No easy path for School's Out

Variance requirements, neighborhood opposition threaten building sale

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Central School District and School's Out, Inc. are facing an uphill battle when it comes to finalizing the sale of 90 Adams Place.

On Wednesday, Feb. 20, school district officials went before the Bethlehem Zoning Board of Appeals to argue the need for a variance on which the transaction hinges. Teresa Bakner, a partner at the firm Whiteman, Osterman and Hanna, spoke on behalf of the district.

The area in question is zoned residential, but the building was built in the neighborhood before the town had a zoning statute. Bakner said since the property was always in use as either the town library or, since 1931, by the school district, it is understandable that the town has never made contingency plans in case ownership changed.

Adams Street resident Stephen Malinowski told the zoning board that School's Out would change the character of his neighborhood.

"The school district is not out there to make money like a commercial operation. What they have is a financial responsibility ... to not waste school assets," Bakner said. "They are looking at this not to make a killing, but to make a reasonable return on investment on the fair market value of the property and to stop having on their rolls a property ... which they are no longer using."

But to obtain a use variance, the district must prove a lack of return on investment, that the hardship to the property is unique, that the use variance would not alter the potential character of the neighborhood and the alleged hardship was not self-created.

The district had previously applied for an adaptive reuse interpretation, claiming that a variance would not be needed because the property would still be used for educational purposes. Town code enforcement said they believed the before and afterschool operations

Van Dyke Spinney donates land

Conservancy group to develop trails on parcel

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

The Mohawk Hudson Land Conservancy is planning to turn 30 acres of land in the Town of Bethlehem into hiking trails for public use.

The property was donated earlier this year as part of a deal between the town and the owners of Van Dyke Spinney, a senior housing complex in development near the intersection of Van Dyke Road and Meads Lane. The acquisition means the land conservancy now protects more than 2,500 acres of land in the Capital District.

"The town really worked with the developers to make sure this land was open and able to be used, not just by the residents of the housing complex, but by the public as well," said MHLC Executive Director Jill Knapp.

The majority of the land protected by the organization is donated by residents or given through similar project deals, according to Knapp.

"A lot of people in the area want to see their land protected and give it to us," she said. "In this case, the land wasn't really developable but was pretty. It made more sense for us to own the property and was a good compromise for all."

The majority of the land lies to the west of Van Dyke Road. About 25 acres is set to be turned into hiking trails and developed for public use. Another 8 acres to the east along the Phillipin Kill will remain wild.

Knapp said the public can visit the property now, but development on the area isn't expected to begin until 2014. The work is stalled because volunteers are waiting to

NYSUT calls out tax cap

Area legislators ask for increased state aid to schools

By JOHN PURCELL
purcellj@spotlightnews.com

Public schools are in the budget limelight as local lawmakers call on Gov. Andrew Cuomo to modify aid distributions guidelines, while at the same time the state's largest teachers union is suing to challenge the constitutionality of the state tax cap law.

New York State United Teachers President Richard Iannuzzi said every student deserves to receive a quality public education, but the tax cap inhibits school districts from this standard.

"In challenging the constitutionality of the tax cap, we are fighting for that principle," Iannuzzi said, "just as we are fighting for the democratic principles of 'one person, one vote' and for the right of citizens, through local control of their schools, to determine for themselves how much they want to spend on their own community's schools."

NYSUT filed its lawsuit Wednesday, Feb. 20, the same day Capital District legislators called for increased state aid to school districts facing the possibility of

Developer eyes Glenmont intersection for CVS

USA gas station and several nearby buildings would be demolished

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

A developer has plans to build a new CVS pharmacy on a busy intersection at Bethlehem Center.

The plan that was recently brought before the Bethlehem Development Planning Committee calls for relocation of the current pharmacy within Glenmont Plaza to a new, larger building to be built on the corner on Route 9W and Glenmont/Feura Bush Road. A USA gas station currently sits on the site.

Developers from Zarembra Group in Cleveland, Ohio, and Larson Design Group in Corning, went before the DPC to informally discuss the project on Thursday, Feb. 21. The project will be officially submitted to the town at a later date.

“This is a big project, but the initial plans we’re very happy with,” said town Assistant Engineer Terry Ritz.

The plan calls for the demolition of the gas station as well as buildings containing, Manning’s Menu, Shannon’s Barber Shop and two private residences with garages. The demolition would allow for the development of a 13,225-square-foot store with 65 parking spaces and a double drive-thru. The plan also includes the possibility of a traffic circle at the corner under a proposal by the state Department of Transportation.

CVS currently owns one parcel of land within the two-acre site, but the company has the option from the owners to purchase the rest of the land in the future. The purchase may be contingent on Planning Board approval.

The store is not planned to be open 24-hours a day, but that could change after the store is opened based upon how it performs.

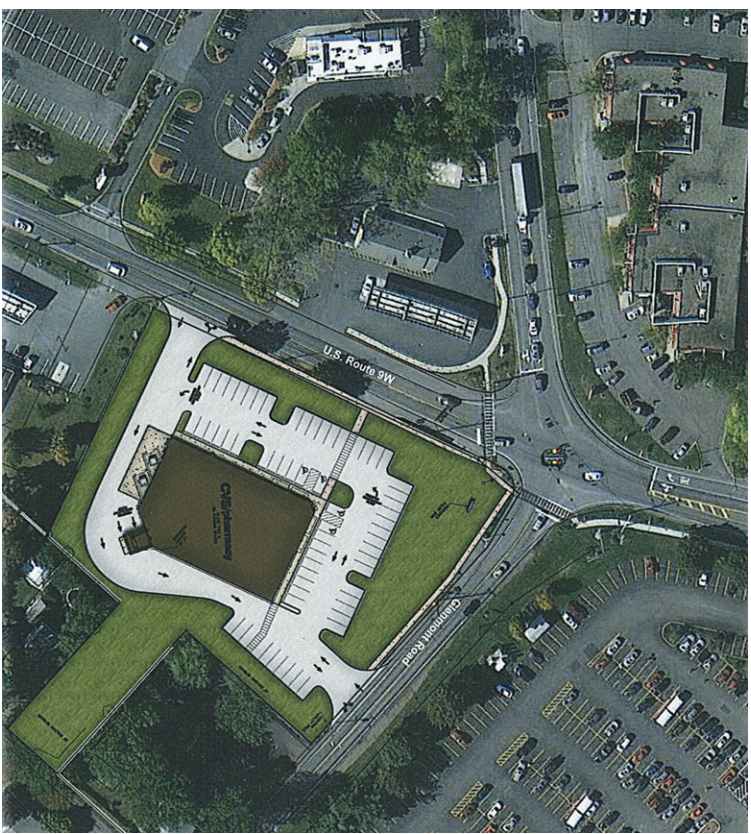

DPC members asked that CVS consider sharing an access point with the Cumberland Farms gas station next door to follow the recommendations of the town’s Route 9W Corridor Study. They also asked to see additional natural buffers along the property lines and to change the proposed sidewalk path to promote pedestrian visitation to the store.

“The plan might already have reduced access points, but by further opening that access point drivers wouldn’t have to jump back onto the road for that short amount of time,” said town senior planner Robert Leslie.

Developer Sean McDermott of the Zarembra Group said he would bring the consideration of a shared access point up with CVS representative, but the model may not fit into the company’s business plan.

The DPC also requested a further traffic study be done before the proposal goes before the Planning Board. Additional landscaping may also have to be included within the parking area.

Room to smile

Boy Scout spends months renovating bedroom for child at St. Catherine's

By ZAN STRUMFELD
strumfeldz@spotlightnews.com

For 14-year-old Boy Scout Stephen Pelletier, it took about $1,300, six months of planning, several helping hands and two full days of labor to completely make over a child's bedroom at the St. Catherine's Center for Children.

Although the project was just one of his final steps to become an Eagle Scout, after all of the work, Pelletier couldn't stop smiling while witnessing the child's uncontrollable excitement seeing his brand new room.

"It just feels great. I'm not so focused on that it's done, but just how I helped him. It just feels great knowing I did this, something I can be proud of 30 years later," said Pelletier, a freshman at Berlin Central High School.

Pelletier joined a few other Poestenkill Boy Scout Troop 528 members to work on St. Catherine's "Makeover for Kids!" program, which offers an opportunity for groups and individuals to remake a child's bedroom at the center. St. Catherine's, a residential service on New Scotland Avenue in Albany that offers a range of human services to Capital District children coping with issues of trauma, abuse, mental health and unstable family backgrounds. agency, which can house up to 20 children, takes in kids up to 13 years old who stay anywhere from six to 18 months.

"It's the first time in many of these children's lives where they've had a room to themselves, customized to their needs, their desires and goals," St. Catherine's Executive Director Bill Gettman said.

The makeover program is similar to what occurs on the TV show "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition," in which a home is remodeled in one week. St. Catherine's program started only last year and has already seen six different makeovers, each with its own theme, including Spongebob Squarepants and Tinkerbell.

"Every child is part of the planning process. This is not an adult project. It's a kids project," Gettman said.

Pelletier jumped on the opportunity to remake a child's room when he heard about the program in August 2012. After talking to the child, he decided to make a sports-themed bedroom. To raise funds, he held a pancake breakfast in January at the Sullivan Jones VFW Post in Poestenkill and collected $1,300 from community members. After that, he solicited supplies and received generous donations, including a gift card from the Home Depot and materials from Tru Value.

To keep the sports theme alive,

Dan McCoy vetoes county legislature's 'stall tactics'

Executive wants lawmakers to pick from his list of consultants

By ZAN STRUMFELD
strumfeldz@spotlightnews.com

Albany County Executive Dan McCoy has vetoed the County Legislature's resolution to hire an outside consultant to study the nursing home issue, calling it a method to stall any decision.

"The resolution really made no sense if you read it. It wasn't clear what they really wanted," McCoy said.

McCoy handed down the veto on Tuesday, Feb. 19. The legislature had passed a resolution by a vote of 19-17 on Feb. 11 to hire an outside consultant to review a proposed agreement with Upstate Services Group. Negotiations are currently underway with USG, a private firm, for a 10-year lease that could save the county more than $100 million, according to proponents.

McCoy responded to the legislature's request the following day by explaining in a statement that he already had hired an outside consultant, Peter Millock from Nixon Peabody, who had been looking at the deal for several months. Many legislators, including Chairman Shawn Morse, were unaware of McCoy's outside consultant.

Although McCoy vetoed the request, he said he has issued an RFQ, or request for qualifications, to bring in three outside consultants the legislature could then choose from. McCoy said he is not sure whether he will offer Millock as one of the consultants.

"They could use (Nixon Peabody), but they won't," McCoy said. "It would be smart for them to use them, but they want someone that's independent from me."

McCoy said he understands the legislature's skepticism on signing the lease with USG, but he's getting sick of the "stall tactics."

"It's the hardest decision they're going to have to make as legislators. They want to make sure I'm not lying. I get that. They want to make sure I'm telling the factual numbers, I get that," McCoy said. "This isn't about me. It's not about the legislature. It's about representing the people of Albany County."

McCoy said he plans on getting the list put together as early as next week. He said the latest he'd like to see a vote on the nursing home deal is April.

"It's not fair to the residents. It's not fair to the workers. We have to move forward or not move forward. We have to make a decision," McCoy said. "We can't keep dragging it out."

Fundraiser takes a wacky turn

For the past six years, Bethlehem Central faculty have gathered to play in a basketball game aimed at raising money to benefit the district's classrooms. They'll be doing the same this year, but with some notable twists.

In the past, the "March Madness" faculty basketball game has been hosted by the Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited group. BOU has put its efforts into organizing a spelling bee fundraiser, however, and the Bethlehem Central Community Foundation is stepping in to keep things rolling.

"It was important to our group to continue that (tradition), and we decided to make it even a little bigger," said BCCF board member Karen Kissinger. "BCCF decided to pick it up and make some changes, make some fun stuff, divide it into two games so there is one that is more competitive and goofy, Harlem Globetrotter-ish."

The audience will be able to partake in snacks from the Double Dribble Café and additional entertainment will be provided by the Hooligans Pep Band and BC student groups. In continuing with the carefree spirit of the "wacky game," members of the crowd will be able to step in to take free throws for the team of their choice in exchange for a donation.

The BCCF has been in existence since 1998, founded as the BC Community & Alumni Endowment Fund, and today its primary goal is to raise money to provide grants to BC teachers for programs or equipment not covered in the school budget. Last year, for example, the organization funded the purchase of iPod Touches for kindergarten students to use at literacy and learning stations, among two other projects. Grant applications for this year are currently being vetted.

The "March Madness" starts on Friday, March 1, at 6 p.m. with the wacky game followed by the all star game at 7:30 p.m. The evening's events will take place at the Bethlehem Central High School Gymnasium. Admission is $5 for the general public, $3 for elementary students and children 5 and under will be admitted free of charge. All proceeds will go to the BCCF.

Glenmont man dies in house fire

A Glenmont homeowner died of smoke inhalation after a fire engulfed his home on Glenmont Road Wednesday, Feb. 20.

Firefighters from the Selkirk Fire Department pulled Brad L. Woodworth, 61, from a bathroom at 173 Glenmont Road, according to Bethlehem police. He was pronounced dead shortly thereafter.

The Bethlehem Police Department and the Selkirk Fire Department responded to the fire at about 10:12 p.m. and with assistance from neighboring fire departments had the structure fire extinguished in about an hour. Glenmont Road was closed for about five hours, police said.

Selkirk Fire Department Chief Bill Asprion said the fire is believed to have started in the home's kitchen. The cause of the fire was later deemed to be electrical. The house was fully engulfed in flames at the time fire officials arrived on the scene. Asprion said the house could not be saved.

"Part of our early efforts was to knock the fire down enough to do a search of the home," he said. Once the homeowner was located, fire officials focused their efforts on making sure the flames did not spread.

Officials had initially been told there were two victims trapped inside the home, but one resident had been out of town during the time of the fire, said Asprion.

The incident was investigated by the Bethlehem Police Department's Fire Investigations Team and state fire officials to determine the fire's cause and origin.

Both With and Weller's passenger, Carol Dion, 50, were pronounced dead at the scene. Weller and 4-month-old Tajaye Weller were both transported to Albany Medical Center.

At around 6:15 p.m. the previous evening, Bethlehem police arrested With for violating an Albany County order of protection while at the Chili's Restaurant in Glenmont, police said. He was charged with second-degree criminal contempt, a misdemeanor. He was processed and released after posting $5,000 bail and was scheduled to appear in court in March.

Matters of Opinion in The Spotlight

What’s in a wage?

The minimum wage is one of those quagmire-type issues that have seemed to flock to the forefront as of late.

Both Gov. Andrew Cuomo and, more recently, President Barack Obama have advocated for a hike in the minimum wage from the current $7.25 federal minimum to $9 an hour. It’s not a bad conversation to have, especially as the gap between poor and rich widens and the number of Americans in the middle class spirals downwards.

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, 59 percent of all workers are paid hourly. About 5 percent of them, or 3.8 million Americans, work for $7.25, the federal minimum wage, or less. That’s a lot of people whose lives would be immediately improved and who would put more money into the economy should the minimum wage be increased.

But there are ramifications to the proposal, the most obvious being the immediate impact it would have on employers who have to pay their workers 25 percent more. (And even though minimum wage employees make up a relatively small percentage of the workforce, the hike would assumedly work its way up the line to make for higher wages for all.)

The vast majority of businesses in this country employ fewer than 30 people. Yet while politicians are simply fervent about being “pro-small business,” few of the policies that have been adopted in recent memory are of any help to most of these organizations.

Case in point: so-called Obamacare. One sticking point of the health care overhaul was the theory making health insurance mandatory would increase the pool of premium payers, thus pushing the average cost of health care coverage down.

That may very well end up being the eventual case, but in the short term what businesses are finding out is premiums are spiking in 2013, arriving along with a raft of new paperwork that becomes so onerous for businesses with more than 50 workers many employers in a good position might choose to hunker down rather than grow—in other words, the exact opposite of what is needed to climb out of a recession.

The Affordable Care Act was founded on the best of principles and aimed at solving a terrible social injustice. And so is a proposal to increase the minimum wage.

So how to avoid the seemingly inevitable pitfall of further straining businesses? We say the way out of this apparent unsolvable quandary is clear.

Increase the minimum wage to a more livable level (even a $9-per-hour job is still tough going in many places), but couple that with meaningful changes to meaningless labor regulations and cuts to payroll taxes. In order to ensure this does not fuel corporate largesse, restrict these changes to small businesses.

Though the common theme we’re fed pits government against business as the champion of the working man, we’d wager many if not most employers would rather pass higher wages to their workers (ensuring happier and more competent people) than send the money to the tax man.

The fate of the nursing home

By RICHARD MENDICK

The author is an Albany County legislator representing areas of Selkirk, South Bethlehem, Glenmont and Feura Bush.

The fate of the Albany County Nursing Home is one of the most important decisions county government has faced in years. While legislators all feel a deep responsibility to provide care for the sick and elderly, we must also take into account the county’s precarious financial position and the tax burden the nursing home places on our residents.

The Albany County Nursing Home presently serves approximately 218 patients and employs more than 320. The building is in dire need of repair. The home is not run efficiently or managed properly. In recent years the county has commissioned numerous studies to determine the nursing home’s problems, and all the studies have reached the same basic findings. Until now, however, no concrete changes have been proposed.

We must face the fact that the home continues to be an enormous drain on county finances causing staggering deficits. In his annual report, the county comptroller has stated the figure to be over $140 million in the past decade. The county executive estimates the 2013 deficit alone to be $18 million, which is over 20 percent of the total tax levy. We must remember that these deficits are placed squarely on the backs of our taxpayers.

Because of the drain of the nursing home, other social service programs, especially those for our seniors, have had to be reduced or eliminated during economic times when the needs for those groups are growing. We have not been able to provide additional assistance to those seniors who want to stay in their homes but need some level of assistance. It is the classic case of “putting all our eggs in one basket.”

So what are our options? As things stand now we must choose between closure of the nursing home, receivership (which puts the facility under the control of New York state), continued county operation of the home with increasing deficits or leasing the facility as recommended by the county executive.

In my opinion, only the fourth option, leasing the facility to a private management company, meets our objectives and reduces the flow of red ink.

The proposed lessee, United Services Group (USG) is recommended by the New York State Department of Health and currently operates 11 facilities in New York. USG has several homes where a union is recognized as a bargaining agent and has agreed to this same option for the Albany County Nursing Home. Through a transition plan, USG has also agreed to hire most, if not all of the current employees, and will keep the same admissions policy to provide a “safety net” for our residents.

It is projected by the Albany County Budget Department that leasing the nursing home would save the county an estimated $31 million in just four years. And this is a conservative estimate. Over a 10-year period, the county executive has projected the savings to be $70 to $100 million. While the lease agreement does call for a loan to the lessee of $12 million, the county will have saved more than 2 ½ times that amount in the first four years of the lease alone.

The legislature has already taxed Albany County residents $9.7 million for the nursing home’s operation for the second half of 2013. If the lease agreement can be quickly approved and the turnover of the facility is made by June 30, that $9.7 million could be used to reduce the 2014 tax burden on our residents and businesses. Delays which move the transition date past June 30 will waste the money of the Albany County taxpayers to the tune of (in rounded figures) $1.6 million every month, $375,000 every week and $55,000 every day.

The above facts, not politics, should be the basis for dealing with our nursing home. I therefore urge my fellow colleagues to move forward with the proposed lease agreement for the good of our elderly and our taxpayers. I hope you, the reader, will contact your county legislator and do the same.

Synthetic track a good investment

Editor, The Spotlight:

Residents should vote “Yes” on Proposition No. 2 in the upcoming Bethlehem school bond referendum because it represents the best value for their tax dollar.

Yes, you read that correctly.

But how, you may ask, can the multi-purpose synthetic field and eight-lane track, which costs $3.4 million more than the drainage option, represent the best value?

First, the landscape architect hired by the district has stated that the land around Bethlehem High School is sandy and moist. This means that the fields are often not usable after the slightest rainfall. The district has expended significant effort and money over the years to attempt to improve the situation. Nature has won this battle in the past and will, in all likelihood, continue to do so.

Second, while the initial cost of the synthetic field is greater than drainage, the annual maintenance cost is about one-third that of a grass field.

Third, unlike the existing field, the synthetic field is more durable and can be used nearly year round. So the total cost for every hour of usage is projected to be less than half that of the current field.

Finally, many of our youth sports clubs currently spend thousands of dollars annually to play on synthetic fields in other communities. They will now play, and keep their money, in Bethlehem. This both offsets the cost and strengthens our community.

While cost matters, value matters more. When you look at the data, we believe you will conclude that the synthetic field provides the greatest value and is deserving of your “Yes” vote on March 12.

DEC plans cleanup of former dry cleaner

The state Department of Environmental Conservation is taking public comments on a plan to clean up the location of a former Roxy Cleaners on Delaware Avenue in Elmsere.

The agency will hold a public meeting Monday, March 4, at 6:30 p.m. at the Bethlehem Public Library to outline the plans and take comments from the public. The property, at 156 Delaware Ave., was declared a superfund site by the agency in 2010. Best Cleaners is now located there, though the DEC previously told The Spotlight Roxy Cleaners is being treated as the originator of the contamination.

A DEC investigation found elevated levels of a number of chemicals associated with dry cleaning in the soil, including tetrachloroethene, or PERC, in the groundwater.

The area is served by public water. The DEC classified the area as a “class 2” superfund site that “represents a significant threat to public health or the environment.”

The DEC’s remediation plan includes removing and taking off site 340 cubic yards of contaminated soil. Afterwards, a chemical oxidation layer will be put down before clean soil is put back at the site.

The agency said any buildings at the site or neighboring buildings may need to have a sub-slab depressurization system installed to prevent vapors entering buildings from the groundwater. Such systems typically collect vapors from underneath a concrete floor and vent them outside.

In addition to comments collected at the upcoming public meeting, the DEC will be accepting written comments through March 24.

Athletes need turf to match their effort

Editor, The Spotlight:

Our children learn invaluable life skills through athletics. They are forced to take risks, learn from their experiences and grow as individuals. They learn to work together, and they bring us together as a community to bear witness to their hard work and achievements. For parents whose children do not play sports, but are musicians, artists, are involved in theater or countless other activities, the same principles apply. All of these activities shape their future.

When my 17-year-old daughter was 12, we coaches set a goal for her travel softball team to earn the right to play at Nationals. We made a poster of a satellite image of the fields and put their names on it. The girls had to learn to work hard and work together. They struggled at times but learned how to win, and eight months later they stepped on those fields. In subsequent years, they accomplished great things as a team, but the most important thing I saw through it all was how they confronted difficult situations, pushed through adversity and supported one another. I have no doubt these experiences helped lay a foundation upon which they will build excellent futures.

We all know life is not fair. Every day we compete for business, jobs and even parking spaces. There is no substitute for setting a goal (the same goal your opponent has set), managing in-game pressure, and learning to deal with success or failure. Our student-athletes are living these life skills at every practice and game.

Each of us will make a decision on March 12 when we vote on the Bethlehem School’s Bond Referendum. Proposition No. 2 asks us to consider field and track improvements at an estimated cost of $2.93 per $100,000 of assessed value per year. Our student-athletes work extremely hard and deserve our support. If we approve Proposition No. 2, we will provide them with facilities of equal stature to their efforts, at the same time providing our community with a unique and impressive gathering place to celebrate their achievements. By voting “Yes” on both Proposition No. 1 and Proposition No. 2, we will show our children that we support their efforts toward maximizing their potential in all areas. They, in turn, will pay it forward when they get the same opportunity to help their children. Bethlehem is a great community, and we must partner with our children to ensure it stays that way in the future.

Bethlehem Youth Court sees decrease in cases

Number of youthful offenders down from previous year

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Youth Court saw a marked decrease in the number of sentences handed out to youthful offenders last year.

Director Katrina Charland said just 23 first-time youthful offenders were sentenced through the program last year, down from 43 in 2011.

“Overall, this is a very good thing for the community,” she said. “Juvenile arrests are down. Some of them (sentenced through the program) go on to do jury duty themselves.”

Youth Court is alternative to traditional court for first-time offenders still in their teens. Those tried in Youth Court must admit guilt as a precondition, and it is only an option for those with low-level offenses. Volunteers in high school are trained to perform courtroom roles from prosecutor to judge to jury. The volunteers are then responsible for conducting the peer led sentencing hearings for the young offenders ages 10 to 19.

The most common charges heard in 2012 were of unlawful possession of marijuana (48 percent of charges considered), and petit larceny (30 percent). The previous year’s most common charge was trespassing. The jury assigns community service hours to offenders.

“A total of 520 hours of community service were sentenced to young offenders by their peers,” read the court’s annual report. The total number of community service hours jumps to 1,500 when volunteer time at the program itself is considered.

The program has been in operation since 1995 when it opened under the “Overall, this is a very good thing for the community.”

– Katrina Charland,
youth court director

umbrella organization Youth Courts of the Capital Region. Charland said it now operates as an independent nonprofit organization with support from the Town of Bethlehem and other community organizations.

Twenty new volunteers graduated from the training program in 2012.

Charland said when there is a direct victim of a crime, the person is usually asked to write an impact statement for the court. If the person requests the offender to work with a certain organization to pay their debt to society, youth court officials do their best to place them there.

About 13 percent of those who were sentenced last year went on to volunteer with Youth Court. Volunteers and those sentenced maintain a stretch of highway along Route 32 and the program also partners with the American Legion to provide workers for their pancake breakfasts.

“We try to maintain a low profile while we’re doing community service projects so the kids aren’t stigmatized, but we do want the public to know what we’re up to and that we’re here providing a service for the community,” said Charland.

She said she believes the program provides a better resolution for youthful offenders than the criminal courts. It can help keep kids out of the system and is a much more mature process, she said.

“This is just sentencing,” she said. “They have already admitted they are guilty and by doing so they take ownership of what they did. It can help repair the hardships caused to the community or a victim.”

the Boy Scout reached out to Siena College and UAlbany, who gifted items for the room, including basketballs and memorabilia. Pelletier also wrote letters to professional teams, asking for anything they could donate. He only heard a response from the Giants, which just so happens to be Pelletier’s favorite team. They sent him a signed picture of Eli Manning, which Pelletier hung on the new bedroom’s wall.

After getting all the materials he needed, Pelletier, fellow troop members and family spent the weekend of Feb. 16 remodeling the entire room by painting and redecorating. He filled the room with creative touches, including a green carpet that looks like an artificial turf playing field and hockey stick curtain rods.

Pelletier was finally able to reveal the room on Tuesday, Feb. 19, to the new owner, whose shrieks of happiness filled the center’s halls.

“It just made me so happy to see him like that,” Pelletier said.

Gettman said the center plans to have every child’s room remodeled by Labor Day and is looking for any volunteers, groups or organizations that want to help out.

“It helps in several ways. It provides self esteem, happiness in (the kid’s) life. It shows that adults can be a safe supporter in their life. That hasn’t always been the case,” Gettman said.

Explore the Kidz Expo

Popular event highlights resources for Capital District families

Do you have one child who is begging to see stars at the planetarium, another who is yearning to play skee ball and a third who is up for a circus?

At any other time of year, you may need to toss a coin, but this week you are in luck. They can do that and much more at the Hannaford Kidz Expo Saturday, March 2, at the Empire State Plaza.

The Kidz Expo, returning for its eighth year, draws thousands of people annually. It showcases more than 100 vendors, exhibitors and activities for sports enthusiasts, bookworms, information junkies, arts and craft lovers and more. While the kids are busy exploring, parents will have the opportunity to learn about summer camps, educational programs and hundreds of other resources available for families in the surrounding communities.

"The event becomes more popular every year. Last year, there were about 8,000 people, and we anticipate it will grow again this year," said Joseph Brill, from the state Office of General Services.

Some of the more popular activities in the past that will be returning this year are the Roaming

Railroad, which is a custom-built train ride, bounce houses, Radio Disney and Star Wars characters. Some of the exhibitions debuting this year are the Albany Berkshire Ballet, who will perform a mix of classical ballet and contemporary dance, the Albany Pine Bush, where kids can participate in an educational scavenger hunt, and Obstacle House, which will have kids moving and grooving to a healthy beat.

Sari Medick from Tiny Tots Tea Room in Clifton Park has brought her "Playroom on the Plaza" to the expo for two years.

"This year, we will be doing an arts and crafts project around dinosaurs and have different toys, play equipment and mats," she said.

Medick said the best part about the "Playroom on the Plaza" is that the kids can get up and out of strollers, and the parents can sit down and relax for a while.

Medick took over Tiny Tots Tea Room two years ago and said the expo gives her a chance to meet families from all over the Capital District and let them know what her indoor playground and café is all about.

"It's not an Albany event by any means. It's a Capital Region event," she said. "People come from everywhere."

Medick said before manning the portable playground at the expo, she used to explore the booths with her two children. Now that her kids have grown, she said she loves being able to work at the event, although she admits she does get a little envious of those still exploring the booths.

"I'm jealous because I'm stuck in the booth all day," she said.

The event will encompass the entire convention hall, all seven meeting rooms, the Swyer Theatre at the Egg and more than half of the quarter-mile-long concourse.

The free event is open to everyone and will take place March 2, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Empire State Plaza in Albany. Pick up the March edition of Capital District Parent Pages for more information, maps and schedules.

becoming fiscally insolvent.

Senator Cecilia Tkaczyk, a former Duanesburg Board of Education president, said Cuomo has led initiatives to improve the state's economy but properly funding education is a key element to ensuring progress.

"A strong, well-funded public education system is absolutely necessary to prepare the next generation of New Yorkers for the high-tech jobs of the future," Tkaczyk, D-Duanesburg, said. "The proposals we're making today will provide an investment in our children, without adding to the crushing burden faced by property taxpayers."

The lawmakers' letter to the governor proposed "equitable" restoration of gap elimination aid cuts by reallocating $203 million in Fiscal Stabilization Funding, $50 million in efficiency and performance improvement grants, funds targeted for bullet aid and any unused funds from 2012-13 competitive grants. They called for GEA restoration formulas to be adjusted to more fairly distribute funds.

Outside of GEA restoration, the letter requested $350 million in additional school aid funding, with priority for high- and average-need districts.

NYSUT spokesman Carl Korn said it was merely coincidental that lawmakers requested more education funding the same day the union filed its lawsuit.

"The state has shifted the burden of paying for education on the back of local property taxpayers," Korn said. "Now it has put in place a property tax cap that is devastating to schools in the Capital Region."

Assemblywoman Patricia

Fahy, D-Albany, stressed securing more state aid is important this budget cycle, even in light of the lawsuit.

"Even if NYSUT was to prevail tomorrow it does not negate the need for (additional) state aid," Fahy said. "I am sympathetic to what NYSUT is trying to do, but I don't want to lose my focus on state aid. ... I think their lawsuit probably has some merit."

Fahy, a former member of the Albany school board, believes the lawsuit "does have a point" in challenging the supermajority requirement for school district budgets exceeding the tax cap. Many area school districts have spoken out against the requirement, which means budgets above the cap must pass by at least 60 percent instead of by a simple majority.

NYSUT's lawsuit detailed declining state aid to schools, a $1.86 billion drop from 2008-09 to 2011-12 school years. The 2011-12 school year funding saw the state providing around 39.7 percent of school expenses statewide. NYSUT said previously the state's portion of school funding on average across all districts was between 41 to 47 percent.

"Across New York State, superintendents, board members, educators and families fear that their schools will never again be able to match the opportunities they are providing to students now," said Robert Reidy, executive director of the state Council of School Superintendents, in a statement. "Financial and educational insolvency are on the horizon for many districts."

Cuomo's 2013 spending proposal increased education aid by $889 million, or 4.4 percent, which Assemblyman Phil Steck, D-Colonie, commended the governor for providing, but also Steck joined area legislators petitioning for additional funding.

"We certainly want to work with our two former school board members, Cecilia Tkaczyk and Pat Fahy, to have any additional funding used in a manner that will best benefit the school districts of New York State," Steck said in a statement.

Senator Neil Breslin, D-Delmar, also called for more state aid and said it was "critical" to provide adequate funding to schools.

"Our local school districts simply cannot absorb any more cuts," Breslin said in a statement. "These cuts have already had a negative impact on our students with numerous educational programs being eliminated. Without additional state aid, our local schools will not be able to provide the top-notch education our students deserve."

Soutiere defeated Lowville's Brandon Fayle 3-2 in Saturday afternoon's third-place match to conclude the tournament with a 5-1 record.

In Division 1 (large schools), Guilderland's Josh LoGiudice compiled a 1-2 record in the 99-pound division, while teammate Mike Lainhart lost both of his bouts.

LoGiudice suffered an 8-0 loss to Syosset's Vito Aurjau in the opening round, but he responded with an 8-4 victory over Pearl River's James Kelly. Pine Bush's Chris Cuccolo eliminated LoGiudice with a 3-1 overtime victory in the second round of wrestlebacks.

Wantagh's Kyle Quinn pinned Lainhart in their first round bout.

disciplined, they're very well coached and they play tough defense."

Guilderland scored the first two points of the third quarter to take a 27-25 lead. But CBA went on a 10-0 run to pull ahead by eight points, and the Dutchmen never threatened again.

"They caught us sleeping on defense in the first half, but I was happy to see our kids make the necessary adjustments in the second half," said Doemel.

"It's a good team," said Guilderland coach Ron Osinski. "We gave them our all. We didn't die out there. We held them to 50-something points. We just couldn't get anything to fall in the second half."

Greig Stire led a balanced CBA attack with 11 points. Tyrell Ramsey contributed 10 points, while Drew Brundige hit a pair of three-pointers in the fourth quarter on his way to a nine-point night.

"Coach just told us to slow it down (in the second half) and look for open shots," said Stire.

Marc Dumoulin netted 16 points, and Vincent Simeone added 14 points for Guilderland.

In earlier Class AA quarterfinal action Saturday, Troy rallied to beat Bethlehem 55-53, Green Tech held off Shenendehowa 62-56 and Shaker downed LaSalle 60-49.

Bethlehem (17-3) had a 51-48 lead on Troy late in the fourth quarter, but the Flying Horses (17-3) scored seven of the final nine points of the game to pull out the victory. Jerrell Reid's three-pointer put Troy ahead for good.

Javion Ogunyemi poured in 23 points and pulled down 12 rebounds for Troy. Connor Morelli netted 14 points, and Myles Bergere added 13 points for Bethlehem.

Awaiting the Flying Horses in Thursday's semifinal round at the Times Union Center is Shaker. The Blue Bison (18-2) advanced to their second consecutive Final Four appearance by knocking off LaSalle.

"We know they're a very good team, and we can't expect anything less than that," senior forward David Morrison said of Troy, which beat Shaker in last year's Sectional semifinals.

Shaker had a difficult time with LaSalle (13-7) in the low post, as the Cadets consistently pestered any Blue Bison who had the ball near the basket. But once Andrew Holmes drained three consecutive three-pointers in the last two minutes of the third quarter, Shaker had enough of a cushion to glide by LaSalle.

"We wanted to get him shots, and obviously he has the confidence to make them because he took them," said Shaker coach Jeff Holmes.

Andrew Holmes finished with 14 points, while Morrison chipped in with 13 points for Shaker. Ralph Erickson's 22 points paced LaSalle.

Maurice West scored 17 points to lead Green Tech into Thursday's semifinal game against CBA.

"With the help of my teammates, it was really easy to transition from defense to offense and give us chances to score with high pressure," said Rickert.

Bixby said he doesn't anticipate an easy game against Colonie in the semifinals. Bethlehem edged the Lady Raiders 50-48 the first time the Suburban Council South Division rivals met Dec. 14, but the Lady Eagles soared past Colonie 69-35 in the Feb. 5 rematch.

"It's going to be a challenge," said Bixby, "but we're just going to take it one day at a time on the practice court."

By BEN FISHBEIN

The Bethlehem Lady Eagles scored the first 10 points of the game and cruised to a 74-25 victory over Columbia in Friday's Section II Class AA girls basketball quarterfinal game.

Bethlehem (19-0) advances to Wednesday's semifinal game against defending Sectional champion Colonie (15-4) at Hudson Valley Community College. Colonie defeated Catholic Central 56-43 in another quarterfinal game Friday in Delmar.

FINAL SCORE

- Bethlehem Eagles, 74
- Columbia Blue Devils, 25

The Lady Eagles scored four seconds into the game, and they didn't let up as they built a 34-8 halftime lead. A large percentage of Bethlehem's first-half points came off turnovers and rebounds, as the Lady Eagles stifled Columbia's offense.

"I'm really, really happy with how we played tonight," said Bethlehem coach Matt Bixby.

Kaylee Rickert led Bethlehem with 27 points. Bridget Murphy contributed 14 points, while Jenna Giacone and Olivia Hughes each added 10 points to put four players

Soutiere rallies for third

Ravena heavyweight recovers after losing in first round

By SPORTS STAFF

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's Alex Soutiere overcame a first-round upset to place third at last weekend's New York State High School Wrestling Championships at the Times Union Center.

Alfred Almond's Connor Calkins pinned Soutiere – the top seed in the Division 2 (small school) 285-pound weight class – with five seconds left in their first round match to send Soutiere into the consolation bracket.

Soutiere bounced back quickly from his first round loss. He pinned Brooklyn International's Elvin Gervacio and Ogdensburg Free Academy's Nathan Sarkin to conclude his first day of action. Soutiere edged Morrisville Eaton's Wyatt Morris 1-0 to earn a rematch with Calkins, who lost in the semifinals to eventual champion Matt Abbott of Windsor. This time, Calkins forfeited the match to Soutiere, which propelled

Brothers respond to late wake-up call

CBA outscores Guilderland 30-16 in the second half to advance into Section II Class AA semifinals

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Christian Brothers Academy received a late night wake-up call against Guilderland.

The Brothers out-scored the Dutchmen 30-16 in the second half to pull out a 55-41 victory in the final Section II Class AA boys basketball quarterfinal game played Saturday night at Hudson Valley Community College.

FINAL SCORE

- CBA Brothers, 55
- Guilderland Dutchmen, 41

The game didn't start until nearly 9 p.m., as it was the last of six Sectional games played at HVCC. The day started with two Class C games before the first of four Class AA quarterfinal contests began shortly after 3 p.m.

Guilderland (13-7) seemed to have more energy than CBA (18-2) in the first half, as the Dutchmen traded baskets with the Big 10 champions. Even so, the score was tied at 25 going into halftime.

"Guilderland is a really tough match-up for us," said CBA coach Dave Doemel. "They're very
