G'land Chamber president leaving post

Burbank to lead Community Caregivers, credited with transforming organization

By JOHN PURCELL
purcellj@spotlightnews.com

Kathy Burbank will be leaving the Guilderland Chamber of Commerce after serving as the organization's president for six years.

"I felt like I had been here a long time and I didn't want this place to just end up being me," Burbank said. "I knew coming in here that I didn't want that to happen."

On Nov. 8, Burbank will leave

"I want other people from other areas to come to Guilderland and see what we have here."

— Kathy Burbank, outgoing Guilderland Chamber president

her position as Chamber president to become executive director of Community Caregivers, which is a not-for-profit offering home-based, non-clinical services for Albany County residents. Burbank, a Guilderland resident, will transition to being a member of the chamber she led.

Before becoming chamber president, Burbank was the development director at a homeless shelter in Albany and had a background in nonprofits and management. She said after joining the chamber, she was really busy and it was hard to get used to her new role.

"It took me a little while to get used to the pace," she said.

"There are a lot of interactions because there are 500 members. ... You could see people all day, but you still had to get your work done."

Burbank said eventually she became accustomed to the "very ADHD" atmosphere of leading the chamber, a role she described as being a cheerleader for the town as a whole.

"I want other people from other areas to come to Guilderland and see what we have here," she said. "We do a lot of work with larger

Owens Corning solar project would be similar to town's own vision now in the works

After a nearly four-month installation process, Owens Corning recently celebrated the completion of its large-scale solar generation project on site at the company's Delmar plant.

Representatives from Owens Corning, the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority, National Grid and the Constellation Energy Group were all present for a ribbon cutting ceremony at the plant Tuesday, Oct. 15.

The solar generation project saw the installation of 9,000 ground-mounted solar panels on 9.6 acres of the plant's land.

"As a company that firmly believes it is our duty to help solve the world's most pressing energy and climate challenges, we are constantly seeking solutions that will materially contribute," said Doug Pontsler, vice president of environmental health and safety and operational sustainability at Owens Corning. Failing grade for school mailings

Vendor mailing error affects Voorheesville and Bethlehem school districts

By JOHN PURCELL

Plummeting test scores have been a widespread concern this year, but at least two area districts had more to worry about after the results were mailed out.

The Voorheesville and Bethlehem school districts recently mailed out results of test scores in state math and English language arts exams, but addressed those results to students instead of parents.

Both districts contracted with Northeast Regional Information Center (NERIC), a BOCES-based service provider, to mail state exam scores. The printing vendor NERIC contracted with, EDGE Document Solutions, did not notice the error before

District helps plug into possibilities

Guilderland school district helps parents and students become cyber savvy

By JOHN PURCELL
purcellj@spotlightnews.com

Parents and students in the Guilderland Central School District got a hands-on chance to expand their online horizons while staying safe at a recent evening program.

Guilderland Central School District librarians hosted on Thursday, Oct. 17, a program titled “Cyber Smart: Succeeding in a Digital World,” a series of workshops featuring interactive presentations containing tips for using online tools and accessing district resources. Workshops were held at the Farnsworth Middle School Learning Center and focused on a range

Students and parents became more cyber savvy through a program held Thursday, Oct. 17, at the Farnsworth Middle School Learning Center, with Guilderland school district librarians teaching how to navigate digital resources safely and efficiently.

Photos submitted of topics, including using caution when sharing information online, utilizing the district’s new online digital catalog, using online databases, accessing the district’s electronic and audio books, more efficient web searching and podcasting basics using free software. Guilderland Elementary Librarian Meg Seinburg-Hughes said the workshops were meant to supplement library programs and introduce parents to resources offered by the district.

“A lot of our parents aren’t totally aware of those resources that our school subscribes to,” she said.

Seinburg-Hughes added the basics of cyber safety are also shared with parents.

“We do it in our schools, but you want to bring families in on it as well,” she said.

The families at the program primarily had elementary-aged students, but high school Librarian Bernard Bott said the workshops could appeal to many grade levels.

“Certain sessions are geared towards certain age groups. Like myself and Meg are doing Google better, which can be really for older students as well as parents,” Bott said.

The evening featured a program on alternatives to using Google focusing on subscription-based databases available to students, such as Opposing Viewpoints, CultureGrams and World Book Online.

“We try to teach kids that there are research databases that are age appropriate that are going to help them find information faster,” Seinburg-Hughes said.

The databases and resources can be accessed by visiting a school’s library page on its website.

“We are still very print orientated, but in conjunction with that we are teaching using the Internet responsibly and safely, and also quickly,” Seinburg-Hughes said.

She also stressed the importance of parents taking an active role in their children’s digital literacy, which has become an increasingly important element of a student’s educational experience.

“Parents should be a part of their child’s information literacy process as well as regular literacy, just to monitor what is online and their progress, and to make sure they are using it for good and not evil, so to speak,” Bott said.

Seinburg-Hughes said the workshops are important because “we are all going 90 miles per hour” and might not have time to learn how to use available resources effectively.

Walt Jones, parent of a high school student, said he attended the program to see what research tools were available for students online and to learn about computer security.

The first session Jones attended was on searching databases and finding “vetted” website for information.

“They were actually tools I had not seen, because at home I typically just bring up Google and Google it, and these were much more targeted tools,” Jones said.

Gym opt-out on track at BC

District allowed 46 seniors to drop P.E. class this year under state regs

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

Some Bethlehem High School students were given the opportunity to opt out of physical education class this year in a new pilot program that could potentially be expanded to help cut costs for the district.

Health and Physical Education Supervisor Fred Powers presented further details about the program to the school board on Wednesday, Oct. 16, and provided with an update on the first few weeks of the pilot program's implementation.

"The students started the school year in a class," said Powers, so students could opt to re-join their class at some point.

The program was only open to seniors and participation was subject to a number of requirements. The state Education Department allows for P.E. Opt out if the conditions are met.

Seniors who planned to play two varsity sports could opt out, with the stipulation that the students had played the same sports the year before. The district wanted to make sure students weren't planning to try out for sports teams just to get out of physical education. Any students cut from the team, or who quit the sport they were playing, would need to begin taking physical education again.

Students who did not play two varsity sports could still opt out if they participated in a sports activity outside of the district. The person instructing the activity had to be certified and students needed to be able to reach achievements while participating in the program.

Powers gave the examples of Karate classes or horseback riding lessons, because the students would receive belts as they progressed or participate in competitions. Powers said 100 hours of instruction is needed.

For any student to participate in the program, certain fitness standards needed to be met in the previous year's state physical fitness exam in P.E. class. The student would also need to show knowledge of physical fitness subject material.

Powers said about 75 students came to his office to pick up applications for the program. About 51 students actually turned in their applications and 46 students were approved, with five pending.

The district did not give an estimate of the projected saving of the program, but another update will likely be given at the end of the year. Saving would result from a decrease in the number of P.E. classes given.

Powers said the majority of the students who opted out of physical education ended up not being able to replace it with a course because opposite their P.E. class is a science lab. Many took a study hall, and four students regained a lunch period.

"We want to make sure students are using the free period and staying in school, rather than signing out," added Powers.

He also said he is unsure if the program would eventually be expanded to include other grade levels. While it may be possible to allow juniors in, it would be harder to allow underclassman because the district needs to make sure the students who participate meet certain fitness requirements, and to do so the students would need to take the physical fitness exam in P.E.

"I certainly wouldn't recommend it for freshman," Powers added.

Powers said one concern is that a student would quit their sport or activity in mid-year and then be too far behind to make up the P.E. classes in order to graduate.

After the presentation, Superintendent Tom Douglas asked if any of the students in the audience were participating in the program. One girl raised her hand and said it was an advantage because she has an after school job and she is now able to take a study hall and give more attention to her advanced classes.

"It's a great opportunity for me to study more and do more homework that I wouldn't have time to do when I'm getting home a 5 o'clock every night," she said.

Town to tackle sewer near school

Work at Hamagrael would take place over coming summer, involve installing gravity line

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem Town Engineer Paul Penman visited the Bethlehem Central School District recently to discuss a sewer easement request near Hamagrael Elementary.

Penman gave a presentation to the school board on Wednesday, Oct. 16. He said the town needs access to the property in order to do work on a nearby sewer line that would allow replacement of a nearby pump station. The town began replacing various pump stations that needed to be upgraded in 2005.

"This pump station was built in 1973, so it's 46 years old and has seen better days," said Penman.

Penman said the town approved the work about a year-and-a-half ago, with only preliminary engineering work having been performed.

The new gravity-style sewer line would extend from McGuffey Lane, follow the school's sporting field toward the back of the school, and then cut across a brush field toward Route 9W.

Penman said this route was chosen so as to not have to cut down some older, large trees that lie in a direct route from the existing pump station to Route 9W. He also said the pipe would have to be laid deeper into the ground because of the amount of rocks in roots in the path if that course was taken, and it would end up costing the town much more money.

BC Operations and Maintenance Director Gregg Nolte said because of the work, some brush would need to be cleared away and the playing field in back of the school would potentially be expanded.

Some school board members were worried about the safety of the school's children while the work is underway. Penman said they would like to do the work over the summer, before the beginning of pee wee football. He also said the few manhole covers involved would be flat to the ground, so children could not trip over them,

Police Blotter

G'land man charged with setting three blazes

Guilderland police believe a town resident intentionally burned down three buildings over three months.

Police arrested Matthew C. Woelfersheim, 37, of 1105 Siver Road in Guilderland, on Monday, Oct. 14, and charged him with arson in the third degree, a felony. Three days later, Woelfersheim was charged with two additional counts of arson in the third degree.

The original arrest stems from an abandoned building fire on Sept. 30 at 3400-10 Carman Road, which is across from Greulichs Market. Police said the blaze "totally destroyed" the building.

The additional charges are connected to fires destroying two other buildings, police said. Woelfersheim allegedly set ablaze the Town of Guilderland garage, located at 3424 Carman Road, around 2:45 a.m. on July 8; and the town's barn, located at 40 Stone Road, at approximately 6:17 a.m. on Oct. 14.

Police said investigation into the incidents is ongoing.

Woelfersheim was arraigned in Guilderland Town Court and committed to the Albany County Correctional Facility. He reappeared in Town Court on Thursday, Oct. 17, for the two additional arson charges.

Other arrests

• Guilderland police arrested Michael Stephen Fink, 27, of 20 Kellogg Ave. in Schenectady, around 1:30 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 23, and charged him with grand larceny in the third degree, a felony. Police said Fink stole $14,300 from a Robinhood Road resident through overcharging for paving work at the home.

• Guilderland police arrested Romeo Edward Faulkner, 23, of 18 Gay Lane #1 in Schenectady, at 1 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 30, and charged him with criminal contempt in the first degree, a felony, and aggravated harassment. Police said Faulkner turned himself in on the charges, which stemmed from allegedly violating an order of protection issued by Albany County Family Court. He allegedly called the victim five times, left three voicemails and sent 21 text messages "with no purpose," according to police.

• Guilderland police arrested Randolph N. Ford, 31, of 23 Vasser St. in Schenectady, at 11:55 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 1, and charged him with DWI, speeding, failure to keep right and an illegal signal. Police said Ford was stopped for traffic violations and had a strong odor of alcohol on his breath. He allegedly failed several standard field sobriety tests.

• Guilderland police arrested Samuel W. Anderson, 19, of 1400 Washington Ave. 3013 in Albany, around 1:40 a.m. on Sunday, Sept. 29, and charged him with DWI, unlawful possession of marijuana and failure to obey a traffic device. Police said Anderson was stopped after he allegedly made a U-turn crossing solid yellow lines. Anderson allegedly had a strong odor of alcohol on his breath and glassy eyes, police said. A glass pipe with marijuana residue was allegedly found in his vehicle's glove box, along with a grinder holding a small amount of marijuana in his driver's side door compartment.

• Guilderland police arrested Robert L. Tangen, 25, of 245 25th St. in Troy, around 7:05 pm. on Wednesday, Sept. 18, and charged him with DWI. Police said Tangen was observed driving westbound on Crossgates Mall Road and allegedly swerved into the right lane, which forced a vehicle onto the road's shoulder. Police stopped Tangen in the upper level parking lot of JCPenny's and there was an odor of alcohol coming from the vehicle. A pre-screen device yielded positive results for the presence of alcohol, police said. He allegedly admitted to consuming four beers before driving.

• Guilderland police arrested Samuel J. Stubbs, 25, of 189 Liberty St. in Newburgh, around 8:40 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 3, for a bench warrant issued by Guilderland Town Court on June 14, 2012, on the charge of DWI.

generate about 3.3 million kilowatt-hours of electricity per year, providing about 6 percent of the plant's annual power usage.

According to Owens Corning, if that same amount of power were generated using typical nonrenewable resources, about 2,339 metric tons of carbon dioxide would be released into the atmosphere. That equals the annual emissions of about 487 vehicles.

"The products we manufacture in this plant are a primary way to reduce consumption in residential and commercial buildings, saving consumers and businesses billions of dollars in heating and cooling costs," said Julian Francis, Owens Corning's vice president and general manager of residential insulation. "And, of course, not using energy in the first place is the best way to protect our natural resources."

The project is being partially supported by NYSERDA. In March of 2013, Gov. Andrew Cuomo announced the state would provide funding through his New York Sun initiative to "develop and construct large-scale solar projects throughout the state."

"Clean, renewable business is good for the environment and good for New York businesses," said state Sen. Neil Breslin, D-Bethlehem, who was also in attendance. "Through the NY-Sun initiative we will continue to create clean energy jobs and a more sustainable future for our state."

According to Bethlehem town officials, about 50 percent of the project will be paid for through a NYSERDA grant. Owens Corning also entered into a 20-year power purchase agreement with Constellation and in exchange, the company will pay to build and maintain the system. National Grid also contributed about another $1 million in energy efficiency grants.

National Grid President Ken Daly said the utility is delighted to provide the company with "highly reliable" electric service and congratulated Owens Corning on its "environmental stewardship."

Bethlehem Councilman

Bill Reinhardt represented the town at the ceremony, along with Deputy Supervisor and Planning Board member John Smolinsky.

Reinhardt said he was excited to see Owens Corning's solar project come to fruition because the town has applied for funds in order to complete a similar project on town property.

"If this project is successful, it could be seen as a precedent to help our application get approved," he said.

In August, the town approved a resolution to sign a letter of intent with Borrego Solar to develop the town's clay mine site on Bridge Street in Selkirk.

The town has a project application submitted to NYSERDA for funding. Borrego Solar would grant additional financing, so the town would incur no capital costs. The thought is for the town to target underutilized land to generate energy credits for a large energy consumer, like the water treatment facility.

If the application were approved, the town would need to enter into an easement agreement and power purchase agreement with Borrego.

Erik Deyoe, the town's commissioner of public works, said he believes the solar panels would not be viewable from the street and many people would forget the power generation system was there once the project was complete. The plan would need to go through an environmental impact review.

The project would be comparable to the Owens Corning array. About 10 acres of the site's available 80 acres would be utilized for the project. The town would then have the opportunity to expand the site in the future.

Deyoe said the savings for the town depends on a number of variables, but could be about $100,000 to $175,000 a year.

"I think it's an exciting opportunity for the town," said Reinhardt. "It's great to see Bethlehem turning into a truly sustainable community."

The project would rely solely on the town receiving a bid approval from NYSERDA for the grant. The town would then need to enter into a power purchase agreement with Borrego Solar.

Clarkson clear choice over DiMaggio Kirby for town justice

Editor, The Spotlight:
Voters in Bethlehem should take the vitriol directed at Supervisor John Clarkson by Republican candidate Fred DiMaggio and his surrogates with a grain of salt. When it comes to political attacks, Mr. DiMaggio has a well-deserved reputation of playing fast and loose with the truth. When he ran for the Town Board in 2009, Mr. DiMaggio was censured by Fair Campaign Practices of the Capital Region for making false and misleading attacks against his opponent in that race. Mr. DiMaggio is now up to his old tricks again. The claims being made regarding Bethlehem's budgets and taxes are pure fiction.

Mr. DiMaggio, who previously worked as a political operative in the Pataki administration, has trumpeted this year's Republican slate as "Bethlehem United." The fact is the slate is an unremarkable union between Republicans and the kind of right-wingers who have contributed to the appalling dysfunction we have recently witnessed in Washington, D.C. For example, in an April 18, 2012 letter published in The Spotlight, Mr. DiMaggio stated that a that "a 'NO' vote on (the Bethlehem Central School District's) budget is a positive vote for our kids, this school district and our town." Thankfully for the students of Bethlehem, 62 percent of voters rejected Mr. DiMaggio's "tea party" priorities then, and Bethlehem's schools were recently ranked as the best in the Capital District. And Conservative Party Town Board candidate Linda Jasinki's political views are even further to the right than Mr. DiMaggio's.

We're just a click away

Imposing this fervent anti-government philosophy on our town would be disastrous.

The inclusion in Mr. DiMaggio's Republican slate of Town Board candidate Dan Cunningham – brother of former supervisor Jack Cunningham – is evidence that "Bethlehem United" is simply the product of a back-room deal between ousted party bosses.

Although I did not initially support John Clarkson's insurgent candidacy for supervisor in 2011, we both began serving on the Town Board in 2012. Since that time, I have come to know Supervisor Clarkson as a thoughtful and moderate pragmatist with a bias towards action, a willingness to challenge the status quo and an overriding objective of always doing what is in the best interest of the citizens of Bethlehem.

Mr. Clarkson previously worked for the state as an expert in local government efficiency and finance. The town has benefited immensely from Mr. Clarkson's expertise over the past two years, during which time the town has reduced its workforce, consolidated ambulance services, established multiyear budgeting, enacted a model ethics law, and saved money through shared services and modernization while preserving crucial services. As a result of these and other significant reforms, Bethlehem was awarded $776,000 this year from the state Local Government Performance and Efficiency Program (the largest grant to any town in the state).

While we have accomplished a great deal over the past two years, there is much left to be done to continue the work of transforming Bethlehem into a model of municipal government. The next step is the re-election of Supervisor John Clarkson for two more years.

Jeffrey D. Kuhn
Bethlehem councilman

Editor, The Spotlight:
As a former Bethlehem town justice, town prosecutor and defense attorney for many years in the Bethlehem Town Court, I am quite familiar with and aware of the qualifications necessary to be a successful judge. That is why I am enthusiastically endorsing the candidacy of attorney Andy Kirby for Bethlehem town justice.

For almost 10 years, Andy has served as town prosecutor, working closely with the Bethlehem police, the court clerk's office and the town judges to help administer justice in our court system. With his vast courtroom experience and knowledge of court procedures, together with his many years in private law practice, Andy is, by far, the most qualified candidate to be our new judge.

After over 50 years of legal and judicial experience, I am confident that I can recognize judicial character, temperament, knowledge of the law and dedication to our legal system. Andy possesses all of these essential qualities.

Therefore, I wholeheartedly support Andy Kirby for our new Bethlehem town justice this November.

What I believe

- Development is one of the biggest issues our town is facing. Bethlehem is unique among Albany's suburbs because we are more than a suburb, we are a community. Let's ensure development is done mindfully and on our terms.
- Green spaces, safe areas to walk and bike, and opportunities to gather together make a strong sense of community
- Local, small businesses are a great asset – let's support existing businesses and encourage new ones to choose Bethlehem
- Prioritizing efficiency, modernization, and creative thinking in local government is necessary to control costs

Letters to the Editor

DiMaggio has the experience, honesty

Editor, The Spotlight:
I want to add my name to the growing list of Bethlehem residents who are voting for Fred DiMaggio for Bethlehem town supervisor this November. At this point in our history, Bethlehem needs someone at the helm that can demonstrate true leadership and real direction. Fred DiMaggio is the only person running who can provide that leadership.

Ten years ago, Bethlehem reinvigorated its leadership when we elected Terri Egan as our supervisor. Terri was a refreshing change that brought new energy, ideas and talent in our town government. However, in the years that have followed that initiative and creativity we voted for has been lost. Fortunately, we have the opportunity to regain that same momentum – the same type of new ideas, energy and leadership needed for our town to be able to cope and be successful in these changing times.

Experience! Fred has a wealth of experience that lends itself to the new challenges we face as a community. The current administration resorts to regressive ideas, looking at new taxes as their way to balance the budget, despite already high taxes. Instead of generating new ideas, the focus is on trying to increase patronage positions, attempting to take away our voice by taking away our vote. Fred has innovative solutions that are based on sound economic principles to reduce our costs and more importantly, reduce our taxes.

Honesty! The current administration leans on “spin” to cover ineptitude, unless it’s simply an effort to try to fool us with smoke and mirrors (i.e. a 12 percent tax increase is an 8 percent tax increase that’s within the 2 percent tax cap). Fred is a straight shooter who is and will be forthright and honest with residents. Currently, the Administration’s five-year vision is singular in nature – Increase taxes. Fred believes we can cut spending costs and grow our tax base in order to keep our taxes low. This formula is proven in other communities and certainly would work here. We just need someone like Fred with the experience and leadership to see it through.

Fred has the right background to make these changes. He’s worked statewide to grow our economy and create jobs. He knows how to help small business grow, with a history of working to help small business thrive in New York state. In fact, his experience includes running a small business himself. He’s the right choice because, as his brochure says, “He knows how to get the job done, because he’s already done

Bethlehem needs the resurgence of energy, ideas and leadership, backed by honesty, integrity and experience. There is no one more talented, more qualified or more ready to manage the many demands of Bethlehem town government than Fred DiMaggio. I urge everyone to let their voice be heard through their vote - join me on Nov. 5 and vote for Fred DiMaggio for Bethlehem town supervisor.

Hyer the best choice for highway super

Editor, The Spotlight:
In this divisive time of partisan politics, it is important to remember that political affiliation is far less important than the experience and leadership that a candidate possesses. Howard Hyer, who is running for Bethlehem highway superintendent, is the best person for the job, hands down. Howard has 21 years of on-the-job training and experience with the town. He already has a management role with the current staff, and he is liked and respected by them. Howard Hyer has a positive and effective management style, he knows the roads of the town already and is very familiar with the areas that are prone to weather related problems.

I have had the pleasure of knowing Howard for many years and have seen all of the different hats he wears, whether it is as a soccer coach, football referee, Boy Scout volunteer, Eucharistic minister and lector or devoted and loving husband and father. Howard has been an active member of the Bethlehem community for over two decades and is always a positive and effective force for good. His intelligence, diligence and natural leadership abilities inspire the best in others and make him an asset in any organization. As highway superintendent, Howard Hyer will dedicate himself to the Bethlehem community and his highway employees, ensuring safe roads for all. I encourage you to visit his website at www.hyerforhighway.com. And I encourage everyone in the town of Bethlehem to elect Howard Hyer as the next highway superintendent because he is truly the best choice.

Re-elect Reinhardt

Editor, The Spotlight:
I am writing to The Spotlight to urge the voters of Bethlehem to re-elect Bill Reinhardt to the Bethlehem Town Board.

Bill has the essential credentials and experience to deal with major issues that confront the town. He has made significant contributions in developing plans and policies relevant to supporting the business community, while also zeroing in on energy and environmental issues. This along with keeping a sharp eye on the revenue and cost factors and the taxpayer’s needs.

We need to support Bill so that he can continue to help lead the Town Board in keeping Bethlehem a fine place to live and work.

Bethlehem United is all talk, no plan

Editor, The Spotlight:
The talk coming from the Bethlehem United slate sounds really good. They say we can have our cake and eat it too.

According to Fred DiMaggio (supervisor candidate) our taxes are too high and we have cut back on services too much. Town Board candidate Dan Cunningham claims there was a 15 percent tax cut that he will roll back. He says he’s coming up with a 20-year plan. Oh, and he wants to spend more on police too.

Sounds great, except there was no 15 percent tax hike and it doesn’t make sense to say we can have lower taxes and more spending. That would be great, but it is illogical. No details yet on his 20-year plan. I cringe in horror to think of what they might do if they were elected.

When I went to the public hearings on this year’s (2013) budget, I found out about the terrible financial jam we were in because of many years of bad decisions, the most damaging ignoring the end of a $1.7 million special payment from the Selkirk Cogen plant.

If we want a town leader that believes in telling us what’s real even though we don’t want to hear it, then we have to look to Supervisor Clarkson again. He was willing to make the really tough decisions to keep our way of life intact. He cut spending $1.8 million by cutting jobs as people left for greener pastures or retired. He cutback, but did not eliminate, some services like the hours at the transfer station. Yes, we don’t want to give these up, but think about the alternative. Imagine how high the taxes would have gone if he hadn’t found ways to do more with less.

We received a bonus from his work - the efficiency measures he worked out won a special award for the town. I thank the Supervisor’s ability to look ahead to the future by planning a multiyear budget that ends the practice of spending our financial reserves.

There is no real choice this year if we want to continue to have a responsible Town Government. John Clarkson is the person to lead us again.

The word on the street

Do you support legalizing casino gambling in the state outside of Native American reservations?

Joe Hart,
Delmar

“No, I just think it is taking money from the people that can least afford it.”

George Abatto,
Glenmont

“No, because I don’t see any moral good coming out of it and I don’t see any economic benefit in other areas where casino gambling was legalized.”

Doug Shanley,
Voorheesville

“Bringing casino gambling into the state ... is not the answer to the question. There is too much waste in other directions that could be addressed to bring money in.”

Meetings planned before school vote

On Thursday, Nov. 14, Guilderland Central School District residents will head to the polls to decide on a $17,324,650 bond referendum for voter approval. The plan calls for upgrades to aging infrastructure in the district’s seven school buildings and improvements for safety, security and technology systems district-wide. A separate proposition will also be put before voters that day in the amount of $846,300 for renovations and upgrades to the high school auditorium as well as to provide for the replacement of light poles on the high school football field/track.

A community meeting has been scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 29, at 7 p.m. in the Guilderland High School Large Group Instruction (LGI) room to review the finalized plan and to answer any questions the community may have in advance of the November vote.

The evening will begin with a brief presentation about the proposal. Attendees with then have the opportunity to participate in small group discussions relating to various aspects of the project. District leaders, as well as members of the Facilities Committee and the district’s architectural firm, will be on hand to explain details of the project.

Road takeover moves ahead

Guilderland begins eminent domain proceedings to acquire private road

By JOHN PURCELL
purcellj@spotlightnews.com

Stitt Road neighbors are celebrating the long-awaited conveyance of a private road to the Town of Guilderland. At a recent Town Board meeting, some residents even gave hugs to landowner Timothy Larned.

The Guilderland Town Board proceed with plans on Tuesday, Oct. 15, to acquire Stitt Road through eminent domain after Fred Wagner, owner of Helderberg Excavating & Trucking, Inc., requested additional time to finalize a land purchase at the board's Sept. 17 meeting. The proposed easement was not negotiated, however.

Wagner at the previous meeting said he was looking to purchase a right of way to access his landlocked property. He feared Stitt Road might not meet standards for heavier vehicles and equipment.

Fewer than a dozen homes are along the secluded roadway owned by William M. Larned & Sons, Inc., which decades ago was used to access several quarries.

Larned's special use permit required him to convey the roadway over to the town, but approximately 1,400 feet of the road was located off of his property. Two property owners along the right-of-way refused to hand over deeds to the land, which required the town to pursue eminent domain proceedings.

“We have exhausted all possible avenues of negotiating the realignment of Stitt Road and bringing it up to town specifications short of bringing the eminent domain proceedings,” Town Supervisor Ken Runion said. “As we have seen, Stitt Road is deteriorating very quickly and if something isn't done soon, we are going to have school buses that are not going to go up and down Stitt Road that could jeopardize safety of some of the children.”

The Guilderland Central School District agreed to continue picking up students living on the private road since the town was proceeding with plans to take over the roadway, according to Runion. The district recently declined to pick up students along Stitt Road because the road was not owned and maintained by the town.

Wagner could still negotiate purchasing the right-of-way from landowners despite resident objections, because it is a private land purchase. The town could regulate how the land is used in that scenario.

Larned also read a letter five neighborhood homeowners sent him opposing Wagner's initial proposal.

“In spite of their claims that only light traffic would be using that proposed new easement,” the letter read, “we feel that it is inevitable that large gravel haulers and heavy excavation equipment would be using that route, in view of the presence of unexploited valuable gravel deposits in the immediate vicinity.”

Runion said Wagner has since expressed to him a different option of upgrading an “old haul road” to access his property and exit onto Osborn Road.

Steve Wilson, a longtime Stitt Road resident, said it has been a long process and he was “ecstatic” to see the end nearing. Neighborhood residents also thanked Larned after the meeting for sticking around during the process and making repairs when needed.

Stitt Road resident David Hubbard, like many others, said he didn't expect the process to take more than 30 years.

“This has been going on for too many years,” Runion said.

Changes to town ethics law pitched

One year after formation, members of Bethlehem Ethics Board deliver annual report

By MARCY VELTE
veltem@spotlightnews.com

Members of the Bethlehem Ethics Board have recommended policy changes to the town's ethics law in their annual report.

Chairwoman Theresa Schallaci presented the annual report to the Town Board on Wednesday, Oct. 9. Schallaci said the committee isn't obligated to submit an annual report but members of the group opted to do so because they were proud of the work they did and wanted to reflect upon the law's effectiveness. The town's new code of ethics was adopted in June of 2012, and members of the Ethics Board were appointed in September of that year. The majority of the new code follows guidelines established by the state Comptroller's Office, but some portions were changed after several board members felt they did not match the needs of the town. The town's code allows the Ethics Board to give "advisory opinions" to town employees. Ethics Board members can also receive complaints, conduct investigations and make recommendation to the Town Board about those complaints.

Members of the board are appointed for terms of three years. After a year applying the code, the Ethics Board provided the town with several recommendations for potential changes they would like to see implemented. "One of our first orders of business was to work with the Human Resources Department to develop training materials for an orientation program for all town officers and employees," said Schallaci. Schallaci said no formal complaints were filed with the Ethics Board over the past year, but it did respond to three requests for advisory opinions and answered two inquiries regarding the board's procedures. "The board is happy with the fact that folks came out and sought out our guidance with regard to interpreting the code," she said. "We hope to work with Human Resources again to kind of build up our PR a little bit to let folks know we're out there and a resource for them." The recommended changes include amending the code to include a way for town staff and employees to appeal an advisory opinion issued by the Ethics Board. The group would also like to amend the code to render advisory opinions issued by the Ethics Board to be binding. "Absent an appeal process or binding application, the issuance of an advisory opinion is of limited value," read the recommendations. Other recommendations included authorizing the Ethics Board to initiate an inquiry into an alleged violation of the code, since it currently cannot launch an investigation absent a formal complaint. Schallaci said this change would allow for the board to take initiative in some cases. Members of the Town Board thanked the Ethics Board for its hard work. No changes were made to the law on the night of the meeting, but Supervisor John Clarkson said the matter could be discussed at a later date. A public hearing would need to be held before changes to the law could take place.

Guilderland's proposed budget brings tax decrease

Grimm says budget layout less transparent

By JOHN PURCELL
purcellj@spotlightnews.com

Guilderland homeowners would see their taxes decrease slightly in 2014 under the town's revised preliminary budget for next year calls for a property tax levy decrease of around 1.35 percent, or $153,000, for a total of $11.1 million in tax revenues. The decrease would be made possible through another $200,000 of fund balance usage, to a total of $1.7 million. The budget also contains a 2 percent raise for union and non-union employees, as well as for elected officials.

"We have the lowest town tax in Albany County and we have been very, very frugal over the years and our salaries ... compared with other municipalities, we are always lower," Town Supervisor Ken Runion said. "We have never had a budget that even came close to the tax cap since that legislation came into being. We've made each department hold the line on spending, so we have had minimal spending increases."

Runion said even though fund balance usage would increase under the plan, over the previous three years, the town has not tapped into what was allocated. He also said revenues are "always" budgeted lower than the prior year.

"We put it in there to make sure we keep our tax rates level," Runion said. "We are closely approaching the point our fund balances are getting to 50 percent of our budget. If we allow our fund balances to increase too much more, we will be criticized by the state comptroller for having too large of a fund balance."

Mark Grimm, Republican supervisor candidate, criticized Runion for breaking out pension costs, a practice that began in 2012.

"The most important thing to see about this budget is that Ken Runion split the town tax between two taxes," Grimm said. "This is very misleading, and it is very important people understand what has happened."

Grimm said the change made Runion's budget less transparent, with town taxes appearing to be reduced, because one of the biggest cost drivers was broken out. "You can't change the definition of the town tax line in order to cut taxes, you have to really do it," Grimm said.

Runion, however, argued breaking out state retirement costs made the budget more transparent. The proposed 2014 total tax levy adjustment takes into account all property taxes.

"Taxpayers should know what they are paying for and ... what is being mandated," Runion said. "I think that by doing that we are showing the town residents exactly what is driving budgets."

To view a summary of the town's preliminary budget, visit www.TownOfGuilderland.org. The complete budget can only be viewed at the Town Clerk's Office.

No contest in New Scotland elections

Insiders say GOP regrouping this year, plans to come out swinging in 2015

By JOHN PURCELL
purcellj@spotlightnews.com

Calling the winners of New Scotland races requires no political prowess this year, because the election has effectively been over for weeks.

The New Scotland Republican Committee offered no candidates for town offices this year, allowing Democrats to cruise to the finish line with no opponents to spar. Any voter who is disillusioned with incumbents or with how the town has been governed will likely have to wait another two years.

"Right now, the Republican Party to an extent is regrouping," said Glenn Schultz, a town Republican Committee member.

Schultz previously said in a letter to The Spotlight that the party felt it would better serve the community by not running candidates, and instead "promote ideas to improve our town and present real solutions" to problems facing the town.

Albany County Republican Committee Chairwoman Rachel Bledi said there were three factors leading to the empty slate: there was a late start getting potential candidates interested; the county committee is going through a transitional phase with her assuming leadership in January; and town committee Chairman Tim Danz had his priorities shift because he was getting married.

"At this point they (the town committee) are in the rebuilding stages and are gearing up for the next election cycle," Bledi said. "We are in the process of rebuilding and I can guarantee the Democrats will not be getting a free ride."

Danz could not be reached for comment.

Fellow town committee member Roselyn Robinson said Danz stepped up to lead the committee primarily because no one else was interested. She said he has been busy with his family business, along with getting married.

"I think he will not be chairman for long, not because we don't want him ... but because he is not committing as much time," Robinson said. "That might be the next step, somebody else to lead the helm. It is hard when you don't have the time."

Robinson was optimistic about the future of the town party, though, because several months ago the committee held a public meeting to attract new members and around 50 people turned out.

She said the meeting did yield some potential candidates, but nobody wanted to step up this election cycle. The committee also wanted to get to know the new faces better, too.

"We decided as a committee, rather than throw a name up there, we really wanted to concentrate on the new people and bring them up to speed on the town," Robinson said. "It is disappointing. I believe in a two-party system ... but it just wasn't meant to be and this is the first time ever I think it happened."

Bledi said while there are no Republican candidates for town offices this election cycle, there are still county races in which party members can show their support.

Robinson commended town Democrats for running an effective campaign in the last election cycle, which allowed the party to hold all seats on the Town Board. She said Republicans would focus on more effectively sharing their message and using social media next time around.

"You need more than one vision on the Town Board," Robinson said, "but they won, and to the victor goes the spoils."

Scores

scores were mailed.

The Guilderland Central School District mails student exam scores in-house, so it did not have the same error.

Voorheesville Superintendent Teresa Thayer Snyder said a district administrator, who also has a student in the district, noticed the error upon receiving her child's score.

Voorheesville contacted NERIC about the issue, who then had EDGE determine if the error affected the entire district. The printing vendor determined all district letters were affected.

"They took full responsibility and said they were really sorry," Snyder said. "They have been very reliable in the past ... it happens to be the most highly sensitive test they made the mistake on."

New York State United Teachers officials, along with some parents and school leaders, have expressed concerns about how significantly declining test scores might affect students. Snyder said having parents act as a "buffer" was more important than ever with many students seeing scores dropping.

Snyder, in her most recent "Superintendent's Page" post on the district's website, said she has received "numerous phone calls and emails" from parents concerned about declining scores.

"Children who received high scores in previous years and who carry high academic averages, this year fell below the benchmark contrived to indicate proficiency," Snyder wrote. "Their parents are surprised, but the children are distraught. I have received messages indicating that some children burst into tears and declared themselves dumb. I have heard from parents who are expressing disdain of a system that would inflict such nonsensical messages on school children."

Snyder said as of Friday, Oct. 18, she had not heard of any student opening their test score results letter without a parent present.

The Bethlehem Central School District appeared to notify parents and guardians of the error before test scores were received with a statement released Wednesday, Oct. 2.

"We are awaiting a detailed explanation from the vendor in question as to how such a serious error could occur, but wanted to alert you as soon as possible so you can address this issue at home, as you see fit," the announcement read. "We apologize for this unexpected turn of events and hope this error does not cause any undue concern for our students."

Sabre Sarnataro, spokeswoman for BC schools, said the district did not appear to have received any complaints about students opening the letter without a parent.

Voorheesville released the letter Brian Hussey, Jr., account executive for EDGE, sent the district apologizing for the error.

Hussey said EDGE developers and the production team reviewed the issue and determined the company "inadvertently overwrote" the phrase addressing letters to the parents or guardians with the Intelligent Mail Barcode.

"As in years past, all live work went through a final review and start up process to verify everything was in order," Hussey said. "With the changes to the layout of ELA and math parent reports this year, the emphasis was placed on verifying that the program(s) were pulling and merging all applicable data correctly. While this was performed as prescribed, the verification of the verbiage that should have appeared on the cover letter was overlooked in our facility during testing phase."

In the letter, Hussey wrote he could "appreciate a parent's confusion and concern" over the letter being directly addressed to the child.

"The EDGE organization takes pride in delivering a quality product and apologizes for any inconvenience this has caused," he said.

organizations like CEG and GlobalFoundries ... for their employees that are looking to move here."

The most rewarding aspect of her job was tying together businesses and town officials to promote Guilderland, she said.

"Using our larger system of nonprofits ... and Town Hall and the businesses and the school district, anything that had to do with tying that all together was my favorite thing," she said. "One of the best memories was the first Souped Up on Guilderland, which we did right when I first came on ... and it turned out really well and everyone loved it."

Chamber Board of Directors Chairwoman Jenni Bliven said Burbank was "excellent" at leading the organization and brought "fresh ideas," along with an outgoing personality.

"The chamber is what it is because of Kathy, so she is going to be missed," Bliven said. "She has been the staple of the chamber. I don't think there is anybody that can fill her role because she's done such a great job, but hopefully we can find somebody comparable to her."

Troy Miller, owner of CM FOX Real Estate, said Burbank got to know chamber members on a personal and business level.

"I found her to be very engaging and helpful and someone you could go to

"There is a lot of new businesses opening and coming in and all the little plazas are doing improvements."

— Kathy Burbank, outgoing Chamber president

if you needed something," Miller said. "It seemed like every function was well attended and everyone respects her."

Miller said Burbank is a "community person," so whether she is at the chamber or Community Caregivers, she will do a good job.

Burbank said she worked with Community Caregiver Executive Director Tom Tipple previously, so once she heard he was looking to retire she jumped at the opportunity.

"I had thought about the position before because the organization was appealing to me, because it was a community based organization and right up my alley of what I did before this," she said.

The most challenging thing for Burbank at the chamber was dealing with the recession and new business climate facing local businesses. She said there are good business opportunities in Guilderland that are only growing.

"Overall, we are doing well. There is a lot of new businesses opening and coming in and all the little plazas are doing improvements," she said. "A lot of the smaller businesses ... need to understand that the economy of 2007 is not ever coming back, where everybody had a lot of money to spend and you didn't have to compete so much."

One recommendation Burbank had for town officials to help improve the local business climate is to have a full-time economic development person. She said that would help attract more large-scale retail developments and assist local businesses.

Bliven said the board is looking for a person with an outgoing personality, comfortable with working with the public, who will bring fresh ideas to the chamber. There have been a few applicants, she said, but the chamber will take its time making a choice.

Burbank's advice to the next chamber president is to sometimes just "be quiet and listen" to what people have to say.

Defense

“We knew Cossackie was very good against the run, and they took us out of our rhythm,” said Sapienza.

Fortunately for Voorheesville, the defense bailed out the offense time and again, especially in the second half when it forced a pair of key turnovers and a crucial fourth-down stop late in the fourth quarter that gave the Blackbirds the ball inside Indian territory.

“Our defense gave us several opportunities that we didn’t take advantage of,” said Sapienza.

Quarterback Robert Denman was Voorheesville’s most effective offensive weapon. The junior rushed for both of the Blackbirds’ touchdowns and threw for 101 yards.

Denman gave Voorheesville a 7-0 lead when he capped a first-quarter series with a 10-yard touchdown run. Cossackie-Athens quarterback Zach Girvin countered in the second quarter with a 12-yard scoring scamper, but a failed extra-point attempt allowed the Blackbirds to carry a 7-6 lead into halftime.

Cossackie-Athens drove into Voorheesville territory early in the fourth quarter before being halted on downs. The Indians got the ball back after forcing the Blackbirds to punt, but they failed to convert on fourth down at their own 45-yard line, which put Voorheesville in prime field position.

The Blackbirds drove to Cossackie-Athens’ 27-yard line, which forced the Indians to use their final time out with less than one minute left in regulation. Following the time out, Denman took off on a 27-yard touchdown run. Mickey Knight added the extra point to put Voorheesville ahead 14-6.

Cossackie-Athens’ Philip Neal gave his team new life when he returned the ensuing kickoff to Voorheesville’s 40-yard line, but Andrew Waldbilling intercepted Girvin with 28 seconds left to seal the Blackbirds’ victory.

“You score the touchdown, and we think we put it away,” said Sapienza. “Cossackie didn’t think that way.”

Voorheesville running back Scott Roney tries to escape the grasp of a Cossackie-Athens defender during the fourth quarter of Saturday’s Class C South Division game.

The Guilderland football team saw its chance to host a Section II Class AA play-off game slip away with last Friday's 31-18 loss to Saratoga Springs in an Empire Division game.

The Blue Streaks (5-1 league, 6-1 overall) jumped out to a 24-0 halftime lead and withstood the Dutchmen's second-half rally to lock up a second-place finish in the division.

Guilderland quarterback Frank Gallo threw touchdown passes to Jake Smith, but he was also picked off three times by the Saratoga defense.

The Dutchmen (4-2, 5-2) travel to Colonie Friday for a Section II Class AA quarterfinal game. The Garnet Raiders (3-2, 4-3) earned the No. 2 seed out of the Liberty Division despite a 49-6 loss to Shaker last Friday when Columbia upended Schenectady 48-32 to grab fourth place.

Bethlehem (2-4, 2-5) nearly pull off the same feat as Columbia. The Eagles held a 14-13 lead late in the fourth quarter against Shenendehowa (4-2, 5-2) before the Plainsmen rallied for a 21-14 victory to knock Bethlehem out of playoff contention.

Ben Sibson's 33-yard touchdown pass to Matt Drum with less than two minutes left gave the Plainsmen the victory and the No. 4 seed out of the Empire Division.

took 12th place with a time of 16:47.

Bethlehem was third in the girls team standings with 59 points. Danika Jensen led the Lady Eagles with a seventh-place finish in a time of 16:21, while Julia Champagne placed ninth with a time of 16:26.

Sarah Vener (11th place, 16:30), Natalie Muller (14th, 16:53), Holly Machabee (18th, 17:11) and Keeley Hogan (19th, 17:19) also placed in the top 20 for Bethlehem.

On the boys' side, Bethlehem's Stephen Booker continued to rack up individual titles as he claimed the county championship with a time of 13:11. Alex Carlson finished fifth for the Eagles with a time of 13:36, and Keith Machabee crossed the finish line in 17th place with a time of 14:28 for the Eagles.

Guilderland had a top-10 runner in Noah Carey, who took seventh place with a time of 13:58. Matt Pasquali was 16th with a time of 14:14, and Jonathon Feil finished 20th with a time of 14:30.

Bethlehem placed fourth in the boys team standings with 74 points, while Guilderland finished fifth with 91 points. Colonie edged Christian Brothers Academy 52-55 for the county title.

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk was seventh out of the 10-team field in the boys race with 221 points. Angel Colon paced the Indians with an 18th-place finish in a time of 14:29.

Defense keys win

Voorheesville clinches Class C playoff berth with win over Cxsackie

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

The Voorheesville football team is in the Section II Class C playoffs thanks to its defense.

The Blackbirds made several key defensive stops in the second half to hold on for a 14-6 victory over South Division rival Cxsackie-Athens Saturday in Voorheesville and lock up the No. 3 seed for Sectionals.

Voorheesville's reward is a long road trip Friday night to Corinth to take on the Tomahawks. Both teams finished the regular season with 4-2 records in their respective divisions, but Corinth (5-2 overall) owns wins over two other playoff teams, Stillwater and Mechanicville.

"We're going to have to play the same defensive game we played today (against Cxsackie-Athens) and figure out how to run the ball," said Voorheesville coach Joe Sapienza.

The Blackbirds (4-3 overall) struggled to get anything going on offense. Playing their first full game without running back Matt Feller, who suffered a leg injury the previous week against Granville, the Blackbirds were out of sync against the Cxsackie-Athens (2-4, 2-5).

Indians finish strong

Win over Cohoes extends streak to three games

By SPORTS STAFF
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk boys soccer team wrapped up its Colonial Council season with last Thursday's 2-1 victory over Cohoes.

Tyler Johnston scored in the first half to tie the game at 1-1, and John Alverson put the Indians (9-5-0 league, 9-6-0 overall) ahead with a shot outside the penalty box. Ravena goaltender Kyle Almindo sealed the victory by stopping Matt Bluteau's penalty kick with five minutes left in regulation.

The victory gave the Indians their third straight Colonial Council win and their sixth victory over a league opponent in their last seven games. Their lone loss was a 2-0 setback against undefeated Ichabod Crane on Oct. 3. It also locked up a second-place finish in Division 2.

Ravena wrapped up the regular season Monday with a non-league game at Foothills Council power Scotia-Glenville.

Lady Dutch claim county meet title

Guilderland needs tiebreaker to edge Academy of Holy Names in girls division race

By SPORTS STAFF
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

It took a tiebreaker, but the Guilderland girls cross country team is the Albany County champion for 2013.

The Lady Dutch tied Academy of the Holy Names 44-44 for first place at last Friday's county meet at the Colonie Mohawk River Park in Latham. But thanks to Erin Miceli's 20th-place finish, Guilderland's sixth runner finished ahead of Holy Names' sixth runner to give the Lady Dutch the team title.

Guilderland's lead runner, Emily Burns, used a late surge to nip Holy Names' Lydia Williams at the finish line for third place with a time of 15:48. Another head-to-head battle between Guilderland and Holy Names went the Lady Dutch's way as Caroline Callender edged Meredith Franchini for 16th place with a time of 16:58.

Jenna Robinson placed fifth with a time of 16:08, and Sarah Forman finished eighth with a time of 16:23 to give the Lady Dutch three runners in the top 10. Rebecca Miceli

Albany County marks 330th anniversary

Public can view original 1683 Dongan Charter as part of celebration

By BILLY DeLAP

Albany County is celebrating its 330th anniversary in part by recognizing the sheets of paper that made its existence possible.

On Thursday, Oct. 31, the Albany County Hall of Records will host an open house with an exhibit of the county's oldest records, including the original document that split New York into counties. The exhibit will move to the Times Union Center on Sunday, Nov. 3, where it will join the "Live Life Local" celebration.

The 104,000-cubic-foot Hall of Records serves as an archives repository for the very oldest documents in the county. The public mostly uses the hall to study genealogical records. They can get water records, voter registration cards, state and federal census reports and building records, amongst other documents.

Among the stacks rests a document that established Albany County. It was

Festival of Nations features more than 25 different countries

Few people can boast they've traveled the world in the matter of a few hours, but through the longtime work Manoj Ajmera and the Festival of Nations, held each year in Albany, thousands throughout the Capital District can now claim they've come close.

In 1972, the first year of the festival, Ajmera took part in the community event as a dancer to represent his home country of India. Now, 42 years later, Ajmera is the event's chairman and has been for the past 28 years.

"This is my passion," said Ajmera. "As long as I can do it, I will."

That first spring decades ago, the event was held at Hudson Valley Community College with community groups representing 12 nations participating. The organizers were unsure how popular the event would be, but attendance was

Witches to swarm Ballston Spa

Specter of fun to descend on village for a cause in annual Witch Walk

By DANIA BIANCHI
bianchid@spotlightnews.com

You can grab your black hats and broomsticks and fly over to Ballston Spa Friday night to join the hundreds of witches that will swarm the village for the ninth annual Witch Walk.

More than 400 witches are expected to take part in this year's walk. The event is one of Carol Lang of Ballston Spa's unique ways of raising funds for homeless animals.

Lang, who also organizes the Busy Bone 500 walk for dogs each May, said she believes every dog deserves a home and has made it her mission to do her part.

Lang said the walk not only benefits the homeless animals, but it's a night out for people and the businesses in town benefit greatly, including pubs and restaurants.

"It's the biggest night of the year for them," Lang said.

The witches will walk to a variety of eateries throughout the night.

Lang said the restaurants usually have some form of entertainment planned for the night.

The event has grown each year since its founding in 2005.

"The first year, we had 32 witches. We had 330 last year, and we are anticipating at least 400 this year," Lang said.

The money raised at this year's event will be split up between three different organizations.

"Each year we pick a different cause, but it's always animal related," Lang said.

This is the first year Lang will give to the organization Save-A-Pet. After being touched by a story about six U.S. soldiers reunited with the dogs they cared for in Afghanistan, she felt obligated to help.

"I saw a news story about soldiers and a mother with seven puppies that they took care of and brought all of them home," she said. "Soldiers make friends with stray dogs while stationed (away from home). When they get home, the dog misses them, and the dog helps them cope with different problems they have."

Lang said that the organization works to help bring dogs such as these back to the soldiers.

"It costs $12,000 for each pet to come home because of shots and things. That's why when I heard it on TV, I looked into it," Lang said.

Lang said she liked the idea because she felt by supporting Save-A-Pet., she would be helping both animals and veterans.

The remainder of the funds raised will go to HOPE (Home for Orphaned Pets Exist) in Wilton and local seniors who need help with their pets. Lang has supported HOPE and local seniors in the past.

"When seniors have emergencies with their pets, the vet knows me and calls me to see if I have any money available," Lang said.

Although the only requirement to join the walk is a witch's hat, Lang said people do get very creative.

“We went as animal print witches. We had so much fun the first year, we said we would do it every year,” she said. “I love that the money goes towards helping animals, and it’s a girls’ night out.”

Over the years, Lang has raised more than $40,000 for animal causes.

Lang said although she is busy with a full-time job, her love for dogs keeps her motivated to help homeless animals. Lang said she considers her own dogs very lucky and wants that for all dogs.

“They live the golden life, not all dogs are as lucky,” she said.

so high people had to be turned away.

The festival was moved that next year to the field house at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute to allow more people to be admitted, but it was moved again in 1978 following the construction of the Empire State Plaza. Ajmera said the new space was in a more central location and there was a modern sound system, which allowed for the expansion of the festival’s activities.

The festival has since grown to include the participation of people from more than 25 countries, with the newest representation coming from Burma and Indonesia.

Between 3,000 and 5,000 people attend the festival each year. The day includes native dancing and music, crafts and lots of food.

“The dancing is popular, people come to watch, but people also love food,” said Ajmera. “Where else can you have all different home cooking from all over world?”

Ajmera said the festival is a great place for people to try new foods they may have been too afraid to try in the past. Many who attend also bring containers with them to bring food home, because there is no way to try everything within the festival’s timespan.

Attendees can sample such fare as Turkish dumplings called manti, Israeli challah bread pudding and Colombian corn pies with cheese. Other dishes include Greek moussaka (eggplant), pastichio (pasta and meat) and baklava (phyllo, chopped walnuts, syrup, spices.)

“Some people stay away from ethnic restaurant because they aren’t sure if they will like the food and will waste money,” Ajmera said. “This is a way for people to try the food and decide if they would like to go to a restaurant themselves later.”

He added the event is also a good experience for children. He said volunteers will be on hand to answer different questions about their country of origin and it can help spread understanding of other cultures throughout the Capital District.

“None of us know about all the countries, so they can get a glimpse of the music, food and culture. This is how America was built,” said Ajmera.

Many of the community groups also sponsor girls in the festival’s “Miss Festival of Nations” competition. Ajmera said the event is not a beauty contest. Instead, contestants are judged on their personality, community service and knowledge of their countries.

The first round of judging already took place on Wednesday, Oct. 23, at the Marriott Hotel in Albany. The day of the festival, those in attendance will gather to hear the names of the finalists. Those contestants will then be asked a final question, a last round of judging will be done and the winner will be crowned.

All the proceeds from the event are split among the different community organizations that participate. Ajmera said the tables are set up by nonprofit organizations, many of which are churches, different religious institutions or community centers.

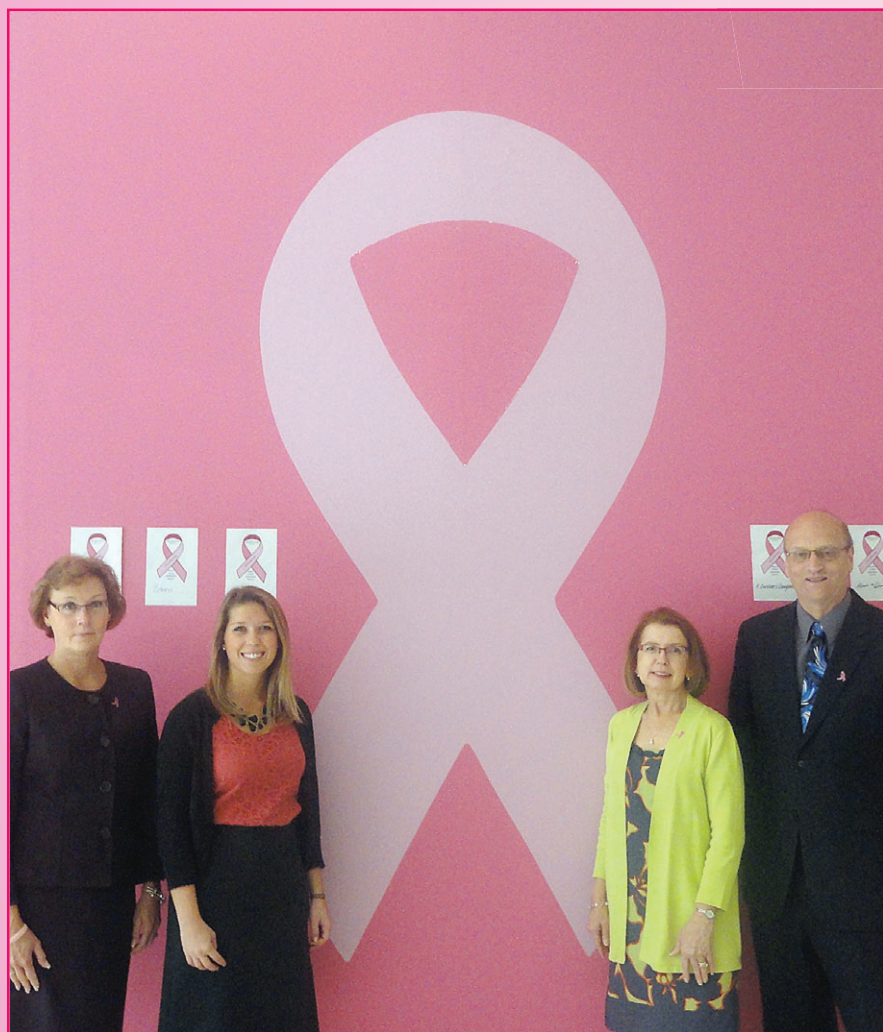

“The money does go to good causes, after expenses,” Ajmera said.

The Festival of Nations takes place at the Empire State Plaza on Sunday, Oct. 27, from noon to 5 p.m. The entry fee is $5 for adults and $2 for children ages 3 to 12. For more information, visit festivalofnations.net.

Here’s How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Charter

signed by Royal Governor Thomas Dongan and the New York Colonial Assembly on Nov. 1, 1683, and states it is “An act to divide this province & dependcys into shires and countys.” The act divided New York into 12 counties, two of which are now in other states. At the time, Albany County encompassed almost the entire northern portion of the state, but by 1808 Albany County assumed its current borders.

Dongan, a Catholic from Ireland, fled to France to escape religious persecution after the overthrow of Charles I. After the Treaty of Nijmegen was signed, establishing peace between the French and Dutch, Dongan was forced to return to England. James, Duke of York, appointed Dongan provincial governor of New York, where he served from 1683 to 1688.

Today, the original Dongan Charter is contained in a vault with four-hour firewalls – it would take four hours of raging fire before its structural integrity was compromised. The 330-year-old charter is an 11-page, handwritten document. It looks like a giant note pad, with Dongan’s seal threaded through the binding itself.

Thomas Clingan, Albany County clerk, said most of the county’s current projects involve digitizing documents – taking microfilm or paper documents and transferring them to digital files.

“We can take virtually any size document and digitize it,” said Clingan.

The Dongan Charter will be the highlight of the upcoming exhibit, but there will also be a display of the Fort Orange Minutes from 1652 to 1660, a transaction book between early Dutch settlers and Indians, Farm Surveys of from Rensselaerwyck Manor (currently Albany and Rensselaer Counties) and an exhibit on John Randel. Randel was a surveyor and cartographer who created maps between Albany and New York City and planned the grid layout for Manhattan.

Times Union Center will be a celebration of local businesses and the history of Albany County. There will be at least 25 local vendors selling locally grown products and food.

The County of Albany started reaching out to local businesses months ago in preparation for the event in hopes of highlighting all the local businesses in the area and the things they produce.

“There’s so much history right there in front of your face that you never see,” said Albany County Executive Daniel McCoy. “The history is neat that’s what were trying to promote. There’s something here for everyone.”

The event at the Hall of Records will run from 10 a.m. to noon on Oct. 31. The “Live Life Local” event will run from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Nov. 3.
