help. Since then, it's taken on a life of its own.

"We've kept it going and it just got bigger and bigger," said Castelli, who formed a steering committee a few years ago to get the community more involved.

The steering committee found various local businesses interested in sponsoring or helping with the game and also helped raise community awareness for the game, which raised more money.

Last year, the team raised $20,650 for CRAAB! and this year the goal is $25,000.

Siena players and fans wear pink to support the Pink Zone, which Coach Gina Castelli started 12 years ago when a former science professor at the college, Pat Brown, told her about the organization she was involved in founding: Capital Region Action Against Breast Cancer.

"Now we're just trying to raise more money. Every year we try to up it and raise the level," said Castelli.

Perhaps a reason for the game's increased success and popularity each year is the light it shines on breast cancer survivors.

"Prior to the game we recognize breast cancer survivors, so all our players and coaching staff bring out a survivor and announce their name, how long they've been a survivor, and that in itself is inspirational and motivational," said Castelli, who said survivors range from five months to  $\overline{25}$ years cancer free. "There are many more survivors in the stands. We have a great following, great fan support."

Sheehan said the yearly game is invaluable and is a critical source of funding for CRAAB!.

"It's very important to us. This is a major event that we have," said Sheehan. "With declining funds ... this definitely supplements the money that we would have possibly received."

It also plays a big part in humanizing breast cancer within the community.

"It allows us to be in the spotlight because women today are living with the fact that they had breast cancer, living with the side effects, but they are moving ahead in their life and by highlighting the survivors it puts a face on breast cancer to the fans that attend," said Sheehan.

CRAAB! is a grassroots breast cancer organization and provides a bevy of services to affected women, many free of charge.

"We have so many exercise classes that we do—yoga in three locations, Pilates, healthy steps which we do in partnership with Hope Club. We have medical massage in your home, nutrition and exercise," said Sheehan. "That all falls under support. We do educational programs and advocacy work. That fulfills a need in the community."

Brown, who was one of the first female professors at Siena, had an unmatched passion for CRAAB! and that's what Castelli said drives her to continue the Pink Zone game each year.

"It was because of Pat Brown," said Castelli. "I really enjoyed talking to her about it and the passion she had behind it."

Castelli said she makes sure her players understand not only the importance of the game itself but the importance of understanding what it supports: breast cancer.

"That first year I had my team go to a class on breast cancer, preventative things we needed to know," said Castelli. "Before the game I try to impress upon our players that the actual breast cancer night is much bigger than the game. When we're bringing out the survivors to feel good about what they're doing but also be proud of ... what this woman has gone through."

New this year will be Power Up The Pink awards, given to someone in the business, school and medical communities who has given back in some way. President of New York Oncology Hematology Dr. Nini Wu, Rumors Salon and Day Spa founders Marri Aviza and Lisa Norgrove and Siena College student Nicole Cochetti will be honored.

The game is held in the Alumni Recreation Center. For more information about the Pink Zone game or to purchase tickets, visit www.sienasaints.com/ pinkzone or contact Laura Menges at Imenges@ siena.edu or 782-6769. For more information about CRAAB!, visit www.craab. org.

Company cites lease negotiations as catalyst for closures

Diners looking to get their ice cream fix at Friendly's in the Capital District might have to travel farther to get their employees at Jim Dandy.

Five area Friendly's restaurants closed once the last scoop was served on Sunday, Jan. 8. The following locations were shuttered: Saratoga Road in Glenville, Route 7 in Latham, Route 9 in Latham, Central Avenue in Albany and the Colonie Center restaurant. There were 32 other locations closed throughout the Northeast, with Massachusetts having the largest amount of closings with 10.

"We regret that this decision has become necessary, and we appreciate the hard work and dedication of the Friendly's these locations and intend to accommodate as many as possible at nearby operating restaurants, where available."

Lynn Bolton, public relations coordinator for Friendly Ice Cream Corporation, said the "difficult decision" was made to close the 37 locations following failed negotiations for lower leases.

"Since entering Chapter 11 in October 2011, the company has sought to work with our landlords to restructure lease arrangements at locations where we believed rents did not reflect current market conditions and were significantly impacting the viability of underperforming restaurants," Bolton said in a statement. "While we were able to successfully restructure lease agreements for a number of locations, unfortunately, we were unable to reach an acceptable agreement on others."

company to hire employees at surrounding locations, according to Bolton.

"We regret that this decision has become necessary, and we appreciate the hard work and dedication of the Friendly's employees at these locations and intend to accommodate as many as possible at nearby operating restaurants, where available," Bolton said.

When the company filed for bankruptcy in 2011 it closed 63 restaurants in the northeast. Area stores included in the October closures included the Wolf Road and Western Avenue locations in Albany, Altamont Avenue in Rotterdam and Congress Street in Saratoga Springs.

There are still several Capital District restaurants open, including Route 146 in Clifton Park, Route 50 in Saratoga Springs, Route 4 in East Greenbush and Hoosick Street in Troy.

In December 2010, Friendly's announced the greater Capital District would serve as a test market for significant upgrades and improvements to its brand through the "Empire State Project." Friendly's initiative called for an investment of nearly $2 million into its 17 locations throughout the area. Also, new menus were introduced at area restaurants featuring several "health conscious" selections, according to the company.

Friendly's, formerly known just simply as "Friendly," first opened up shop in 1935 in Springfield, Mass. at the peak of the Great Depression. The original shop was opened by the Blake brothers, 20-year-old Prestley and 18-year-old Curtis, offering double-dip cones for 5 cents. The first food item offered on the ice cream menu was a hamburger.

In 1979, The Blake's sold Friendly to Hershey Foods Corporation. Eleven years later, Donald N. Smith Bolton said there were purchased Friendly, with around 20 employees the "s" being added to the working at each recently name in 1989. # Gregory's Barbershop in Delmar to hold benefit for Coaches vs. Cancer

For the fourth year in a row, Gregory's Barbershop in Delmar will host its annual haircut-a-thon fundraiser for the Coaches vs. Cancer organization.

The Coaches vs. Cancer organization is a nationwide collaboration between the American Cancer Society and the National Association of Basketball Coaches that "empowers basketball coaches, their teams and local communities to make a difference in the fight against cancer," according to the organization's website.

Since 2009, Master Barber Gregory Zorian III has held the event in partnership with the Siena College Basketball Program and the head varsity basketball coach and Dean of Students at Albany Academies Brian Fruscio. For one day each year, Zorian and his staff donate their time to cut the public's hair with the proceeds donated to the cancer organization.

"It is our goal this year to keep all eight chairs busy for the five hours," said Zorian. "We have three TVs that will be on, so don't worry about missing any NFL pregame shows or championship games."

For a $20 donation, barbers provide a haircut and shave. In years past up to $1,000 has been raised on the day of the event. This year the goal is $2,000 based on the amount of time the shop will be open.

The event will be held on Jan. 22 at Gregory's Barbershop in Delmar from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The Gregory's Barbershop Coaches vs. Cancer event is beingheld the Sunday before the Coaches vs. Cancer basketball tournament at Siena College.

A dueling destiny

Rexford resident tops international tournament in the over 70 division

By JOHN PURCELL purcellj@spotlightnews.com

Locking swords in a heated duel might not be what many envision for their golden years, but for one 76-year-old fencing is more than an outlet to stay physically fit.

Marvin Fine, a Rexford resident and psychologist, snagged the gold medal in the over 70-year-old division at the World Saber Championship in Porec, Croatia, on Sept. 28 of last year. There were a total of 23 fencers from nine countries vying for the category's top spot, but Fine's persistence and determination had him wielding his saber to victory.

He started fencing late in life, at 59 years old, following in the footsteps of his stepson, Michael Fiske, and his wife, Katherine Wardle, who is also a psychologist.

"I was attracted to it because they were doing it," Fine said. "I had always played high school sports and was a runner ... at the point they took up fencing I thought, 'This is neat' and 'Tll give it a try."

When Fine started fencing he was a professor at the University of Kansas, and had the fortune of being coached by Vladimir Nazlymov, a three-time Olympic gold medalist from Germany.

"He is the real McCoy," Fine said of Nazlymov. "I trained with him for three years and he gave me a good foundation."

Saber Club in Troy and has been coached for the last several years by RPI Fencing Club Coach Rod Meagher. Fine practices tow to three times per week and outside of practice he tries to work out for around 30 minutes daily at a local gym.

"To be my age and be physically active and be in a competitive sport is terrific," Fine said. "There is nothing magical about staying in shape ... you work out a routine that is going to be a good routine for you."

Despite having three stents in his arteries in addition to knee and back surgery, Fine said he'll keep fencing until his doctor tells him its time to lay down the saber.

Outside of the health benefits, he said there is a great sense of camaraderie within adult divisions of fencing. Teenagers, he said, are "out to kill" with hopes and dreams of making it into the Olympics, while for the older fencers it's more social.

"The camaraderie aspect of it is really important," he said. "I have made some very, very close friends."

Actually, the man he went on to defeat for the gold medal in September was his friend. The two men were even sharing a room while participating at the competition.

Fine came from being down by 6-9 in the gold medal match to beat Wolf Nettingsmeyer, of Germany, with a close finish at 10-9. At previous world championship competitions, Fine had won three silver medals and a bronze medal. He also is a dual United States and Canadian citizen. He currently is the top ranked over-70 saber fencer in the United States, Canada and in the Commonwealth Fencing Association.

mental game as physical, Fine said, with it commonly being referred to as "physical chess."

"The challenge in fencing was facing myself and learning to fence strategically," he said. "It is a skill sport, so you have to learn patience with yourself, you have to strategize ... those are challenges."

He encourages anyone interested in fencing to give it a try, especially older adults, because in his words, "any older athlete knows that the often-said expression, 'use it or lose it' is very appropriate."

When Mark Cole. whom I'd met in Alaska, came down from Boulder and my friend Ann Parry, whom I'd met in the Pamir, came in from Idaho, I brought Bill with us to go up Longs Peak. Our trip would take us through the famous keyhole route, over the peak and down to Meeker Peak via a rocky traverse and then down to level land via some rock slides.

It was challenging, exposed and wonderful. At the key hole, Bill was a bit tentative but was a good sport and came along. After that hike, he was hooked. Bill's been my hiking buddy for a long time now and I thoroughly appreciate his support in accompanying me on so many of my climbs of the 54 "14ers."

hike up Pikes Peak in 1994, which I did with my lean-to companion, Randy Moore, from Denver, I left the country and went to the Karakoram to climb for about two and a half months. The following summer, I was still making up time at work and didn't take much vacation time all through the next year, except to go to Colorado and ski with Randy.

Then, in January of 1996, I was diagnosed with breast cancer and lost a summer to treatment and recovery. In 1997, I went to Colorado to visit Craig with my friend, Kefira, who was an avid rock and ice climber. We climbed some great rock routes and began to hike many of the "14ers" within easy access of Craig's home. These hikes were our aerobic "rest days" from technical climbing. Originally, I had no

Following my first intention of doing all the peaks, but that's always how this stuff starts. Plus, I had a base camp at Craig's home.

> In 1998, I had a recurrence and lost another summer to surgery and recovery. After that, I spent as many summer vacations as I could hiking and climbing in Colorado. The only years I didn't go out were when I was out of the country to go up Kilimanjaro in Africa, and then to trek and climb in South America, in 2004 and 2006, respectively.

> So, from start to finish, this was a long project, yet totally worth all the effort.

Since the beginning of my "14ers" adventure, I've done some of the more challenging and interesting routes on peaks I'd already been on, hiked in the Mummy Range and explored some of the Indian Peaks Wilderness.

Delmar resident Nola Royce, a breast cancer survivor has scaled all 54 of Colorado's peaks taller than 14,000 feet above sea level.

Each chance I had to visit Aspen, I'd hike to the summit of the ski area and enjoy lunch at the top. That was always a treat. One more treat I arranged for myself on the day before I went home to Delmar, in September this past summer, was to hike up Pikes Peak again. This time I approached the summit from the west side and rode the train down.

That way, I had a chance to relax and soak in the beauty of the mountains which had fist caught my interest so many years ago and reflect, with gratitude, on how fortunate I've been.

Area's newest teletheater is a good bet

Vegas-type atmosphere

By ALYSSA JUNG junga@spotlightnews.com

Capital OTB's new Albany Teletheater on Central Avenue opened on New Year's Day, and it's already a hit.

"We had great crowds the first two days. Sunday, we had over 500 and Monday more than 300. The response has been well received," said John Signor, president and CEO of Capital OTB.

Neil Benjamin, a Niskayuna resident and Capital OTB strives for horse racing enthusiast, was one of the teletheater's first customers. Already, he's been there three times.

"It's fantastic. It's such an improvement in so many different ways from the old place," said Benjamin. "I tell everyone this is really like a Las Vegas sports book, it really is.

A Las Vegas atmosphere is exactly what Signor had in mind for the 23,000-squarefoot facility, which is equipped with more than 240 flat screen TVs, the largest projector screens in the Capital District and a full bar and restaurant.

"It really provides customers with a Vegastype atmosphere and in our view, it's better than a lot of Las Vegas facilities," said Signor. "I visited a number of casinos and OTB facilities ... and tried to take the best I saw from each one of them and the result is this facility.'

Benjamin knows a thing or two about what makes an OTB facility great for hardcore racing fans. He's been a "regular" at Capital District OTB since at least 1979 when he was a charter member of the now defunct Golden Horseshoe Club, and he occasionally travels out of town to get his fix.

The new teletheater is a huge step up from what Benjamin is used to, since

"They've gone to great lengths to change not only the building but the whole experience and environment."

> - Neil Benjamin, horse racing enthusiast the previous facility was a bit dark and outdated.

"It's bright, which is good for people like me who need to read the data and the racing form. They've got all these separate individual little cubicles for the real serious player with your own television. ... They've got a ton of brand new selfbetting machines," said Benjamin. "They've gone to great lengths to change not only the building but the whole experience and environment.'

One of Benjamin's pet peeves was access to information, but at the new teletheater his expectations are met.

"Now you have access to buy any kind of past performance that you need. There are many more options than you had before, which is important to horse players," said Benjamin.

Benjamin's avid interest in and approach to horse racing isn't an anomaly at Capital OTB but it's the length of his affair with the pastime that causes pause.

"My father first took me to Saratoga when I was 8 years old and I haven't missed a year at Saratoga since," said Benjamin.

The horse races are the main attraction for Benjamin but he's also taken time to experience the new food options at the Albany Teletheater, something Signor said Capital OTB took great care revamping.

The same group that runs the area's Recovery Room grills has taken charge of the teletheater's food service. There's a 50foot mahogany bar, a casual area with high top and low top tables and an additional sports grill on site that seats 100 people and has wall-towall sports memorabilia.

Signor said the new teletheater "provides Capital Region sports fans and racing fans with a facility like no other."

"It's beautiful where a family can go out and eat and sit next to an avid horseplayer and they can coexist," said Signor.

Benjamin agrees.

"They hit a home run on this thing, in my opinion," said Benjamin. "Even if you don't like to gamble, go check it out because it's a great place to watch a game or go for lunch or even if you want to play Quickdraw or buy scratchoffs.'

Photography exhibit details Union student's trip through world of marine shipping

Morton always had a thing for ships.

His grandfather was a merchant marine at the end of World War II and regaled Morton with stories. They sailed together when Morton was a kid.

Enrolling at Union College as a history major, Morton knew shipping wouldn't be his career. But in some corner of his mind, he always held out hope he'd be able to immerse himself in the industry somehow.

He got his chance when he was named one of Union's Thomas J.

From there, he went "I ate a lot of stingray in film, instead opting for Singapore," he said.

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

DeMeo's presentation called for similar upgrades.

"These are concerns of mine, too, and I wanted to make the board aware," he said.

According to DeMeo, several football and field hockey games were canceled in the fall because of drainage issues and the bleachers are so old parts can no longer be found. When repairs need to be made to the bleachers, the parts need to be custom made especially for the school.

"I know the bleachers, they're a liability. That's just an accident waiting to happen," said Class.

Another member of the group, Scott Bonnano, said the field was "detrimental to the athletes performing on it."

The group of booster members said estimates for a new turf field are currently less than $1 million. According to DeMeo, new bleachers would cost around $300,000, refurbishment of the track would be nearly $90,000, and a new lighting system for the gym is estimated to cost around $75,000. Additionally, the athletic director said the tennis courts are in need of repair and the high school gym is in need of a new sound system.

"We really need to resurface the track," DeMeo said. "It's recommended to resurface it every seven years and the track is 10 years old, so it's three years overdue. It should last 20 years, but we have to maintain it."

He went on to say a better track could actually return funds to the district.

DeMeo said if two additional lanes were added to the track it could attract use for sectionals competitions and other districts may be interested in renting the field if it were converted into turf. If turf wasn't added, he would like to see a new drainage system installed.

School board President

Diane Giacone Stever said the board is intrigued by the idea of the bond since funding for some of the updates had been in budgets in years past, but was removed because of fiscal concerns. Parents of student athletes and booster members had thought to raise the funds themselves, but were unable to because of the amount needed.

"We really couldn't ask them to try and raise that much money," Stever said. "The parents already contribute quite a bit already."

According to Stever, a public petition to get the bond on the ballot would need 400 signatures 30 days prior to the vote. She stressed to the group of booster members to get the petition in sooner, so the public would have a longer period of time to discuss the idea.

If the bond were voted down, the board would then have to prioritize which items should be replaced first, since it does not have the money to replace everything suggested.

"To me anything that's hazardous is my priority. Anything that's hazardous to a student, that is something we just can't wait on," Stever said. "I like the idea that there are community members out there trying to help."

The plan would call for $25 per $250,000 of assessed property value go toward the bond. The bond vote would be placed on the ballot separately from the budget.

Bonnano said it was heartbreaking to have to hold senior night at Shenendehowa, as well as expensive to bus everyone there for the event. He also said it was embarrassing to go to schools more economically challenged than Bethlehem Central but that have nicer facilities.

The group suggested the district would save money by doing the upgrades now because of the lower interest rates and the amount of contractors looking for work.

DeMeo said he understands if not all of his recommendations are tackled this year, but he advised the sooner, the better.

"With the economy the way it is, we have to be conscious about how we spend our money," he said.

general sense of the overall location, type, quantity, and condition of hazardous materials present including asbestos, lead and PCB It is thorough in that most accessible functional spaces are inspected and bulk samples taken of suspect materials observed. The baseline survey provides information for long-term management of asbestoscontaining materials and prioritization of response actions. The presence of hazards in suspect materials may be assumed or presumed in some cases without bulk samples being taken or analyzed. However, the baseline survey is unobtrusive in that samples are not taken where doing so would result in objectionable damage to surfaces or where institutional barriers preclude access. In a baseline survey, destructive testing is avoided. Posting of signs and labels required for compliance with OSHA regulations would use the information generated during a Baseline Survey.

Blackbirds finally tamed the Dragons.

"It was just a great back-and-forth game," said Catellier.

Castren led a balanced Voorheesville attack with 18 points. Crawford contributed 10 points, while Zach Precious, Russ Daley and Logan Hotaling each added nine points.

"We don't have one superstar on this team," said Catellier. "We have 10 guys who work hard and play hard."

Zach Bouton netted 22 points for Cornwall including four threepointers in the second half, and Joe O'Rourke added 14 points.

Voorheesville's offense struggled in last Thursday's home loss to an improved Cobleskill (3-4, 4-5) squad. The Blackbirds scored less than 15 points in all four quarters, while the Bulldogs took control in the second half by scoring 35 of their 59 points. Dillon Greene had 20 points for Cobleskill, while Daley and Hotaling each scored 13 points for Voorheesville.

The Blackbirds turned their fortunes around in Saturday's opening round of their tournament by beating neighboring Berne-Knox-Westerlo 6357. Voorheesville used a with 17 points. 25-point second quarter to grab a 33-26 halftime lead. BKW (5-6) got close in the third quarter with a 15-9 run, but Voorheesville pulled away with a 21-point fourth quarter.

Voorheesville's balanced scoring returned in the BKW game. Daley led the way with 15 points, while Louis DiVirgillio chipped in with 12 points. Crawford contributed 11 points, and Clarke Bissell added 10 points for the Blackbirds.

Garrett Pitcher's 18 points paced BKW.

Voorheesville returned to Colonial Council action Tuesday when it traveled to Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk (2-4, 4-5). The Blackbirds then take a 10-day break until Jan. 27, when they host Cohoes.

"We've just got to keep playing," said Catellier. "As I've told the guys all season, the season is a marathon, not a sprint."

RCS looked to end a two-game Colonial Council losing streak when it hosted Voorheesville Tuesday. The Indians fell to Fonda 55-51 on Jan. 6 and then lost to Lansingburgh 58-37 Ian. 13.

Ryan Rivers and Christian Hodson each scored 13 points for the Indians, who started the season by winning four of its first to Niskayuna Friday, while seven games. Ohmeire Guilderland goes to Sara-Jones led Lansingburgh toga Springs.

In Suburban Council boys basketball action last Friday, Bethlehem and Guilderland each posted victories over South Division opponents. Bethlehem defeated Columbia 73-63, while Guilderland handled Colonie 65-44.

Bethlehem (7-1, 7-3) overcame a slow start to defeat Columbia (6-3, 7-4). Trailing 18-11 after the first quarter, the Eagles started rolling in the second quarter and took the lead with a 19-point third quarter. Bethlehem finished strong by outscoring Columbia 22-17 in the final eight minutes.

Casey McGraw had 25 points, and Nate Kane added 17 points for the Eagles.

In Colonie, Guilderland (7-2, 9-2) pulled away from the Garnet Raiders (5-4, 6-5) with a 24-14 third quarter run.

Cameron Dobbs netted 25 points, and Alex Gaines contributed 13 points for the Dutchmen, who remained a half-game behind Bethlehem in the South Division standings. Jake Samuels had 14 points for Colonie.

Bethlehem returned to action Tuesday when it hosted North Division co-leader Shenendehowa (5-2, 5-2). The Eagles travel

Guilderland's Matthew Cerutti (55) shoots over a Colonie defender during last Friday's Suburban Council South Division game. The Dutchmen eased past the Garnet Raiders 65-44 to keep pace with first-place Bethlehem. Robert Goo/Spotlight

Warriors had a difficult time getting their legs going.

'We're struggling," said Guilderland/Mohonasen coach John DeRubertis. "The big ice surface probably comes into play."

The one bright spot for the Dutch Warriors was the play of goaltenders Nigel Simmons and Austin McCrum. Simmons made 16 saves over the first two periods before giving way to McCrum, who stopped 13 of the 15 shots he faced in the third period.

"I thought Nigel [Simmons] did a nice job starting out," said DeRubertis. "He made some nice saves, and he shouldn't be faulted for any of the goals he gave up."

Simmons allowed only one goal in the first period – a blistering shot by CBA's Zach Swantek on a power play. That gave Guilderland/Mohonasen some hope entering the second period.

The Dutch Warriors began the second period on a power play after the Brothers were assessed a bench minor for taking too long to return from the locker room.

call," said Fraser. "We weren't aware that we had taken too much time."

The penalty mattered little to CBA, though, Dean McMahon forced a mid-ice turnover and got the puck to Chris O'Keefe, who sent John Bassett in on a breakaway with a good lead pass. Bassett burst into the offensive zone and slotted the puck past Simmons to put the Brothers ahead 2-0 27 seconds into the second period.

"When we enter the second period down 1-0 and on the power play and then they score off the bat, that put us behind the eight ball," said DeRubertis.

Simmons settled down and made several saves over the next 10 minutes to keep Guilderland/ Mohonasen in the game, but Swantek and Bassett tallied over the final 4:38 of the second period to double CBA's advantage to 4-0.

McCrum got an early taste of CBA's quick-strike capabilities after replacing Simmons. Evan VanEpps charged in and took a shot that McCrum stopped, but O'Keefe poked in the rebound to give the Brothers a 5-0 lead 32 seconds into the third period.

spectacular individual effort with less than six minutes left. After taking a pass from Cody Greenwald, Bassett listed on the CBA roster as a junior defenseman - skated through the Guilderland/Mohonasen defense and poked the puck past McCrum to make the score 6-0.

"He's very defensively minded, but like the greats such as Bobby Orr he has a nose for the net," Fraser said of Bassett, who recorded a hat trick. "He makes other guys look like [traffic] cones."

Stockman came within 2:13 of recording his first shutout of the season, but Guilderland/Mohonasen's Ryan Ghizzoni spoiled Stockman's bid with a breakaway goal. Still, Fraser was pleased with the sophomore's efforts between the posts.

"[Starting goaltender] Dakota Smith is out. He has a concussion, so [Stockman has] had to step up," said Fraser.

CBA can gain more ground on league-leading Saratoga Springs this weekend when it hosts Niskayuna/Schenectady (3-3-0, 5-8-0) Friday and Shaker/Colonie (5-2-0, 5-6-2) Saturday.

Plainsmen rule

Another weekend, another strong performance by the Shenendehowa wrestling team.

The Plainsmen finished second to Wyoming Seminary at the presitigous

Eastern States Classic in Westchester County. Shen was the top team from New York with 159 points, 49.5 points ahead of Long Beach and Wantagh, the state's No. 1-ranked large school division team.

Shen had five wrestlers place in the top six of their respective weight classes, led by division champions Nick Kelley (132 pounds) and Tony Fusco (195). Long Beach was the only other New York team to have two individual champions.

Shen has been producing top-notch wrestling performances all season, thanks to a deep roster that has several Sectional champion contenders on it including Kelley, Fusco and heavyweight Cole Lampman (285 pounds). Only Columbia - which won a national tournament in Florida during the Christmas break — has a roster that comes close to matching the depth of talent Shen possesses.

Initially, the Plainsmen were tied with Wantagh atop the state rankings. Then, the Long Island power took over sole possession of the No. 1 ranking in the week leading up to the Eastern States Classic. Now that Shen finished ahead of Wantagh by a clear margin at Eastern States, I would expect the Plainsmen to be No. 1 in New York when the new rankings are released. If they aren't No. 1, it would be a crime.

Last week was good for Fusco in two ways. Not only did he win his weight class at Eastern States, but he also received recognition from the New York State Sportswriters Association for his prowess on the football field. Fusco was selected as a fourth team All-State offensive player in Class AA after leading Shen's offense with 1,642 rushing yards and 30 touchdowns.

Two more Shen players received all-state honors. Linebacker Brandon Miller made the second team defensive unit, and lineman Mark Thomas was named to the third team offensive squad.
