Presidential hopefuls raced through town

By ALI HIBBS

ALBANY — The 2016 presidential primary elections have, arguably, been the most polarizing in local memory. Rarely do presidential candidates make time to take to the stump in a state so reliably blue at the polls, but this year was notably different—three republican and two democratic candidates (as well as a former president in tow) have recently staged events in the Capital District in the lead-up to the state primaries on Tuesday, April 19.

On Monday, April 11, more than 10,000 supporters showed up to see Republican frontrunner Donald Trump eject protesters from the crowded arena and slam his opponents while calling for America to “take our country back.” On the same day, thousands descended on the Washington Avenue Armory—some waiting in line for more than four hours—to hear Bernie Sanders discuss income inequality and universal health care. Just days earlier, Hillary Clinton appeared at Cohoes High School to address supporters, bolster her reputation for environmental protection and defend her stance on the minimum wage. Ted Cruz and Todd Kasich have also come to visit the region: Kasich held a closed-door fundraising event at the Fort Orange Club on April 11 and Cruz was in Scotia on the morning of Thursday, April 7.

In an effort to understand what criteria influences Capital District voters, we asked some local officials and other local figures why they’re supporting their chosen candidate and have compiled a list in this issue. To hear more local voices, please visit our website at spotlightnews.com.

SPOTLIGHT ON FINANCE

Financial planning should account for your lifestyle

By Ruth Mahoney,
President,
Capital Region, KeyBank

When it comes to financial planning and budgeting, both individuals and planners assume most people have the same values, needs and wants. To an extent, this is true. We all pass through similar life stages—childhood, young adult, early career, mid-career and retirement. However, our respective paths through these life stages vary greatly.

The fact is, the lives we lead are very different, and our needs are diverse. This makes our relationship with money unique. Financial plans and budgets should account for this.

Your lifestyle shapes your needs

A sound financial plan will account for your lifestyle as much as your life stage. Do you want to buy a house? Launch a business? Start a family? Travel the world? Retire early?

Understanding your goals and values will help you prioritize how you spend and save. It will also help you determine what matters most to you so you can set a budget that is realistic. For example, many people dream of retiring early. But what happens if you value recharging your batteries by taking a nice vacation with your family, the average cost of which is $4,700?¹ Is it in the budget?

Life stages can define your lifestyle

One of the first “life stage” decisions a person makes is deciding what they will do after high school. Whether graduates decide to enlist in the armed services, get a job or enroll in a two- or four-year college, this is a major decision, and there is much to consider. For starters, according to a 2014 Pew Research Center study, today’s workers with only a high school diploma earn 62 percent of what a college graduate earns.² For those who do go to college, the decision to attend a two- or four-year, public versus private college will deeply influence the cost of their education. Then there is financial aid, as well as grants and scholarships. The earlier parents talk with their children about the future, the better they can plan to save for it.

If you’re a recent college graduate, career choice will largely shape your lifestyle. Engineering and computer science careers are higher earning than social work. So it is important to consider how your earning power will influence your ability to repay student loan debt, save money and meet your monthly expenses. It is also important to remember that retirement planning is a marathon, not a sprint. Anyone, regardless of career path, can meet their retirement goals, provided their goals are grounded in realism, they start investing early and they commit to executing a plan.

Another common life stage milestone is marriage. A recent study found the average wedding in 2015 cost $31,213.³ Today, some couples are deciding they don’t want to spend that amount—or even a portion of that amount. Instead, they are putting that money into savings or retirement accounts.

Another consideration is housing. According to a May 2015 study by Trulia, homeownership is cheaper than renting in all 100 of the largest U.S. metro areas. In fact, buying is 35 percent cheaper, assuming a traditional 30-year fixed mortgage with a 20 percent down payment. Here are some things to consider if you’re thinking about buying a house:

- saving for a down payment;
- closing costs and taxes;
- repairs and maintenance;
- reputation of the community and school district; and
- building equity.

If you’re renting you don’t have the worries of repairs and maintenance, but you’re also not building equity and gaining value from your payments. You are also limited by the types of home improvements you can make.

The final major life stage to plan for is retirement. The earlier you invest, the more your money will earn. For example, assuming a five percent rate of return, $10,000 invested by a 20-year old will grow to over $70,000 by age 60. That same amount invested by a 40-year old will only grow to $36,000.⁴

If you’re closer to retirement age, it’s not too late to get your retirement plan on track. You can do this by maximizing your savings opportunities (tax laws are now in your favor), avoiding new debt, creating sustainable income and considering long-term care insurance and other risk management strategies.

Budget for lifestyle

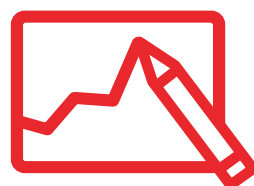

Executing your financial plan is about following a budget. But your budget needs to reflect your reality, or you won’t be able to stick with it. So track all of your expenses and income for a month. More important, honestly assess your spending. Then think about your lifestyle, as well as your short- and long-term goals.

Does your current spending support these goals? If not, it’s time to reevaluate your priorities and build a better plan. And remember, it’s your plan. The more it reflects who you are and what you value, the more successful it will be.

8 signs you are living beyond your means

Keeping up with the Joneses? Many of us try, and some of us can. But the truth is, most of us can’t because the Joneses are fictitious and, in our estimation, always live better than we do. So the real measuring stick should be ourselves, and the question we should be asking is: Can I really afford the lifestyle I’m living? Here are some signs that may suggest you can’t:

1. Your credit score is below 600. Your score is a reflection of whether you pay your bills on time, the age of your accounts and your outstanding debt compared to total credit. This will influence your purchasing power, as well as your cost to borrow money.
2. You save less than 5 percent of your income. You should aim to save 10 to 15 percent of your earnings.
3. You don’t have an emergency fund. Unexpected and expensive are near inevitabilities in life. You can’t afford to put these emergency costs on your credit card and pay interest on them. It’s a hole that is difficult to dig your way out of.
4. Your credit card balances are rising. If you carry a month-to-month balance, you are spending more than you can afford. You should be able to pay off your credit card balance in full every month.

5. Your monthly house payments account for more than 28 percent of your income. To calculate what percent you spend, divide your monthly mortgage or rent payment by your monthly income.
6. You can’t keep up with your bills. You find yourself making late payments or taking cash advances on credit cards to pay bills you once paid with cash.
7. You live paycheck to paycheck. You need to start putting aside at least 5 percent into savings. If you can’t, you need to take a closer look at your budget.
8. You have paid an overdraft fee in the past six months.

If you find yourself in any of the above situations, the healthiest thing you can do for your future is to take an honest look at your income, expenses and spending habits. Question every purchase you make, and be disciplined in those that you do. And make the necessary changes, because it’s easier to live with your hard decisions now than to deal with the consequences of doing nothing later.

Jury finds Troy man guilty of assault

ALBANY — William Beer, 42, of Troy, was found guilty after a jury trial in Guiderland Town Court of one count of assault in the third degree, announced District Attorney David Soares on Thursday, April 14.

On April 6, 2014, at approximately 2:30 a.m. while in the area of Mercer Street and Fuller Road in the Town of Guiderland, Beer intentionally and repeatedly punched another person in the face. The victim required stitches and suffered from substantial pain, bruising and swelling to the face, according to police reports. Beer was arrested following a complaint from the victim. Beer faces up to one year in Albany County Jail when he is sentenced on June 9.

Driver operating stolen vehicle dies in crash

GUILDERLAND — On Tuesday April 12, at approximately 12:40 a.m., Guiderland Police responded to a motor vehicle crash in the area of Schoolhouse Road and Western Avenue.

The driver of the vehicle, Cory Ash, 23, of Albany, was traveling east on Western Avenue when the vehicle struck a guardrail at Schoolhouse Road, causing the vehicle to enter the parking lot of Citizens Bank, located at 1516 Western Ave. Debris from the vehicle caused damage to the bank, while the vehicle itself sustained extensive damage. Ash, the vehicle's sole occupant, was extricated from the vehicle by McKnownville Fire Department. Ash received medical treatment from Guiderland EMS and Western Turnpike Rescue Squad and was transported to Albany Medical Center, where he was later pronounced dead.

The vehicle Ash was driving was reported stolen from the City of Albany minutes before the crash. Ash had been observed on radar speeding at 95 mph by a Guiderland Police officer on Western Avenue in the area of Crossgates Mall, and the officer did attempt to locate the vehicle. Albany Police and SUNY Albany Police were notified of the speeding vehicle. At no time was there any type of police pursuit. At this time the accident is still under investigation.

State Police arrests:

• Ruban Garcia, 37, of Albany, was arrested Monday, April 11, on Route 9W in Glenmont for possession of a weapon in the fourth degree, a misdemeanor. Troopers reportedly stopped Garcia for a traffic infraction and found him to be in possession of a wooden billy, which is considered a deadly weapon in New York state. Garcia was arrested and taken to State Police New Scotland for processing and released on an appearance ticket. He was scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on April 19.

• Bradley C. Fountain, 27, of Guiderland, was arrested Sunday, April 10, on Western Avenue in Guiderland, and charged with DWI. Fountain was reportedly stopped for speeding and displayed signs of intoxication upon interview. Police said he failed field sobriety tests and had a BAC of 0.11 percent. Fountain is scheduled to appear in Guiderland Town Court on April 21.

• Sophia Zak was arrested Sunday, April 10, on Western Avenue in Guiderland, and charged with five counts of illegal drug possession. Zak was stopped by police for an alleged traffic infraction and was reportedly to be in possession of zaleplon (a schedule IV controlled substance), Vyvanse (a schedule II controlled substance), both of which she did not have a prescription for, and a small amount of marijuana. She was charged with two counts of criminal possession of a controlled substance in the seventh degree, misdemeanors, two counts of controlled substance not in its original container, violations, and unlawful possession of marijuana, a violation. Zak is scheduled to appear in Guiderland Town Court on April 21.

PRIMARY COVERAGE

Phil Steck (D-110, NYS Assembly) Sen. Bernie Sanders

When did you become political? Were there any specific events in your life that caused you to become actively involved?

"I was always interested in government and politics, beginning in Fifth Grade, when my teacher, Mabel Moore, had us do reports on countries all over the world. My grandparents, who lived in Manhattan, used to get materials on those countries at the United Nations and send them to me. I became interested in the politics of the various nations. With respect to local politics, when I was 25, I asked our local Democratic District Leader Lee Aronowitz if he needed help. He replied that I should run for Colonie Town Board, which I did, so that was my first real political involvement."

Do your political affiliations reflect those of your immediate friends and family or not? Do you discuss those things?

"Yes. My father's family admired Franklin Roosevelt and the New Deal. Politics was always a matter of discussion in my parents' house. It was the Vietnam War era. My father, although a conservative discipline-oriented football coach, felt strongly that we should not be involved in the Vietnam War. He believed strongly, as I do, that it is nearly impossible to change another nation's political, social, and economic development through military intervention."

What are the issues in this election that are most important to you and how will they immediately affect you and your loved ones?

"Because of changes in U.S. economic policy since 1980, we have witnessed a remarkable transfer of wealth from the middle class and poor to the 'billionaires,' similar to what occurred in the Gilded Age. In New York, the top 1 percent had 11.9 percent of the income in 1980. Today it is 30.2 percent. The middle class is facing higher health insurance costs, higher college education costs, reduced pension benefits, and many other similar problems. People are unable to afford these things, which affects my family and all my constituents directly. In addition, the cost of foreign intervention is unaffordable. It deprives us of money that should be spent on repairing and improving our infrastructure. We have been rebuilding Iraq, but we cannot rebuild our own county. Foreign intervention is dangerous, particularly in the Middle East. It is not effective. As many sober analysts have pointed out, the 'blowback' is dangerous. ISIS is blowback from the invasion of Iraq."

Michael Cuevas Schenectady County GOP chair Sen. Ted Cruz

"I was 18, and 18 year olds have the right to vote. That was reason enough for me to become involved and encourage all of my friends to do the same, so I become a voter registrar at 18, and went from there."

Do your political affiliations reflect those of your immediate friends and family or not? Do you discuss those things?

"They certainly do. Most of my friends are also Republicans, so we're pretty free to have an open discussion. I can't say that all my friends share my views, but a good percentage of them do."

What are the issues in this election that are most important to you and how will they immediately affect you and your loved ones?

"First I've lived through September 11, so I've gotten to know and be vigilant to safeguard our country. We need a president who is aware of all threats domestic and foreign and can react in a responsible way. Ted Cruz is the only one on the Republican side that is able to articulate such a plan, but also be concerned about the Supreme Court. The next U.S. president has the opportunity to nominate at least one or several members of that court. Ted Cruz is the best candidate to entrust with that power.

Everyone is obviously affected by how we deal with the threats that face our country. We're all equally affected. In respect to the Supreme Court appointment, we know there have been a number of important issues before court and that have been deadlocked after Justice Scalia's death - religious freedom, freedom of press, freedom of assembly, right to bear arms - these are issues affect us all and - how we live, work and do business."

How do you see your candidate's platform as addressing those issues?

"Cruz has addressed how he would deal with the threats against America that we face. He has stated if we were to be involved in international conflict, we would need to use overwhelming force, end the conflict quickly and get our troops home as quickly as possible. He will work to eradicate the forces that work against our country and that is most important to us right now."

What was the most memorable part of the rally/rallies you attended?

"I attended and helped organize his rally here. The most memorable part of the rallies was the fact that we knew what his positions were already, so hearing and

When did you become political? Were there any specific events in your life that caused you to become actively involved?

"Became political in 1971, volunteering for Fred Field (supervisor for the Town of Colonie) and the Field Team.

No particular event caused me to become involved, just liked Fred Field, his leadership style, what he stood for, and the way the town was being run throughout his years as supervisor."

Do your political affiliations reflect those of your immediate friends and family or not? Do you discuss those things?

"Many, many of my friends are Republicans or Conservatives. However I do have good friends who are Democrats as well. When I was first elected into the County Legislature, an elderly Democrat took me under his wing and used to say to me "beneath it all, we are all human, we all have a heart." I always try to remember his advise when confronting political issues.

I will often discuss politics with various groups of my friends, not all."

What are the issues in this election that are most important to you and how will they immediately affect you and your loved ones?

"The deficit of our country concerns me because sooner or later we will all be affected through the taxes we pay. The United States was always the leader globally; now, China owns us.

Our National defense concerns me, and I need not say without it what will happen.

Border patrol is a concern, without it we will continue to support those illegal immigrants resulting in all of us paying higher taxes."

How do you see your candidate's platform as addressing those issues?

"Yes, he addresses them often."

What was the most memorable part of the rally/rallies you attended?

"I went to the Trump rally at the TU Center. Most memorable was what he had to say and hearing it from him, not from twisted stories from the news media. Meeting Mr. Trump was just as memorable."

Pat Fahy (D-109, NYS Assembly) Hillary Clinton

When did you become political? Were there any specific events in your life that caused you to become actively involved?

"I grew up in Chicago in a very political town, so my parents were always political. They're immigrants, and were always newspaper readers. I was coming up in the 60s when politics were huge. It was a very volatile time and I was very young and very impressionable. I didn't become active until grad school in mid-80s. Then for many years I was in DC, where politics are obviously huge. I started in social work and realized I couldn't affect change as much as I wanted to so I got into politics."

Do your political affiliations reflect those of your immediate friends and family or not? Do you discuss those things?

"We talk politics all the time. In my immediate family, my kids are teenagers so my kids would probably be more reflects it ten to be more practical than children and husband even live in works where govern look for ways to move agendas not just promote them in terms of my parents for must part reflect them. I tend to be more progressive than my immediate family very influenced by the fact that as I get older in life my parents came from limited means parents both depression era children."

What are the issues in this election that are most important to you and how will they immediately affect you and your loved ones?

"Some of the issues I guess are most important is what candidates can move us on income inequality. The issues that are driving me are education and jobs and I do believe that those are the issues driving the income inequality in our economy. Resolving these issues means focusing on youth, who can rally make changes, opening up opportunities to our youth, and making sure they have as many opportunities as the last generation did. The income inequality gap is really at the undercurrent at some of the very partisanship and craziness of this election. We need someone who can unite us behind issues and turn around the economy. One because who has the experience to make change. There are certain things about a few of the candidates that I've liked, but Hillary has the experience to make those changes. Also internationally we're at a very difficult time, and I think having the experience there to make change will matter as well."

How do you see your candidate's platform as addressing those issues?

"Her experience. She knows the right leaders and the right people. I've had the opportunity to lobby for her. I've seen her when she was a senator and I've had the opportunity to meet her and her staff on the ground. She is the hardest person working in our business in a lot of ways. When she was working in the senate she learned ways to achieve her goals. She

Delmar Duathlon Saturday

Remember, there is same-day sign up for the popular Delmar Duathlon bike and road race this Saturday, April 24, at 8 a.m. at the Elm Avenue Town Park.

This is the fifth year of the Delmar Du, which is cosponsored by the Bethlehem Department of Parks and Recreation and the Bethlehem YMCA. It's a great event with two miles of running, five miles of biking, two more miles of running and a full day of fun. The price for individual competitors is $55, and it's $70 for a team entry, which is a new category in this year's race.

Healthy Kids Day

Summer is the time for kids to get up, get out and grow. But for some kids, exposure to activities that stimulate the body and mind ends with the school year. In fact, research shows that over the summer, kids are prone to gain weight and fall behind in studies.

On Saturday, April 30, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., the Bethlehem Y will celebrate Healthy Kids Day, the Y's national initiative to improve the health and well being of kids. It is one of the most popular annual events at the Y, a free day of educational opportunities and creative, challenging, fit family fun.

There will be bouncy houses, crafts and coloring, police cars, fire trucks and an ambulance to tour, as well as soccer, floor hockey and basketball games. Please bring the family to the Y's Healthy Kids Day. There will be lots of fun and games for the whole family to enjoy.

YMCA Boot Camp

Clap your hands and stomp your feet. Everybody get off your seat. It's time to work out.

The Bethlehem Y is starting up another round of its very popular boot camp program this week. You can sign up now for the class, which will be on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 5:45 to 6:45 a.m. under the coaching of USA Boxing Professional Akeem Mouzon.

With apologies to Dr. Seuss

Camels and buffalo and bears, oh wow. Giraffes and monkeys and zebras and how.

Those are just some things you will eye when you go to summer camp at the Bethlehem Y. Water slides, cruises, a trip to the lake—the kids at the Y say our camp is great.

Mini-golf, parks, a big mountain hike—at YMCA summer camp, there's so much to like.

A summer with fun, a summer with friends—at Y summer camp, the fun never ends.

So go tell your mom and say to your dad, you want the best camp around to be had.

If you want the best summer with smiles every day, please sign up for camp at the YMCA.

The exotic animals at Adirondack Animal Land are just one of the many great field trip adventures planned for kids that attend summer camp at the Bethlehem YMCA this year. We are also going to Great Escape, Prospect Mountain, Water Slide World, High Adventure at Howe Caverns, a JP Morgan Cruise, Grafton Lake State Park and more.

The field trips—combined with our terrific camp staff and daily activities of fun, games, crafts, swimming, and play—make for the best summer camp around. It is also a great value and very accommodating for working parents.

Summer vacation from school will be starting before you know it, so either go online at cdymca.org or stop by the Bethlehem YMCA to sign your kids up for a great, fun summer.

One Red Martian is one of 100 reported bands due to perform in Albany this weekend — Get out there!

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

ALBANY — One Red Martian is emerging on the Albany music scene.

The indie rock quartet is releasing its new album "Late" on its own record label, Just Pretend Records, and they're starting to play out after taking two years to record, including a performance at this weekend's MOVE Music Festival in Albany.

"Everything has been leading up to us putting out an album that we can then stand on as a solid foundation," said keyboardist/vocalist Dan DeKalb. "So ever since we moved here two years ago, we became obsessed with recording. We knew that whatever we were going to do next, we were going to record ourselves. So, there was a long period of trial and error and being really obsessed with engineering our own thing. We haven't been playing out much at all."

One Red Martian's members have known each other for far longer than two years. Brothers Jimi (lead guitar/vocals), Ben (bass) and Joseph Woodul (drums) grew up in Herkimer County and went to school with DeKalb, and they've been playing together since they were teens.

"We all started listening to our parents' music, like a lot of classic rock — the Beatles, the Rolling Stones," said Jimi Woodul. "And then when we were teenagers, the pop punk-emo thing was happening, so we had that in our wheelhouse for a while."

"When (Green Day's) 'American Idiot' came out ... like, I think it was mandatory, everyone had to listen to that album for a six-month period," added Ben Woodul.

The band played around the Utica/Herkimer area for a while before making a bold move to Dallas after high school, where they learned the difference between a small town music scene and a big city scene.

"Where we were from, we were kind of like a big fish in a small pond type of thing," said Jimi. "And then, when

■ ARTS

A drive to gain an impression

Art with ties to World War II and Beatlemania

By ALLISON FRY
news@spotlightnews.com

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. — A haven for impressionist art, the Clark Institute of Art is just a short drive away for us Albany-dwellers, where the curatorial team is constantly expanding and adding to their collection one which began under the careful hands of Sterling and Francine Clark when they opened the museum in 1955.

There is no shortage of fascinating tales sprouting from the couple's past and their love of art. One of the largest pieces in their collection, "Nymphs and Satyr" by William-Adolphe Bouguereau, has quite the backstory, as it was acquired while the couple was living in France during the second World War. Deciding to put the painting on display in a public space and charge viewers to come see it, the couple then donated all of their earnings to the French Resistance in their own effort to end the war.

Also at the institute, you will find several paintings of horses, a favorite of Sterling's. His adoration for the equine caused him to enter a racehorse, named Never Say Die, in the Epsom Derby, a famous race held in Surrey, England. Despite most not taking an American submission seriously, the entry caught the eye of an older woman from Liverpool, who then sold her jewelry and bet the profits on Never Say Die with the hopes of winning and opening a coffee shop. As fate would have it, Never Say Die ended up in first place, and being that she was the mother of Pete Best, original drummer of The Beatles, it was at that very coffee shop that the sensational group held their first performance.

Sterling and Francine have since passed, but their presence is still felt in the museum, which now encompasses the original building as well as a modern renovation that debuted in 2014. The sleek, new addition features floor to ceiling windows that look out onto a reflecting pool, and beyond that, an ascent of greenery. It's in the new wing that the rotating exhibitions are held; however, in the original building is where the magic continues to happen.

As you enter the original building, which also served as a home to Sterling and Francine when they first opened the institute, you are met with a large gallery including the works of Winslow Homer and George Innes, two of Sterling's favorite American landscape artists.

You are then given an array of options, as the building exists as a maze of galleries, one engaging space leading you into the next. Among these galleries you will find some smaller rooms that challenge the viewer to focus on an individual piece of art or artist. In one, you will find a rare pastel by Degas, which has been specially maintained and showcased. Public relations manager Sally Morse-Majewski expressed her passion for this room, due to not only her love for pastels, but also their ability to display such a piece. "The room has limited light to showcase and preserve it, otherwise it would be in a drawer somewhere."

As you roam from gallery to gallery, you ultimately find your way to a large, sunlit, lavender room. This center gallery is home to several pieces from the institute's most famous collection. A perfect encapsulation for the works of Monet, as you wander around the open, airy space, you feel as though you might round a corner to see the actual tulip fields of Sassenheim, or that you might stumble upon the cliffs of Etretat.

VOORHEESVILLE — Old Songs welcomes the Yves Lambert Trio for a performance on Saturday, April 23 at 7:30 p.m.

Yves Lambert figures among the most influential players in the roots Québécois revival. He is known for his unique ability to translate anecdotal, poetic, or political texts into songs. His work as a songwriter and his capacity to create unique musical moods make him a key figure in folk music production. After founding and performing with La Bottine Souriant for 26 years, he went searching for

Always on the lookout for innovative trends and attentive to the new guard of Québécois musicians, he ended up surrounding himself with young talent and created the Bébert Orchestra in 2004, and the Yves Lambert Trio in 2010. The trio showcases the unique connection between maturity and youth by creating a new world of poetry and celebration. Lambert's charisma and talent, coupled with Tommy Gauthier's and Olivier Rondeau's virtuosity and passion, the nuances of their arrangements, and their distinct harmony, make this trio a one-of-a-kind musical experience.

WMHT-FM's Rob Brown

A playful look into our Classical Companion

By MICHAEL HALLISEY

halliseym@spotlightnews.com

TROY — Do something long enough, and you become good at it.

For more than 40 years, Troy's WMHT-TV has supplied the Capital District with a steady broadcast of classical music. No. The programming does not consist of tired old recordings of Bach and Beethoven you could find on vinyl at your local library. Last week, for example, the station featured the recording of David Bowie narrating "Peter and the Wolf." The Beatles song catalog has been played on classic guitar. And, on many occasions, Star Wars fans can catch John Williams' score played on its radio waves. Those are just a few examples of how the Capital District's "Classical Companion" has maintained relevance to a contemporary crowd of music lovers.

As the radio station went through a recent fundraiser, we approached Rob Brown, WMHT's Radio Music Director, to ask him a few off-the-cuff questions.

It goes without question that musical tastes vary within a person; maybe winter doldrums bring out Brahms, where the whimsies of summer usher in show tunes from Gershwin. With such a vast catalogue at your disposal, what do you find yourself going to from time to time?

What a great question. We need to get you in to program the music. I find myself going back to a couple of pieces no matter what the season is—Mozart's "Requiem," Bach's cello suites, Beethoven's symphonies.

But then, I do tend to really like some of the more melody-centered stuff come spring — like Dvorak's "Serenade" or Holst's "St. Paul's Suite" — and the darker, more brooding renaissance/baroque sound in winter.

Albany Symphony Orchestra's music director David Alan Miller, who can often times be heard on the station, has received many accolades in his now 25 years in Albany. He travels the world. He's "Super Conductor" to the kids, locally. Nevertheless, who envies whom in this situation; Does the maestro envy you, or do you envy the maestro?

We envy him, absolutely. He is such an asset to this community. And the orchestra is such a treasure. Plus, he gets to stand up in front of that orchestra and coax all the power and beauty out of it. We crank up the speakers in the studio, but it's nowhere near the same thing.

Fans of any given genre of music can be very particular in categorizing artists. Adele is adult contemporary, Kanye is hip-hop and Bach is baroque. Say anything that may conflict with these fanatics, and you may find yourself in trouble. With that said, how many phone calls come in asking to identify the station as "Your Baroque Music Station"?

It does not sound as good as "Classical Companion," no. And we really don't play primarily baroque music. We have the all-Baroque Bach's Lunch weekdays from noon to one. But other than that, I'd say most of the music we play actually does come from the classical or

■ CULINARY ARTS

Food & Vino

By ANN LINDA CIOTOLI

news@spotlightnews.com

Here are a couple spring recipes that I thought everyone might enjoy. I thought I would give everyone a recipe for an appetizer, and one for a dessert. The following serves six to eight people.

Spring Pea Crostini

Ingredients

10 oz. package of frozen peas
1/3 cup extra virgin olive oil
1 garlic clove (if you are not a fan of garlic in your recipe, you can rub a piece of garlic on each slice of the bread once it's toasted)
1/2 cup grated parmesan cheese
1 tsp. kosher or sea salt
1/4 tsp. fresh ground black pepper
a squeeze of fresh lemon (optional)

Preparation

Pulse peas, garlic, Parmesan, salt, and pepper in a food processor, or mash if you like it chunky. Slowly add olive oil until well combined. Season with additional salt and pepper, if needed. Transfer to a bowl.

Preheat oven to 400° for the crostini. Brush slices of bread on both sides with olive oil. Place on a cookie sheet, and toast both sides until golden brown.

Place bread on a clean surface, let cool, and top with 1-2 Tbs. with spring pea mixture and serve.

Limoncello Mousse

Ingredients

2 oz. limoncello liquor
1/3 cup sugar
1/3 cup water
8 oz. white chocolate
2 Tbs. unsalted butter
1 cup mascarpone cheese
6 egg yolks
zest of 1 lemon
1 cup whipped cream (homemade)

Preparation

Add water and sugar to a pan and boil for three minutes.

Beat egg yolks in a large bowl until they are well combined and lighten in color. Slowly add sugar and water mixture, and beat one minute until smooth. Melt white chocolate and butter until smooth (double boiler). Cool chocolate mixture slightly, and add to egg mixture. Add 2 oz. of limoncello, stir until well mixed. Fold mascarpone into chocolate mixture.

When making whipped cream, (Beat until fluffy and forms stiff peaks) Fold whipped cream, and lemon zest into chocolate, mascarpone mixture until well blended. Pour into glasses of your choice, and refrigerate overnight.

Garnish with candied lemon, or lemon slices...or garnish with fresh berries.

Limoncello White Wine Spritzer

Ingredients

Limoncello, chilled
Dry white wine, chilled (Yellow Tail Sauvignon Blanc)
Seltzer

Preparation

Fill glasses with ice, and halfway with wine. Pour a few splashes with limoncello, and top with seltzer. Garnish with a slice of lemon.

Pairings

Yellow Tail Sauvignon Blanc - New South Wales, Australia - Pale straw yellow in color with vibrant citrus, and green apple flavors. This wine has a crisp finish.

This wine can be used in the Limoncello Spritzer, and can be served alone with the Spring Pea Crostini.

Something old, something new

Scott Bradlee's
Postmodern Jukebox
coming in September

ALBANY — Created by Scott Bradlee, the rotating collective of Postmodern Jukebox has spent the past few years amassing more than 450 million YouTube views and 1.9 million subscribers, performed on "Good Morning America," topped iTunes and Billboard charts and played hundreds of shows to packed-house crowds around the world.

Postmodern Jukebox is to perform at the Albany Palace Theatre on Friday, Sept. 30 at 8 p.m.. Tickets go on sale this Friday.

Postmodern Jukebox takes current Top 40 hits and re-imagines each song to fit a sounds from older generations. For example, Bradlee and Postmodern Jukebox turned Miley Cyrus "We Can't Stop" into a doo-wop ditty that's garnered over 15.4 million views.

Last year, it envisioned Radiohead's alt-rock hit "Creep" as a torch-like ballad that's racked up over 16.9 million views and was named one of the "9 Best Viral Cover Videos of 2015" by People magazine.

Bradlee, the mastermind behind the group, has turned Postmodern Jukebox into a juggernaut by building an incredible grassroots movement around the act. He continues to pick the songs, create the arrangements and shows, and puts together the performers - which includes some notable names alongside phenomenal "undiscovered" talent.

Tickets go on sale Friday, April 22 at 10 a.m. at the Palace Theatre Box Office (located at 19 Clinton Ave. Tickets are also available for purchase via Ticketmaster Charge-by-Phone at 800-745-3000 or online at ticketmaster.com. For more information visit palacealbany.com or call 518-465-4663.

Muscle cramps demystified

By DR. KARYN DORNEMANN

news@spotlightnews.com

A muscle cramp can bring a jogger to his knees or elicit the fear of drowning in a swimmer; however, athletes are not the only individuals to experience a muscle cramp or spasm. According to one estimate, approximately 95 percent of people will at some time in life experience the sudden, sharp pain associated with a muscle cramp.

A muscle spasm is an involuntary contraction of a muscle, part of a muscle or several muscles that usually act together. If the spasm is forceful and sustained, it becomes a cramp. Most people describe a muscle cramp as a feeling of tightness in the muscle; it's not unusual to feel a lump of hard muscle tissue underneath the skin in the vicinity of the cramp. During a spasm or cramp, it may be painful, or even difficult, to use the affected muscle or muscle group.

Cramps and spasms can affect any muscle, even those affiliated with the body's various organs; however, they are most common in the calves, hamstrings and quadriceps. Cramps in the feet, hands, arms, and lower back occur frequently, as well.

Many possible causes

Common as they are and painful as they can be, a shroud of mystery surrounds the cause of muscle spasms and cramps. Some researchers believe that inadequate stretching and muscle fatigue lead to cramps. According to the University of Michigan, other possible factors include a low level of fitness, overexertion (especially in intense heat), stress and depletion of electrolytes through excess sweating or dehydration. Certain diuretic medications can also cause cramping due to a loss of sodium, potassium and magnesium.

Treatment of muscle spasms

Typically, muscle cramps require no treatment other than patience and stretching; medicines are not generally needed to treat an ordinary muscle cramp. Gentle and gradual stretching, along with massage, may ease the pain and hasten recovery.

When a muscle spasm or cramp is the result of an injury, applying ice packs for the first two to three days may help alleviate the pain. Spasms that last a long time may be treated with moist heat for 20 minutes several times a day.

If you tend to get muscle cramps during exercise, make sure you drink enough fluids, and after your workout, consider a warm Epsom salt bath followed by stretching of the affected muscles. Generally speaking, water is sufficient for rehydration; however, some may find coconut water or juice beneficial as a means to restore their body's electrolyte balance.

If your muscle cramps are associated with a specific medical condition, keep in mind that you need to address the underlying health problem for the cramps to subside.

Tips for prevention

As with any health condition, it is always best to prevent muscle cramps or spasms—especially if you tend to develop them. Consider altering your diet and lifestyle by incorporating the following suggestions:

Take steps to improve your diet. Eliminate sugar and caffeine from the diet, and increase consumption of fiber Preventing cramps can be as easy as watching what you eat. Cut out sugar and caffeine, and add foods rich in calcium and magnesium.

you really get out there in the world, we saw a lot of really good bands."

"There were specific bands that we ran into that were our age essentially, but much tighter than we were," said Joseph Woodul. "And that really lit a fire under our ass in certain ways in terms of curbing our progressive (rock) interests and becoming more pop oriented again."

One Red Martian recorded and released an album while they were in Dallas, but things began to fall apart for them around 2012.

"There were things that had happened that made the band kind of reassess the importance of what we were doing," said DeKalb. "We were kind of in a crisis for a while, for personal reasons."

"Dallas was a great learning experience, but I think in a lot of ways, it wasn't nurturing of what we were trying to do," said Ben. "There is a music scene in Dallas, but it's much more on the metal side. And everything was so spread out. It was almost too big. It's hard to get that sense of community going, too, where in Albany it might be a smaller scene, but you end up running into the same people and you get to know who that scene is actually made up of."

Eventually, the band moved back north to Albany, where they began writing and recording "Late." Rather than pay someone else to engineer the album, they decided to record it themselves. At first, they attempted to track each part individually, but they soon realized that they needed to play as four people in one room.

"We listened back to some of our older recordings that ... something about them we really liked," said Ben. "Ultimately, what we liked about them was they had a certain je ne sais quoi from being live that we just weren't getting (from tracking individually)."

Jimi Woodul wrote the lyrics for all but two of the 12 songs on "Late." As the band's primary songwriter, he said

"We're excited as people can be about playing the MOVE Music Festival. We're just ready to play."

Dan DeKalb of One Red Martian

he wanted to make certain the lyrics could stand on their own.

"I've always been really obsessed with the lyrics of things," said Jimi.

"If the song can be great with just one instrument and someone singing over it, then that's what I consider to be classic songwriting. If it doesn't have great lyrics, I won't follow through."

Once the lyrics were complete, Jimi brought the songs to the band with some general ideas of what the melody and the chords should be, and together they created a sonic landscape that ranges from quiet introspection to vibrant pop.

While they were recording, One Red Martian holed itself up in the studio. The band members supported themselves by taking day jobs, but they didn't start playing out until "Late" was complete. Their first gig in the Albany area came in February when they opened for the Chronicles at the Madison Theater. A hometown show in Utica and a March showcase at McGeary's followed.

"It feels really, really good to be playing in front of people again because ... we've been kind of in a cave for the last two years with this stuff and working really hard to make that moment special when people see it — especially people that are still connected with us from way earlier on," said DeKalb.

One Red Martian's next show is an hour-long set Friday at the Fuze Box, 12 Central Ave., as part of the MOVE Music Festival.

"We're excited as people can be about playing the MOVE Music Festival. We're just ready to play," said DeKalb.

After that, the band members said they plan on getting their songs to radio stations, making music videos and playing as often as they can.

"We're trying to get momentum going, and we're trying to figure out ways that we can keep content coming, whether it's new recordings or it's new music videos," said Ben. "If you're interested in tuning in, there's going to be something new coming your way to check out."

'Plain Spoken' Tour headed to Albany

John Mellencamp to perform at Palace Saturday night

ALBANY — The Palace Theatre will present John Mellencamp with his 2016 Plain Spoken Tour with special guest Carlene Carter on Saturday, April 23, at 7:30 p.m.

Mellencamp will perform songs from last year's highly praised "Plain Spoken," his 22nd full-length studio album, along with selections from his catalog of fan favorites. Carter, daughter of June Carter Cash, will open the concert.

During Mellencamp's 40 year career in music, he has transitioned from pop star to one of the most highly regarded songwriters of a generation. "The Voice of the Heartland" continues to evolve artistically with "Plain Spoken," the artist's first new music since his 2010 critically-acclaimed album "No Better Than This." Praised as "stark, soul-baring (Billboard)" and drawing comparison to Bob Dylan's Grammy-winning album 'Blood on the Tracks,' Plain Spoken draws on timely themes including political and social injustice, further cementing Mellencamp's status as "arguably the most important roots rocker of his generation (Billboard)."

Mellencamp is a member of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, and the winner of a Grammy Award, The John Steinbeck Award, the ASCAP Foundation's Champion Award, The Woody Guthrie Award, and the Americana Music Association's Lifetime Achievement Award.

He is also one of the most successful live concert performers in the world. The social activism reflected in his songs helped catalyze Farm Aid, the concert series and organization that has addressed the struggle of American family farmers for more than 25 years. The unique instrumentation of his band and his poignant songs about everyday life in the American heartland, are widely credited with being the forbearer of the Americana/No Depression genre of rural-inflected music.

Tickets for Mellencamp's concert at The Palace cost between $39.50 and $115 and are now available for purchase at the Palace Theatre Box Office, via Ticketmaster Charge by Phone at (800)-745-3000, all Ticketmaster outlets, local Wal-Mart Ticketmaster Centers, or online at ticketmaster.com. Regular box office hours are weekdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

How do you see your candidate's platform as addressing those issues?

Senator Bernie Sanders is the only candidate addressing these issues. His opponent is compromised by her relationship with Wall Street and her interventionist views. Among other things, Senator Sanders supports reinstating the Glass-Steagall Act, breaking up the banks that are "too big to fail," and single payer health insurance. These are measures that I have supported in the New York State Assembly. In addition, Senator Sanders would pursue a non-interventionist foreign policy, more like the "Good Neighbor" policy of Franklin Roosevelt.

What was the most memorable part of the rally/rallies you attended?

and I think that serves her very well. She knows how to muscle through and keep coming back. She has shown extraordinary experience. Things for instance Bernie has said, she has the experience to get it done.

What was the most memorable part of the rally/rallies you attended?

Having my teenaged daughter with me. I think it makes a big difference between what you see on TV on those 30 second sound bites and actually being able to see Hillary Clinton in person and hearing a full speech,

I gave introductory remarks at the Sanders rally at the Albany Armory in front of well over 4,000 people. It was inspiring. I was not nervous, but the adrenaline certainly did get flowing since it was the first time I had addressed such a large assembly. My favorite moment was when I mentioned I was from the Town of Colonie, and there was a huge cheer. Apparently quite a number of my constituents are "Feelin' the Bern."

seeing her through the eyes of a teenager, and seeing how impressed she was. She walked away so impressed and it left a lasting impression.

seeing someone in person, you tend to notice how genuine their feelings are, and you get to see that they are a really kind and caring person. That's what I saw. He spent a significant amount of time with all the people there, and that shows something.

was a champion for the youth, a champion for young adults right as the recession hit. I've liked so much about what Senator Sanders has said, but she is the one that can get it done I think... Donald Trump has some simplistic ideas, without demonstrating the ability to carry them out. To me, nothing about Hillary is simplistic. I think she's more battle tested than many four starred generals. Even when facing setbacks she keeps coming back,

Editor's Note

Ohio Governor John Kasich was also in the Capital District Monday, April 11, raising funds as he continues his run to for the Republican nomination for President. His day started by meeting with the Republican Assembly Conference in a private function at the Fort Orange Club. From there, he attended functions at LaSalle Institute in Troy and at the Saratoga Springs City Center.

Internet access denied

Town officials, residents frustrated with provider's refusals to repeated inquiries about lack of residential service

By TRICIA CREMO
cremot@spotlightnews.com

NEW SCOTLAND

— Officials are moving to take legal action against Time Warner Cable, as a staggering number of residents are without Internet service.

It is not known just how many of the roughly 1,100 subscribed homes in town are without Internet service. In order to discover just how many homes are without, the town is planning to file a lawsuit against the Public Service Commission, which has previously denied requests for this information.

Though not the primary purpose, this action will likely serve as a leveraging tool as the town begins renegotiating its franchising agreement contract with Time Warner, which ends in 2018. While the contract, is renegotiated every 10 years, requires that 20 houses on each linear cable mile have Internet access, some residents say their roads have more homes and still lack access.

While Peter Henner, a lawyer in Clarksville, filed a freedom of information (FOIL) request for an exact number of homes without Internet access, back in February, Time Warner refused the request, citing the information as a "trade secret," one of few FOIL exemptions, made to protect businesses from competitors.

"Basically, this is nonsense. No one else is competing against Time Warner, so how is this possibly something that a competitor can use to its benefit?" Henner asked. "Whether its 500 or 300 or 100, I think the Public Service Commission ought to say it's not a trade secret and make [information on the number of unserved houses] public."

In his research, Henner has not found any past cases that address this issue specifically. However, to him, "it seems basic common sense that information on how many homes do not receive Internet be made public because this information would not cause injury to Time Warner."

According to Town Supervisor Doug LaGrange, large chunks of Route 32 are unserved, including the State Troopers barracks in Clarksville, as well as on County Route 112, where Mr. Henner lives. Rural roads connecting to Route 85A are also largely unserved, despite their proximity to the major roadway, which is served.

"There no rhyme or reason to it. It's kind of odd when you take a look at it," said LaGrange, referring to a map of served and unserved areas, which the town has created without help from Time Warner.

Those who lack access have the choice to either pay tens of thousands of dollars to connect their homes, or use Internet from other sources, such as cell phone data. The supervisor himself lives in an unserved area, and uses DirecTV for cable, which he said had a sporadic signal, and uses a Wi-Fi card from Verizon so that he can receive Internet service.

Tyler Salonich, of Voorheesville, was quoted over $16,000 to connect his home off of Route 443. "They've got us by the throat. There are 10 more houses that could be connected before it ever reached my home," which lies at the end of the road, said Salonich. Salonich is on a waiting list to be connected to the internet through Verizon FIOS. He has also reached out to Connect America, a non-profit company that aims to provide Internet access to all of the country. In the meantime, his only source of Internet is at work.

"It can be quite expensive," said Supervisor LaGrange. "When my grandson comes over and wants to watch something on my iPad, he has fun for hour and we end up paying $60... The key here that we want to make clear to the state and Time Warner is that there is a larger and larger population that looks to work from home. New Scotland, whether we like it or not, is more of a rural community. People are living rurally to help escape from [the] rat race, and without having to tackle the traffic. And schools requiring more and more [students] to do homework through the Internet. That's where we are today. The Internet is crucial for families."

When Samuel Breslin moved to New Scotland, he had no idea that his home did not have Internet service. "When I bought my house in 2013, on the listing it said high-speed Internet, so it never even crossed my mind. Then after we moved in, Time Warner quoted us over $40,000 for cable and Internet." Breslin was Attorney Peter Henner, who resides in the Town of New Scotland, speaks about the lack of residential high-speed Internet service during the Town Board meeting held on Thursday, April 14.

Tricia Cremo/Spotlight

appalled. Houses at both ends of his street were receiving fine quality Internet, but his home, built in 1848, and other homes in the middle of the street, were not.

Breslin once attempted to download Microsoft Office, a program that should have taken mere minutes under normal Internet speeds, but found the task to be virtually impossible. Streaming an episode of a television show means waiting for minutes to watch just a few seconds of a program. Attempts to contact the Public Service Commission with his complaints have yielded exceedingly few results, said Breslin, as have attempts to contact the state's broadband office.

In last year's state budget, $50 million was dedicated to Gov. Andrew Cuomo's Broadband for All initiative, which aims to have Internet available at high speeds for all New Yorkers by 2018. Henner filed a FOIL request to view replies made in response to the initiative's call for public comments, after he discovered that the office refused to disclose how it was going to use the funds. While his request was initially denied, he was able to obtain them once he filed a lawsuit.

Deadlines for application to the program just passed on April 16. While Breslin did apply, he said he only received an automated response denying his application.

State Senator George Amedore expressed interest in the issue last fall, with a survey inquiring about service in rural areas. The town as well, has been very helpful, and Breslin is hopeful that progress can be made with renegotiations.

Breslin now uses Internet from his phone, which he said was prohibitively expensive. He also fears that as his daughter and other members of the younger generation who live in town will be at a great disadvantage without access to Internet.

This fact is even more true than it was ten years ago, when the town last negotiated its contract with Time Warner said LaGrange.

"I think we have a very good chance of bettering service in town through this next agreement," said the supervisor.

The town is already in the process of fashioning a proposal for auditing firms, and plans to hire an attorney to intervene with Time Warner. Henner has applied for the post.

"Obviously, what the town needs to do is we need to be there at table with the Public Service Commission. We want to do this sooner rather than later and we want them to take care of our town in particular, and do the right thing by all rural residents who don't have Internet."

In the meantime, countless homes will still be without Internet, until the contract is finalized in 2018.

Without faith, there is nothing

This social experiment that is American Democracy is more than 200 years old. As a community, we were once citizens of the British Empire. Over time, the discontent towards that government festered and grew until the voices of a few melded together into a single declaration of our freedom. We revolted, fought and earned an opportunity to sever ourselves from an establishment we understood never benefitted our community. We formed a government unlike that of what we left behind in England. We created the U.S. Constitution upon which our laws are based. A living document we can choose to amend, because in these more than 200 years, we still don't have it right.

We, as people, are fallible. We make mistakes. We make rash decisions and lose focus on that which is most important. Determining what is most important, unfortunately, is limited by our own individual perspective. And, each of our perspectives differ so greatly. How does it impact my wallet? How does it impact my life now? What is it going to do for me? In 1776, 56 men announced their treasonous intent to King George III with complete understanding it would slash into their livelihoods, likely get them killed and throw the colonies deeper into war. Today, we are benefactors of the actions they took on faith the community would ultimately thrive from their bravery.

Faith is a universal attribute within us all, without which we cease to function. It's not a matter of religion, it's a matter of possessing confidence in a process. Believing that a good deed is returned in kind. Knowing that those who choose to step upon the pulpit are pure at heart. Understanding elected officials serve the people. As you read this paper, the votes for the New York state primaries have been tallied, and we likely know who the Empire State wants to represent each of the two major parties this November. But, the faith in the process has received a terrible blow.

We live in a post-Watergate world, where men conspire to win elections and the phrase "follow the money" continues to hold relevance. We're the survivors of Nicole Brown Simpson, who can no longer trust the police. Even after Y2K, we can't even trust our technology to count votes correctly. Our country stands as a beacon to foreign countries that aspire to be democratic, but our own people lack confidence in the system it is built upon. In these few months, we've had Senator Bernie Sanders accusing the Democratic party of conspiring against his campaign. Republican frontrunner Donald Trump is claiming the same, despite his popularity. And, delegates promising to back one candidate, when it goes against the votes of the general public.

We, as people, are fallible in nature. Our Constitution is open for amending because this is true. It enables us to have faith in the system, above the flaws of the men and women who created it. But, that system needs fixing. Of course, we have a choice—We could work to restore our confidence in our primaries, so we can believe in it again. Or, the alternative involves audaciously stepping up and declaring it a failure, and presenting a solution. Both requires faith. Without faith, there is nothing.

We, as people, are fallible. We make mistakes. We make rash decisions and lose focus on that which is most important. Determining what is most important, unfortunately, is limited by our own individual perspective. And, each of our perspectives differ so greatly. How does it impact my wallet? Bethlehem Police
Records Clerk

Residence: Bethlehem
Hometown: Bethlehem

What have you been listening to lately?

I have the new Amazon music service and I have a ton of music on my iPhone that I play – just all different kinds, a mix of genres.

What have you been reading?

I'm not much of a reader.

What is your favorite show on TV?

"The Golbergs." It's hysterical. It's based in the 1980s, which is when I grew up, so I relate to the hairstyles and outfits and everything.

What was the last movie you saw?

"The Boss" with Melissa McCarthy. It was okay. Not one of my favorite movies of her's.

Could you describe what your dream vacation would be?

Somewhere tropical with clear blue water, sandy beaches and lots of hot sun.

What are some of your hobbies?

I like walking and listening to music, and painting.

What would your last meal be?

My last meal would be pizza. Just basic, easy pizza. My dad was the original founder and owner of Andriano's pizza in Delmar from 1962 to 1972.

What is something you think most people would be surprised to learn about you?

I sing a little bit, and I love to sing. But, never in front of anybody.

Stopping to support crossing guard

Former, current Elsmere Elementary School students rally behind Isabel Glassetter

By TRICIA CREMO
cremot@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — Bad things can happen to good people. Isabel Glassetter learned this lesson after being involved in a car crash that took the life of a woman on an snowy, spring morning.

On Monday, April 4, at about 10:30 a.m., Ashley C. Taheri, 55, of Voorheesville, was driving on Route 155 in Guilderland when she lost control of her vehicle and flew into the opposite lane of traffic, according to Guilderland Police. Glassetter was driving her son to work when Taheri's car swerved into her lane. The resulting crash took the life of Taheri, a social worker who had worked as a mental health clinician with the New York City Fire Department after 9/11. Glassetter was left with two broken ankles, bruises and a heart heavy with unfounded guilt.

Glassetter has spent most of her life — over 25 years — protecting children from cars as the longtime crossing guard at Elsmere Elementary School. She has sustained a few minor on injuries on the job, when distracted drivers failed to notice her bright orange vest and handheld stop sign as she halts traffic on busy Delaware Avenue. But, never had Glassetter been in a crash as serious as the one she was in that day.

"I feel incredibly bad for the other family involved. I'm devastated that it even happened," said Glassetter

Isabel Glassetter in her room at Good Samaritan Rehabilitation Center in Delmar.

Tricia Cremo/Spotlight

when asked about the crash. "I've been trying to find the words to write the family a note, but I just haven't found the words yet." The memory of the crash is one she will hold with her forever, she said.

Glassetter will spend several weeks recovering at Good Samaritan Rehabilitation Center in Delmar. She will then spend the next several months in a wheelchair and attend physical therapy classes regularly. In order for her to get in and out of her home, a ramp will need to be built. In order to help the family with these costs, an online account has been made to benefit Glassetter.

"She has yet to stop crying. She wants to be home, and now it could be months," said Jennifer Hammond, Glassetter's daughter. Just like her mother, Hammond also works as a crossing guard locally at Eagle Elementary. For both, the job has served them well over the years, and allowed them enough time to raise their children. Glassetter and her husband, Donald, have six children and 14 grandchildren.

In her room at Good Samaritan, Glassetter is surrounded by flowers and dozens of letters from children, who colorfully wish her a speedy recovery. As the crossing guard for so many years, Glassetter has become a face that generations of parents and children have grown to trust. She now helps the children whose parents she once helped many years ago.

"They're all really good kids," she said warmly. Glassetter has countless stories from her many years on the job, like the time she used her stop sign to help a boy dig out a boot that had gotten lodged in the snow on his way to school.

As the news broke of Glassetter's hospital stay, a past student, Carrie Holligan Smith, took to Facebook to share one such story.

"My childhood wouldn't have been the same without Ms. Glassetter," Smith wrote. "As my elementary school crossing guard, she began and ended each day with her sweet smiling face guiding me to safety." And, Smith said, Glassetter was the only person to stop on a snowy night to rescue Smith's sister, who had veered off 9W into a ditch. Glassetter pulled her from the vehicle and returned her home in an act of heroism.

Along with her job as a crossing guard, Glassetter has also volunteered as an EMS responder for three decades. It not only is a way for her to give back to her community but also an opportunity to spend more time with her husband, who volunteers with Elsmere Fire Department. At first Glassetter tried to volunteer for the fire company itself, but, "it was 30 years ago, they weren't ready for a husband/wife team," she explained.

So, Glassetter joined Bethlehem EMS, and not only became the very first social member of the Elsmere Fire Department, but also the first female Life Member of Bethlehem EMS, the department's highest honor. She later volunteered for Delmar EMS as well and spent numerous hours with both departments, before they merged in 2013.

She continues to serve as a member of the Ladies Auxiliary for the Elsmere Fire Department. She plans to return to work by next year.
