Upon running a DMV check on the vehicle, officers found that the registration on the car was suspended due to an insurance lapse and also found that the driver, Camesha Hill, 47, of Albany was wanted by police.

Rev. James Daley, longtime priest of St. Thomas church, dies at 95

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

DELMAR — Rev. James D. Daley, the longtime pastor of the Church of Saint Thomas the Apostle who presided over the modernized renovation of its school, died Monday, Dec. 26 at the age of 95.

Daley served the church as pastor for 33 years, from his appointment in 1970 to his retirement in 2002. Before that, he was associate pastor at St. Patrick's parish in Troy and taught at Catholic Central High School. He subsequently taught at Mater Christi Seminary in Albany. He was diocesan vocations director before his appointment to St. Thomas the Apostle parish. In retirement, he assisted Rev. Geoffrey Burke at Our Lady of the Assumption parish in Latham and presided over Mass at St. Joseph's Provincial House.

"I love being a priest," Daley asked The Evangelist readers rhetorically in an editorial published in 2012. "How could I retire?"

Daley had already stepped down from the pulpit at St. Thomas. The shepherd was explaining to readers how he found himself in front of another flock while seeking to help his former associate in Latham.

"This is the priest who married us, baptized and gave First Communion to all our children," said St. Thomas parishioner Nelly Brown Bunk upon learning of Daley's death. She added how he "fought tooth and nail" with her mother, a theologian. "We loved him dearly."

The Elsmere Fire Department shared its condolences online with a message about its "beloved chaplain," who joined the department down the street soon after his appointment at the local church. He would remain there for more than 50 years.

"He was so proud to serve in his role for a department he truly loved."

Daley graduated from Vincentian Institute in Albany. After serving in the Army during WW II and studying at Siena College, he entered Mount Saint Mary's Seminary in Emmitsburg, MD. Ordained in 1954, Father Daley served at Saint Patrick's Troy until 1957. He did graduate studies at Catholic University in Washington from 1957 to 1959 and taught classical languages at the former Mater Christi Seminary in Albany from 1959 to 1970. In 1970, he became pastor of the Church of Saint Thomas the Apostle, Delmar, where he served until his retirement in 2002.

"I have never been unhappy all these years," he wrote again in The Evangelist in 2019.

Daley was predeceased by sisters, Joan Brennan, Sister Maria Rosario (Regina) Daley, MM, Rose McAuliffe and Veronica Zimmerman; brothers-in-law, Charles Brennan, John (Jack) McAuliffe and Harold (Bud) Zimmerman; and a nephew, Michael Brennan.

He is survived by numerous loving nieces, nephews, grandnieces, grandnephews, great-grandnieces and great-grandnephews.

The Rite of Reception of the Body was celebrated in Our Lady of the Assumption Church in Latham on Tuesday, Jan. 3. The funeral liturgy will be celebrated on Wednesday, Jan. 4, at 10 am at Our Lady of the Assumption Church.

Interment will be in Our Lady of Angels Cemetery, Colonie. Donations may be made in Father's memory to Albany Diocesan Seminarian Fund, 40 North Main Ave., Albany, NY 12203.

In August 2021, Daley was named with other clergy members in a summons of complaint filed in state Supreme Court in Albany County for alleged sexual abuse. Bishop Edward B. Scharfenberger immediately asked the independent Diocesan Review Board to offer advisement. Daley maintained his innocence through a statement released by the Albany Diocese.

The author grew up in an Italian American family that spent every night around the kitchen table. In his book, the award-winning actor shares the magic of those meals and takes the readers beyond the recipes and into the stories behind them.

Tucci was diagnosed with tongue cancer in 2017. The tumor was discovered at the base of his tongue. Four years later, after undergoing treatment, he expressed confidence that the cancer will not return.

GHS students advocate for board resolution educating on secure firearm storage

GUILDERLAND - During the 2021-22 school year, a group of Guilderland High School students attended a board of education meeting to advocate for a resolution that would require the Guilderland Central School District to educate families on the importance of secure firearm storage.

Emily O'Connor, Conor Webb and Nora Whiteside spoke at a board meeting to explain the importance of safe gun storage education. Webb is the president of the Guilderland chapter of March for Our Lives, a national student-led organization founded in the wake of the 2018 shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida.

The students' appeal to the board was based on recommendations issued by Everytown for Gun Safety, a not-for-profit organization working to end gun violence. The recommendations call for local initiatives such as pediatricians and school districts participating in safe gun storage awareness campaigns. It has been determined that such campaigns do much to save children's lives.

In June, the GCS D board of education passed a resolution that states the district will provide education to families on the safe storage of guns and acknowledges the responsibility of all adult stakeholders at each district school building in keeping students, teachers and staff safe from the threat of gun violence. The GCS D board joins school boards in Vermont, Texas, California, Arizona, South Carolina, Maryland and Georgia that have passed similar resolutions.

Utilizing a flyer included in annual registration materials, the district will inform parents and guardians about secure firearm storage and their legal obligations to protect minors from accessing irresponsibly stored guns. In addition, the district will continue to work with local law enforcement agencies, health agencies and nonprofits to increase community education on this topic.

The GCS D board resolution refers to research that shows an estimated 4.6 million American children live in households with at least one loaded, unlocked firearm and that in incidents of gun violence on school grounds, up to 80 percent of shooters under the age of 18 obtained their guns from their own home, a relative's home or friends.

The resolution also cites research proving that secure firearm storage practices are associated with an up to 85 percent reduction in the risk of unintentional firearm injuries among children and teens. Additional studies have found that 87 percent of children know where their parents' guns are kept and 60 percent have handled them and that addressing students' unauthorized access to guns in the home is a significant step towards intervention.

Monday, Dec. 19, crews hired by the locomotives' owner, the Danbury Rail Museum, picked up each of the 100-year-old engines and moved them to a staging area. The two locomotives will then be split into pieces and loaded onto flatbed trucks for the journey to Conn.

"It has been a long time coming, but they are moved out of the way," Stan Madyda, a board member of the Danbury Rail Museum, said. "Lots of moving parts had to be in place to make this happen."

The two locomotives are pieces of history like no other in the world of rail transportation. The smaller of the two, the ALCO/GE S-1 was the first all-electric locomotive ever built. It was the prototype built in 1904 for a series of electric locomotives to service rail operations in Manhattan after a series of accidents prompted the NY Legislature to ban steam engines within the city and its tunnels. The company built 47 of these motors, but this is the first.

The other locomotive, an ALCO/GE T-3a is the only surviving one of its class, which 36 were built between 1913-26. All the others have been scrapped.

Both locomotives were restored in the late 1980's and were showpieces in the train world. They were stored within the PSEG power plant on River Road for years until the company upgraded the plant and needed the room. The locomotives were pushed out onto a rail spur on Beacon Island where they sat exposed to the elements for over 30 years.

The Port of Albany purchased the land, asked for expansion and won a bid to build a offshore wind tower manufacturing plant beginning in 2018. Since then, the port is developing the site and the locomotives were in the way. The other two historic diesel locomotives attached to the two electrics had to be scrapped due to their condition.

The two museum pieces will rest on mats until they can be hoisted onto trucks to be permanently removed from the property, according to Madyda. The process will be completed in the spring.

Details on the locomotives

- S-1 Numbered 100 also numbered 6000 - The prototype for third-rail operations in New York City.
- Built and began testing in 1904.
- Only one of its kind.
- S Motors were built 1904-1909 and 47 were built in total. 228,000 lbs.
- T-3a 278 the only surviving engine of its class. All others were scrapped.
- It was built in 1926.
- T motors were built at ALCO/GE from 1913-1926. 36 were built in total. 285,000 lbs.

Defend the Flock

Do you, or someone you know, have chickens? Don't miss this important virtual program, "Defend the Flock: Keeping Backyard Hobby Chickens Safe from Avian Flu," on Mon. Jan. 9 at 6:30 pm. Learn about the widespread - and often deadly - Highly Pathogenic Avian Influenza (HPAI) outbreak, plus measures you can take now to protect your flock from this immediate threat.

Carissa Braun, animal health technician with USDA Veterinary Services, will cover the current HPAI situation; how to recognize the signs and symptoms; what to do if your birds get sick; available resources; and biosecurity practices to help protect your birds this season. We've got giveaways, including full-size calendars, stickers, magnets and bookmarks, for all registrants. Please sign up on the Events tab of our website, or at <https://bit.ly/GPLFlock>, to receive the Zoom link.

Winter Reading Challenge

It's time for our annual Winter Reading Challenge for all ages! This year, the theme is "All The Feels." Log all your reading at <https://guilderlandlibrary.beanstack.org>, or with the Beanstack App, between January 1-31. Our goal is to read 90,000 minutes (1,500 hours) by the end of January. Remember, anything you read counts - so make sure to log it all! If we're one of the top-reading libraries in the country, we'll win a prize for all to enjoy. Happy Reading!

January Storytimes

Storytimes are back for morning winter fun! Tuesdays are for toddlers (ages 18-36 months); Wednesdays are for families (ages birth-5); and Thursdays are for preschoolers (3-5 years). All storytimes begin at 10:30 a.m. No registration is required. Caregivers must remain with child(ren). — Luanne Nicholson

Join the conversation

As part of our long-range goals, the library is looking at ways to make our 50-year-old building more responsive to the needs of today's community. Some of the updates we're considering include an entrance more accessible to the parking lot and a permanent curbside pick-up and drop-off window — both based on comments we have heard time and again from library users.

The Board of Trustees has recently contracted with architects at Ashley McGraw to come up with some design solutions to address these and other issues. Their initial public presentation in December can be watched on our YouTube channel. They are also expected to be part of the agenda for the Jan. 9 board meeting.

Your feedback is crucial as we continue this process, and we invite you to participate by viewing or attending these meetings. Our goal is to be the library this community needs well into the next 50 years, and the most important part of this planning process is you.

A song's second life

If you hadn't heard Kate Bush's super hit "Running Up That Hill" when it came out in 1985, chances are you know about it now. Last year, the Netflix series "Stranger Things" featured the song in a pivotal scene, and it put the 64-year-old singer-songwriter in the No. 1 spot on the Billboard Global charts.

At our Thursday, Jan. 12, Listening Party we'll listen to and discuss the song, as well as the album, "The Hounds of Love," on which it is featured.

This is a hybrid presentation that begins at 7 p.m. Visit our calendar at bethlehem.librarycalendar.com to sign up to receive an invitation to attend over Zoom, or arrive in person to participate.

Homework help online

We're halfway through the school year. Does your child need a little extra help? We've got the resources that can make a difference. Cardholders have access to HelpNow by Brainfuse, a learning resource for all ages with personalized homework help in core subjects, as well as SAT preparation. Find HelpNow on the library's Research page at bethlehempubliclibrary.org/webapps/research.asp.

Owens Corning on Dow Jones Sustainability Index

TOLEDO, Ohio — Owens Corning earned a place on the Dow Jones Sustainability World Index for the 13th consecutive year, and on the DJSI North America Index for the fifth consecutive year, with industry-leading assessment scores.

The DJSI World comprises an elite listing of the world's largest companies based on long-term environmental, social, and governance criteria. Companies are selected for inclusion in the DJSI in part based on their scores in the S&P Global Corporate Sustainability Assessment (CSA). Owens Corning scored 88 out of a possible 100 points overall in the 2022 S&P Global CSA (score date: Dec. 9, 2022), achieving the highest score out of 71 companies assessed in the building products industry.

"We are honored to have once again earned this recognition from the Dow Jones Sustainability Indices," said Chair and Chief Executive Officer Brian Chambers. "Our mission at Owens Corning is to build a sustainable future through material innovation. Sustainability is not only essential to fulfilling this mission, but also core to who we are and how we operate. Our continued inclusion in these indices speaks to the relentless work of our global team in meeting the needs of our customers, communities, and shareholders and in doing so making the world a better place."

CSX named to Dow Jones Sustainability Index

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — CSX has been included in the Dow Jones Sustainability Indices North America for the 12th consecutive year, reflecting the company's ongoing commitment to environmental, social and governance (ESG) leadership.

"CSX is proud to once again be named to the DJSI and to be recognized for our ESG performance. As a growing number of our customers focus on reducing their carbon footprint, CSX is committed to helping them achieve their goals through the environmental advantages of rail," said Joe Hinrichs, president and chief executive officer of CSX. "Moving freight by rail is three to four times more fuel-efficient than trucking, which enables our customers to achieve their sustainability goals by leveraging CSX's rail-based supply chain solutions."

Rebalanced annually, the DJSI is composed of companies that achieve high scores on S&P Global's Corporate Sustainability Assessment (CSA). The CSA consists of a rigorous questionnaire assessing both public and non-public data submitted by participating companies. This year, more than 10,000 publicly traded companies were invited to participate in the S&P Global CSA.

For 2022, CSX continued to be a leader among transportation companies that participate in the CSA reporting and evaluation process and was one of five transportation companies included in the Dow Jones North America Sustainability Index.

Roux leaves, Bellini's to replace

Bellini's moving into Vista Park

By MICHAEL HALLISEY

halliseym@spotlightnews.com

SLINGERLANDS — Roux, the New American Restaurant that first opened its doors to the Vista Technology Park eight years ago, is vacating its dining room to be replaced by a familiar neighbor from down the street.

Angela Carkner, the eatery's general manager, thanked the community who supported the restaurant through the lean months defined by a raging pandemic and beyond.

"Thank you so much for all of the love and support that you showed to us and the Roux Crew," she shared in an online statement announcing the restaurant's closing. "We couldn't have done it without you. Navigating a restaurant during COVID was one of the craziest things I have ever done, but thanks to all of you, we were able to pull through. This is an incredible community of great people and families.

"We will miss being a part of it."

The popular dining room will not be vacant long. A day after Carkner's announced closing, Bellini's shared news with its customers that it would be closing its Slingerlands location with the intent to move. Patrons who ordered from the eatery's popular Dinner Tuesday received the news from a flier.

"We are excited to announce that Bellini's Slingerlands will be relocating to our new location at 10 Vista Blvd, Slingerlands (right around the corner!) and hope to be open by early Spring 2023."

The Bellini's staff took orders from its New Scotland Road location for the last time last night on Tuesday, Jan. 3.

Bellini's has been a fixture at the former Price Chopper Plaza strip mall for the last 21 years. The restaurant, however, has a history that runs longer than that. Its recipes from Anthony Marrello run more than 60 years, and have expanded into both Slingerlands and Latham over the years.

Bellini's expects to reopen in the new location next spring. Roux customers still holding gift certificates, can visit Belt Line 3 at 340 Hamilton Street in Albany. For reimbursement, visit roux12159@gmail.com.

Complimenting someone on their appearance can lead to unintended circumstances for someone dealing with body image issues. Karli Taylor has a few tips on how to avoid such situations.

Karli Taylor, a fitness consultant, has made it her work to educate people about eating disorders. Taylor has dealt with her eating disorder since she was a teenager and continues her recovery to this day. Although some of her teachings focus on tips for those struggling with an eating disorder, Taylor does offer education to those who do not.

"In a way, it feels like it's worth it for me to have gone through something if I can use my experience to help people prevent going through something so tough," Taylor said.

The happy times of the holidays are often overshadowed by fear and guilt of food, and body image, size, or weight for those struggling with an eating disorder. The often negative thoughts are amplified this time of year and can even be added to by people who haven't been seen in years. Most of the time, people mean well by their comments about physical appearances, but for a person with an eating disorder, the reception of that comment isn't always considered positive.

For Taylor, there are three tips, or rules, to follow around the holidays to ease triggering thoughts or feelings for people with and without eating disorders. The first is to never comment about weight, regardless of whether it is a positive comment. The second rule is to not comment on what someone is or isn't eating. The final rule Taylor offers, which is also the hardest, is avoiding making negative comments about your body or eating habits.

"Words matter," Taylor said. "You may mean it as a compliment, but you don't know what goes into that."

As a fitness consultant, Taylor can see how the fitness industry preys on people who may feel insecure about their appearance. It's only gotten worse with the adage of fitness influencers and the accessibility of social media, especially throughout the pandemic. There will always be another product and another influencer to sell it to you.

However, Taylor urges people to remember that what's seen on social media is a highlight reel of someone's life, not their reality. It is easy to pose for a photo a certain way or edit images and videos through software. That person or influencer may not, and probably doesn't, look the same way they do on Instagram as they do in real life most of the time.

"There's no such thing as a quick fix," Taylor said. "We need to break away from thinking we need to be fixed."

"I always talk about the self-love structure. It starts with self-awareness, then self-acceptance, and then self-appreciation. You have to get through all of those things to get to the 'I love myself' part."

In recent years the #selflove movement has overtaken social media. The idea, in earnest, is to celebrate all bodies regardless of weight, size, or shape. Although that message is a positive one, it's often too much of extreme for those struggling with eating disorders. To go from hating your body for whatever reason to loving it for all it is is a gigantic jump.

Taylor, therefore, pushes for body neutrality rather than the extreme of self-love. To come to a place of calm within your body is far more attainable than the idea of loving it completely. For Taylor, there are three steps to come to full-body neutrality.

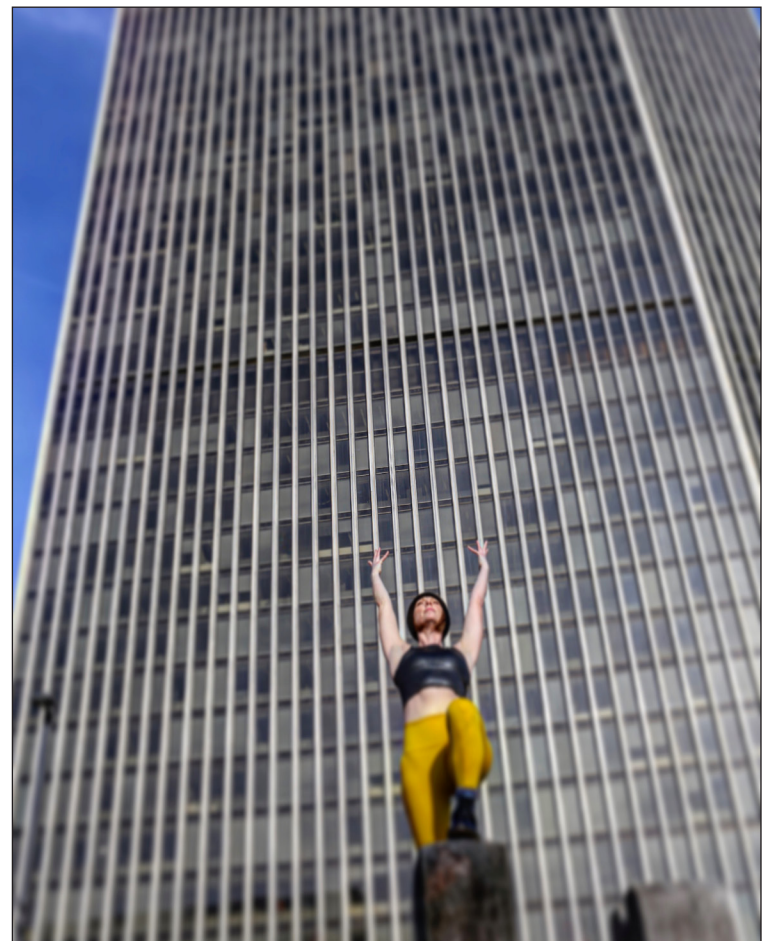

"I always talk about the self-love structure," Taylor said, "It starts with self-awareness, then self-acceptance, and then self-appreciation. You have to get through all of those things to get to the 'I love myself' part."

Taylor also suggests pausing before reacting to someone's appearance or comments. Pausing and responding rather than reacting allows for an understanding of what your words mean and the impact they could have on people. In responding rather than reacting, Taylor hopes that everyone becomes kinder to one another.

By spending less time on what you look like or what the numbers are on the scale, Taylor wants people to focus on how they feel. She also wishes that people facing eating disorders would enjoy themselves this time of year without the guilt of food-heavy holidays. All in all, Taylor wishes people take care of themselves.

"Give yourself permission to say no, and the things you have to show up for show up for," Taylor said.

Tips to make a computer run more smoothly

Computers play an important role in daily life. Whether it's a handheld device like a smartphone or tablet or a more traditional tool like a desktop or laptop, computers are ubiquitous and vital to life in the 21st century.

The daily reliance on computers is one reason why slow ones can be so frustrating. No one wants to miss a work deadline or struggle to read or watch a news story online because of a slow computer, but users know that such scenarios play out every day. Thankfully, slow computers are often easily fixed, and these strategies might help users' computers run more smoothly.

- Uninstall apps you don't use. Applications use up memory even if they're not used. Unused apps and other programs also may be updated automatically, leading to computer performance issues that make it hard to do things quickly. Many computers utilize apps that users are unaware of, so it's important that users familiarize themselves with such programs so they don't uninstall anything that is necessary for the computer to operate. Once that research has been done, users can then begin to uninstall apps they don't need or use.

- Install more memory. Extra memory can go a long way toward helping a computer run more smoothly and with greater efficiency. Online tutorials on sites such as YouTube can instruct individuals how to install RAM on their laptops or desktops, and this quick and relatively simple step can be great for users who have seen far too much of the dreaded color wheel in recent weeks and months.

- Clear data from your web browser. Another contributor to poor computer performance is a lagging web browser. If websites are taking longer to load, the culprit could be a full cache, which includes files held as information about your internet browsing and viewing habits. Individuals who use the internet a lot but rarely empty their cache are likely dealing with lagging browsers that have nothing to do with their computers. Computers are different, but in general emptying the cache involves going into the settings of a user's go-to browser and choosing an option like "empty cache" or "clear browsing data." If this is what's behind a computer's poor performance, users will notice an immediate improvement upon emptying their cache.

- Turn automatic startup off. Many people may notice multiple programs starting up when they restart their computers. Though some of these might be apps users utilize every day, others might be set to start up the moment the computer comes on, even if they're rarely used. In the latter case, users can adjust the settings on their computers so only those apps they use with great frequency open upon restarting. Users also can improve performance by closing apps and internet tabs once they no longer need them.

A slow computer can be incredibly frustrating. But a few simple strategies can help users improve computer performance so machines can run more smoothly.

We're just a click away.

Albany Institute of History and Art
Paul Scott: New American Scenery
 In this exhibition, artist Paul Scott assesses the American landscape from a contemporary approach, one that deals with issues of globalization, energy generation and consumption, capitalism, and immigration, as well as the human impact on the environment. The images that Scott creates for his ceramic plates, platters, and pitchers depict unsettling views of nuclear power plants, landfills, abandoned industrial sites, aging urban centers, and isolating walls. As representations of the American landscape, they suggest a subversion of the picturesque aesthetic—the unpicturesque picturesque—and a new, disturbing norm, a new way of envisioning ourselves, our physical environment, and our society. Exhibit is going until December 31st.
Jan Brett: Stories Near and Far

The Clark Art Institute Imaginary City- The large-format, abstract paintings of Tomm El-Saieh (b. 1984, Port-au-Prince; lives and works in Miami) teem with dense and dynamic marks that evoke ornament, language, and architecture. By variously layering and erasing his linework, and using vibrant color to optically push or pull his pictures, El-Saieh creates rhythmic, all-over compositions from which larger forms appear to emerge—testing both the limits of our perception and our expectations about abstraction. The exhibition title, which comes from one of the works in the show, refers to a cityscape theme common in Haitian art (Vilaj Imaginé). El-Saieh's paintings, which resemble informal urban plans, likewise develop intuitively, without the use of preparatory studies or outlines. For the artist, who has been unable to return to his birthplace in recent years as a result of the instability there, Port-au-

He was the subject of a solo show at the Institute of Contemporary Art (ICA) Miami in 2018 and was included in the New Museum triennial in New York that year. He is partner at the artist-run gallery CENTRAL FINE in Miami and long directed the El-Saieh Gallery in Port-au-Prince, a venue for contemporary Haitian artists that his grandfather established in the 1950s. New York State Museum Unveiled: Wedding Wear in 19th-

century New York
 In choosing their wedding clothes, brides and grooms are influenced by fashion, economics, technology, religion, geography, celebrity, personal taste, and their role in society. This was as much the case in 19th-century New York as it is today. Wedding clothing holds memories, and pieces—dresses, shoes, suits, and head wear—are often preserved and passed to subsequent generations. A couple's choices reveal historical information about both the individuals who wore them and those who made them. Some garments find their way to museum collections. This exhibition will unveil stories of select New Yorkers. Exhibit is on going until October 2nd 2022. Museum hours: Tuesday-Sun, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; 222 Madison Ave., Albany. Free admission; suggested donation of $5/person or $10/family. 518-474-5877 or www.nysm.nysed.gov

Tang Teaching Museum

Lauren Kelley Location Scouting

Conceived and designed for conversation, dialogue, study, and contemplation, Location Scouting is the fourth exhibition in a series that invites an artist to re-imagine what a community space in the museum can be. Artist and curator Lauren Kelley reshapes the Tang Teaching Museum's mezzanine by combining meditations on travel with snapshots of everyday life in her drawings, sculpture, and stop-motion animation videos. Using plasticine, toys, and souvenirs, Kelley's videos conjure worlds that are malleable and unfixed, inhabited by robust protagonists whose quirks stem from efforts to correct the asymmetrical relationships they encounter. Accentuating the off-kilter, Location Scouting speaks to the shifts and rifts inherent in navigating today's post-pandemic landscape. Skidmore College, 815 North Broadway, Saratoga Springs. Museum hours: Tuesday - Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.; Thursday until 9 p.m. Free admission; suggested donations of $5/adult; $3/child 13+; seniors, $2. 518-580-8080 or tang.skidmore.edu

Union College Galleries

Addenda- Custodians of archives wield great power and responsibility in considering who might be left out, disempowered or silenced in the creation of a specific narrative by those who use their records. Addenda centers interpretation and augmentation of past and present through the archive in an effort to construct a fuller future. The three contemporary artists featured in this exhibition, Gina Adams, Merritt Johnson and Sonya Kelliher-Combs, draw on history, cultural traditions, and archives, along with a strong belief in seeking alternative narratives to create artworks that exist dually, as both physical constructions and as a record of unconsidered perspectives and often unrecognized pasts. Exhibit is on going until June 12th.

University Art Museum

Ronny Quevedo: Offside- Inspired by his mother's and father's respective careers—a seamstress and a professional soccer player—multi-media artist Ronny Quevedo will occupy the arched walls of the museum in a newly commissioned work with diagrammatic vinyl lines that recall both dress patterns and gymnasium floors. Throughout this exhibition, which will include artwork from 2012 to the present, Quevedo's own family's emigration from Ecuador to New York serves as a catalyst for work reflecting on socio-political issues of migration, Indigenous experiences, and sacred spaces. University Art Museum is located at 1400 Washington Avenue, Albany.

Hot Club of Saratoga Album Release Show

Hot Club of Saratoga, upstate New York's premier gypsy swing collective, plays a repertoire that reflects the spirit and style originated by Django Reinhardt and Stephane Grappelli in The Quintet of the Hot Club of France most prominent in the 1930's and kept alive through a long line of gypsy jazz artists since that time. Most of the tunes we play were either written by, or recorded by, Django at some time in his all too brief musical life. This concert will be a celebration of the Hot Club's much anticipated second album "Just Horsin' Around." In keeping with the spirit of gypsy jazz music and the band itself, the tracks were recorded live in the studio with Chuck Kish, Dylan Perrillo, Tucker Callander, Jonathan Green and Brad Brose. You can catch this show January 8th at 8 p.m. only at only at Caffe Lena, 47 Phila Street, Saratoga Springs.

Maurizio Russomanno

Maurizio grew up with fond memories of his mother singing him to sleep, his head on her shoulder, as she walked the second floor of their two-level home. Music was and still is a healing common thread in the family. His older brother Dominic would play all of the popular music of the 60s and 70s, (The Beach Boys, The Beatles, The Rolling Stones etc.) while a young Maurizio (not yet four years old) would listen, joyfully bouncing up and down on his brother's bed. His brother called this his 'experiment', to see what kind of positive effects this might have. It must have had some effect, as later years would show; Maurizio had an uncanny knack for singing melodies over any type of music. Maurizio was writing and singing his first songs as soon as he could talk and write. "I remember singing one of the first songs I ever wrote, to my older sister Ornella and her friend Brigid. It was in celebration of the first snow and nearly brought me to tears while singing it. The song was about a snowman who was loving the early snow, but then realized there would still be warm days before the full of winter and he would soon melt. Maybe the inspiration came from Frosty the Snowman? There was something of a sadness/sensitivity that seemed to live inside of me at even a young age. My childhood was filled with love and maybe it was love that made me feel so much, with music serving as a kind of emotional outlet." You can catch this show January 7th at 8 p.m. only at Carson's Woodside Tavern, 57 Route 9P, Malta.

Elvis Birthday Bash w/ Johnny Rabb & The Tichy Boys

Johnny Rabb is an active live and studio drummer. He is the drummer for the platinum-selling rock band Collective Soul, and recently finished tour dates in South Africa. The band recently released Collective Soul - LIVE. The album is a collection of songs recorded on tour over the last year. Johnny has been fortunate enough to develop a series of cymbals with the MEINL cymbal company. His Drumbals and Safari cymbals are part of the Generation-X line. He is also the founder of his own drumstick company. He continues to design and develop new sounds and innovations for his unique concepts on the drums. As an author, Johnny continues his passion for education. He released The Official Freehand Technique Book/CD. Johnny was also voted #1 Best Educational Author by Modern Drummer's Readers Poll for his book Jungle Drum 'N' Bass for the Acoustic Drum Set. Playing together as the Tichy Boys will be John Tichy (a founding member of the legendary Commander Cody and the Lost Planet Airmen) and his son Graham, a highly respected local musician. "Playing with my father is obviously a thrill," says Graham. "It's not something everyone can say they do, rockin' out with their 60-year-old father. It's really exciting, really unique. There's not a lot of father-son rockabilly duos, let alone ones that are any good." Graham, 32, has rounded down his dad's age a few clicks; John Tichy is 66, a full professor at RPI, and, at one time, a chairman of the Department of Mechanical, Aerospace and Nuclear Engineering. "I never fancied myself being a musician, and I've got an engineer's practical side in me," says John. "When we packed up and drove our teardrop Saab to California, it wouldn't have surprised me to come back home, dragging my tail between my legs, a dismal failure. In fact, at one time, that would've been the likeliest thing." Instead, their timing was lucky; it was the summer of '68, and the Bay Area musical scene of the psychedelic era was giving way to a plethora of other styles, including a rootsy rock epitomized by the Grateful Dead. Commander Cody and His Lost Planet Airmen, caught that roots-rock wave and rode it for a decade, to a handful of well-regarded albums and an iconic hit — "Hot Rod Lincoln." After the band's members went their separate ways, John Tichy settled in to the academic life in Troy. Catch them together on January 7th at 8 p.m. only at The Hangar on the Hudson, 675 River Street, Troy.

FOOD and VINO

Spaghetti has been enjoyed around the world for centuries. While spaghetti is most often associated with Italy, pasta has deep ties to other Mediterranean nations like Greece, and several territories of the Middle East and Arabian Peninsula. In fact, centuries ago dry durable pasta was one of the main sources of nutrition for Arab traders, including those who landed in Sicily.

The flavor profile of spaghetti can change significantly depending on which ingredients are added. Cooks needn't feel beholden to the standard "spaghetti and meatballs" recipe. "Spaghetti with Shrimp, Feta and Dill," for example, may take its inspiration from Greek cooking. Enjoy this recipe, courtesy of "Real Simple Dinner Tonight: Done!" (Time Home Entertainment) from the editors of Real Simple.

Spaghetti with Shrimp, Feta and Dill

- 12 ounces spaghetti (3/4 box)
- 1/4 cup plus 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 pound peeled and deveined large shrimp
- Kosher salt and black pepper

- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon zest
- 3 ounces feta, crumbled (3/4 cup)
- 2 tablespoons coarsely chopped fresh dill

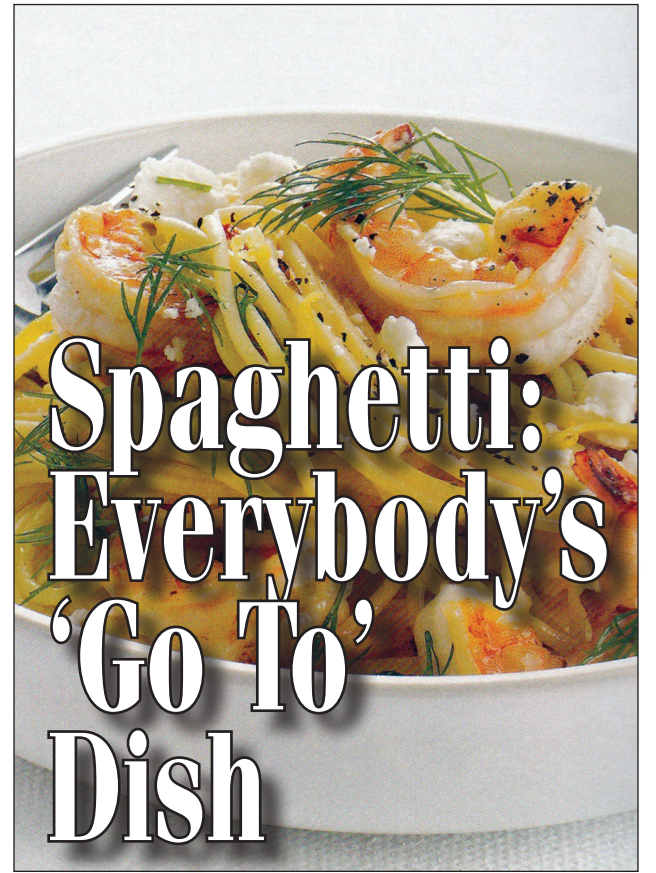

INSTRUCTIONS

Cook the pasta according to the package directions, drain and return it to the pot.

Meanwhile, heat 1 tablespoon of the oil in a large skillet over medium-high heat. Season the shrimp with 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper and cook, tossing occasionally, until opaque throughout, 3 to 4 minutes. Stir in the lemon juice and zest.

Add the shrimp mixture to the pasta, along with the feta, dill, the remaining 1/4 cup of oil, and 1/4 teaspoon each salt and pepper. Toss to combine.

The flavor profile of spaghetti can change significantly depending on which ingredients are added. Cooks needn't feel beholden to the standard "spaghetti and meatballs" recipe.

Samara Joy at UPH

By LEIF ZURMUHLEN
nippertown.com

SARATOGA SPRINGS — On the eve of Christmas Eve, as temperatures in Saratoga Springs plummeted, rising young jazz star Samara Joy kept the Universal Preservation Hall “Warm in December” with her extraordinary voice.

The 23-year-old Bronx native has just been nominated for Grammys for best new artist and for best jazz vocal album for this year’s Linger Awhile. Joy developed her voice as a teenage leader of The World Changers Church choir in The Bronx. She grew up hearing her father’s gospel and R&B at home, but “did not know anything about jazz” until attending SUNY Purchase.

She enrolled as a voice major in the jazz program and was named an Ella Fitzgerald Scholar and graduated magna cum laude. In 2019 she won the Sarah Vaughn International Jazz Vocal Competition. She recorded her 2021 self-titled debut while still Joy’s grandparents were gospel singers and the family’s deep Christian roots were evident in reverent and uplifting arrangements of holiday classics “The Christmas Song”, “O Holy Night”, “This Christmas” and a lively “Joy To The World”. in college and Jazz Times named her best new artist the same year. She has been a breakout artist ever since, dazzling audiences around the world.

Saratoga Springs was no exception, with the crowd rising to their feet several times as she masterfully delivered “Can’t Get Out of This Mood,” “Warm in December” and an incredibly mature and controlled “Guess Who I Saw Today” surpassing even her own recorded version of the song live. Her poise, technique, and warm, rich voice had director Regina King calling her, “A young woman who seems like both Ella Fitzgerald and Sarah Vaughn are living in her body”. Her band consisting of pianist Shedrick Mitchell, bassist Eric Wheeler, and drummer Charles Haynes were uniformly excellent.

“This is our last show, so you’re here for the best show of our tour!”, Joy proclaimed. Her full name is Samara Joy McLendon and a large portion of her two sets were an exuberant family affair, a very special “Joyful Holiday With The McLendon Family”. Joined onstage by her

The celebration of the season was well represented by traditional wassail songs and “Red & Green” by Maddy Prior. Hope was represented by “Witch Hazel”, that winter-blooming plant that symbolizes rebirth.

Harry Belafonte’s “Gloria” represented the Caribbean. Protest songs from the civil rights era and the ‘60s – “Alabama Bus” and Phil Ochs’ “Crucifixion” – reminded us of the ongoing struggle.

The poignant Tin Pan Alley “I’ll Be Home For Christmas” from World War 2 unfortunately is still relevant for many.

The concert ended with Pete Seeger’s “Well May The World Go.” Reminding us that the cycle of life continues and “it’s always darkest before the dawn.”

The Jagaloons’ “Walk, Don’t Run, For The Border”

By LUCAS GARRETT
nippertown.com

An album that is over before you know it, “Walk, Don’t Run, For The Border,” by The Jagaloons is, simply put, a fantastic record rife with blistering riffs and pounding energy. The short EP blends together, as is typical for the genre, several musical cultures ranging from the Middle East, to Spain, with the lynchpin being Western-type harmonies.

“Baja Blast,” features a lone guitar riff that starts the album, and a tightly played drum roll sound starts pounding in. Soon after, the whole band enters. What follows is an extremely fun tune, chock-full of well-executed pushes and pulls of rhythm.

An album whose track titles are humorously derived from menu items at Taco Bell, “Walk, Don’t Run, For The Border,” is a thoroughly fun and enjoyable record. The only complaint on my end is that the collection is so short!

The band plays fantastically well together, and the frequent – albeit subtle – changes to the melodic lines throughout the piece keep the listener engaged from start-to-finish. Near the end of the song, the guitar and drums play off one another, before the guitar features one last musical statement as the song concludes.

“Cinnamon Twist,” the second track, begins in a similar fashion; the presence of the keyboard helps to change things up. The two guitar parts are arranged in such a way that really complement one another; at times it’s hard to determine which is the lead and which is the supporting part. What I really like in this song, is how the drums, at certain times, are playing the exact rhythms as one of the guitars – it really helps to tighten up and gel the entire piece together. On top of that, some of the tremolo picking is highly reminiscent of Dick Dale’s work and playing style.

Moving right along, up next is track three, “Chalupacabra.” The phenomenally rich textures of baritone guitars really stick out on this track. Finding that nice register between a bass and standard electric guitar, the baritone part produces such a nice, warm, and fat tone in between. Like the other songs, the drums on this are dynamic and crisp, and support the instrumentation nicely.

Diverting quite a bit from the other tracks, the closing song, “Nacho Boyfriend,” features a chord progression, and a much calmer energy. There’re lots of genres that blend together under surf-rock, and this song is a great example of that – a lot of the melodic concepts are Spanish influenced, such as the harmonic minor scale. Between that, and the gentle coaxing of the guitar’s whammy bar to create a dreamy atmosphere, this song is the perfect closer on an EP that leaves this listener yearning for more.

An album whose track titles are humorously derived from menu items at Taco Bell, Walk, Don’t Run, For The Border, is a thoroughly fun and enjoyable record. The only complaint on my end is that the collection is so short! I’ll definitely be adding this to my rotation of music.

Super Dark Collective’s ‘Do The Fright Thing Vol. 8’

By W.A. WRIGHT
nippertown.com

So why am I reviewing and still listening to the Super Dark Collective’s Halloween compilation “Do the Fright Thing Volume 8”? Because it kicks!

If one were unfamiliar with the deep, vast currents of the American underground, one could easily listen to the “Do the Fright Thing, Vol. 8” compilation and assume it’s scary, dark, and weird solely because of the fact that it’s a Halloween album. However, anyone that has been paying attention to, or is interested in, the underground music scene (especially that of the Capital District) should hear this record and understand how much more representative, important, and vital it is to define the breadth and depth of the avant-garde in this region.

The album is filled with hard-rocking hip-hop beats, overdriven noisy guitars, and plain straight up harsh electronic noise. Vocals are typically loud, angry and even downright vicious. This is a terrific cross-section of the kind of sounds you hear if you go to local small club shows pretty much anywhere in America, but especially upstate New York and the Northeast. So if you are a fan of indigenous, original, non-commercial music, you’re going to love this. If you aren’t, it’s an excellent lesson in where underground music is right now and where it’s most likely going in the next 25 years or so.

It begins with an aptly dark and spooky intro by local hip-hop artist Mundy, filled with samples, dark organs, screams, and cries of those that sound like they’re about to be tortured. And if that’s too genuinely scary for you, it's immediately followed by a harsh-sounds meets campy-horror songs track by 'Professor Bloodfiend', someone even those of us that are big fans of the local scene and Super Dark shows aren't familiar with. (There are a lot of noms de guerre on this comp but most of the others either include a famous

One could write several articles alone on all the local greats collected here and still miss so much that the author would be hung in effigy (this writer knows what he thinks is a good deal, but is unfamiliar enough with fully half of the groups on the album).

name or two, or a clever hint to let you know who it's by.)

And then the comp is kicked into the stratosphere with the almost unbearably terrific "Theme to Howling II" by the long-running power electronic duo ToUGH, made up of local glam punk king Drew Benton (Haunted Cat, Complicated Shirt) and former Trojan Chris Skinner (Denim and Diamonds). This spooky hard-hitting drum machine track walks a comfortable line between old school Run-D.M.C. style hip hop — including the phenomenal glam thrash guitar attack featured on said — and postmodern noisecore electroclash. And to be blunt, it rocks so hard. It's Queen-like in its eminent superlatives.

The rest of the comp contains so many tracks it's hard to keep up, moving from style to style, hip hop to dark wave, indie rock to thrash punk, everything that the underground has been serving up to local crowds since the late seventies. Yet throughout there are definite strands of connectivity, most of which is provided by the excellent production work of Shane Sanchez and Paul Coleman, both in the choices of tracks to include, order, transitions, and especially mixing and mastering an album that's both punishingly noisy and eerie enough to serve as any horror movie soundtrack, yet catchy and interesting enough to be listened to quietly in its own right (over and over if you're like me).

Some tracks should be highlighted for various reasons; for example, the excellent collaboration between Jason ('Wolfman') Martin and 100 Psychic Dreams (Shane Sanchez). This is a dream team-up between the lo-fi horror electronics of the Psychic Dreams and the typically self-conscious intellectual rapid-fire lines of Jason Martin, which always include an elusive yet overwhelming sense of humor if you're paying attention. And I'm not just talking about the "performance enhancing sportswear" or "attack Moondog the Protector" lyrics, but how the rant degrades into the echoes of Captain Beefheart's Dropout Boogie with the "adapt her adapt her!" lines.

And then there's the incredible fast thrash of phenomenal local post-hardcore group Wet Specimens that, as always, hits you so hard in the head (and the raised fist) that it's not only terrifying but enervating and inspiring. There are the prescient talents of Aunt Lonely's "Mini Dungeon" that sounds like future hyper video game music. And the juxtaposition of laid-back beats and horrifying stream-of-consciousness lyrics of local hip-hop Soo do Koo's "Jackolanterns."

And so much more... where to begin, where to end? We've got tracks from overly prolific constantly performing local legends like Sinkcharmer, Steve Hammond, and Mr. Cancelled all in a block.... and later on other prolific lo-fi recorders like k. Sonin (whose track "Amber" was unexpectedly loved by everyone other than this writer) and Asa Morris. And of course, there's the omnipresent E.S. Cormac with an excellent lo-fi noise rock track and a performance from new trio Merci Van whose shoegaze stylings he lays down the beats for, Super Dark Collective superstar Christopher Brown featured in four tracks and four different groups on the record (Couples Costume, King of Nothing Nowhere..), up and coming hard partying surf group the Sugar Hold early on the record and bookended by its visionary drummer and soundman, John Olander, later in his guise as avant-garde abstract electronic waves dealer "Art Class Warfare"

One could write several articles alone on all the local greats collected here and still miss so much that the author would be hung in effigy (this writer knows what he thinks is a good deal, but is unfamiliar enough with fully half of the groups on the album). Suffice it to say that in addition to collecting all the great legends, this is an eclectic collection of locals not often associated with the avant-garde noise scene;

like the U2-like Rhoseway, lo-fi folk of Ryan Stewart, the equally lo-fi extra spooky track by the Headless Relatives, the quirky, undeniably catchy pop tune about the Jewish Golem of Prague by Nathan Meltz (House of Tomorrow, Machine Music).

And have I mentioned the track where Scum Couch's Mark O'Brien sings a devastating (and devastatingly catchy — especially that rolling bassline into the chorus!) tune about the escape from the prison at Dannemora backed by a group called Off Hours?

There simply isn't enough time or ink to describe how terrific, eclectic, diverse, inclusive, and yet all somehow of a similar stripe this compilation of tracks is. So the best thing to say is to get yourself a copy! There is literally something here for everyone, and even if you're not particularly interested in some of the music or are intimidated by electronic noise or avant-garde it's a terrific education on the local scene past and present! There are a million reasons to listen to every fine track on this groundbreaking compilation, but only one reason not to. Because you're too FRIGHTENED to. You're not frightened, are you?!! Then DO THE FRIGHT THING!

Precious Metals' Debut EP 'Candid Chemicals'

By LUCAS GARRETT
nippertown.com

Precious Metals released their debut EP "Candid Chemicals" late last year, and what they released is short, but amazingly compelling. If the instrumentation — which has effectively thorough and well-performed arts on each instrument — doesn't grab a listener's ear, the vocals definitely stand a chance to. With sounds reminiscent of early 2000's alternative rock, to 2010's indie rock, and just a splash of pop, Candid Chemicals really packs a punch, and with just five songs!

Starting off the record is "Jacqueline." A blazing guitar interlude serves as the intro, and is soon joined by the full band. J. Lee's vocals are nothing if not unique in terms of tonality and delivery; he has a strong command in his upper register. The song's arrangement is compelling. Prior to the guitar solo, the guitar, bass, and drums have some nice interplay with one another. During the tune's bridge, the vocal is affected nicely with some kind of overdrive effect and it serves well to break up the production aesthetics of this particular piece. Afterward, we hear a final chorus, short interlude, and then the song's conclusion.

Following is the tune, "Sweet Talkin'." Starting the tune off with a repetitious and chill guitar part allows the listeners a chance to lock into a groove. Before long, the band joins in, sprinkling half-time sections here and there into the mix. This functions as a great way to break up the rhythm and makes the song more interesting — for lack of a better word — to hear and enjoy. The synths in this track aren't obtrusive but rather incorporated in a way that is reminiscent of some great electro-pop sounds of the early 2000s. The song really explodes just as it ends, with a fantastically written and executed guitar solo.

The third, and title track of the record, "Candid Chemicals," begins yet again with guitar, though this time around the tone is far grittier. Throughout the record, while the bass and drum parts aren't overtly difficult sounding, they're always locked in tight with one another, and this song is no exception. There are times during this song's vocals that are extremely reminiscent to some pop deliveries from Michael Jackson! While certainly not comparing either singer to one another in a strict sense, the control that White has over his vocals cannot be ignored, and should definitely not be understated.

What's interesting about "Tequila Dreams," track four, is the way in which the vocal and guitar part work with one another. Starting off this piece with guitar and vocals, the two coordinate in such a way that creates a sort of "train rhythm," despite the fact the guitar is mainly playing half notes (for this song, notes that take up two beats of the bar). As the drums enter, this overall train rhythm is further reinforced. All-in-all, the song moves at a great clip and is in many ways a masterclass of how to arrange parts in a way that makes each instrument sound hugely vital to the groove.

Capping the record off is

I really enjoy Candid Chemicals. It works to be powerful in all the right ways, while paying special mind not to go "over the top" with any particular instrument.

"Independence Day." This tune begins differently: dreamy synths and keyboard parts. Having different instrumentation introduce a piece was extremely welcomed by this listener's ears. What's more, is how the arpeggiated guitar part is simple but placed very well; it's far more subdued than other guitar parts listeners are greeted with on other tracks of this album. In many ways, the song becomes more and more anthemic as it develops. During the latter half, a refrain is repeated several times, before the drums crescendo and the song hits its peak. Following this, we hear a brief fade out before one more powerful chorus to close out the song and thus the record.

I really enjoy Candid Chemicals. It works to be powerful in all the right ways, while paying special mind not to go "over the top" with any particular instrument. It's perfectly balanced with groove, skill, and songwriting abilities while never daring to be overtly flashy. In this sense, it's a testament to J. Lee White's maturity as a songwriter and a performer. Fans of alt-rock, indie, and pop should check this record out!
