Bring on the snow

Ski areas start winter early, but weather remains a business challenge

By MARCY VELTE

Each year, as the air turns crisp and winter approaches, the Capital District's favorite skiing destinations prepare to make snow to start the season before natural flakes begin to fall.

It has become a necessity for many area mountains to begin making snow in the fall, as hitting the slopes over Thanksgiving weekend has become a tradition for families looking for outdoor adventures instead of shopping centers. A stable opening weekend can also portend success in the rest of the year.

Staff at Gore Mountain began making snow before Election Day, with the intent to open on Friday, Nov. 23. After acquiring 160 high-efficiency tower guns to help produce snow in 2011, Gore spokeswoman Emily Stanton said several more were purchased this year with three additional grooming tractors.

"Snowmaking all depends on the weather," she said. "We've learned our lesson and this year we're starting earlier than in the past."

About 2 feet of snow is needed to cover the 37 acres of terrain to make skiing optimal at Gore. So far, only 70 snow guns have been needed as temperatures have been falling into the teens at high altitudes.

Whiteface Mountain in Lake Placid has also started to make snow with the intent on opening after Thanksgiving. Whiteface Mountain is operated by the

New district architect to gather estimates on improvements

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Central School District is another step closer to drawing up a facilities referendum after the school board approved a new architect at a recent meeting.

On Wednesday, Nov. 7, the educational design firm Ashley McGraw was approved as the new architect for BSCD. While school districts are required by the state to have a contract with an architect, Ashley McGraw will now specifically be in charge of establishing estimates and drawing up plans for facilities upgrades.

"Something the board has brought to light, as well as the community, is that we need accurate numbers," said Superintendent Thomas Douglas. "In order to do that, we would normally turn to the district's architect, but we were changing architects."

The district is deciding whether to bond for facilities improvements including infrastructure work, technology upgrades and a new sports complex. Completing all of the projects would cost about

Hope on horizon for Colonial Acres

Local PGA chapter floats possibility of private investment for municipal golf course

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

A possible white knight has arrived with a potential, if not distant, solution to the ongoing debate over the future of the Colonial Acres Golf Course: the PGA.

At a budget workshop held by the Bethlehem Town Board tonight, members of the Northeastern New York section

"My fear, based on what everyone in golf tells me, is if it sits for a year, it's done."

— Councilman Kyle Kotary

of the Professional Golfers' Association said the group might be able to help find a private operator for the par-3 course. Supervisor John Clarkson's tentative budget for next year calls for the town to stop funding the course, which has been in the red for two years counting and is projected to lose $40,000 in the 2013 season.

Clarkson has repeatedly said he'd like to see the course at the very least remain open space, or at best continue under private operation. Local members of the PGA approached town officials about the possibility.

The group's Erik Smith said the NENY-PGA would be interested in inspecting the course and then potentially seeking a manager through its membership. The theoretical entrepreneur could then run the course on a lease to manage basis.

Smith agreed with the town's assessment that the course is unlikely to be as profitable as traditional golfing destination without considerable investments — it lacks a proper clubhouse, carts for general use or even sewer service. He reasoned there could be other uses for the space though, including as a kid-friendly training area. Sitting on 33 acres, it would be easier at Colonial Acres to give lessons to youngsters and keep track of them on the links,

Students rock the mock vote

Obama wins by a landslide in BCSD election

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

This year’s presidential election ended up being less competitive than many experts had predicted, but if things were decided by the Bethlehem Central School District, it would have been a landslide.

Days before adults across the nation cast their ballots, students at Bethlehem schools selected their pick and came to the same result. President Barack Obama received 2,868 votes, winning the Bethlehem Central School District 2012 Mock Election. Challenger Mitt Romney garnered 1,514 votes out of the 4,382 votes cast district-wide.

Obama also overwhelmingly won the national student mock vote, 460 electoral votes to 78.

The mock vote is conducted every presidential election year within the district and students are prepared by incorporating lessons on the candidates into social studies classes. The discussion level was modified depending on the grade of each student.

“It’s really important to have kids be knowledgeable about what is happening in the world,” said Eagle Elementary teacher Laurel Jones, who coordinated the district’s mock vote. “This is also an opportunity for all kindergarten-to-12th-grade students to participate in the same activity.”

Educators added the mock vote allows families to have a common topic to talk about around the dinner table, providing the opportunity for an inclusive, multigenerational discussion.

“I commend our students for taking part in the mock presidential election,” said Superintendent Thomas Douglas. “Teaching about this process and this civic duty not only imparts knowledge to our students, but helps build the character needed for them to develop into robust individuals.”

Students in the middle and high schools voted the week before the national election via a survey application on an iPad. Elementary school students cast their votes closer to Election Day, with two schools using paper ballots and the rest using the tablet program.

Jones said after the middle and high school vote was tallied the candidates were within 10 votes of one another, but the elementary students overwhelmingly favored the president.

“I think 5- and 6-year-olds know who the president is, so that is what resonates with them,” said Jones. “We spend a lot of time going over that Obama starts with an O and Romney starts with an R, so they can really know who they are voting for.”

mock vote even though she said her mom wanted Romney to be the next president.

“He was the president last year,” she said. When asked what her mom thought of her Democratic selection, Dudgeon said her mom just thought it was great they voted.

Fellow kindergartner Luis Menedez said he also voted for Obama because he liked how he ran the nation, but more importantly “how he ran the school.” He also voted for the incumbent because he liked how he treated his family and said his parents were going to vote for him.

Quinn Brandon, 10, said he watched the debates with his parents. He eventually opted to pick Obama as well.

“It seemed like he had some better policies and said some better things about education, which is pretty important,” he said.

After voting, the fifth-grader was interested to see if the district results would match the national results. He was thrilled with the outcome.

“Now I know what it will be like to vote when I’m an adult,” he said.

Jones said she felt the elementary students were the most excited to cast their ballot, and the mock vote will likely remain an important memory.

“I remember voting in elementary school,” she said. “I couldn’t tell you who the candidates were, but I remember doing it, so it’s nice that these students will have that to remember, too.”

Historian scours St. Agnes Cemetery to properly mark graves of veterans

By ZAN STRUMFELD
strumfeldz@spotlightnews.com

It seems like every day is Veteran's Day for historian KellyAnn Grimaldi, because she's made it her work to remember those who served.

In 2007, Grimaldi decided to take on the unique task of identifying every Civil War soldier buried in the 114-acre St. Agnes Cemetery in Menands. Using a list of 248 names culled from a survey of vets in the area, the historian set out to restore and replace the cemetery's decrepit tombstones.

Grimaldi has already identified 508 soldiers, and is certain there are more.

"The veterans are going to be forgotten and that's just not acceptable," Grimaldi said. "I want people to come to me if they know they have an ancestor that was a veteran that may not be marked at all. We want to be able to identify the location of the soldier's grave and make sure it's properly memorialized."

Grimaldi launched the "Adopt a Civil War Veteran" campaign, in which anyone can sponsor the restoration of a soldier's gravestone. Ancestors, veterans and even strangers have already helped fund more than 90 brand new markers and the cleaning supplies to restore 140 deteriorated stones.

Tracking down all the graves was a task made more difficult by the fact many are unmarked. When the cemetery opened in 1867, a few cemeteries in the area closed and many unmarked bodies were transferred to St. Agnes. Marking graves has always been the responsibility of the family, Grimaldi said, and sometimes issues arise. If a wife died before her military husband, she is entitled a military marker. His regiment and company would be inscribed at her grave but when the husband died, sometime times no one was around to claim the body and the grave remained unmarked.

"Those graves that are unmarked, oftentimes the only evidence they are buried there is the depression in the ground, where you see the wooden box they were buried in collapsed," Grimaldi said. "You know there's a body there, you just don't know who it is."

Using records and section maps, Grimaldi walks around the cemetery sticking a metal probe in the ground, looking for the soldiers. She searches for hints of marble stone that over the years have sunken into the ground or have broken into pieces. With some volunteers, Grimaldi gets on her hands and knees, trying to pull out the 240-pound gravestones.

"I had a team of women, the oldest was 85 years old. We all worked together on hot summer days fixing gravestones. It was fun," Grimaldi said. "The 85-year-old ... she was a pip. She would haul those graves out of the ground."

A minor setback to the effort came from the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. While new markers are free with $100 installation, a new requirement this year requires the soldier's next-of-kin to make the request for a new marble stone. But if no one comes forward as the next-of-kin, "then that soldier lays in an unmarked grave. It's terrible," Grimaldi said.

With the markers they can restore or replace, Grimaldi said they often have large ceremonies to honor the veterans.

Last year, Vietnam veteran John Mullen discovered he had a family member who had been in the Civil War buried in the cemetery in an unmarked grave. The grave was found and restored.

"I think Kelly's done a magnificent job. It's important to me personally because these men that received the Medal of Honor basically laid down their life for other veterans," Mullen, of Troy, said. "Men don't die in battle for medals and glory. They die for other men."

Funding has also run dry, Grimaldi said. The project received a $10,000 grant from the Bender Family Foundation and financial donations from several other groups, but things are now at a standstill.

"I have an entire section of excavated gravestones that are still laying flat because we ran out of money," Grimaldi said.

Even with the tremendous amount of time and effort the project takes, Grimaldi isn't giving up anytime soon.

"We just gotta keep it going," Grimaldi said.

ELECTION 2012

Reinhardt wins town seat with comfortable lead

Martelle says he will consider another run at office

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

After a close Democratic primary race for Bethlehem Town Board, Bill Reinhardt has won the general election with a significant lead over his opponents.

Reinhardt beat Republican candidate Jeremy Martelle, 8,532 votes to 5,760 votes, in the Tuesday, Nov. 6, election. Former Supervisor Jack Cunningham, who ran against Reinhardt in the primary, stayed on the ballot on the Independence line but did not campaign after the primary. He came in third with 1,762 votes.

“I think we ran a positive campaign,” said Reinhardt. “We spoke about the approach we wanted to take and what we wanted to accomplish, and I think voters responded to that.”

Reinhardt ran in September as a member of the Bethlehem Reform Democrat movement, which also fielded a number of candidates for the town Democratic Committee. The movement was formed in April by residents claiming to be frustrated with how the committee functioned. The movement won 25 committee seats in September, leading to the election of a new Town Democratic Committee chairman, Town Board Councilman Jeffrey Kuhn.

“I am supremely appreciative of all the help I got from all of the folks who helped me,” Reinhardt said. “This was a real team effort and not something I could do on my own. I feel humbled by the outpouring of support from the voters.”

Reinhardt will be filling the seat currently held by George Lenhardt, who was appointed. The seat was left vacant after Mark Jordan won his bid for town justice and left the Town Board at the beginning of the year. This means Reinhardt will hold the position for just one year before the seat is up for election.

Martelle said he “would entertain the idea of running again.”

“I think our message is a good message,” he said. “Being a fiscal conservative, our town needs that. An 8 percent tax increase does not benefit anybody, and I would consider running next year.”

Martelle said he was proud of his campaign and doesn't know what he could have done differently. He now hopes the all-Democrat board will work across the aisle for the good of the town.

“That's one of the things we tried to highlight with our campaign, is that one-party rule doesn't work in town government,” he said.

Supervisor John Clarkson, who backed Reinhardt throughout his campaign, said he was proud of the margin by which the Democrats won.

“Bill did a tremendous job going door-to-door, which is what I think did it,” he said. “People respond to a straightforward, sophisticated candidate, they don't want simple answers in Bethlehem and I think that's a very, very good thing.”

Kuhn said the win is a testament to Reinhardt's hard work and stamina throughout the campaign and was happy the Democratic candidate stuck to talking about the issues facing the town rather than going negative.

“In a lot of ways this win is an endorsement or validation by the public of some of the things the supervisor and the board have been trying to do over the last year and I think (Reinhardt) ran to be able to continue those policies,” he said.

Town Republican Committee Chairman Fred DiMaggio said the party is disappointed that their economic message didn't resonate with voters, but said all is not lost because two Town Board seats will be up next year in addition to the supervisor's seat. In the coming year, DiMaggio said he would be working to reenergize the town's Republicans in an attempt to get them more involved with local politics.

“We had a change in demographics and enrollment has changed here,” he said. “With the migration of people from the city to the suburbs the ground moved under us, but I think we have a relevant message that a two-party system better serves the community.”

Reinhardt said come January he would be looking to revisit the town's comprehensive plan and do more to support the town's small businesses. He said long-term budget planning would also be a priority.

“The budget is going to be a multi-year effort. It's not going to be 'fixed' just in one year and there are several things that will take time to implement,” he said.

Dave and Buster's coming to Crossgates Mall

Mall managements hopes new business will draw crowds

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

After years of courting entertainment options to fill vacant space within Crossgates Mall, officials recently announced that a Dave and Busters will be coming to the shopping center.

Dave and Busters styles itself as an American restaurant, bar and arcade venue. It will fill 33,000 square feet on the mall's first floor in the space once occupied by Klein's All-Sports near the Regal Cinema. It will have its own exterior entrance that was previously used by Borders.

"Dave and Buster's is the type of new entertainment people are looking for," said mall General Manager Joe Castaldo. "Our mall draws customers from a huge distance, like 100 miles away, and we want to provide the options that keep people coming back here and staying longer."

Mall management has been looking to add more entertainment features into the shopping center for several years. There was previously talk of adding a bowling alley, day spa or comedy club into the building. Another option was including an arcade-themed restaurant.

Dave and Buster's is a Texas-based family chain restaurant with more than 60 locations nationwide. Recently, there was word the restaurant may be included as one of three major tenants to take part in the revitalization efforts at Latham Circle Mall under Grossman Development Group. It was later learned the company opted out of the project for another location.

Castaldo said remodeling for the restaurant is set to begin in January and will be complete by the summer of 2013.

The addition of Dave and Buster's is just one of many modifications management is making to the mall to help attract a new clientele. Castaldo said the interior and exterior of the mall will be painted and ceiling tiles are being replaced. New floor tiles on the bottom level of the shopping center are also being installed and bathrooms will be remodeled. There will be additional soft seating for a more home-like feel.

These improvements go along with announcement of new tenants and the decision to no longer allow smoking on any

Pyramid Management Group properties "for the health and safety of the community."

In September, Crossgates officials announced the addition of the Brazilian steakhouse chain Texas de Brazil. It will be located across from the Apple store on the lower level of the space once occupied by Macy's. Construction will start soon with the restaurant opening in the spring of 2013. Other additions include a Wilson Leather store and an Oakley store selling outdoor gear.

Castaldo said he is hoping to finish a deal with another big attraction next year on the mall's third level.

"With more tenants coming, it's easier to lease space within the center," he said. "Dave and Buster's will be a big draw and we're hoping people will come around because of the traffic they generate."

Matters of Opinion in The Spotlight

What’s par for this course?

What a difference 21 months can make.

It was February of 2011 when the Town of Bethlehem was spending no small amount of time and energy debating the merits of attempting to purchase the bankrupt Normanside Country Club.

If you don’t recall, the town ended up submitting a bid of $1.5 million to buy up the course’s debt, missing by $75,000 the opportunity to be the owner of an 18-hole golf course with a full restaurant and clubhouse. This followed weeks of standing-room-only meetings and a whole lot of discussion about the role of government.

Town leaders at the time framed the bid as a fantastic business opportunity that would preserve a vital resource for the townspeople. Today, not two years later, the situation has been reversed and Bethlehem is looking to get out of the golf course business entirely.

As you’ll read on the front page, the town is hoping the PGA will be able to help find a private manager for the 9-hole golf course so the town can lose the recreational albatross.

Editorial

These situations are not apples to apples. Colonial Acres has a lot of issues that keep it from being competitive, namely a lack of amenities most golfers expect when spending half a day on the links. Like toilets. In this respect, Normanside had a lot more going for it.

Bethlehem’s 2011 stab at Normanside didn’t work out because it was outbid by a private partnership that, in less than two years, by all accounts has done well with the business. They made improvements to the course, opened golfing up to nonmembers and once again made the club a destination for special events and community groups. We’ll never know what the outcome of municipal ownership would have been, but with this year’s multimillion-dollar budget gap we wonder if capital improvements would have received the town’s undivided attention.

So now the question is simply “when?” If the town defunds Colonial Acres next year and no one steps in by April, it might not open. This course, often recognized for its quality and upkeep, could fall into disrepair.

On the other hand, exactly how long will Bethlehem resign itself to losing money at this course? Everyone is in agreement that it cannot compete with nearby Hidden Meadows without serious changes — and really, it is not the town’s place to try to compete with the private enterprise.

We have to agree with Supervisor John Clarkson that defunding the course now would force change. The fear seems to be that the town would give up any control in guiding the process, but this attitude misses an important point: the town does not own Colonial Acres, the Open Space Institute does. It is that group’s decision on what happens to the land.

To town leaders, we say this: if you’re going to close Colonial Acres, close it. If you’re going to keep it open, keep it open. But don’t keep the money flowing under the pretense your presence is needed: no offense, but it is not.

And to the public, your last chance to make your opinion known on this matter is tonight: Wednesday, Nov. 14. The Town Board meets at 6 p.m. at Town Hall and is scheduled to decide on a 2013 budget. There is a public comment opportunity at the start of every meeting.

What is this place called Arabia?

By CARLOS GUTIERREZ

Carlos Gutierrez is a retired school administrator (formerly superintendent of schools in Potsdam and in Albemarle County, Va.) who now lives in Saratoga Springs and Sarasota, Fla. He and his wife, Ruth Kellogg, former Capital Region BOCES District Superintendent, recently traveled to Dubai and Abu Dhabi as part of a Saratoga County Chamber of Commerce cultural exchange trip.

Recently, a small group from Upstate New York visited The United Arab Emirates as part of a fact finding and goodwill effort aimed at understanding a part of the world about which most of us in America are ill informed, but with which there are growing connections in business, industry and cultural matters.

The Saratoga County Chamber of Commerce sponsored the journey mainly so that its member and friends could begin to forge a relationship of understanding with the place that has invested in GlobalFoundries, whose influence is already making its mark on business and real estate markets locally.

GlobalFoundries is an investment in America by an international investment company headquartered in the United Arab Emirates known as ATIC or Advanced Technology Investment Company. ATIC is part of the Mubadala Corporation, which is the investing arm for the Abu Dhabi government. The ruler of Abu Dhabi, Sheikh Khalifa bin Zayed Al Nahyan, who is also the president of the UAE has recently announced a plan to change the ratio of a 70 percent reliance on oil revenues and a 30 percent reliance of all other revenues, to the reverse of that by 2030.

The area of the Emirates is roughly 32,000 square miles, slightly smaller than New York state. The population is just over 8 million, up from 4 million in 2005. Fewer than one in five are native citizens; the majority comes from over 160 countries seeking jobs in the fast growing local economy.

Our American contingent consisted of 39 folks from our Capital Region ranging in age from young to 87. It can safely be stated that we were, to a person, astounded by the sheer magnificence of the Dubai urban area where we spent the majority of our time.

Our concentration was in Abu Dhabi and Dubai. Abu Dhabi is the largest of the Emirates in area and has much unoccupied desert area in addition to its modern city, which has to rank among the unique cities of the world in terms of architectural variety and the sheer size of the buildings. It is the location of ATIC, which is housed in a modernistic building shaped like a wafer or computer chip standing a few hundred feet high. But nothing we saw in Abu Dhabi compares with the city of Dubai about an hour away to the northwest.

Dubai is obsessed with size and revels in the fact that it has many attractions which rank first in the Guinness Book of World Records. It has the world’s tallest building, the Burj Khalifa (formerly known as the Burj Dubai) standing half a mile high, or nearly two-and-a-half times the size of the Empire State Building. The Khalifa houses the world’s fastest elevator; it carried us from the ground to the 138th floor observatory (a bit more than half way up the building) in mere seconds with no sense of movement except in ear pressure. It also has five of the world’s tallest buildings; the largest golf course (designed by Tiger Woods); the most magnificent horse racing track featuring an inside-the-oval 400 room hotel, each room of which looks out onto the track; as well as the world’s largest shopping mall; the world’s largest hotel (The Burj Arab); and the world’s only seven star hotel, The Atlantis. One is simply stunned by turning to the next vista, just down the street or around the next corner.

“It’s like China on steroids!” remarked one traveler, “not as huge or extensive, but not to be outdone for the biggest or the best.”

To western hemisphere dwellers, as we are, the cultural and religious differences to which we are exposed in an Arab nation are huge. All visitors and ex-pats are expected to be respectful of one another in public. Public displays of affection are not encouraged and things such as public drunkenness are not allowed. But there is a double standard in that ex-pats and tourists are held to a different, more lenient, standard than are the Muslim Arab natives. Unlike Saudi Arabia, a neighbor, the UAE is moderate in its view of religion and the punishment for perceived infractions is done by courts and not with Ayatollah-like fierceness.

Our trip perhaps is the beginning, for us, in releasing the cultural biases which separate us and which make understanding difficult. Tourism in the Emirates is now bringing in well over 20 million visitors yearly. Dubai alone has more than 70,000 hotel rooms. Mutual knowledge will grow and our differences will shrink. In 2020, Dubai is planning to host the World Expo. Perhaps you should sign on now. Just pick your hotel carefully; don’t get caught in a place called The Address in downtown Dubai, purportedly the world’s most expensive hotel, with over 100 floors of rooms and suites, all occupied and all costing upwards of a few thousand per night!

Your Opinion in The Spotlight

Thank you for support

Editor, The Spotlight:

As the election season comes to a close, I would like to thank all of the people who supported my campaign for the Bethlehem Town Board with their time and effort. I could not have been successful without the commitment and dedication of many citizens who have put their faith in me to work for a better Bethlehem. As a first time candidate for elective office, election night was a new experience for me. My supporters and I watched the results come in and we were thrilled as the vote totals rose beyond my expectations.

The voters of Bethlehem have selected me to represent them, and I accept this responsibility with both humility and dedication. I will strive to represent all the citizens of Bethlehem as the public servant that I have been my entire professional career.

The town of Bethlehem faces a difficult budget situation. However, I believe we can and should work together on innovative strategies that support the entire Bethlehem community. We need a partnership of government, community groups, businesses and citizens of Bethlehem working together for the common good. I welcome comments, suggestions and ideas for ways to enhance the Bethlehem community. Please contact me on Facebook (bill-reinhardt-for-bethlehem-town-board). Working together, we can make Bethlehem the best it can be.

Bill Reinhardt
Councilman-elect,
Bethlehem Town Board

Bethlehem rolls out new recycling receptacles

Town of Bethlehem Recycling Coordinator Dan Rain stands with one of the town's new recycling stations at the Four Corners in Delmar. Unveiled in time for America Recycles Day, Nov. 15, the stations feature a trash receptacle on one side and a single-stream recycling option on the other. The other stations are at the Delmar Place bus shelter, the bus shelter at the corner of Elsmere and Delaware avenues and near the playground at Town Hall. It is hoped more will be added in the future.

Rain also announced Bethlehem had a 65 percent rate for diverting materials from the landfill for residential homes in 2011. The statewide average is 26 percent.

"It should be noted that a large percentage of Bethlehem's diversion rate is due to the town's yard waste collection and composting program," Rain said in a statement. "Roughly 22,000 tons of the 28,000 tons of materials kept out of the landfill in 2011 is yard waste collected and then processed at our town compost facility into valuable compost products. Without this program, our diversion rate would be much lower."

Bethlehem residents dispose of an estimated 2.44 lbs of waste per person, per day. The New York State Solid Waste Management Plan is for 0.6 lbs by 2030.

Fahy cruises to victory in the 109th

McEneny successor sets out aggressive to-do list

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

Democratic candidate Patricia Fahy has won her bid as representative of the newly redrawn 109th State Assembly District by a wide margin.

Fahy beat Republican candidate Ted Danz 35,043 votes to 18,039 votes in the Tuesday, Nov. 6, general election. Conservative candidate Joseph Sullivan received 1,897 votes. The newly redrawn district encompasses the southwestern parts of the City of Albany and the towns of Guilderland, New Scotland and Bethlehem. Candidates were vying to replace Assemblyman Jack McEneny, who is retiring.

“I think our grassroots piece of the campaign with volunteers was really reassuring to the area’s middle class,” Fahy said. “It said first generation folks can still run for political office and still be a voice for the community, and a campaign doesn’t have to be driven by money.”

Fahy is the former president of the Albany City School Board. She is also a former employee of the New York State Department of Labor. During a competitive primary, she said many dismissed her as someone who couldn’t raise the money or get the right backing to win and said it was great to defy those predictions.

The assemblywoman-elect came out victorious after a six-way September primary. County Legislator Christopher Higgins, Assistant Attorney General William McCarthy, former county Executive Jim Coyne, Frank Commisso Jr. and political newcomer Margarita Perez were seeking the Democratic nomination alongside Fahy. Fahy won with 5,045 votes, with Commisso following closest with 2,443 votes. Higgins came up third with 2,221 votes, followed by McCarthy, Coyne and Perez in last place with 445 votes.

During the general election, Fahy’s highlighted topics like education equality, raising the minimum wage, campaign finance reform, creating green jobs and equal pay initiatives. She also called for mandate relief and said she wants to change the education property tax formula, which she said is extremely difficult to understand.

Both of her opponents were looking to better enforce the state’s new 2 percent tax cap and increase job numbers, but had different methods of doing so. Danz and Sullivan also wanted to support local businesses by ending some government regulations.

On election night, Danz said

Democratic candidate Patricia Fahy won her bid to represent the 109th Assembly District.

he was discouraged by the loss. He went on to wish Fahy the best in her new position, but said he does not feel she has enough experience for the job.

“This is why we are in the trouble we are in in New York state,” he said. “Voters keep electing the same types of people back into office and then keep wondering why taxes go up.”

Sullivan said he thinks in time voters will not be happy with the choice they made.

“She’s not going to work across the aisle,” he said. “She’s a left of center person and she is going to behave that way in the legislature. She will take her marching orders and that’s that. However, the same could be said for Danz.”

Fahy said she feels it is unjust to categorize her as partisan, pointing to her endorsement of a Republican judicial candidate before the election took place.

“I’ll work with anybody who wants to work with me,” she said.

She added her main goals are now to pass all of the legislation reforms she campaigned on. She also wants to make efforts to increase educational funding, fight environmental issues and help the victims of Hurricane Sandy.

“I want to make all of New York strong. If we don’t work to make all of our state whole, it will reverberate for the next few years,” she said.

In the 44th Senate District race, incumbent Democratic candidate Neil Breslin beat the Green Party’s Peter LaVenita 79,459 votes to 8,232 votes.

$14 million, according to existing estimates. The Board of Education at this point has not decided what should be included in the bond, or if one should be pursued at all. District residents would need to approve of the bonding in a public referendum.

Daniel Heukrath from Ashley McGraw said starting this week the design firm will visit all the district's buildings and sports facilities to update the district's five-year plan, which is mandated by the state. The architect can then give better estimates to the board members, who will ultimately next decide what to include in the bond proposal.

"They aren't designing anything yet," said BC Operations and Maintenance Director Gregg Nolte. "We need to get a grasp on cost and what materials are best suited for these projects."

Construction on any approved projects is not expected to begin until 2014. Project estimates from Ashley McGraw are expected by the school board's next meeting at the end of November.

Nolte said the district's chief concern is protecting the structural integrity of each of its 11 facilities and 22 outbuildings and ensuring the health and safety of students and staff.

The Operations and Maintenance Department has identified repairs needed to the roofs at Slingerlands and Glenmont elementary schools and the high school, and façade and masonry repairs needed at the middle school. Technology upgrades have also been identified, as more state-mandated testing will eventually be done online at all grade levels.

A campaign by several parents last fall led the board to consider a bond to upgrade the district's sports facilities after many games had to be canceled because of drainage issues at the high school football field, and senior night had to be held at a different school.

Athletic Director John DeMeo had already identified needed upgrades to the high school's turf, track, lighting and sound systems and the bleachers. The costs could run between $2 million and $3.2 million.

After holding three community forums and asking residents to participate in an online survey, the board will begin discussing what upgrades should be included in a bond at a meeting held on Nov. 28. At that time a lengthy presentation will be given by the Ashley McGraw design team on their findings, along with cost estimates. Although the public is welcome to attend, district officials said the meeting is not a public hearing and is meant to focus on the opinions of school board members.

"Now that public participation and information gathering has come more to a close ... it's time for the board to discuss what their plan of action will be going forward," said Douglas.

The superintendent said completing the discussions about facilities upgrades would soon become a "balancing act" to make sure decisions are made before the budget season begins.

The presentation and discussion will take place on Wednesday, Nov. 28, at 7 p.m. in the middle school auditorium.

GOP no trouble for Tonko

Congressman secures another term in 20th Congressional District

By JOHN PURCELL
purcellj@spotlightnews.com

U.S. Rep. Paul Tonko, D-Amsterdam, comfortably secured another term in the House of Representatives in the redrawn 20th Congressional District, his third congressional victory.

Unofficial election results showed Tonko with more than double the votes of Robert Dieterich, R-Glenville, with a roughly 100,000 vote lead. Tonko captured the most votes in each of the district's five counties: Montgomery, Schenectady, Saratoga, Albany and Rensselaer.

"I am very humbled by the support shown and I am very thankful and grateful to the district that I can return to Washington and continue to be their representative," Tonko said.

both candidates attempted to align their opponent with destructive Washington politics and what they saw as the opposing party's weakest points. Tonko pointed to the Ryan budget plan and Dieterich said the government is overspending and increasing the national debt.

Patrick Ziegler, campaign manager for Dieterich, said the overwhelming Democratic district and presidential election were two challenges facing the Republican.

"Obviously we are very disappointed," Ziegler said. "We did it on a much lower budget than Congressman Tonko had to work with."

Ziegler said Tonko and Dieterich both ran positive campaigns and avoided the "nasty" political advertisements appearing in other local races. Tonko echoed Ziegler's sentiment and was pleased to see a "positive campaign" from his opponent.

Paul Tonko

continue efforts to create jobs throughout the region and strengthening the economy.

"I think a thriving middle class translates to a thriving America and it is important for us to recognize that," Tonko said. "I think our best days lay ahead."

During a candidate forum, Tonko stressed the economy must be improved from the "middle out" and not from the "top down." He claimed Dieterich supported economic policies that led to the recession. Tonko said investments in research, empowering small businesses and strengthening the middle class is important to the country's economic recovery.

Dieterich said simply charging the wealthy more is not a solution to the nation's debt problem and spending cuts should be made before reforming the tax code. He also said Medicare is not viable in the long term and the program should be reformed before it goes bankrupt in about a decade.

Both candidates did agree on the need for campaign finance reform.

Dieterich spent Election Day making various stops throughout the Capital District to continue rallying support, while Tonko during the afternoon talked to fifth-grade students at Pinewood Intermediate School about the importance of voting.

In Albany County, Tonko had more than 87,000 votes, or 74 percent of the total. In Schenectady County, Tonko took 37,500 votes, or 67 percent; in Rensselaer County he lead with 70 percent of the votes; in Montgomery County, Tonko captured around 63 percent of votes; and in Saratoga County the gap was the narrowest, with Tonko garnering around 33,250 votes and Dieterich trailing by 10,000 votes.

During the campaign,

Getting Dieterich's name out to voters was a challenge in itself, Ziegler said.

"He didn't come in with high name recognition, he didn't come in as an elected official, so the financial resources was an important aspect of the campaign," Ziegler said.

Tonko said he would

46th Senate District is too close to call

Tkaczyk holds slim lead over Amedore before absentee ballots counted

By JOHN PURCELL
purcellj@spotlightnews.com

A winner can't be declared in the newly drawn 46th Senate District until absentee ballots are counted, as a slim margin separated the two candidates on election night.

Cecilia Tkaczyk, D-Duanesburg, declared victory over George Amedore, R-Rotterdam, shortly after unofficial results put her ahead by 139 votes. Tkaczyk had 58,314 votes and Amedore had 58,175. Montgomery County Acting Supreme Court Judge Guy Tomlinson on Friday, Nov. 9, scheduled a recount of the votes and scheduled the counting of more than 9,000 absentee ballots.

Tkaczyk said once all the ballots are counts, she expects her margin to grow.

"I am up in the numbers and I am declaring victory," Tkaczyk said. "I think when all the ballots are collected I will be the victor."

Amedore's campaign, however, is buckling down for a long battle to be fought in boards of elections and courtrooms.

"This morning (Wednesday, Nov. 7), we filed a show cause order in Montgomery County Supreme Court to protect and substantiate each and every ballot," said Kris Thompson, a spokesman for Amedore, in a statement. "We must institute safeguards to protect every vote in this process, which may take considerable time."

Thompson said Amedore's campaign "implemented an ambitious absentee program." He was confident once all the ballots are counted that Amedore would emerge victorious.

"We will proceed with patience and confidence as this process moves forward," Thompson said.

The recount and audit of the audit of votes will occur from Tuesday, Nov. 13, to Friday, Nov. 16. The absentees and affidavit process will be from Monday, Nov. 19, to Wednesday, Nov. 21, and continuing the following Monday and Tuesday. Any absentee ballots contested will be set aside.

Both parties will appear before Judge Tomlinson at 9:30 a.m. on Nov. 28.

On election night, as votes started to roll in, the lead swayed between both candidates, with Amedore reportedly expressing confidence early on. Tkaczyk said it was a long night, but at the end she clung excitedly to her lead, however slight.

"It has been pins and needles and I am ecstatic that I at the end of a very long day won," she said. "You only need one vote to win."

Amedore, after casting his ballot at Schalmont High School earlier in the day, said he was optimistic that voters would continue to support him after leaving his Assembly seat to pursue the larger Senate district.

"I am so proud of my campaign team," Amedore said.

Amedore said his focus is getting "government off our backs and out of our pockets." Creating a confidence in the private sector, he said, is important to create jobs in the region. He said investing in education would also help businesses to have their workforces come from local talent.

Amedore said his experience as a small business owner sets himself apart from Tkaczyk. Amedore said for five years he has also worked in a bipartisan manner with fellow state legislators.

Tkaczyk said her message was what voters wanted to hear and they wanted someone who would fight for issues important to them. She said the election results show, despite the district being crafted for Amedore's bid, her message ran true.

"It says voters want government to work for the people, not big donors and special interests," Tkaczyk said.

The campaign became more heated as Election Day neared, with advertisements from political action committees dealing the harshest words about each candidate. Each candidate pointed to campaign contributions as points of contention.

Tkaczyk said she stood behind her campaign and pointed out Amedore's voting record and statements.

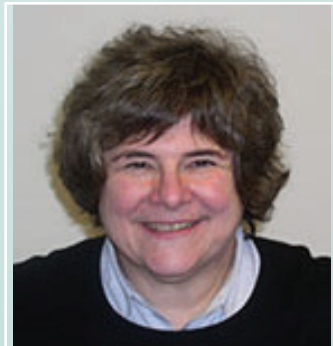

Amedore's strongest support was in Montgomery County, which he currently represents in his Assembly district. Amedore held 10,178 votes and Tkaczyk trailed with 5,842 votes. Amedore also took the majority of votes in Schenectady County, with 59 percent of the vote, and in Greene County he had a lead of almost 3,000 votes.

Tkaczyk received overwhelming support in Ulster County with 22,800 votes and Amedore garnered around 14,600 votes. Tkaczyk also prevailed in Albany County with around 15,300 votes, or 54 percent of the total.

same management group as Gore.

“We’ve had some ideal snowmaking temperatures,” said Whiteface spokesman Jon Lundin. “Obviously the weather last year affected our numbers. The previous year was a banner year for snowmaking and last year we just didn’t have it.”

Snow is being made on two trails so far,

Lower Valley and Fox, with more expected to be white by the end of the month. Lundin said because of public demand, new snow guns have also been installed on Hoyt’s High Trail on Lookout Mountain. The trail was cut in 2008, but had been left to be covered naturally.

“We were letting Mother Nature take its course, but she wasn’t cooperating,” said Lundin. “We saw the demand was there, so we took the opportunity to do something about it.”

The staff at Jiminy

Peak Mountain Resort in Hancock, Mass. has developed a five-phase plan to get the mountain covered by Christmas. Area ski destinations are now doing their best to attract winter sports enthusiasts even if there isn’t natural snow on the ground. Many resorts are also offering special deals for those still feeling the stings of the recession.

Jiminy Peak plans to put in 250 snowmaking hours in order to cover its 140 acres of terrain by Christmas.

“In order to execute this new snowmaking strategy,

Maple Ski Ridge is expected to be open by mid-December, whether or not Mother Nature provides the snow.

“The problem is people are ready to do winter activities when the think it feels like winter.”

Michener said the number of skiers was down overall last year, but the same amount season passes sold remained consistent. She said most people who came had a great time because there were fewer skiers on the slopes. Still, the businesses had lost revenues.

To make up for last year, Maple Ski Ridge opted to stay open year-round and hosted events like 5-K runs, craft fairs and a fall festival. They are also celebrating their 50th year in business with five generations of the same family working on the hill. Michener said they are proud to be able to provide fun, recreational activities to the community for so many decades, but now their goal is getting people back on the slopes.

“Even though Mother Nature might not provide a great season, we can provide snow,” she said. “We need people to realize that even if it isn’t in your backyard, we have snow.”

Jiminy invested nearly $300,000 in snowmaking improvements including the purchase of 40 additional snow guns and more hoses. Our collection of guns is now at 441 guns and 882 hoses that cover 39 snowmaking trails,” said the company in a news release.

While ski area operators have done their best to take nature out of the equation when it comes to snow, weather remains a top concern.

“A common challenge for all of us to overcome is when people don’t like the weather, they don’t think it will be fun to visit the mountain, but it is,” said Gore’s Stanton. Lundin called it the “out of sight, out of mind” effect.

Locally, Kate Michener of Maple Ski Ridge in Rotterdam, said she expects the ski and snowboarding destination to be open by mid December.

“We’re on target to open then,” she said, adding it took about 1,000 man-hours to keep the hill covered last year with its seven snow machines.

Something to chew on

By DANIA BIANCHI, bianchid@spotlightnews.com

Vegetarian Expo has attractions for experienced and curious veggie lovers alike

Raised strictly as a meat-and-potatoes guy, Dave Lajeunesse, 57, never would have considered nixing meat from his diet — that was, until his teenage son announced he was a vegetarian.

“About 15 years ago my son was at our house for Thanksgiving dinner,” Lajeunesse said. “We were waving the turkey under his nose saying, ‘this smells good, come on eat this, it’s good for you.’”

Lajeunesse’s son, who was 18 at the time, grabbed the plate of turkey and kept on passing. Lajeunesse said at first he and his wife, Jan, were not thrilled about their son’s new vegetarian diet, but the teenager didn’t cave despite his parents’ pleas to “eat healthy.”

“We kind of panicked and did all sorts of searches for vegetarian diets, health issues and problems,” he said. “We tried to find all these things that are problematic about eating a vegetarian diet so that we could confront him with sound, logical science to convince him not to make this big mistake.”

To make a long story short, that plan backfired — but with positive results.

“After about a month of doing research on this plant-based nutrition stuff, we became convinced that we should be vegetarian, so it kind of reversed itself on us,” Lajeunesse said.

The couple started participating in local vegetarian meet ups where they met likeminded people with whom they shared recipes and places to find vegetarian meals. Lajeunesse said in 2004 the group traveled to Syracuse to attend a vegetarian expo hoping to learn more about plant-based diets.

It was here where the idea of the Capital Region Vegetarian Expo was born.

“The event was not very well planned,” he said. “People had driven from all over with high expectations. ... On the way out I said to my friends, ‘we can do this in Albany.’”

As a home builder, Lajeunesse said he had been doing home shows for 25 years and felt he had been doing them long enough to know what would make a good expo. By 2006, plans were underway for the 1st Annual Capital Region Vegetarian Expo.

This year’s expo will feature presentations by locally and nationally renowned speakers emphasizing healthy eating and preventative medicine. There will also be cooking demonstrations showcasing vegan fare and a table available with dietitians and doctors who will answer questions.

Lajeunesse said by making the information available, the organization hopes to make the transition easier for people who are interested in a plant-based diet.

“There are so many misnomers out there about this diet and the potential problems of eating this way,” he said. “It sounds daunting and seems really hard. You hear, ‘I don’t really like cardboard,’ and, ‘What am I going to eat?’”

Throughout the year, the group continues to educate people through their Albany Vegetarian Network with events such as potluck dinners, cooking classes and restaurant meet ups.

“Today, it is infinitely easier to be vegetarian or vegan than it was six or 10 years ago,” he said. “There is just so much more product out there available.”

Lajeunesse said it wasn’t long after that Thanksgiving dinner 15 years ago that he and his wife felt guilty about waving the turkey under their son’s nose.

“Nevertheless, he is the reason we became vegetarian, and ultimately vegan,” Lajeunesse said.

The 6th Annual Capital Region Vegetarian Expo will take place on Saturday, Nov. 17, at the Polish Community Center (225 Washington Ave Ext., Albany) from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The event is free. More information can be found at www.nyvegetarianexpo.org.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Course

he said. Smith said few courses grant more than token access to very young golfers.

“We’re looking at it as an opportunity to grow the game,” he said.

Smith argued since the course has no revenue stream besides its flagging greens fees, a major change is the only way to make Colonial Acres relevant again.

“In order to remain competitive in that area ... we have to change the mentality,” he said.

The course has been operated by the town since 2008, and in the first few years of that agreement Bethlehem turned a profit. Then just down the road came Hidden Meadows, an 18-hole, par-3 course with many of the amenities the municipal course lacks. The number of rounds played plummeted—even with last summer’s ideal weather, just 6,662 rounds were played, barely half of the action the course saw in 2008 and only a handful more than the rainy summer of 2011.

There was general agreement between the four Town Board members at Thursday’s workshop that private management of the course should be pursued. When it came to the timeline, however, there was some debate.

Clarkson argued the town should still defund the course when the 2013 budget is adopted next Wednesday. That, he argued, would get the town effectively out of the way and hasten an agreement between a manager and the Open Space Institute, the landowner that leases the course to the town for $1 per year.

But Councilwoman Joann Dawson disagreed, saying the town should make sure a plan is in place for the course’s future before taking it off the books. “The town’s involvement in Colonial Acres took a long time. It didn’t happen overnight,” she said. “We’re not going to do that in a week; we’re not going to do it in four months. I would hope we could do it in 14 months.”

Councilman Kyle Kotary had a similar outlook. He also pointed out when spread over five years of ownership the course has lost about $15,000, which he reckoned is par for the course for many of the town’s recreational offerings.

“My fear, based on what everyone in golf tells me, is if it sits for a year, it’s done,” he said.

Councilman George Lenhardt pointed out the 2013 tentative budget includes Colonial Acres funding and still carries an 8 percent tax levy increase. That number would likely go up if the course is returned to the budget, or the board would have to find money elsewhere. Clarkson said after the meeting he would be speaking with board members individually in the coming day about the course ahead, but he was also clear he believes cutting ties to the course would be the quickest way to effect a positive change. “I would hope (the PGA) could solve the problem the town can’t ... and that’s use of the course,” he said.

Kotary, for one, didn’t see the rush. “Although the clock is ticking, it doesn’t end on Wednesday, it doesn’t end in April,” he said during the meeting.

If the town does get out of the golf course business, it would be able to reap some benefit from selling off equipment in addition to savings realized from the removal of salaries and other general expenses. The improvements that have already been made, including several structures, will be turned over the Open Space Institute — in reality, they already have been because the town built them on land it does not own.

In other budget news ...

Also at Thursday’s workshop, the Town Board heard from Police Chief Louis Corsi on overtime matters. A number of measures have been implemented to cut down on overtime costs, including a new policy to not use overtime to fill the department’s third dispatcher seat when only two dispatchers are present. The town will also provide two officers to monitor traffic court instead of three and make child safety seat inspections by appointment only.

The department spent nearly $600,000 on overtime last year, $50,000 over budget. Earlier in this year’s budgeting process, Corsi had objected to the amount of overtime in the budget along with the department’s loss of three positions through attrition.

Clarkson on Thursday said the town is working to compile information on four-hour recalls. When an officer is called back into work after leaving, he or she is entitled under contract to four hours of pay no matter how much time is actually served. The town hopes to get a picture of how much recall pay is actually worked.

Corsi added the department is continually looking for efficiencies.

“The agency is transitioning into a new attendance tacking system that makes it easier for me to, at a moment’s notice, look into the system,” he said.

The Town Board will meet to decide on the budget on Wednesday, Nov. 14, at 6 p.m.

Raptures at New York State Museum

Audubon Society of the Capital Region and Friends of the Washington County Grasslands Important Bird Area team up with the New York State Museum on Nov. 17 to highlight some of New York State’s most endangered birds and their habitats!

Follow the birding trail we’ve blazed throughout the first floor of the museum to learn about our state endangered and threatened bird species. Exhibits by museum staff and Audubon Society of the Capital Region, Friends of the IBA, Adirondack Center for Loon Conservation, DEC Five Rivers, Adirondack Wildlife Refuge & Rehab Center, New York State Ornithological Association and Wilton Wildlife Preserve & Park introduce you to the grasslands, woodlands and wetlands our At Risk birds depend on for their survival. Featured birds include Short-eared Owls, Northern Harriers, Peregrine Falcon, Cerulean and Golden-winged Warblers, American Kestrels and many more. Keep an eye out for possible sightings of live hawks and owls along the way!

Live Bird of Prey programs in the Carol Huxley Theater by North Country Wild Care, Adirondack Wildlife Refuge & Rehab Center and New York State Wildlife Rehab Council introduce you to some of our native owls, hawks and falcons and wildlife rehabilitation. Other presentations take a look at Conservation through the lives of Loons and Amazing & At Risk birds of the Washington County Grasslands Important Bird Area. Fun activities for kids are dissect an owl pellet in Bird Hall, “Make & Take” Crafts with museum staff, learn bird or animal track identification and visit the popular “Bird Cart.”

Visit www.ibafriends.org or New York State Museum website for program schedule or call the Museum at 474-5877 for more information.

Museum mystery tour scheduled

Friday, Nov. 16, 11 a.m., at New York State Museum.

Meet at the exhibition location. Children ages 4 and up.

Explore the Museum and look for clues to identify “mystery objects.” Join us as we tour different exhibitions and examine all that is hidden within.

Each tour includes hands-on materials from the museum’s collections.

Film screening and discussion with wounded veterans

High Ground film screening followed by a Q&A discussion featuring a panel with film producer and local veterans, Sunday, Nov. 18, 1 to 4 p.m., in the New York State Museum’s Huxley Theater. The program is for adults and teens and is free. Please RSVP by Wednesday, Nov. 16 by calling 474-0076.

High Ground features wounded veterans telling their own stories in their own way and in their own words, revealing the physical, emotional and mental scars they sustained through war. It chronicles a showcase expedition called “Soldiers to Summit,” which brought together war veterans and world-recognized mountain climbers to demonstrate what would be achieved by climbing a Himalayan giant despite serious injuries – an unexpected step towards healing. Film is 92 minutes.

The program will conclude with a Q&A discussion featuring a panel of Capital Region veterans. Benita Zahn, co-anchor on NewsChannel 13 Live at 5 and 6, will host this discussion.

to get everyone pumped up because we were kind of flat for the first 25 minutes,” said Oliver. “It was a nice deflection to me, and I just shot it.”

Center made the score 2-0 with 5:30 left in the first half when she fired a long direct kick past Nickles. It was Center’s first goal of the season.

“I knew she had a heavy foot, so I had her take the shot,” said Snyder.

Bethlehem (11-5-3) had several scoring chances – most notably, a shot by Tara Teal midway through the first half that bounced off the outside right corner of the goal – but didn’t capitalize until the latter stages of the second half.

Once again, it was a bang-bang play as a failed Guilderland clearing attempt placed the ball at Elle Lutz’s foot. Lutz immediately fired a shot past Lady Dutch goaltender Jenna Cubello to pull the Lady Eagles within a goal with 14:07 left.

Guilderland made certain Bethlehem didn’t come all the way back, though. The Lady Dutch controlled the ball for much of the remaining 14 minutes and created several scoring chances that Nickles and Bethlehem’s defense had to clear away.

The loss marked the end of Bethlehem’s four-year run of Sectional titles.

“It has been quite a run,” said Bethlehem coach Tom Rogan. “As I told the kids at halftime, we’ve been in this position before, but there also has to be that other team in these types of games.”

G’land

players before, but couldn’t break through. This year we have great athletes and soccer players, plus a great attitude.”

All of that had carried the Lady Dutch past Bethlehem by the same 2-1 margin for their historic first Section II title earlier in the week. Now it met Liverpool, who had played in this round a year ago but lost to Bethlehem 2-0.

Even though they had more experience in this situation, the Warriors found themselves in a defensive mode in the early going thanks to a steady Guilderland attack that, less than six minutes into the game, found the net.

The play started Ali Cardinal’s throw-in from the right side, which was strong enough to reach the middle of the field. Jessica Capone took the throw and passed it to Luizzi, who buried a 10-yard shot that Liverpool goalie Rebecca Phillips-Allen had no chance to stop.

Guilderland couldn’t add to its 1-0 lead the rest of the half, and Liverpool started to create scoring threats in the final minutes. Snyder said the key for his defense was to make sure none of the Warriors’ forwards even got a chance at longer possessions or scoring chances.

“We practice a lot on not even letting them get the ball,” he said.

Liverpool’s speedy sophomore forward, Ore Akinpelu, charged toward the net with the ball late in the first half. But in her most aggressive move of the night, Lady Dutch goalkeeper Jenna Cubello ran out 30 yards and kicked the ball away before Akinpelu could chip it past her into the unoccupied net, and the score remained 1-0 at halftime.

Cubello’s daring play loomed even larger when Laurie Knapp got tripped inside the 18-yard box less than five minutes into the second half, which led to a penalty kick. Center easily buried the shot in the left side of the net to double Guilderland’s lead to 2-0.

For a long while, it looked like the game would end with a two-goal margin thanks to the effective work of midfielders Cardinal, Rebecca Goldman and Luaren Kogelmann, who kept the ball away from Liverpool’s fast attackers. However, Emma Geyer crushed a 25-yard shot past Cubello inside the top right corner of the net with 10:06 left in regulation to pull Liverpool within a goal.

The Lady Dutch played steady, effective defense down the stretch to hang on. The Warriors’ Breanna Sharpe twice had shots on the right side in the waning minutes, only to have Cubello catch them.

Eagles

helped them force the Mountaineers into several mistakes.

“It really started with our passing,” said junior setter Kevin Mahar, who led Bethlehem with 20 assists. “When you give a good pass, it gives the hitters a really good ball to hit.”

It appeared the third set would go the same way after senior Sam Powers served Bethlehem to a 4-0 lead. Powers collected a pair of aces during the opening stretch.

Suffern rallied back on Tom Sharp’s serve to grab a 5-4 advantage – its first lead of the match. The Mountaineers extended the lead to 11-8 following a series of Bethlehem mistakes, but the Eagles scored eight of the next 11 points to pull ahead 16-14. Suffern kept it close for a while before freshman hitter Aaron Carrk closed out the match with his team-leading sixth kill.

“I just hit it as hard as I could,” said Carrk.

Penalty kicks end Eagles' playoff run

Bethlehem boys reach regionals for first time since 2006

By SPORTS STAFF
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem boys soccer team's 2012 record will show it didn't lose a game, but it will also show it didn't win the state Class AA title.

The Eagles (17-0-3) tied Section III champion Utica Proctor 1-1 in Saturday's regional final at SUNY Morrisville, but Proctor advanced to the state semifinals on penalty kicks.

Ethan Gunty scored late in the first half to give Bethlehem a 1-0 lead, but Proctor's Kevin Gordon tallied a short time later to tie the game at 1-1.

After a scoreless second half and two overtime periods, the game was declared a tie, and a round of penalty kicks would decide which team advanced to the state semifinals. Proctor made all five of its kicks, while Bethlehem made four out of five attempts.

The Eagles reached the regional round after winning their first Section II title since 2006 by beating Niskayuna 2-0 last Monday at Colonie Central High School.

Elliot Hiller gave Bethlehem a 1-0 lead 16 minutes into the game with a long blast past Niskayuna goal-tender Taylor Tear. Liam Roohan then sealed the victory when he pushed the ball with his chest past Tear early in the second half.

"The team worked very hard all year," said Bethlehem coach Phil Ridgway. "They just stepped up all year."

A Lady Dutch treat

Two first-half goals are enough for Guilderland to beat Bethlehem

The Guilderland girls soccer team made history for itself and denied Bethlehem an opportunity to extend its string of Section II titles.

First-half goals by Emma Oliver and Emily Center were enough for the Lady Dutch (15-3-1) to hang on for a 2-1 victory over the Lady Eagles in Tuesday's Class AA final at Stillwater High School.

It's the first Sectional girls soccer title in Guilderland's history, but not the first for head coach Curtis Snyder. He won one as a Guilderland boys soccer player for his father, Don Snyder, in 1985, and he coached the Guilderland boys tennis team to a championship in 2011.

"I've had that feeling, and I wanted (my players) to have that feeling, too," said Snyder.

Oliver's goal came off a bang-bang play with 14 minutes left in the first half. A Bethlehem clearing attempt bounced off Guilderland's Jess Capone to Oliver, who turned and fired a shot past Bethlehem goaltender Katie Nickles.

Center strikes eventual winner against Liverpool

A group of Guilderland girls soccer fans had a tailgate party on Saturday, celebrating the Lady Dutch's inaugural appearance in the state Class AA playoffs.

They had more reason to celebrate after it was done.

Goals by Angela Luizzi and Emily Center and some timely defensive play helped Guilderland (16-3-1) edge Section III champion Liverpool 2-1 in the Class AA regional final at Fulton High School.

With that, the Lady Dutch clinched their first-ever trip to the state final four in the Cortland-Homer area. Guilderland will face Webster Thomas (Section V) in next Saturday's state semifinal at 5 p.m. at Cortland High School.

"It's overwhelming," said Guilderland head coach Curtis Snyder. "We always had great

Eagles earn regional 'three-peat'

Bethlehem's John Sica (15) and Myles Bergere (9) block Harrison Goldstein's shot during Saturday's Class A regional match against Suffern in Delmar. The Eagles swept the Mountaineers 3-0 to earn their third consecutive trip to the state tournament.

Bethlehem sweeps past Suffern to gain state tourney berth

By ROB JONAS

It wasn't the Bethlehem boys volleyball team's best performance of the season, but it was more than enough to handle Section I champion Suffern.

The Eagles (25-1) rammed through the first two sets 25-15 and 25-13 before completing the three-set sweep by edging the Mountaineers 25-22 for the Class A regional title Saturday in Delmar.

"We didn't have our A game today," said Bethlehem coach Rick Arket.

Suffern went through a lot just to get to Saturday's regional. The Rockland County town was hit hard by Hurricane Sandy nearly two weeks earlier, leaving some without homes and many without power. Then a nor'easter struck in the middle of last week, which complicated matters with snow and wind. The Mountaineers didn't play their Sectional final until Thursday and had only one day of practice before making the trek to Delmar.

"We've had a tough run the past couple of weeks, but we can't make any excuses," said Suffern coach Kim Cleary. "We came in here hoping to play well."

"We certainly feel for them and their situation in Suffern, but you have to look past that once you're on the court," said Arket.

Bethlehem made it difficult for Suffern to get anything going in the first two sets. The Eagles' blend of power and court sense
