Frank Warren discusses years-long PostSecret Project at UAlbany visit

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

Some have called Frank Warren the most trusted man in America because of his PostSecret Project. Others have dubbed him the person who has seen the most secrets in the world. Warren said he doesn't know if those statements are true, but what he often finds more meaningful are the secrets he doesn't get to see.

Many people have written down their secrets on creatively decorated postcards and intended to send them to Warren's now famous address in Germantown, Md., but instead tore them up. Oftentimes, Warren is notified of this action from his fans, who explain they didn't send the secret either because simply by writing the secret down they felt a weight lifted, or because they felt ashamed. Others decided to no longer carry the secret with them.

"I think it reveals the transformative nature of our secrets," said Warren. "How they can change us when we share them, or how sometimes when we think we're keeping a secret, that secret's actually keeping us."

The PostSecret Project

started in 2004 as a submission to the Artomatic bi-annual arts festival in Washington D.C. Warren handed out 3,000 postcards to strangers on the sidewalk and waited for the submissions to be sent back. From those beginnings, Warren has gone on to receive 1 million postcards and evolve the idea from an art project and traveling art show to five books, a popular website, a speaking tour and soon, a play.

Frank Warren spoke about his PostSecret Project at a recent visit to the University at Albany as part of Sexuality Month.

District calls on community to lobby for more state aid

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Central School District is projecting a year-to-year deficit of nearly $5 million in the 2013-14 school year budget, but officials said this year they will not attempt to challenge the state tax cap.

At a school board meeting on Wednesday, February 6, the district released its budget projections for the coming year. Under the state's tax cap law, the district would be able to raise the tax levy by 3.64 percent next year. For a larger increase to the levy, at least 60 percent of voters would need to vote in favor of the budget, instead of a simple majority.

School officials blamed unfunded mandates, an increase in the cost of benefits and unreliable state aid funding for the budget gap.

"We are on a state aid level that is six years old and has never increased," Superintendent Tom Douglas said.

Officials said the state's Gap Elimination Adjustment has reduced the total amount of state

Neighbors question subdivision

Proposed Legends Preserve has been before town for eight years

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

Several Glenmont residents who went before the Bethlehem Planning Board on Tuesday, Feb. 5, disapproved of a plan to build a new housing subdivision off of Jolley Road.

At a public hearing for the project, residents aired concerns such as privacy, trespassing, establishing barriers between property lines and an increase in traffic.

The plan proposed by LDM Management and known as Legends Preserve has been before the town for about eight years and has been updated several times to fit the needs of the community and town zoning. Tom Andress from ABD Engineering was at the meeting to answer questions from residents.

"The town has regulations that will allow you conservation subdivision status, which is a conventional subdivision with some bonus density for lots based upon the amount of empty space and quality of open space that you provide to be preserved," said Andress.

The project plans call for 102 single-family units to be built on about 75.5 acres of land adjacent to the state Thruway and Lady Help of Christian Cemetery. Since the project is being pitched as a conservation subdivision, 50 percent of the land, or 42 acres, would need to remain undisturbed, open space.

The project would involve lengthening Jolley Road, as well as extending water and sewer lines. The development would be looked after by a homeowner's association.

Coat collection bundled up

Winter donation campaign nets 1,200 coats

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

Kaitlyn Drobne said she never knew how much joy could be brought to someone's face just by the gift of a winter coat.

"We don't realize what it means to have a coat and be able to stay warm throughout the winter. It's something people take for granted," said the 20-year-old from Selkirk.

On Thursday, Feb. 7, Drobne and Albany County officials distributed coats collected through the Katie's Koats initiative to representatives from the Homeless and Travelers Aid Society of Albany on Central Avenue. During the month long campaign, more than 1,200 coats were collected to be distributed to the homeless.

"It was absolutely breathtaking. I started to cry," said Drobne. "I never imagined we would get so many coats. It was really nice to see the community come together to help me and it made such a huge difference."

Albany County Executive Dan McCoy attended the event, as did Charles Burkes of the Albany County Veterans

Service Bureau, HATAS Executive Director Liz Hitt and Best Cleaner's Co-owner Tim McCann, whose company offered to clean the items collected for free.

"Thank you to the generosity of Albany County employees, NYS Comptroller Tom DiNapoli's employees, EMS at Stuyvesant Plaza and other donors throughout the Greater Capital Region for helping out," said McCoy.

Drobne had the idea to collect coats for the homeless after taking a trip to New York City in the fall. She was surprised to see the number of homeless in the streets, many of them without warm clothing or winter wear.

When the Selkirk resident returned to her job working at her grandmother's restaurant in the City of Albany, she realized how many homeless people there are right in the Capital District. She said the sight "crushed her."

Drobne soon began a Facebook page to start asking for donations, but she had little luck. It wasn't until she began speaking with officials from Albany County who regularly dined at her grandmother's restaurant, PG's Café inside Albany County headquarters, that her efforts gained momentum.

In about a month's time, Drobne and her grandmother, Patricia Sadowski, had coordinated with the county to place boxes throughout the Albany area as collection places.

Drobne said now she will continue her efforts in the future, but she doesn't have a goal in mind.

"This, year, I just wanted get a few hundred donations," she said. "I won't have a goal for next year because I don't think there is a way to surpass 1,200 coats. It was a really amazing feeling."

Car charge stations powering up

State and federal dollars mean public chargers more common

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

Environmentally conscious car owners in the Capital District recently had another location added to the slowly growing list of places to stop and charge up an electric car.

On Tuesday, Feb. 5, the owners of Tri City Rentals unveiled two new electric vehicle charging stations at their Woodlake Apartments complex in Guilderland on Old School House Road. The station is free for the public to use and reservations for a charging time can be made online.

“The decision to introduce EV stations at Woodlake was an easy one,” said Tri City General Manager Tim Owens. “This not only provides a positive impact to our Woodlake community but also provides a positive impact for those in the Capital Region.”

The charging stations were installed by Plugin Stations Online and were paid for through federal and state grants. The New York State Energy Research and Development Authority also helped as part of a joint effort to get 325 new charging stations installed throughout the state.

industry reshaping the way we think about our vehicles,” said John Doran, owner of Plugin Stations Online. “This NYSEERDA program reflects the environmentally conscious effort New York State is undertaking and thanks to forward thinking companies like Tri City Rentals, we’re going to see more charging stations installed as this industry trend progresses.”

Owens said additional Tri City Rentals communities in Buffalo and Rochester also have plans to install charging station with the help of NYSEERDA. He said locally, Woodlake Apartments was chosen because of its proximity to a major highway, local businesses and major areas of employment.

“Gas prices are going up to $4 and it could hit $5 again,” said Albany County Executive Dan McCoy. “This is the type of outside-the-box thinking that we need and I thank NYSEERDA and

Gov. Andrew Cuomo for putting the money in last spring to open these stations.”

The funds are part of a statewide initiative to cut carbon emissions. The Cuomo administration eventually would like to see 3,000 charging stations installed all over New York.

There are currently 10 public charging locations in the Capital District, including at new ShopRite grocery stores in the area. Eventually, 35 stations will be installed at 15 different locations through the NYSEERDA initiative.

For the foreseeable future, the owners of Tri City Rentals will be paying any electricity costs associated with the stations so patrons can stop and charge their hybrid or electric cars for free. It can take up to 6 hours to fully charge some electric car models, and the stations are compatible with all existing electric cars.

The stations are connected to the ChargePoint Network, and car owners can visit a website or use a smartphone to reserve a time. The system is meant to cut down on energy theft, ensure safety for customers and make finding time to charge a car more convenient. Customers can pay a one time fee of $25 to purchase a Chargepass swipe card to use the stations or make a reservation using a credit card, but they will not be charged for the time.

To find an EV charging station in the area, visit chargepoint.com.

The stations are free for public use and time can be reserved online by using the ChargePoint Network.

Love forever

Valentine's Day a bittersweet reminder for owner of Latham 76

By ZAN STRUMFELD
strumfeldz@spotlightnews.com

The first time he proposed, she said she would think about it. He didn't get down on one knee, but told her he thought she was the right girl for him. It was not love at first sight, she said, and she was cautious.

The second time, only a few weeks later, he came to her holding a huge heart filled with candy, a single rose and a card that read "Love forever." This time, she said yes.

It was Valentine's Day.

But this isn't a typical boy-meets-girl story. The couple, Athena and Alex Loupessis, had never dated before the proposal and spent the first year-and-a-half of their engagement getting to know each other. The two had separately moved to America from different parts of Greece to start a new life but wound up meeting through Athena's aunt in Newburgh.

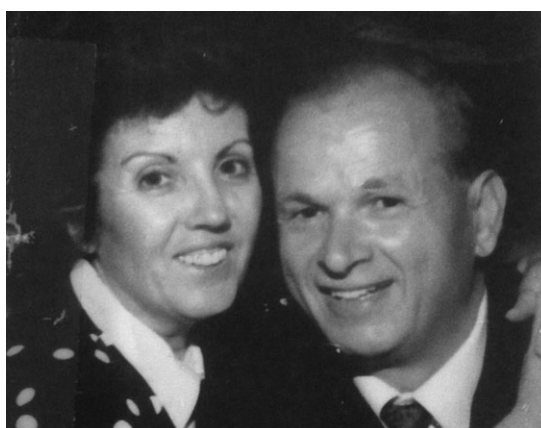

“He was a baker. He was the greatest baker in the world,” Athena said.

After moving to Long Island, Alex got situated in a bakery. While visiting the island as governor, Nelson Rockefeller got his hands on the baker's strawberry shortcake, loved every bite and recommended he set up shop in Albany. The couple took his advice and found their way to Colonie in 1971, and only two years later, they opened the Latham 76 Diner on Route 9.

The Loupessises worked day and night together, building the restaurant from scratch, raising two children and later, welcoming five grandchildren. The hardworking couple devoted their lives to the diner and to each other.

family-run business, the couple began planning their retirement dream house in Cephalonia, Greece, overlooking the crystal clear blue ocean. Construction began in 2004, and Alex envisioned having 45 fruit trees lining the property. The couple, happy and grateful, were side by side up until a tragic Northway accident in 2006 that injured

Athena and took Alex's life.

"It's heartbreaking. I grew up with him, built a life with him," Athena said of their 43 years of marriage. "I never got to say 'goodbye' or 'I love you.'"

Now, Athena works in her late husband's memory. Their dream home was finished, and she added in those 45 fruit trees he wanted. But it's more of a vacation home than a place to retire. Today, Athena Loupessis is still as hardworking as ever, running the Latham 76 Diner.

As the holiday of love draws near, Loupessis said each Valentine's Day is difficult. She prepares by keeping busy and having a smile on her face. But the couples that fill the diner's tables on Valentine's Day year in and year out still brings Athena happiness. She's seen many Valentine's Day engagements throughout the past 40 years and appreciates when couples still act "old-fashioned" with one another.

"Valentine's Day is, of course, for the lovers. To love somebody, you have to feel it here," she said, pointing to her heart. "Before you make a commitment, you have to be honest. And think about the good things. A few bad things happen in a way, but forgive and forget, because nobody's perfect."

Athena works every day, unless she's on vacation, and many customers call her "Mama." She runs the restaurant with her son, Anthony. When her husband died, Athena said there were more than 750 cards and emails sent to her in his honor. Many people believe Alex is watching over the restaurant, and his framed photo hangs on the wall.

"He was a brilliant, very hardworking businessman. And a good husband," she said. "He was never afraid to fight for his belief."

Vivid memories of the couples' first Valentine's Day still stay strong in Athena's mind.

"It should be Valentine's Day for the couple every day of the year. They should be thanking the Lord they have somebody," she said. "When you lose somebody to divorce or death, then you realize what you're missing. I love my husband. It was forever. And still forever."

Matters of Opinion in The Spotlight

Lunch line limbo

It seems like just yesterday we were reporting on a brave new future in our school cafeterias in the form of a federal mandate dictating a new set of guidelines for what schools must serve their students.

Though government mandates tend to be given an extraordinarily bad reputation (with good reason, a lot of the time) this was one order that was easy to get behind. That goes doubly for those young enough to recall the recent state of school lunches, in which “cheese,” “breeding” and “sugar” seemed to occupy their own, prominent slots on the food pyramid.

This story seems like it landed just yesterday because it practically did. The standards were put in place at the beginning of this school year. Yet already, districts are bucking the trend and dumping the program.

We recently reported the Niskayuna Central School District moved to drop the new guidelines by April 1 after its lunch program operated at a $70,000 loss in the first half of the school year (you can read all about it at spotlightnews.com). It seems kids weren’t going for the new food options, and those who were forced to buy the lunch out of need or for other reasons were tossing their fruits and veggies straight into the trash in favor of going hungry or grabbing some other, easily obtainable source of “nutrition” in the form of candy or junk food.

It’s surprising to see schools quickly discarding the lunch guidelines because that also means the loss of federal aid dollars. In a time of dwindling aid, that’s astonishing. But evidently the issue is so profound it would be preferable to go it alone.

It seems fitting this issue is coming into focus again, given February is American Heart Month — you can read more about that in the Point of View article opposite this editorial. Suffice it to say, this is a time when the American Heart Association and other groups are encouraging Americans to be more cognizant of their overall health, including how they eat.

This development is a setback for that overall mission on several levels. First, it is unfortunate to see schools kowtow to the taste buds of its students so quickly. Parents know getting a child to eat healthy is no easy task, but it is a winnable battle.

But it is not one that’s made simple through the new federal guidelines, which are so restrictive they allow cooks little room for maneuvering. They go so far as to break down vegetables into groups based on color, requiring dark green veggies to be served one part of the week and red or orange options another. These restrictions were drawn up with the best of intentions, but we have to wonder if setting more general guidelines and simply banning the worst of lunch line offenders (cheese sticks, pizza, French fries, vending machine foods, etc) and mandating the use of fresh ingredients might have been met with more success.

We may never know. Sadly, the students who need better nutrition the most, those in poorer urban districts, may end up with the short end of the stick as they’re offered unpalatable, unimaginative options while the vending machine beckons. In the suburbs, we simply hope schools opting out of the program will take their experiences as a learning opportunity instead of returning to the status quo.

Just after the holidays, the gardening catalogs begin to arrive at my house. It is the perfect remedy for the post-holiday blues and I am always happy to see them clutter up my mailbox. While it is cold and snowy outside, these catalogs offer me a glimpse of spring and the promise of gardening delights to come. I have my favorites of course, and those go to the top of the pile for viewing. Where to start is the dilemma and usually I opt for the seed catalogs. With paper and pen at hand, I peruse each page of “Johnny’s Selected Seeds” and “The Cook’s Garden” catalogue. Before I commit my seed order, I check online with “Victory Seeds” as they no longer mail a catalog. “Victory Seeds” is a great source for rare and unusual seeds and their forte is open-pollinated and heirloom seeds at a fair price.

Decisions made for seeds, I start looking at the “Miller Nurseries” fruit catalog. A New York State nursery, Miller offers many fruit varieties that were developed by Cornell University at the Geneva Fruit Station. Developed and grown in New York State is important to many Capital Region home fruit growers and Miller’s has been offering gardeners good plants with a wealth of cultural information since 1936.

I have long been a fan of mail order for plants and so I consult with the “Bluestone Perennials” catalogue to see what is new. Another favorite is “Garden Crossings” but this is Internet ordering only. Plants shipped from either of these nurseries have never disappointed, as the packaging is superb. My plant budget dictates that I find small sizes and grow them on, which is fine with me, and mail order fits that bill perfectly.

Point of View

“Gardener’s Supply” in Burlington is a terrific source for all things horticultural from plants to composters and rain barrels. This catalog is not a quick read as it is chock full of items to help one garden better. A few years ago, “Gardener’s Supply” began to offer heavy duty growing bags for potatoes. After one season I was hooked as this method allowed me to expand my garden onto the driveway and grow a crop that I had not had the room to grow. At the end of the season after harvest, the soil is removed and the bags shaken and allowed to dry before storage. These bags are easy and fun and now there are several choices for different crops. The “Kinsman Company” offers unusual wire planters and hanging baskets, liners, moss and garden decoration all with a British flair. “Lee Valley Tools” and “A.M. Leonard” are companies that sell unusual and hard to find tools of exceptional quality and gardeners will tell you that it is money well spent when buying a well made tool. You may buy one over a lifetime instead of several.

Both a resource and a reference are the catalogs that offer products for problem solving in the garden. Two favorite catalogs are “Arbico Organics” and “Gardens Alive!” They offer good descriptions and pictures of problems that educate the gardener about insects and diseases. Specializing in natural remedies, these sources guide a gardener through confusing territory offering remedies that are minimally toxic. So take a close look at the catalogs that arrive at your house this winter. January and February are good months for garden planning and catalogs mean that you can do it all from the comfort of your favorite armchair.

Your Opinion in The Spotlight

Vote for bond a vote for future Selkirk residents have heard enough excuses on issues

Editor, The Spotlight:
We believe in preserving the future of a Bethlehem education.

We believe that excellence is not complacency; that it requires development, growth and investment.

Over the past year and a half, the Bethlehem Central School District Board of Education has undertaken the task of how best to preserve and develop the district's assets. We have tried to make this as open and transparent a process as possible and we've received invaluable input from the community while doing so. Just this school year, we have held no less than four community forums on the issue, as well as held extensive discussions at our Board of Education meetings. We thank all of you who have been part of the process.

In the end, we are asking the public to consider two propositions. Residents will have the opportunity to vote on main facility improvements at a cost of no more than $20,185,299 with an estimated local tax impact $16.80 per $100,000 of assessed value; and track and field improvements at a cost of no more than $3,475,416 with an estimated local tax impact of $2.93 per $100,000 of assessed value. If voters approve both propositions, the total referendum will have an estimated annual cost for a homeowner in the district of approximately $19.73 per $100,000 of assessed value.

The condition of the facilities we provide for the district's children is a very important matter for all of us. What the Board has proposed to put before the public reflects our best efforts to address the many maintenance and improvement items of those facilities, invest in our future, and provide the children of Bethlehem the level of excellence they deserve.

Now it is the community's time to decide. The vote will be held on Tuesday, March 12, from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. in the Bethlehem Central High School lower gym at 700 Delaware Ave.

We sincerely hope you will come out and cast your vote.

Editor, The Spotlight:
Railroaded! Yes, I feel that the residents of Selkirk have been railroaded by the Town Board.

A meeting was held on Jan. 29 at the Selkirk Fire Department with members of the Town Board, town engineer, CSX reps and approximately 75 concerned citizens.

One of the topics discussed was the final phase three of the sidewalk project on Rt. 396 (which consists of approx 2,000 feet of sidewalk). This project was approved in its entirety by the Town Board years ago. All engineering work has already been done and paid for and project is shovel ready.

We were told that the remaining section of sidewalk from the fire department going across CSX track up to Pausley Court would now cost $700,000 - cost for the sidewalk $200,000 and $500,000 for a newly mandated automated pedestrian gate by the RR crossing.

This pedestrian sidewalk gate was mandated due to a potential "liability issue." Note however that this automated gate was not mandated by the Federal or State Governments or even CSX - but in fact mandated by the town attorney and the board.

In regards to the cost of the automatic pedestrian gate proposed by our engineer for a cost $500,000 - instead of contacting the firm of Dewey, Cheatum & Howe for an estimate as it was done - I decided to do another 5 minutes of research. The estimate is too high! In fact my research shows that the town of Wauwatosa, Wisconsin in 2013 installed for railroad safety - 25 sidewalk "Stop for Train" decals, 28 metal yield "Look for Train" signs, 15 new railroad sign posts, five pedestrian railroad gates, an entire railroad crossing with lights and bells and 8,000 feet of railroad track fencing all for $1.3 million! ... and we get one gate for $500,000!

The last segment of the meeting concerns $7 million given to the town by NYS for the proposed Selkirk bypass - a project which has been in the planning stages for 20 odd years. Due to inaction by the town, the state wants their (our) taxpayer money back (the nerve).

Now the town reacts by wanting to have a community meeting to discuss the southern Selkirk bypass road, the only option which can be funded for the $7 million. It should be noted to the board that if they took the time to read the minutes of all past meetings held on this issue, they would realize that it would be a waste of time. We the people have already voiced our opposition to taking the road from our front yards and placing it in our backyards. The Selkirk residents have previously decided that the only viable options to eliminate truck traffic was to either have the bypass redirected to Clapper Road or Wemple Road, neither of which the state will fund. At this time I am suggesting that the town give the taxpayer's money back to the state - perhaps the state will be able to find a neighborhood that needs something done, like installing safe sidewalks.

Gov. Cuomo: time to ban fracking

Editor, The Spotlight:
Sadly, in regards to fracking, it seems like Governor Cuomo is becoming as dishonest as the gas industry. In pushing to open New York to fracking, a process we know will endanger our health and pollute our environment, the Governor appears to be sacrificing our health and safety for gas company profits.

Ample evidence shows that fracking has contaminated drinking water and polluted the environment. In Pennsylvania, we've seen families who - before fracking came to town - had enjoyed clean water for decades. Now that drilling has invaded their communities, their water is no longer safe to drink, cook with or shower in. The gas industry is trying to cover up these problems, and they continue to deny the damage fracking has done. It's clear that they have been, and will continue to be, dishonest.

Now, Governor Cuomo appears to be doing the same. The Governor proposed rules for fracking before the state has even finished studying its impacts to public health and our environment. How could we possibly know what rules are needed before we know the damage fracking will do?

Unfortunately, it doesn't seem like Governor Cuomo cares. It looks like he's in such a hurry to rubber stamp fracking that he's cheating his own process.

Fracking in New York could mean more than just the contamination of our drinking water. It would also mean the destruction of thousands of acres of family farms and forests. Some of our most beautiful rural and natural landscapes will be leveled as gas companies reap the benefits. Governor Cuomo - do the right thing. Ban fracking in New York.

Library concert features sitarist

Internationally renowned sitarist Veena Chandra will perform traditional Indian music at the library Sunday, Feb. 17, at 2 p.m. Her son, Devesh, will accompany her on tabla. Ms. Chandra, who has performed and taught sitar for 55 years, is also a composer and choreographer. She has been on the music faculty at Skidmore College since 1990. She is founder and director of the Dance and Music School of India in Latham, where she teaches Indian classical music. She received a New York State Folk Art Grant in 2003, and is the recipient of several Community Arts Grants through the Troy Arts Center and the New York State Council for the Arts. NYCA and the Arts Center of the Capital Region cosponsored her tour of India in 2009-2010. Ms. Chandra characterizes the music of the sitar and tabla as reflective of instincts and emotions, healing the body, clarifying the mind, and feeding the soul. Devesh Chandra has studied tabla, the classical percussion instrument of India, since he was three years old learning the art by accompanying his mother. His innovative approach to the instrument attracts both Western and Indian listeners.

On Tuesday, Feb. 19, at 2 p.m., Kids and Friends presents Let's Drum - an interactive educational program for all levels of musical ability. Musician and educator Jonathan Duda uses musical games, structured traditional rhythms and improvisation in a hands-on approach to learning rhythm, history and culture. Drumming participants must be in grades K-6, but preschoolers and their adult caregivers are welcome to watch.

Porco movie to air March 23

Lifetime movie to showcase infamous Delmar killing

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

The Lifetime television network has released the airing date of its small screen movie about the Christopher Porco murder case.

The network announced the movie, called "Romeo Killer: The Christopher Porco Story," will premier on Saturday, March 23, at 8 p.m. The movie will focus on the Delmar native and University of Rochester student who was convicted of killing his father and attempting to kill his mother with an ax in 2004.

According to the network, the movie will show the night of the murder all the way up through the trial, but some details may not be totally accurate. The credits will state the tale is "inspired by a true story."

Production of the movie began in late 2012 in Vancouver, according to a Lifetime spokeswoman. Porco will be played by Matt Barr, who was most recently in the History Channel miniseries "Hatfields and McCoys." Erik McCormick from "Will and Grace" will play Bethlehem police detective Joe Sullivan and actress Lolita Davidovich will play Joan Porco. Other Hollywood media outlets previously reported that a girlfriend character for Porco was also cast.

Though Porco still maintains his innocence, he was found guilty in August of 2010 of having murdered his father, Peter, and attempting to murder his mother, Joan, as they slept inside their former Brockley Street home. The incident is presumed to have been over forged co-signatures on a student loan and car loan that Christopher Porco took out without his parents' knowledge.

Joan survived the Nov. 15, 2004, attack, but was badly injured. She later claimed no memory of the incident and professed her son's innocence, even though police claimed she indicated with a nod her son had made the attack. That nod was later the basis for a long appeals process by Porco's legal team. In April of 2012, the United States Supreme Court denied a petition to review the murder conviction.

Porco is now 29, but was 20 at the time of the murder. He is serving a 50-year prison sentence.

Lifetime said the film to portray Porco as a "beloved, handsome college student ... who was every girl's dream in the small town of Delmar, New York."

The Lifetime network released the first still from the movie on its press website, which depicts Barr (Porco) and McCormick (Detective Sullivan) sitting across from each other at a table, in what appears to be a police station.

The movie's description says prosecutors believed Porco to be "a devious and cunning sociopath" while "many in the town of Delmar firmly believe the jury wrongfully convicted an innocent young man."

The film is being produced by Romeo Kill Productions for Lifetime, and was directed by Norma Bailey. The screenplay was written by Edithe Swenson.

Teen’s trip to Africa yields photography award

Loudonville student’s photograph takes top honor in Nat Geo contest

By ZAN STRUMFELD
strumfeldz@spotlightnews.com

When 14-year-old Jeffrey Hafner Endler snapped a photograph of a girl in Tanzania this past summer, he didn’t think twice about it. It was another shot to add to his collection. But when he returned to New York from his 10-day trip and uploaded his photos, that particular one stood out.

“I thought it summed up a lot of the trip in general. This girl really did represent all of the kids there,” said Endler, a freshman at Shaker High School. “They’re a lot like the kids here. They like to have fun, enjoy learning. It’s just a lot harder to do the same stuff that we get to do here.”

Endler decided to submit the photograph to the National Geographic Kids International Photo Contest, for which aspiring photographers aged 6 to 14 are eligible. This past December, he was awarded first place in the “People” category in the U.S. division of the contest. The winning picture narrows in on the unidentified girl, who is slightly covering her smiling mouth and staring candidly into the camera. Endler took it while on a trip with his mother, other adults and nine other students from Woodland Hill Montessori School to visit WHMS’s sister school, the Sinai Primary School, in Babati, Tanzania in August 2012.

“I think that girl was just walking around in between the building of the school, and, like all the other kids, wanted her photo taken. I took her picture and showed it to her immediately. They just really liked to see photos of themselves,” Endler said.

The trip was organized by Karen Cavanagh and John Mason of Water Power Peace, a project formed in 2008 with a goal to bring safe drinking water to Babati. The project began when WHMS teachers as well as scientists of Sabre Technical Services and engineers went to the Sinai School and designed a playground to generate electricity for the school.

Several other groups have gone on the trip before, but this year was particularly unique because the students had been pen pals with Babati students their age for almost three years and were finally able to meet their long-distance friends.

Over the course of the trip, the WHMS students worked on several projects with the Sinai School, including teaching various subjects like art and spelling in English. The WHMS students gave the Sinai students 50 English words to learn for a spelling bee, and the WHMS students learned the same words in Swahili. They also brought more than 300 books to form a library, as well as computers to set up a lab, which, according to Cavanagh, was the first time the Sinai students had seen computers.

Documenting the journey through photography has always been an integral part of the trip, and professional photographer Chris

Martin of Water Power Peace often snaps the photos. This year, he put Endler and his mother, Lise, in charge of taking most of the photos, which helped Endler take his award-winning shot. “We’ve used photography as a teaching tool to communicate what life is like there,”

Cavanagh said. For the trip, Endler used a Nikon D3000, a camera borrowed from his grandmother. Along with his first place prize, he won a Canon Powershot camera and a copy of several National Geographic books. His photo, along with the other winners, will appear in the May 2013 National Geographic Kids Magazine. “Both my husband and I are incredibly proud,” Lise Endler said. “How wonderful to see your child inspired through photography, but also by the realization of what the rest of the world and how lucky he is with what he has.”

aid BC has received since the 2009-2010 school year by nearly $12 million. Bethlehem has also seen a 70 percent reduction in its high tax aid from the state. Chief Business and Financial Officer Judith Kehoe said property owners are now paying for about 59 percent of the school budget, up from 46 percent in 2008.

“The board and I don’t want to raise taxes, but we have a moral and civil obligation to keep given the plight we’ve been handed by our state

“We’re OK for now, but it’s like tension in a rubber band that’s stretched as far as it can be.”

-BC Superintendent Tom Douglas

legislators,” Douglas said.

The district was able to find savings last year through a reduction in transportation costs and a renegotiated teachers contract that resulted in savings of more than $1.6 million.

The district would have to spend $90.6 million to maintain this year’s programming in 2013-14, with approximately $21.8 million being provided in state aid as a conservative estimate. Voters approved an $88.2 million budget for this school year.

The district faced a similar shortfall last year of about $4.4 million, a figure that included the use of $1.7 million in reserve funds. Officials are still unsure how much, if any, reserve funds will be used to bridge the new gap.

Any additional cuts would most likely have to come from programming and extracurriculars to maintain an appropriate student-to-teacher ratio, officials said.

“We’re OK for now, but it’s like tension in a rubber band that’s stretched as far as it can be,” Douglas said.

Voters in May ultimately decided to exceed the tax cap with a tax levy increase of 3.99 percent, reducing the budget gap by $3.8 million. The plan cut some programs and clubs, increased class sizes and implemented centralized bus stops for students.

Bethlehem Central school board members also unanimously voted in January to allow two propositions to go before the public in March on bonding for facilities upgrades and a new turf athletic field.

The facilities upgrades stand at about $20.2 million, with athletic turf costs at about $3.5 million. If the field proposition were not passed by the public, upgrades and drainage repairs would still be made to the existing grass playing field. If both proposals were passed, annual taxes would rise by about $20 for a home valued at $100,000 over the 20-year life of the bonds.

Any tax increases from the bond would be on top of those expected for the 2013-14 budget.

The district is now asking parents, town residents and staff to advocate along with the district for mandate relief and a return to previous state aid levels.

“You can see that the numbers don’t add up and that’s why our communities need to finally rally and say enough is enough,” Douglas said.

The next meeting about the budget will take place on Wednesday, Feb. 27, and will focus on operations, maintenance and athletics.

Question

Rick Touchette, the director of cemeteries for the Roman Catholic Diocese of Albany, had concerns about the proximity of several planned units to the property line of Lady Help of Christian Church Cemetery. He asked for a forever-wild buffer to be put in place between the properties because the backs of some units would be as little as 20 feet from the lot line.

“I think that would be disrespectful to the cemetery,” he said.

Andress told the Planning Board the area is already wooded and argued that could act as a natural buffer, but Touchette said they would like to see more.

“Our cemetery property is meant to be used for cemeteries and if it’s undeveloped now, that doesn’t mean it’s always going to be undeveloped,” said Touchette. “We can’t really say if our area that’s wooded now is going to be developed, but that can’t be the buffer. If there’s going to be a buffer it’s got to be on the other side.”

But the most common issue raised was a possible increase in traffic in the area. Some residents said it can take 20 minutes at high traffic times to make it across the intersection of Glenmont Road and Route 9W, and others said the road can be backed up for miles.

-Roman Catholic Diocese of Albany Director of Cemeteries Rick Touchette

Andress said a traffic study estimated Legends Preserve would add 70 cars to the road. Some residents questioned how a development of 120 units, many of which would probably have multiple cars, would have such a slight impact.

Andress said a standard formula is used to determine the number of cars and impacts, but residents asked him to be realistic about the number and plan for more.

Planning Board members said concerns from the community would be taken into account before the project can move forward.

Secrets

On Tuesday, Feb. 5, Warren gave a keynote presentation at the University at Albany as part of the college's recognition of Sexuality Month. Many of the secrets Warren receives are sexual in nature or about mental health, while others are humorous and lighthearted.

Warren said while some sexual secrets are discussed during his presentations, like those about intimacy, sexual orientation or abuse, he hoped the event would allow students to feel more free to talk about their concerns, questions or desires about sex.

"I think that's one of the reasons they have a sexual recognition month," he said before the show. "I think sometimes there are important issues that get suppressed down as secrets, but instead if we brought them up and explored them, we'd be more likely to find a solution together."

But students were also interested in Warren's project itself. All postcards are sent to him anonymously from people all around the world and Warren said its very important to him that people are allowed to keep their anonymity so the secrets remain real and the project remains a nonjudgmental space.

"I think there's something about secrets that is inexhaustible and as long as I'm true to the project and maintain a relationship where people trust me with their secrets, I think the project has infinite life," said Warren. "And for me it's been a joy to follow where it's led me. This project has found me and turned my world upside down."

Warren reads each of the secrets and said he hasn't grown bored of it. He's no longer surprised by what he reads, but some more painful secrets can feel burdensome. The secret collector said the two most common secrets he receives are admissions to urinating in the shower, and the sharing of a desire to find the one person the writer can share their whole self with.

"I see that secret dozens of times over," said Warren. "The idea about finding that one person we can show our true selves to and no longer have to keep secrets from."

In his program, Warren told the audience one of his own secrets and how he relates to some of the postcards he receives. He later asked the audience to tell some of their own secrets live in front of the group.

"I think one of the reasons I'm comfortable with that is because I've been doing it for years, but also because before I started this I was answering phones on a suicide hotline and I feel parallels between the two," he said. "In fact, I feel myself falling into the same voice, just nonjudgmental and empathic. That's the voice I fall into out there."

Through the PostSecret books and Warren's speaking engagements, more than $1 million dollars have been donated to suicide prevention charities. Warren said he hopes the project will allow people to seek the help they need and give a voice to those who need it in order to prevent tragedy.

"We all have secrets and everyday we decide what to do with them," Warren said.

To mail a secret to the PostSecret Project, send a postcard to Frank Warren at 13345 Copper Ridge Road, Germantown, MD 20874.

Frank Warren reads from one of the approximately 1 million postcards he has received as part of his PostSecret project during a presentation at the University at Albany Tuesday, Feb. 5.

May the best mac win
Mac-n-Cheese Bowl to benefit appetites, food bank

By DANIA BIANCHI, bianchid@spotlightnews.com

Those who can't get enough of the creamy, cheesy, bubbling hot goodness of macaroni-and-cheese are in luck. One of America's favorite comfort foods will take over the Albany Marriott ballroom on Saturday for the fourth annual Mac-n-Cheese Bowl.

A staple of American cuisine, the creamy creation made its way to the United States by way of Thomas Jefferson, who while visiting France fell in love with the dish. Since then, chefs have put inventive twists on the classic, making it a staple on menus of many fine dining establishments.

Each year, area restaurants compete for the best mac-and-cheese creation and give guests the opportunity to sample the dishes and vote for their favorite. In addition to appetites, the event benefits the Regional Food Bank of Northeastern New York. Last year's event raised $35,000 and organizers hope to collect more than $40,000 this year.

Albany resident Sarah Gold attends the event every year with her husband and mother.

"We go mostly because it's for a good cause, but the food is always excellent and it's a nice break in the middle of winter — although you end up kind of in a cheese coma," she said. "There are 30 restaurants — so the secret is to make sure you don't overextend yourself too early."

Gold said their plan of attack is to go in groups.

"People tend to dive right in because you are usually hungry when you get there. At about 15 minutes in, you are like, 'What was I thinking?'" Gold said. "We actually share each other's samples and then if you really like it, you can go back for your own."

One of Gold's favorites from past events is a cheddar-apple "Kugel" mac-and-cheese from Chez Mike in East Greenbush.

Restaurants from all over the Capital District will participate at the bowl, but because the ballroom at the Albany Marriott has a limited capacity, a number of restaurants are put on a waiting list for next year's event.

"We have been so surprised by the popularity and love for mac-and-cheese," said Jessica Tanner, special events coordinator at the Regional Food Bank of Northeastern New York.

Some restaurants such as Valente's in Watervliet will add their dish to the regular menu after the contest.

"People come to the restaurant just for that. It's actually our number one appetizer right now," said Jack Valente, owner and chef at Valente's.

Valente's has won six awards for their past creations. Made up of three different types of pork, prosciutto, pancetta and sopressata, their "3 Little Pigs" dish was a hit at the first event and went on to be stocked in area Price Chopper stores.

This year, the restaurant will make a buffalo chicken dish with an Italian twist and call it "Buffalo Blues." Valente said just like their previous dishes, buffalo chicken is not unique, but it's the accents they put on it that make it theirs.

"Instead of putting traditional blue cheese, we decided to go with the Italian version called gorgonzola, which is a much richer, full-bodied cheese and gives it a lot more depth," he said.

Discover your favorite mac-and-cheese at the fourth annual Mac-n-Cheese Bowl on Saturday, Feb. 16, from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the Albany Marriott in Colonie. Tickets are $15 for adults, $5 for kids 5 to 12 and free for kids under 5. They are on sale at area Price Chopper stores.

For a list of participating restaurants and more information, visit regionalfoodbank.net/annual-mac-cheese-bowl.

Eagles win alters seeds

Bethlehem earns home game for quarterfinals, while Shen drops to No. 2 seed

One period altered the Section II Division I hockey playoff landscape.

Bethlehem scored three times in the second period and held on for a 3-2 victory over Shenendehowa in Thursday's Capital District High School Hockey League game at the Clifton Park Arena.

The result, coupled with Saratoga's 5-2 victory over Glens Falls, dropped Shen (10-3-1 league, 18.5 points) out of first place and the top seed. Saratoga (13-1-0, 20 points) overcame a 1.5-point deficit in the final week to pass the Plainsmen, though Shen coach Juan de la Rocha said there was little his team could have done to prevent that from happening.

"We weren't in the driver's seat in this one," said de la Rocha. "If (Saratoga) won, it wouldn't have mattered if we won or lost today."

The result also moved Bethlehem (7-3-3, 14.5 points) into a tie for fourth place with Christian Brothers Academy. The Eagles received the No. 4 seed and a home playoff game against the Brothers (8-4-3, 14.5 points) based on a tiebreaker.

"It's kind of déjà vu for us," said Bethlehem coach Andre Rodrigue. "It's the same 4-5 (playoff) matchup we had last year."

Shen took a 1-0 lead on Brad Tardif's goal late in the first period before the tide turned in the second period. Nicholas Gosstola tied the score 2:32 into the frame off a lead pass from Chris Caswell. Later in the period, Caswell had a shot deflect high off Shen goaltender Brian Walter's stick and land inches over the goal line to put the Eagles ahead 2-1. R.J. Diego finished the outburst when he charged in alone on Walter and slammed one by him to give Bethlehem a 3-1 advantage.

"The three-goal outburst was directly credited to the hard

Bethlehem trio sign their letters of intent

Three Bethlehem Central senior athletes made it official on Wednesday, Feb. 6, when they each signed a letter of intent to play for their respective colleges.

Katie Nickles signed to play soccer at the University of Rhode Island, Tara Teal will be playing soccer at Manhattan College and Victor Fox will play golf at the University of Maryland.

Nickles is looking into studying Marine Biology at URI as well as playing goalie for the soccer team. "I'm really excited to get to play in college with so many other talented players. It's going to be a challenge but I can't wait to improve my skills and compete for a league title," she said.

Teal is most excited to be attending school in New York City. After one visit and meeting with the soccer coach, she

LoGiudice, Soutiere win Sectional wrestling titles

By SPORTS STAFF
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Guilderland's Josh LoGiudice and Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's Alex Soutiere won their weight classes at Sunday's Section II Wrestling Championships at Queensbury High School.

LoGiudice pinned South Glens Falls' Anthony Sgorrano late in the first period to win the Division 1 (large school) 99-pound division title, while Soutiere defeated Taconic Hills' William Baker for the Division 2 (small school) 285-pound championship.

LoGiudice and Soutiere had to win four matches in one day to advance to the state tournament. Friday's Nor'easter and a Sunday afternoon hockey game at the Glens Falls Civic Center forced the Section II wrestling committee to move the tournament to Queensbury High School and hold the event in one day instead of two.

Guilderland's Mike Lainhart also reached the finals at Sectionals. Lainhart lost to Colonie's Golan Cohen 6-0 to finish
